"The reproduction, generally, is excellent; the brief, pointed paragraphs of descriptive text by Elizabeth McCausland, which accompany the photographs, add considerably to their documentary interest; and what the book sums up to finally—and what it should be increasingly valuable for as time goes on—is a kind of direct, unaccented survey of the actual 'look' of the city, in its most unromanticized, workaday aspects, circa 1939. A product of the Federal Art Project in New York, it seems, both in scope and purpose, a thoroughly worthy addition to that organization's already long list of praiseworthy publications." R. M. Coates

\+ New Repub 99:52 My 17 '39 380w

"Berenice Abbott says that she 'does not wish to be called artistic.' And indeed the value of her book lies in its 'straight photography.' Few of these pictures are unusual, but all are clear and really illustrative."

\+ — N Y Times p15 Ap 16 '39 350w

"Both text and pictures are a little too grimly documentary in intention, but the photography itself is impeccable, with a kind of cool clarity that often enough emerges as beauty, and the reproduction (full-page for each plate) is superb."

\+ — New Yorker 15:79 Ap 22 '39 100w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Ap 29 '39 110w

" 'Changing New York' has a stimulating blend of the familiar and the unfamiliar. It is hardly a complete architectural record of a changing city. But anyone who understands the city comprehensively, and not merely from the angle of sightseers or pleasure-seekers, will realize that the old and new are significantly joined."

\+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 9 '39 650w
Survey G 28:339 My '39 150w
Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

MCCLEARY, GEORGE FREDERICK. Population: today's question. 222p $2.10 Macmillan [6s Allen, G]

312 Population [39-4370]

"It is well known that the population of [England] and other countries is shortly going to decline, but it is not so well known that it will be exceedingly difficult to check this fall when it has once begun. . . Mr. McCleary explains, as simply as possible, the methods whereby statisticians arrive at these conclusions, what has been proved by them, and what has not been proved. This book is short and simple, and concentrates its attention on Europe and the British Dominions." New Statesman & Nation

"Dr McCleary has succeeded remarkably well in telling the whole tale of the population problem in language which is at once everyday and distinguished. The history of population and of population theory since the days of Malthus is succinctly related. The present position when 'the birth rate has declined in all the countries of the Western world,' is fully examined, with all its social and economic implications."

+ Economist 133:70 O 8 '38 180w
Foreign Affairs 17:809 Jl '39 30w
Nature 144:193 Jl 29 '39 120w

"The study of population remains of great importance to any understanding of economics, and this is a simple guide to the subject from a puzzled liberal point of view."

New Statesman & Nation 17:144 Ja 28 '39 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p710 N 5 '38 430w

MCCLEERY, ALBERT, and GLICK, CARL. Curtains going up. 407p il $4 Pitman

792 Theater—Little theater movement 39-27457

Survey of the little theater movement in this country, together with studies of 184 separate community theaters from Maine to California. Appendices contain a proposed constitution and by-laws for a community theater, a membership questionnaire, a contract for a director, rules for a tournament, budgets, lists of plays, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:327 Je 1 '39
N Y Times p15 My 14 '39 500w

"The world of the little theatre changes so rapidly, organizations and leaders grow and fade in such short shifts of time, that it is quite impossible to make any such record as this of permanent value. The authors recognize this fact, and ask for suggestions of material to be added or subtracted another year. The book's chief advantage as it stands is its friendly, encouraged spirit, its mass of information, carefully sorted by regions."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:459 Je '39 360w

MCCLELLAND, EVERETT SLATER. Religion from the bleachers. 208p $1.50 Cokesbury press

215 Religion and science. Christianity 39-4577

The author, a physician and student of social psychology, attempts to point out to members of Protestant churches what is the matter with their religion, their ministers, and their congregations, and to formulate a belief the man in the bleachers might welcome.

Reviewed by R. K. Morton
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 8 '39 110w

"The author, one suspects, is an active though lay participant, rather than a mere spectator in the bleachers."

+ Christian Century 56:354 Mr 15 '39 70w

MCCONNAUGHEY, JAMES. Stephen Ayers. 434p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 39-20726

Stephen Ayers, a young iron salesman, is the central character. This story of his career before and after the depression, covers also his two marriages and an incidental love affair.

"'Stephen Ayers' might have been an inherently more important book had James McConnaughey emphasized to a greater degree its fundamentally industrial theme. The hero's rise in position and influence, his failures and successes in business would make a big story. But he has preferred merely to intermingle, if cleverly, threads of this larger theme in a fabric made up of minor and melodramatic incidents of a comparatively ordinary life." Jonathan Kilborn

+ — Books p8 Ag 13 '39 550w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 180w
New Repub 100:196 S 20 '39 40w

"The youthful experiences are often foolish and meaningless; they are more frequently emotionally timeless and important. They are certainly always representative, the average man in average circumstances. It is to the author's credit that there is no melodramatic insistence or distortion in the writing. There is also not much passion. The real solace and substantial feeling that comes out of Stephen Ayers's commonplace life is his more than commonplace affection for his wife. It is tender and sensitive and unashamedly warm. And who will say that that is not a refreshing fictional circumstance these days?" Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p2 Ag 6 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:54 Ag 12 '39 40w

"Readers who hailed James McConnaughey's 'Village Chronicle' three years ago as a more than promising first novel will probably be disappointed by its successor. Although 'Stephen Ayers' has more sweep and tries to capture an era and a generation, it is inferior to 'Village Chronicle' in psychology and in the presentation of an exciting central theme. Both novels suffer from an excess of platitudinous comment and occasional passages of insipid writing; but both are written with a robustness and raciness peculiar to recent American fiction, and both succeed to some extent in illuminating certain phases of American life." R. A. Cordell

— + Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ag 12 '39 450w

MCCONNELL, FRANCIS JOHN, bp. John Wesley. 355p $3 Abingdon [10s 6d Epworth]

B or 92 Wesley, John 39-27458

Objective biographical dissertation on the founder of Methodism, written by a leading American Methodist bishop. "In this book no attempt is made to retail again the familiar facts about Wesley's career. . . As a matter of fact, what really happens is that the bishop indulges in a sort of running debate with the previous biographers, each chapter being used to point out where a different batch of them went wrong. Seldom are these other biographers named, but anyone familiar with the Wesley literature will have no difficulty in identifying the bishop's objects of correction." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"What is there about Wesley that makes him such an inexhaustible attraction for the biographers? I must have two dozen Wesley biographies on my library shelves, and my collection is by no means complete. . . But in all the list of biographers none has brought greater gifts to his task than Bishop McConnell. It would have been tragic had Bishop McConnell closed his career without writing a book on Wesley. The McConnell volume is not, properly speaking, a biography. It is a dissertation—a guide to the understanding of one great man written by another who happens to be so much like his subject that the resulting portrait bears unusual marks of authenticity." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 56:855 Jl 5 '39 850w

"The literature on John Wesley, already large, has increased considerably of late, and perhaps there remains little more to be said about him. But Bishop McConnell's book will be a welcome addition to the collection if only for the fact that it is a fresh approach to Wesley's life and work. . . A vast amount of reading has gone into the production of this volume. . . The style is as free and easy as speech, and for this reason the book is likely to become the popular 'John Wesley' of this country." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 153:16 Jl '39 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p636 N 4 '39 650w

MCCORD, JACK. Selling is a game. 155p $2 Prentice-Hall

658.8 Salesmen and salesmanship 39-16733

"A pep-book on selling purporting to show how the winning techniques in the field of sports will help sales work. Mr. McCord says selling is a game and that the salesmen who follow the rules of the game will be the leaders in their fields." Management R

"The trouble with this particular lesson is that it is repeated without variation on every page with all the self-conscious argot of the sports writer, thus sacrificing whatever appeal it might have for any but the most special reader." R. A. Chace

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 5 '39 90w

"The sports fan salesman will find many lessons brought home to him in a vivid way."

Management R 28:375 O '39 50w

MCCORD, JOSEPH. A husband for Hiliary. 270p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-7580

When Hiliary Layne discovered that the young man who rescued her in his canoe was the nephew of her boss, she knew there was trouble ahead, for it was a case of love at first sight. Hiliary was correct in her surmise; there was trouble, but it ended happily.

Booklist 35:308 My 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p19 Mr 5 '39 80w

Wis Lib Bul 35:104 My '39

MCCORD, JOSEPH. Sweet for a season. 268p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-24225

A modern girl who wanted to run her own life, her old-fashioned mother who thought she should marry, and two of the girl's suitors are the chief characters in this story.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 O 1 '39 70w

Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '39 50w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p23 O 1 '39 170w

MCCORDOCK, ROBERT STANLEY. The Yankee cheese box. 470p map $3 Dorrance

973.752 Monitor (ironclad). Merrimac (frigate). Hampton Roads, Battle of, 1862

38-23727

In his preface Mr. McCordock states that the purpose of his history is, "in the light of hitherto unpublished manuscript material to relate the complete story" of the Monitor and the Merrimack, the little "Yankee Cheese Box" and the first ironclad built in America.

Boston Transcript p1 O 29 '38 180w

Eng Hist R 54:546 Jl '39 300w

"The general reader will be grateful for the clear, non-technical description of the construction of the vessels. There are, however, many sidelights on important technical matters which will be of interest to students of naval science. . . . The real value of this study lies in the excellent treatment of the public reaction to these engagements."

+ New Eng Q 12:602 S '39 650w

MCCORMICK, WILLIAM HENRY. The modern book of ships. 144p il $2.40 Macmillan [5s Black, A. & C]

387 Ships [39-14926]

This English book contains a brief history of steamship travel across the Atlantic, an account of steamship lines and famous liners in the South seas and to the Orient as well as on the Atlantic, descriptions of train ferries, tugs, dredgers and ice-breakers, information on warships and submarines, both British and foreign. There are chapters on navigation and one which includes ranks and ratings, and ship measurements along with miscellaneous matter.

N Y New Tech Bks 24:12 Ja '39

Times [London] Lit Sup sup xxiii N 5 '38 50w

MCCORMICK, WILLIAM PATRICK GLYN. Starting afresh; with a foreword by the Bishop of London. 117p $1 (2s 6d) Longmans

252 Sermons 39-30790

Addresses and sermons by the Vicar of St Martin-in-the-Fields, London. The book was chosen as the Bishop of London's book for Lent.

Christian Century 56:218 F 15 '39 90w

"These sermon-addresses . . . are vigorous, affirmative, objective. Their expression and application is for the complex life of today."

+ Churchman 153:34 Mr 15 '39 60w

"St. Martin-in-the-Fields is, owing to the wireless, probably the best known church in the Empire, and this book by its Vicar goes far to account for that position. It shows the wholeness of the message that goes from its pulpit, and the sturdy, independent common sense that characterizes it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 4 '39 170w

MACDERMOT, FRANK. Theobald Wolfe Tone; a biographical study. 342p il $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

B or 92 Tone, Theobald Wolfe

A scholarly biography of the Irish revolutionary who, after a turbulent career in Ireland, America, and France, died in prison in 1798 at the age of thirty-five. As source material the author has used chiefly the life of Tone edited by his son in the 1820s, a composite work consisting largely of diaries, letters and political documents. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 19 '39 220w

"It is in his suggestion of the historical background rather than in the picture of Tone or the narratives of his career that Mr. MacDermot is most effective. By reminding us forcibly of the worse side of the French Revolution he helps us to understand the attitude of moderates like Gratton to the United Irishmen. . . We get discriminating criticism where we are accustomed to be deafened by fierce invective. The change is welcome, especially as the judgments appear to be as sound as they are merciful." J. T. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 27 '39 550w

"Tone has long needed a modern and judicious biographer, and he has found such a biographer in Mr. Frank MacDermot, who, as a member of the Dail and a Senator, has often drawn the attention of his compatriots to the incoherencies of much of their political thought. From this fascinating and scholarly book it appears clearly that Tone would be better described as a typical eighteenth-century Whig, thwarted in self-fulfilment, than as the 'father' of Pearse and the mystical Nationalists of 1916." J. M. Hone

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:1000 Je 24 '39 750w

"Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. MacDermot, had he lived in Ireland at the close of the eighteenth century, would not have accepted Tone's solution of the Irish problem, and handed the country over to the United Irishman, he is eminently fair to him. He pays a handsome tribute to his courage, enthusiasm, and ability, and does ample justice to his sincerity, humour, and charm. The extracts given from the famous Autobiography are extremely well chosen to illustrate his powers of imagination and literary gifts, and will send many readers to the original. Mr. MacDermot has utilised much unpublished material in writing this interesting biography which will be highly acceptable to all serious students of Irish history." Constantia Maxwell

+ Spec 162:1097 Je 23 '39 1050w

"Mr. MacDermot, who has used many manuscript sources hitherto unpublished, puts all previous work on Tone out of date. His treatment is critical throughout, and, after his careful analysis of the mixed motives and sometimes tortuous actions of his subject, there is not much left of the rather unreal paragon of the Republican legend. But there emerges instead a credible man possessing in preeminent degree intellect, gaiety and courage; and some of the charm that conquered all Tone's friends and held the passionate love of the wife he so sorely tried survives even on the printed page. The long extracts from his letters and diaries are specially valuable; for Tone uses English, as Swift used it, like a swordsman."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 27 '39 850w

MCDONALD, FREDERICK HONOUR. How to promote community and industrial development. 260p $3 Harper

711 City planning. Industries, Location of 38-32801

"A practical approach to the problem of the location and relocation of industries for the welfare and advancement of both the corporation and the community. Mr. McDonald describes the effects of industrialization on agriculture, transportation, highway and power development, business and community growth." Management R

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher

Am J Soc 45:620 Ja '40 350w

Management R 28:36 Ja '39 40w

Social Forces 17:595 My '39 100w

"The book as a whole is a rational analysis of the problems involved in business location, relocation, and expansion. It is as far removed from local Chamber of Commerce ballyhoo as can possibly be imagined. It deals with the far-sighted and fundamental aspects of the problem and is the best available text book for communities and industries alike." R. E. Flanders

+ Survey 75:261 Ag '39 380w

MACDONALD, HUGH, comp. John Dryden; a bibliography of early editions and of Drydeniana. 358p il $10 (30s) Oxford

012 Dryden, John—Bibliography 39-21174

" 'My aim,' Mr. Macdonald says, 'has been to include every edition of Dryden's writings published during his lifetime, and every contemporary book or pamphlet I have been able to trace in which he is praised, attacked, or alluded to.' There are twelve sections or chapters, and an excellent index. . . The sections comprise the separate editions of Dryden's poems; the Dryden-Tonson Miscellanies; collected editions of the poems; the plays in quarto; the single sheet and folio prologues and epilogues; collected editions of the plays; contributed prologues and epilogues; Dryden's prose writings; attributed pieces; letters; Drydeniana—by far the largest section; and Dryden's contributions to 'Poems On Affairs of State.' In all there are over 330 title-entries, exclusive of a very large number of later or collateral editions and issues of individual works." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"It may be said that Mr. Macdonald has given us a thorough, scholarly, and probably definitive bibliography, interspersed with valuable disquisitions on the biographic and literary background. Only true aficionados of Dryden will read it for pleasure, but every rare book dealer, every library and all collectors of the Restoration Period will want it on their shelves." John Carter

+ — Publishers' Weekly 136:2215 D 16 '39 1300w

"Mr. Macdonald has taken six years to bring it to completion and to a degree of perfection which, we believe, is unlikely to be surpassed. His bibliography is a distinguished contribution to English scholarship, and its value will be recognized and gratefully acknowledged by all serious students of post-Restoration history and literature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p348 Je 10 '39 1100w

MACDONALD, JOHN C. R. Crime is a business; buncos, rackets, confidence schemes; foreword by August Vollmer. 263p il $3 Stanford univ. press

364 Swindlers and swindling. Fraud 39-13185

Explanations of ninety-three confidence tricks. The author is a police inspector in Oakland, California, who has headed the Oakland bunco detail for fourteen years, and lectures on the subject in California colleges.

New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 20w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p5 Je 25 '39 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p598 O 14 '39 220w

MACDONALD, NORMAN. Canada, 1763-1841: immigration and settlement; the administration of the imperial land regulations. 589p map $8.40 (21s) Longmans

325.71 Canada—Emigration and immigration. Canada—History

"Professor Macdonald has approached the question of Canadian land settlement through an examination of government regulations and the official records of policy and administration. To this body of material he has added a wide knowledge of contemporary unofficial records, such as memoirs and pioneer histories. . . [His study] presents a detailed analysis of the methods by which land was distributed in the Canadian colonies. . . 'The purpose of this book,' its author says, 'is to show how the administration of the land regulations in the Maritime Colonies and the Canadas determined not only the direction and extent of settlement, but also the social and economic development of Canada, and to a large extent conditioned the political and constitutional struggles of the period.' " Canadian Hist R

Reviewed by W. H. Wickwar

Am Pol Sci R 33:1127 D '39 150w

"This volume is a scholarly, definitive treatment of a subject that badly needed unraveling, and is a notable contribution to Canadian and Imperial history." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 207:246 Ja '40 600w

"The book is admirably documented and contains an excellent bibliography. A contemporary map showing counties would have been more useful than the modern one which the publishers have included." R. G. Riddell

+ Canadian Hist R 20:435 D '39 600w

"Here is an admirable and full-weighted, indeed, a necessary book. The beginnings of Canada have, of course, not been neglected by historians, and yet Dr. MacDonald has had the good fortune to strike an almost unworked mine." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:192 Jl 29 '39 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p314 My 27 '39 480w

MACDONALD, NORMAN. The orchid hunters; a jungle adventure; il. with phot. [by the author] with an introd. by Rex Stout. 294p $2.75 Farrar

918.6 Colombia—Description and travel. Venezuela—Description and travel. Orchids (W) 39-27673

Two young Americans, fed-up with the kind of jobs depression days offered, investigated the possibility of orchid hunting, and finding the prospects good, set out for South America. This book, written in breezy, conversational style, records their adventures on a nine months' trip into the jungles of Colombia and Venezuela.

Booklist 36:6 S '39

"There may be critics base enough to suspect that certain of their exploits synchronize too neatly with the suspense requirements of a well-edited book. But most readers, happily, will eschew such carping and feel only admiration for two young men who did not wait for opportunity to be handed to them, but who made their own opportunity—and with it got their orchids." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p5 Jl 30 '39 1150w

"The descriptions are alternately exciting and amusing, and the quality of wide-eyed wonder that is preserved by the author in his narrative is very engaging. He also handles with skill the element of suspense, and brings his book to a climax at almost precisely the last page. The information on rare varieties of orchids, their growth and the manner of gathering and shipping is well worth reading." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 27 '39 550w

"Told in a boyish, conversational style, the book is better-than-average adventure stuff, while the information about orchids will help you to stun the florist the next time you drop in for a couple of nice Cattleya Schroederae."

+ New Yorker 15:75 Jl 22 '39 70w

Time 34:60 Jl 24 '39 270w

Wis Lib Bul 35:165 O '39

MACDONELL, ARCHIBALD GORDON (JOHN CAMERON, NEIL GORDON, pseuds). Autobiography of a cad. 314p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Macmillan]

A satirical portrait of a member of the English ruling class, successful in business, love and politics and sublimely unconscious of ordinary decency and humanity in his relationships with others.

"In writing this novel in the form of Fox-Ingelby's autobiography, Mr. A. G. Macdonell gives us one of the most savage bits of ironic humor that has arrived on these shores from London's ordinarily softspoken literary quarters." William Soskin

Books p6 Mr 12 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p5 Je 7 '38 260w

"That Ingleby is a caricature rather than a character is no reflection on a book which stands up as efficient satire rather than as fiction. The maneuvers that kept England's upper class busy for twenty years offer Mr. Macdonell an easy target. And there are plenty of direct hits here." Miriam Borgenicht

New Repub 98:200 Mr 22 '39 220w

"Fox-Ingleby is not an individual, but the arche-type for all the embusqués, profiteers and social parasites who rose to high government office in the post-war decade. The novel affords first-rate entertainment for readers who prefer fiction involving social criticism, and should be shunned by escapists." Drake De Kay

N Y Times p6 F 19 '39 800w

New Yorker 15:82 F 18 '39 40w

"The narrative consists of a blithe and supercilious recital of a career of oppression, deceit, egotism, and immorality. For nearly one-third of the book it is vastly amusing, ingenious, and skillful. In the remaining two-thirds, Mr Macdonell tends toward repetitiousness. The yellow indecencies of his hero become hard to stomach, and the originality of the conception loses some of its savor. In other words, as long as the character remains a cad he remains palatable. It is only when he develops into a first class heel that you want to throw his 'autobiography' at him." R. S.

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 18 '39 170w

"Not only does the neat mixture of satire and slapstick save the Autobiography of a Cad from being just a funny book, but Mr. Macdonell has also contrived to give it historical interest as the record of thirty-odd years, from the early 'nineties to 1926, seen through the cunning and callous eyes of his hero. Institutions, events, personalities and, above all, the changing sexual code over that period meet with 'Foxy's' scorn or approval, according to the degree of their usefulness to himself. Since all his observations are unpleasant, many are naturally accurate; they, too, help to make this book more effective than its predecessors in the same field, a good and bitter joke." John Marks

+ Spec 161:30 Jl 1 '38 500w

"It is hard to find fault with Mr. Macdonell's satire, which shines with a clear and often brilliant light. The monster that he portrays for us stands for a great many comic and detestable things—political humbug, plutocratic smartness, the vulgarities of gilded youth, the complexes of extreme diehardism—and is at the same time a richly amusing study in self-deception."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 4 '38 500w

MACDOUGALL, MICHAEL. Gamblers don't gamble, as told to J. C. Furnas. 166p $2 Greystone

175.5 Gambling. Cards. Swindlers and swindling 39-27259

A card detective demonstrates how little chance an amateur has in a game with professionals. Some of the author's own experiences and narrow escapes are described in the course of the book.

Booklist 35:342 Je 15 '39

"MacDougall's story, as told to that very useful spook, J. C. Furnas, is crammed with action and information." John Lardner

Books p20 Ap 2 '39 450w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p5 F 26 '39 450w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 6 '39 480w

Wis Lib Bul 35:45 Mr '39

MCDOWELL, WILLIAM. The seventh plank [Eng title: Roughanapes]. 309p $2.50 Putnam [8s 6d Hodder]

39-17650

This first novel, partly autobiographical, follows the life and fortunes of Brian Forbes, born in Victoria's first jubilee year, the seventh son of a seventh son. Two natures are at war in Brian, one inherited from his father, a ship chandler, who longed to be a great inventor; the other marked by a love of beauty and the itch to draw and paint. The story covers the first forty years of Brian's life and ends with the catastrophe which brings with it the fulfillment of his strange love affair.

Reviewed by William M'Fee

Books p6 Je 11 '39 650w

"There is plenty of melodrama in 'The Seventh Plank,' melodrama bordering on the cinematic. Generously sprinkled with Kipling quotations, the writer's effectiveness in style is marred by sentimentalized descriptions, and the historical allusions are rendered in the Guedalla style." Eleanor Van Alen

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 550w

"Only the romantic motive of the golden girl —hardly girlish when he rescued her—fails to convince, and it is the detail of Barrow and the sea, from an author who clearly knows both, that gives distinction to this first novel." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '39 400w

"We believe that the ending of the story is a bit 'engineered.' But it is not sentimentalized. Far from it. On the contrary, it is carried through with exceptional beauty and understanding. 'The Seventh Plank' is not a masterpiece. . . But in my opinion it is a bit of work carrying great promise. I like the story immensely. And the ending, still granting it is somewhat previsioned, is carried through with such naturalism one forgets the engineering." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 11 '39 750w

"Neatly and credibly done, if you don't object to a bit of mysticism now and then."

+ New Yorker 15:94 Je 10 '39 60w

"The incidents are often well-conceived and the connections among them deft, but they sum up to a hammock-piece in the tradition of the Edwardian popular novel." F. P.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 10 '39 170w

"As a first novel, 'The Seventh Plank' is an excellent piece of work, both in quality and in craftmanship. It is the work of a mature mind, which shows a fine sense of human values and a broad experience of life." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 18 '39 550w

"It will be rightly inferred that this is, in some particulars, an unusual story. Mr. McDowell knows his milieu and gives us many interesting pictures and technical details of the kind of life that is lived in small seaports and great shipbuilding yards. His characterization, however, is not very vital. Even Brian, himself, is the vehicle rather than the generator of the story. Finally, his literary style is adequate rather than distinguished."

Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 4 '39 500w

MCFADDEN, CHARLES JOSEPH. The philosophy of communism; pref. by Fulton J. Sheen. 345p $3.50 Benziger

335.4 Communism 39-33113

An exposition of the history and philosophy of Communism written by a Roman Catholic priest. Bibliography. Index.

Cath World 150:503 Ja '40 360w

"This book is a pleasure to read. Its style and content are of equal excellence. There are a few places in the second part of the work where the criticism of communistic teachings is founded on an analysis of problems which seemed to this reviewer to be less penetrating than it might have been. This is a trifling fault, however, when the merits of the book as a whole are considered." J. N. Vaughan

+ Commonweal 31:100 N 17 '39 370w

"So many ignorant and violent attacks have been made upon communism by its opponents, and not infrequently by writers of Dr. McFadden's faith, that it is a relief to find it at last carefully examined and calmly opposed from a Catholic viewpoint. Dr. McFadden actually investigates many of the original writings of Marx, Engels, and Lenin, as well as some of their commentators, and devotes the first half of the book to summarizing such features of dialectical materialism as the philosophy of nature, mind, history, and morality with clarity and considerable objectivity." Theodore Brameld

+ Ethics 50:247 Ja '40 220w

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. The Christian faith in a day of crisis. 226p $1.50 Revell

016.2 Theology. Religious thought. Books —Reviews 39-10370

Takes the place of the author's out of print book, Trends of Christian Thinking (Book Review Digest, 1937), but is similar to that volume in scope. "The volumes herein reviewed were selected mainly from over three hundred that the writer was called upon to read as a member of the selection committee of the American Library Association for the purpose of recommending the fifty best books of the current year. At the same time the choice has in some cases been made because the book under consideration was called for in the interest of comprehensiveness in this volume." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"This book will have value for those who are asking what is the Christian Church thinking in these days of crisis. And there are quarters where information is needed." Conrad Bergendoff

+ Ann Am Acad 204:205 Jl '39 400w

Reviewed by F. G. Ensley

Boston Transcript p7 Je 3 '39 30w

Christian Century 56:323 Mr 8 '39 50w

"This volume is a useful little guide to recent theological literature. . . As a guide to reading, it will be useful to busy pastors; as a substitute for the original volumes, it will be a temptation to the intellectually lazy." E. E. Aubrey

+ J Religion 20:105 Ja '40 90w

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. I was in prison. See I was in prison

MCFARLAND, MARGARET BEALL. Relationships between young sisters as revealed in their overt responses. 230p il $3.15 Teachers college

136.7 Child study. Behaviorism (psychology) 39-205

"In the present monograph Dr. McFarland has reported a first study of the observed responses of young sisters to each other in the home situation. Her observational notes have been supplemented by reports of parents, records of health, tests of intelligence, and case study material. The observations of the two sisters of each pair were made simultaneously in order that relations between responses might be studied directly. . . In the analysis of data Dr. McFarland has considered the types of activities in which the sisters engaged: social, parallel, and individual. . . In the discussion of each topic, the author has presented not only the statistical analysis of her data but has included, also, first-hand material from the records which give a basis for interpretation and insight into the findings." (Editor's pref) Bibliography.

"In the reviewer's opinion it is difficult to overemphasize the importance of this pioneer exploration, by observational techniques, of children's relationships within the family." R. P. Koshuk

+ Am J Soc 45:133 Jl '39 280w

Reviewed by W. C. Reckless

Am Soc R 4:454 Je '39 150w

J Home Econ 31:117 F '39 80w

MCFARLAND, THOMAS CLAIR. Direct-current machinery. 439p il $4 Int. textbook

621.3132 Electric machinery 38-26507

"In this textbook, designed for university students majoring in electrical engineering, the author states that the originality lies in the method of presentation—first to give a physical picture of the assembly of generators and motors, the reasons why the proportioning is such as it is, followed by a discussion of operating characteristics and control, proceeding from no-load to load characteristics. The first chapter (73 pages), devoted to a more or less elementary consideration of fundamental concepts, requires some knowledge of the calculus. There are numerous problems, 261 excellent diagrams, and references at the chapter endings. The author is Associate

MCFARLAND, T. C.—Continued
Professor of Electrical Engineering in the University of California." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 35:42 O 1 '38
N Y New Tech Bks 23:54 O '38

MCFERRIN, JOHN BERRY. Caldwell and company; a southern financial empire. 284p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press [16s Oxford]

332.065 Caldwell and company 39-14484

Study of the rise and fall of Caldwell and Company, an investment house which began operations in Nashville, Tennessee in 1917. The book presents in small compass many of the financial practises which developed during the twenties. Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is an excellent example of what this reviewer considers the present trend toward an unduly regional approach to American economic problems. It cannot be denied that emphasis on the existence of large geographical areas having similar economic interests is a useful concept, but it is deplorable that this idea often leads to a revival of sectionalism and to the neglect of problems which can be solved only by a truly national approach. . . Mr. McFerrin's . . . industry has been considerable, his data abundant and well-arranged, but his perspective is sadly skewed, and his judgments so timorous as to be worthless." L. P. Mitchell
— + Am Hist R 45:487 Ja '40 230w

"It is a creditable job, and a worth-while contribution to the literature of corporate finance." C. P. White
+ Ann Am Acad 206:204 N '39 400w

MCGEHEE, MRS THOMASINE (COBB). Journey proud. 397p $2.50 Macmillan

39-27706

Story of the passing of the old South, based in part upon the recollections of the author's father-in-law. It traces the fortunes of a Virginia family, the Mackays, from 1845 to 1879, during which period of years they passed thru the stages from plantation owners to storekeepers.

Booklist 36:9 S '39
Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p10 S 17 '39 750w

"Mrs. McGehee's picture is not a brilliantly colored one. Rather is it marked by an artistic avoidance of overemphasis. At times it produces the effect of twilight musing as the author lingers over an idea as if to catch all its vibrations." Regina Madden
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 160w
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 30 '39 500w
New Repub 100:224 S 27 '39 40w

"It is a pitiable story, told simply and quite without comment. Mrs. McGehee does not attempt to say that this was good or that bad, to weigh the claims of justice or injustice. She has tried to say only that this is what happened and to describe it as honestly as a novelist of a later generation can. . . The prediction may be a rash one for a Northerner to make, but I am willing to venture that this is a novel about themselves which Southerners will like." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p23 S 10 '39 700w
New Yorker 15:79 S 9 '39 30w

"The style of this first novel is fresh and agreeable, except for a fondness for unusual word order and for cumbrous parentheses. Room must be made on the crowded shelf of Civil War fiction for this literate and informative novel." R. A. Cordell
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 S 2 '39 600w

"All in all, the author succeeds in presenting people with an authentic tradition and high standards of life that are not lost in adversity. There are incidental characters, including a faithful Negro woman, in the portrayal of whom the author achieves verve and vivacity."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 750w
Wis Lib Bul 35:187 N '39

MCGOVERN, WILLIAM MONTGOMERY. The early empires of Central Asia. 529p il maps $4 Univ. of N.C. press

950 Asia, Central—History. Scythians. Huns 39-6490

"A study of the Scythians and the Huns and the part they played in world history; with special reference to the Chinese sources." (Subtitle) The period covered is from about 3000 B.C. down to the sixth century A.D. The author expresses the intention of following up this work with one on the later Empires of Central Asia and a review of the present situation. The author, now professor of political science at Northwestern university, was at one time lecturer on Chinese and Japanese, School of Oriental studies, University of London. Bibliography. Index.

"It is perhaps unjust to criticize a book for what it does not attempt to do. Yet it is necessary to point out one general weakness in estimating its significance. In the main it is a mere chronicle of events. The author seems to have little interest in the factors underlying these events. Thus, though great space is devoted to the wars between the Chinese and their northern and northwestern neighbors, the book scarcely touches upon the dynamic aspects of what the author calls a 'struggle for supremacy.' . . Ethnographic, linguistic, and archaeological data are carefully presented. The broad facts are all here. For the general reader they are interestingly told. The book will be a valuable guide to source materials on Central Asia and will suggest many problems worthy of further inquiry." C. M. Wilbur
+ — Am Anthropol 42:151 Ja '40 900w

"Several of the more recent discussions of Central Asian problems are omitted from the bibliography, and a number of unimportant slips escaped the proofreaders. . . More serious is the failure to define clearly the geographical limits of the areas treated and to discuss adequately the physical and climatic features of each. . . There is the related failure to appreciate the extent and significance of settled, even urban, cultures which were native to Central Asia. In general, however, the effort of Professor McGovern to meet so many needs in a single volume has resulted in a relatively well-grounded and balanced work which should be read by laymen and thoughtfully studied by scholars in many fields." R. H. McDowell
+ — Am Hist R 45:356 Ja '40 550w

"An excellent combination of careful scholarship with lucid and interesting exposition." E. H. Pritchard
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:731 Ag '39 160w
New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 40w
Reviewed by Lloyd Eshleman
N Y Times p8 Ap 16 '39 750w

MCGREGOR, ALEXANDER GRANT. Right wages and abundance; the index which determines the wages best for both capital and labour; the reforms required in wage, banking, and exchange practices. 316p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Pitman]

330.9 Wages. Economic policy 38-38008

A practical English businessman studies the difficulty of recurrent periods of depression and attempts to solve the problem of continued prosperity for the businessman and the masses. "The solution of the economic problem is to be found not in the regulation of prices, profits, or production, but in the rational control of wages (p15). . . When over-production and falling prices become imminent the remedy is to consume more. As . . . the greater part of the total consuming power for consumers' goods is ultimately in the hands of wage and salary earners, higher wages and salaries . . . are the remedy for over-production (p14). . . When over-production becomes imminent . . . the Government should step in and perform a simple duty by decreeing that the pay of wage and small salary earners throughout the country be raised (p15)." Index.

"Admitting for the sake of argument the soundness of the author's idea of maintaining a managed currency at a constant purchasing level through adjustments of the wage level from time to time, it is difficult to see how any legislative body elected by universal suffrage could be induced to pass such a law, and in the improbable event of such a law's enactment, how any Wage Board could carry out its mandate. . . The author's best chance of testing the economic soundness of his theory would seem to be in selling it to Hjalmar Schacht instead of trying to induce his own countrymen and the United States to try it out. That totalitarian state which has already succeeded in completely divorcing itself from the corrupting influence of gold, and in which both employers and employees have learned the wisdom of obeying government decrees without a murmur, should furnish the ideal testing ground for his plan." N. I. Stone

Am Econ R 29:166 Mr '39 1250w

"In the midst of economic perplexity and dislocation, it is refreshing to find a book which speaks with certainty and finality, even though one may completely disagree with its premises and conclusions. Although they will not believe Mr. McGregor's thesis a tenable one, academic economists will find his analysis interesting and his discussion unusually provocative." G. S. Watkins

Ann Am Acad 204:215 Jl '39 410w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Donnan

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 270w

MACGREGOR, DAVID HUTCHISON. Public aspects of finance. 137p $1.75 (5s) Oxford

336.42 Finance—Great Britain [39-19385]

"This thought-provoking little book, which is based on lectures delivered by the author in the London School of Economics, deals with certain aspects of finance to which more attention has hitherto been given in public than in academic discussion. Professor Macgregor has examined the financial discussions in Parliament during the last hundred years and has traced the growth of changing principles and practices." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The value of this volume should not be measured by its size. It is the work of an untrammeled mind, and some of its pages are worth whole chapters in esteemed 900-page texts on public finance." Alzada Comstock

+ Am Econ R 29:885 D '39 350w

Economist 135:183 Ap 22 '39 1100w

"A sound as well as an amiable book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:322 Ag 26 '39 220w

"This brisk little study of successive trends of policy—one might almost say of the mental climates of successive Parliaments—does not, even allowing for the difference of scale and of period covered, challenge comparison with such a work as Mrs. Hicks' Finance of British Government. It is a stimulant to thought, not a work of reference; a critique, not a summary; it uses a historical period, as the author explains, 'only in the illustrative way.' . . In other circumstances and in other hands, the topics [treated] might easily have formed the subject-matter of a portentously long and dull treatise. As it is, they are crisply compressed within a hundred and fifty pages of quick-moving and often entertaining argument. Sometimes, perhaps, the compression is a little disconcerting." Honor Croome

+ — Spec 162:546 Mr 31 '39 750w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 90w

MCGUIRE, PAUL. Australia; her heritage, her future [Eng title: Australian journey]. 349p il map $3.50 Stokes (12s 6d Heinemann)

919.4 Australia—Description and travel. Australia—History (W) 39-20813

A native son of Australia, now a successful novelist and journalist, writes of the history, geography, economic and social conditions of the country, with sympathy and understanding but with honest criticism and some doleful prophesies concerning the future. Index.

Booklist 36:42 O 1 '39

Reviewed by M. C. Hubbard

Books p8 O 1 '39 700w

Reviewed by Katherine Smithies

Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 320w

Christian Science Monitor p20 D 13 '39 500w

"I do not know another book that has attempted the task of assembling the history, geography, politics, and sociology of Australia in a journalistic, readable style. . . Almost every really important point, instead of being dealt with by itself and in a pre-arranged order, gets a number of scattered mentions. . . The result is that some things are left out altogether. . . More editing would have been a good idea. And the book, for the jumbled kind of book it is, is too long." Lionel Bridge

+ — Commonweal 31:250 Ja 5 '40 750w

Foreign Affairs 18:381 Ja '40

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 28 '39 330w

"Mr. McGuire's 'Australia' is as arresting a mélange of history, economics, travel narrative, sociology, good yarns and partisan opinions as I have read in many a day. It is anything but systematic; it is decidedly episodic and discontinuous. . . Like most books on Australia by Australians, it is a risky book for foreigners to swallow whole, for the author grinds his axe most furiously, but to those of us who know the country it is like an aperitif to the appetite for argument." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p4 S 3 '39 1500w

Pratt p19 winter '40

"Mr. McGuire, a young Australian author of detective stories, has an eye for the picturesque and a gift for colorful narrative. The constantly interesting text is enhanced by pages of excellent photographs. . . Mr. McGuire's book, written with enthusiasm, understanding, and humor, is the best work of its kind that this reviewer has seen in recent years. It is such a model of description and analysis that one wishes Mr. McGuire might study fifty or sixty other countries." J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ag 12 '39 310w

"This book, for all its casual and friendly manner, has authority. It is a traveller speaking who knows the language, and has access to the spiritual as well as the physical geography of the country." Helen Simpson

+ Spec 163:64 Jl 14 '39 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p447 Jl 29 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

MACHETANZ, FREDERICK. Panuck, Eskimo sled dog; il. by the author. 95p $1.50 Scribner (W) 39-6119

Story of an Eskimo boy and his dog team. Panuck, the lead dog, succeeds in making his way thru a blizzard to summon help for a driver with a broken leg, thus bringing honor to himself and to his master.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

"I hear that an eminent authority on the Arctic has called these the best pictures of that region he has yet seen. I can well believe it, without ever having been there; if the Arctic does not look like this it ought to." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 7 '39 350w

MACHETANZ, FREDERICK—Continued
Reviewed by Elsie Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 150w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '39 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"The story is told in simple, straightforward fashion by a man who has lived with the Eskimos of Alaska, but it is his pictures which give the book real distinction. They are of unusual power and interest."
+ Horn Bk M 15:165 My '39 60w

"This story of Panuck's first year of life . . . is told in crisp, brief sentences which six to ten year old readers will find not only easy to read but remarkably effective in describing action and background. The admirable style is matched by the author's illustrations, strong and simple in composition, yet filled with a sense of the bold outlines, the vast spaces of the Arctic." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 30 '39 240w

"The lead dog and his young master are perhaps a trifle overheroic, but the factual background is good and the pictures are bold and decorative. Best of all, there are diagrams showing just how to make a harness for your own dog and how to hitch him to a sled."
+ — New Yorker 15:105 My 13 '39 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup xiv N 18 '39 60w

MCILWAIN, CHARLES HOWARD. Constitutionalism and the changing world; collected papers. 312p $4.50 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

320.4 Political science—Addresses, essays, lectures [39-24101]

A volume of collected papers by the Eaton professor of the science of government at Harvard. Partial contents: The historian's part in a changing world; Sovereignty; Due process of law in Magna Carta; The House of Commons in 1621; The fundamental law behind the Constitution of the United States; Liberalism and the totalitarian ideals; Government by law; The tenure of English judges. Index.

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin
Commonweal 30:402 Ag 18 '39 490w

Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 20w

New Statesman & Nation 17:1008 Je 24 '39 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p690 N 25 '39 350w

MCILWAINE, SHIELDS. The southern poor-white: from Lubberland to Tobacco road. 274p il $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

810.9 American literature—South. South—Social conditions 39-25598

"In this volume, the author tries to tell the social story of the poor-whites and then to show its literary treatment in different periods. Thus the method employed is social interpretation in narrative form rather than the conventional argument and analysis of literary history. Literary considerations have been limited to the changes and additions in period-handlings which cumulate in the complete social portraiture of the po' buckra in literature." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a book that has been needed for a long time. It reveals both the wealth and the poverty of the South, which has always had an abundance of both. In particular it removes from the realm of vagueness once and for all those many indigenously Southern terms and figures of speech which come into American usage without any clear or plausible definition. Mr. MacIlwaine's definitions of 'poor-white,' 'white trash,' 'tenant farmer,' and 'sharecropper' can be set down as final and authentic." Erskine Caldwell
+ Books p16 O 29 '39 500w

Reviewed by Russ Nixon
Boston Transcript p3 Ja 20 '40 180w

"Scholarly, illuminating and at the same time easy to read."
+ New Repub 100:377 N 1 '39 50w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels
Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 13 '40 250w

MACINNES, DUNCAN ARTHUR. Principles of electrochemistry. 478p il $6 Reinhold [30s Chapman]

541.37 Electrochemistry 39-3398

"Dr. MacInnes, who is a member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, states that, considering the wide extent of his subject, he has severely restricted the range of topics and the manner of their presentation. His equations are derived from first principles and only the real accomplishments of theoretical electrochemistry are discussed, although he reluctantly omits the general theory of acids and bases." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"After a brief historical introduction, there follows an excellent treatment of transference phenomena embodying the masterly researches of the author and his collaborators on the moving boundary method and precision conductance determinations; several well written chapters on the thermodynamics of galvanic cells, standard electrode potentials and the ramifications of Debye-Hückel theory. . . Readers interested in locating the very latest theoretical contributions or commercial applications will be disappointed. The author consistently refrains from including theories which have not been adequately verified by experiment, and makes no pretense of dealing with the patent literature. . . However . . . the book should prove to be an excellent treatise in Theoretical Electrochemistry." V. K. La Mer
+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:2253 Ag '39 450w

"To all interested in the physical chemistry of solutions this book is highly recommended." C. G. Fink
+ Chem & Met Eng 46:374 Je '39 140w

"The book is characterized by clear and logical statements which lead the reader from basic principles to the more difficult deductions. . . This book is a welcome addition to the literature of theoretical electrochemistry. It should find use both as a text and reference book." G. W. Vinal
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:254 Ap 10 '39 550w

"The most recent and dependable data are presented rather than those of earlier investigators. There are well-executed diagrams and adequate footnote references to the literature."
N Y New Tech Bks 24:7 Ja '39

MCINTIRE, MRS MARGUERITE (PEARMAN). Free and clear. 311p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 39-33011

The Chadbournes had cultivated their farm on a Maine hill for nearly a hundred years, and still owned it "free and clear." But the children of Matthew Chadbourne could not appreciate that feeling of rugged independence. In time their father had to get a mortgage in order to pay for Sally's college bills, and a proposed medical school course.

Booklist 36:177 Ja 1 '40

"After the slightly confusing first chapters . . . the novel moves slowly and smoothly to its conclusion. Well acquainted with her material, Mrs. McIntire offers in sympathy and sincerity what she lacks in dramatic impact. In general, she attempts to glorify the commonplace with a familiar, well tested pattern. For this reader, it is the glory, rather than the commonplace, that is disappointing." M. G. Lehman
+ — Books p19 N 26 '39 550w

"This serene story . . . is a shining example of what a writer can do, who keeps within the strict limits of her own experience, and who lives this so deeply and wisely that she is able to make it real and delightful for others." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 400w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 27 '40 450w

"Once in a great while one comes across a novel which wears a singular air of unpremeditation—almost as if the author had had little or nothing to do with it. . . It is only toward the end that the mechanics of the story begin to seem apparent—and perhaps a little transparent. . . This chronicle of the Chadbournes seems rather like a piece of life, flowing and continuous, but without, in the fictional sense, a beginning or an end." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p7 N 26 '39 700w

"Pleasantly rural, neighborly, and good-tempered."

+ New Yorker 15:121 D 16 '39 30w

"At first it is a little hard to believe in Mrs. McIntire's Maine farm and its characters. . . It is only as the reader gets on with the book, that all these people . . . assume warmth and dignity. They become characters in a drama of Maine life as it ought to be and as one would like to believe it is. Mrs. McIntire has achieved this result by writing quietly and unpretentiously, without struggling overmuch with dialect, and without trying to enliven her pages with too many native eccentricities. Moreover, she has a love and understanding of the land of which she writes. 'Free and Clear' is not exciting. It is probably not a penetrating study of anything, but if you want a pleasant story of the New England countryside it is most refreshing reading." J. P. Marquand

+ Sat R of Lit 21:37 D 2 '39 450w

Time 34:85 D 11 '39 40w

MACINTOSH, DOUGLAS CLYDE. Social religion. (Religion today and tomorrow) 336p $3 Scribner

261 Sociology, Christian. Kingdom of God 39-17218

In part one the author lays down the principles of social religion as he believes they are to be found in the Bible and particularly in Christ's teachings concerning the Kingdom of God. In part two he discusses the problems of modern everyday life which social religion must attempt to solve. Indexes.

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p3 S 2 '39 270w

"Christians, including specialists in the field of New Testament historical criticism, would do well to read this book; and he who is not a Christian would find it at once illuminating and challenging." E. F. Tittle

+ Christian Century 56:1024 Ag 23 '39 550w

"A penetrating, profound, and extremely readable tract for these times." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 153:17 Je 15 '39 240w

"In this volume one of our leading American theologians reveals himself as social analyst and prophet. He also discloses his warm sympathy for people caught in the vortex of the baffling social situations of our generation. The book is a worthy successor to the epochal volumes of Rauschenbusch, Gladden, and Ross. It constitutes a notable contribution to the literature of the social gospel." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 17:81 Ja '40 500w

"Professor Macintosh, the distinguished Yale theologian and philosopher, gives us in this volume the first in a new series of books which he is writing on the subject Religion Today and Tomorrow. Later volumes are to discuss personal religion and theology. . . Perhaps the two later books will give us more of the Dr. Macintosh who has made such notable contributions to theology during these past years. But this book seems hardly the work of a thorough and penetrating critic of our times and our conditions." W. N. Pittenger

— + Living Church 101:10 Ag 30 '39 600w

MACK, EDWARD CLARENCE. Public schools and British opinion, 1780-1860; the relationship between contemporary ideas and the evolution of an English institution. 432p $3.75 Columbia univ. press [15s Methuen]

373.42 Public schools (endowed)—England. Education—England [39-13159]

Part one of this volume traces in broad outline the growth of the English public school prior to 1780. Part two deals with the criticisms brought against it in the literature of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, culminating in the reforms of the thirties and forties. Part three records the work of three schoolmasters, Russell, Butler and Arnold, while part four considers the mid-Victorian reactions to Arnold's teachings and the battles of the forties and fifties. In a second volume it is proposed to bring the study down to date. Bibliography. Index.

Manchester Guardian p7 O 25 '38 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 6 '38 500w

MACK, SILAS FRANKLIN. Comrades round the world; Christian youth in action; with phot. by the author. 165p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

266 Missions. Youth—Religious life 39-20415

Material on the Christian youth movement, showing the opportunities for advancing international friendship in present times. The book is based partly on the Madras conference.

Christian Century 56:999 Ag 16 '39 20w

"It should be a helpful handbook for fellowships who want action, for St. Andrew's Brotherhoods and those interested in the minorities in our own country." G. F. T.

+ Churchman 153:35 N 15 '39 90w

"Dr. Mack talked with young people of many lands. His book is an inspiring witness to the spiritual fervor of the youth of the world."

+ Living Church 101:8 D 6 '39 50w

MACKAY, MRS MARGARET (MACKPRANG). Lady with jade. 510p $2.50 Day

39-25876

Character study of an American woman living in Peking. Moira Chisholm's intense love of China was really a love for jade. She began her business career as the proprietor of a little curio shop, but her rise to fame was rapid. And in every major crisis of her life Moira turned away from love and marriage, in order to dedicate herself to the pursuit of jade.

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Books p10 O 15 '39 650w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 16 '39 500w

" 'Lady With Jade' is a book which is essentially its author's evocation of China, and it is pertinent, nostalgic and beautiful. Mrs. Mackay has given her story a courageous and consistent ending, and even those readers who question the logic of Moira's character development must admit that she sticks to her guns. But the novel's permeating and haunting personality is the personality of China, enigmatic and irresistible, 'across the even rooftops of Peking to the elusive hills.' " Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p22 O 15 '39 750w

"The rise of an American woman from nothing at all to a position of affluence and social power in Peiping . . . is a little rapid, and the amount of detail about Chinese art will please you only if you were mad about it in advance. But Mrs. Mackay's Chinese atmosphere is undoubtedly authentic, and her main character is interesting and perfectly credible."

+ — New Yorker 15:102 O 14 '39 60w

Reviewed by J. P. Marquand

Sat R of Lit 20:11 O 21 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

MCKEAN, DAYTON DAVID. Pressures on the Legislature of New Jersey. 251p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d King]

328.368 Lobbying. New Jersey—Politics and government. New Jersey. Legislature 38-23938

"As a member of the New Jersey Assembly in the sessions of 1934 and 1935, the author saw and felt the influences which he as a scholar so interestingly describes. Against the background of New Jersey politics, he shows the interests represented before the Assembly, their methods, and something of the internal structure of various groups. As a case study, he presents the fight over the sales tax." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"A book to place beside Dr. Belle Zeller's admirable study." Pendleton Herring
+ — Am Pol Sci R 32:1201 D '38 310w

Reviewed by Belle Zeller
Ann Am Acad 202:221 Mr '39 450w

MCKEE, ELMORE MCNEILL. What use is religion? 260p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner

239 Christianity 39-10230

"The author is rector of St. George's Church in New York, and he tells us that much of the material was developed during the days when he was chaplain of Yale University. He tells how religion gives meaning to life, how it changes one's sense of isolation to one of fellowship, and how impotence is actually changed to power." Churchman

"There are many helpful illustrations throughout the book which make the central thesis abundantly clear. The chapters are brief, the material skillfully handled, and practically the whole scope of the Christian religion at least implied. Its non-technical style will make it particularly interesting to laymen." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 153:17 My 1 '39 250w

"The reasons offered to convince the skeptic are not new, but are set forth with the charm and persuasiveness of the skilled preacher. The writer has the rare gift of breathing into arguments the breath of life, so that his words are inspiring as well as convincing." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 17:78 Ja '40 200w

"What Use Is Religion? is so interesting that it can be read straight through at one sitting. It closes with several pages of suggested reading. The book might serve as a starting point for a further study of helpful books herein suggested." A. E. Greanoff
+ Living Church 101:12 S 6 '39 270w

MCKENNEY, RUTH (MRS BRUCE MINTON). Industrial valley. 379p maps $3 Harcourt

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Akron, Ohio. Akron, Ohio (W) 39-27089

A literary pageant of the lives of the rubber workers of Akron, Ohio, from January, 1932, to March 21, 1936, when they won their first big strike. With only two fictitious names used, the author traces the growth of the struggle by means of day-by-day excerpts from newspaper headlines, vital statistics, and editorial comments on national and local affairs, which have particular bearing on the case.

Booklist 35:220 Mr 1 '39

" 'Industrial Valley' has all the dramatic elements that make good fiction to recommend it and all the facts and emphasis that make vivid, if one-sided history. Miss McKenney tells the absorbing story of the labor pains and birth of a strike and describes with masterly hand the sluggish awakening of an industrial giant. An index of the vast amount of detail would make the book more valuable as a reference volume." R. C. Feld
+ Books p6 F 19 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 1 '39 410w

"The epilogue unfortunately is almost proletarian prudery, with its arrogating of all virtue to the left-wing movement. Akron is not America. . . But if readers feel that knowledge of how workers think and feel is prior to judgment of them, if they would examine the roots from which much of America's recent industrial ferment grew, if they would understand the genesis and motives of many contemporary back-to-work movements and law-and-order groups, this book is almost a primary source study." R. M. B.
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 5 '39 550w

"The book's sharp portrayal of the apathy of thousands of unemployed makes the reader visualize the rise and fall of the morale of the union and other rubber-workers as though registered on a chart. To be able to give such character and personality to a body of seventy-five or a hundred thousand men, as though they were one person, is a feat which contributes largely to this reviewer's opinion that Miss McKenney's book deserves a major literary prize." G. E. Shipler, Jr.
+ Churchman 153:27 Ap 1 '39 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

"Because fictionalized, 'Industrial Valley' is undoubtedly the most interesting and exciting study of recent labor history yet published—even if not, perhaps, the most reliable. And it is more than a study of a labor movement. Not only are the activities of workers and of employing units chronologically detailed, but the feelings and emotions, the rationale, and logic, behind these activities are also portrayed, very skilfully—at times more skilfully, perhaps, than accurately." E. S. Lynch
+ — Commonweal 29:530 Mr 3 '39 600w

"Industrial Valley is the most original and readable piece of American labor history ever written." M. L. Elting + Forum 101:vi Mr '39 120w

"Miss McKenney's forthright sympathies lead her into some distortions; her social satire is too heavily underlined and often seems merely sarcastic. There is a last brief section, 'And Three Years After,' in which she writes as a politician instead of an artist, and her political judgment is weakened by the mood of bitterly determined optimism that now prevails at The New Masses. These are not deadly faults. For the last eight years, people have been arguing about proletarian literature; it has been praised, reviled and more recently buried in potter's field, but the interesting point is that it has rarely been written. 'Industrial Valley' is perhaps the best American example of that manner and medium. Even though it is based completely on fact, I also offer it as one of our best collective novels." Malcolm Cowley
+ — New Repub 98:77 F 22 '39 1050w

" 'Industrial Valley' is not a pleasant book. It is somber in tone, serious in purpose. It is one-sided and class-conscious. It may even be propaganda. But it wants to be read, for the story is the story of one part of American life. It is a story of labor. . . 'Industrial Valley' with its faults and its prejudices, impresses compellingly. In its probable distortion, its emotionalism, its propaganda, it still has a weight of great truth, for out of the turmoil and the controversies of contemporary America it was produced. It registers the cross-currents. Read carefully, that register has deep meaning, perhaps, for all of us." Francis Brown
+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 5 '39 1150w
New Yorker 15:83 F 18 '39 60w
Pratt p9 summer '39

"For serious readers (those not reading chiefly for narrative interest) the book raises quite as many questions as it supplies answers. One would like to know what emphasis Miss McKenney would give to incidents in Akron since March, 1936. Why did she fail to explain or even record the $25,000, said on good authority to have been contributed by Akron merchants to the rubber union's treasury during the big strike? Why did she give such a confusing picture of the Akron Times-Press? I suspect that the story of the writing of this book would be quite as interesting and fully half as long as the book itself. As befits a humorist (author of 'My Sister Eileen') and a good reporter, Miss McKenney is surest in her satire, in her treatment of recorded fact and of movements in the mass." Paul Bixler

Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 25 '39 460w
Wis Lib Bul 35:98 My '39

MCKENNY, MARGARET. Birds in the garden, and how to attract them; with 16 il. in full color and 32 pages in half-tone; introd. by Clyde Fisher. 349p $5 Reynal

598.2 Birds. Birds—Food. Birds, Protection of (W) 40-27044

Discussion of the ways and means of attracting birds to the home garden, and other matters of interest to the bird lover. Partial contents: Planting in the small garden to provide food and shelter; Feeding devices; Protection; Bird homes; Bird song; Care of stray birds; Migration and birdbanding; Birds on the country place; Birds in the city garden; Hunting with the camera; Sanctuaries; Lists of plants to attract birds in various sections of the country, and birds attracted by them. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:209 F 1 '40

"The section devoted to descriptions of birds known to visit gardens and country places is dull. It would have been vastly improved with informal pen and ink drawings of the birds themselves. In general, more might have been said about the value of untidy brush piles, upgrown fence rows, and dead trees as places of shelter and nesting sites. All in all, however, 'Birds in the Garden' is a useful book. Next summer's young robins, catbirds and cedar waxwings will have more mulberries and wild cherries than their parents had, and for this they will have Miss McKenny to thank." G. M. Sutton

Books p12 D 17 '39 450w

"Miss McKenny quotes freely from other writers on her subject. Evidently well informed and widely read, she chooses only the best, while her own contributions serve to spread her enthusiasm to her readers. . . The occasional inaccuracies in text and illustrations are of minor importance in a work of this kind. The book will unquestionably succeed in its aim and can be recommended to bird lovers." W. M. Tyler

\+ Boston Transcript p11 D 28 '39 300w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 13 '40 200w

"The book's sixteen pages of color plates show a great many familiar birds, in scale of about one-half, and are interesting and informative. Even more attractive, however, are the photographs which fill thirty-two pages with glimpses of bird life. . . This book should bring a new interest to the house and new riches to the garden."

\+ N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '40 500w

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 20 '40 200w

"To obtain all the information found in 'Birds in the Garden,' one would certainly have to cull many books from widely scattered sources and probably even more United States department of agriculture booklets and various other technical publications. Miss McKenny has not only turned out a notable piece of research but has made a genuine contribution to popular literature on birds." C. B. M.

\+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 480w
Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

MCKENNY, MARGARET. A book of wild flowers; [il. by] Edith F. Johnston. [80p] $2 Macmillan

582.13 Flowers (W) 39-6643

Colored sketches of thirty-three American wild flowers, each with a short prose description. Small black and white sketches show the pods and seed of the flowers. The arrangement is by season.

Booklist 35:293 My 1 '39

"A stark description of this beautiful and distinctive book may make it sound like a good many others, but that would be a wrong impression. In a class by itself, it will please so many kinds of people, from small to great, for so many reasons, that it needs no prophet to foresee its wide and continuing popularity." M. L. Becker

\+ Books p6 Ap 23 '39 270w

"To a great extent the charm of this latest of the author's several books derives from the full colored lithographic illustrations executed by Mrs. Edith F. Johnston—one for each page of the brief, crisp text. Author and artist worked closely together throughout the preparation of their material, and the result is a unit of exceptional charm and distinction." R. S. Lemmon

\+ Books p13 My 14 '39 120w

"Not too many for the youngest nature lover to learn, and yet a satisfying variety to charm all who love to watch for the seasonal blossoms. The full-page lithographic flower portraits in soft colors are marvelously true to nature." M. A. Whitney

\+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 30 '39 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 31:133 D 1 '39 30w

Horn Bk M 15:164 My '39 60w

"Children will catch something from Miss McKenny's carefully written prose that matches the spirit of Miss Johnston's pictures. . . This is not intended as a guide to wild flowers but as a choice selection of well-known ones, presented for the delight of looking at them." Irene Smith

\+ Library J 64:331 Ap 15 '39 140w

"Since this is intended neither as a complete guide nor manual the text is confined to descriptions, sometimes in rather lush prose, with mention of each flower's habitats and habits. For the sake of accuracy, since common names differ widely in various parts of the country, a list of the botanical names is included in the back. Written and arranged for younger children, the book is so beautifully designed as to charm the eyes of all ages." E. L. Buell

\+ N Y Times p12 My 21 '39 280w
New Yorker 15:108 My 13 '39 60w
Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

MACKENZIE, AGNES MURE. The foundations of Scotland. 316p map $3.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Chambers]

941 Scotland—History [39-15986]

This history of Scotland from the earliest times to 1286 forms an introduction to the author's four volumes already published which carry the story of Scotland from the days of Bruce to 1745. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. O. Ault

Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 320w

"[The author] has used the best authorities, she has presented her results with clarity, and she has written with distinction. But, in spite of its obvious merits, her book is in some ways dangerous. In the first place it is doubtful whether the material available can be profitably handled in the manner which Dr. Mure Mackenzie has made her own. For the early period of Scottish history very little is certainly known. . . In order to tell a tale at all the author has had perforce to interpret with some degree of dogmatism and to rationalise." J. D. Mackie

\+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 13 '39 550w
Sat R of Lit 19:21 Ap 22 '39 130w

"Readers, both north and south of the Tweed, should find in Dr. Mackenzie's book a trustworthy and eminently readable guide to a difficult and generally much neglected period, so far as the area is concerned, in our history."

MACKENZIE, A. M. —Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p763 D 3 '38 700w

MACKINDER, DOROTHY. The violent take it by storm. 228p $2 (6s) Sheed 39-10532

Paloma, a little Spanish dancer, sternly rebuked for her way of life by Las Alva, an earnest young priest, decides to become a great actress. All thru the years of her rise to fame she keeps her ideal of the priest. When she has reached the pinnacle of her career she meets the priest again, now become a worldly Monsignore. The shock is great; Paloma writes Las Alva a stern letter, and retires to a convent.

Booklist 35:332 Je 1 '39

"Miss Mackinder tells her story simply in an unhurried, lucid prose, centering on the psychological interrelationships. She is unconcerned with the categories of time and space, evoking lightly the atmosphere of the theater and the life of the Spanish town. And her treatment of the two characters is somewhat superficial." John Sherry
+ — Books p8 My 28 '39 360w

"Once again we come across the Thais theme, but used with new life and greater subtlety than usual, and in this case pointing the way to a brief but intensive look at the deeper spiritual values of an everyday world."
+ Cath World 150:125 O '39 200w

"This is a sensitively written and penetrating book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Ap 29 '39 80w

MACKINNON, JAMES. Origins of the reformation. 459p $6.40 (16s) Longmans
270.5 Church history—Middle ages. Reformation 39-22339

"Dr. Mackinnon is the chief authority in this country on Luther. He has already written four large volumes on Luther and the Reformation, and one on Calvin and the same. Now he may be said to be rounding off his life's work with a study of the origins of the Reformation, of the conflicts in the late mediaeval period out of which it arose." Spec

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington
Churchman 153:18 Ap 15 '39 380w

Reviewed by E. R. Hardy, Jr.
Living Church 100:582 My 31 '39 340w

"Dr. Mackinnon is not narrow, or notably old-fashioned, in his view of the factors making for the Reformation. He sees that they were of all kinds, social, economic, political, intellectual, even religious. Though he thinks of the Reformation too much in terms of Luther, he gives us useful and impartial, perhaps too impartial, surveys of the various movements of dissent, the conflicts which filled the later history of the mediaeval Church." A. L. Rowse
+ — Spec 162:642 Ap 14 '39 480w

"Dr. Mackinnon's volume is a most useful guide to the later Middle Ages and in particular, as is intended, to the conflicts between the spiritual and the civil authority which culminated in the Reformation. His survey would possess, however, an even greater value if it showed a more generous appreciation of what the medieval Papacy did actually achieve and of the difficulties with which it had to contend."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 18 '39 800w

MACKINTOSH, HUGH ROSS. Sermons; with memoir by Alexander Beith Macaulay. 208p $3.25 Scribner [7s Clark, T]
252 Sermons [38-38263]

"The sermons of Dr. Mackintosh were chosen by his close friends for publication after his death in 1936. Apparently no effort was made to choose those which related to a common theme. They deal with a great variety of subjects and, while they have a deep core of scholarly substance, they are simply and popularly constructed and are of the type dear to the heart of the Scottish congregation. They are more biblical than theological, more practical than theoretical." Christian Century

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 15 '39 30w

"These sermons are in the best British tradition. They deal with theological, biblical and practical themes. They are carefully and logically planned, with a thoughtful and cultivated audience in mind. There are few anecdotes, but the quotations and references to biography, science and literature are apt and effective. A sincere listener to such sermons as these would soon learn the meaning and importance of the Christian faith." W. R. Cremeans
+ Christian Century 56:450 Ap 5 '39 420w
Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Je 25 '38 170w

MCKOWN, GRETCHEN, and GLEESON, MRS FLORENCE (STEBBINS). All the days were Antonia's; il. by Zhenya Gay. 268p $2 Viking
(W) 39-19154

Pioneer story for boys and girls, based in part upon Mrs Gleeson's adventures as a child. Miners, Indians, cowboys, and robbers figure in this story of Deadwood City in the Black Hills in 1870, and Buffalo Bill is one of the characters.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p15 N 12 '39 300w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 100w

"This is a thrilling, intimate and original story of American frontier living." M. A. Whitney
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 28 '39 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:300 S '39 100w

"Good characterization, humor, and a vivid presentation of material based on fact, make this a most enjoyable story for girls fifth grade and up." Margaret Clark
+ Library J 64:806 O 15 '39 100w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:841 N 1 '39 70w

"Here is a story straight out of real life with sparkling freshness and humor. Antonia, whom her father called Tony, is memorable among little girl heroines." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 22 '39 340w

MCKOWN, HARRY CHARLES. Activities in the elementary school. 473p il $3 (18s) McGraw 372 Student activities. Education of children (W) 39-1093

"A handbook for elementary teachers and administrators, describing and evaluating the organization of assembly programs, direction of home room activities, development of special interest clubs, and the stimulation of a general pupil-interest program. Very few library activities are included, but otherwise the range of suggested programs is wide and varied, and is supplemented by references to literature, and by chapter bibliographies." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:200 F 15 '39

"This book is useful, but it would have been infinitely more useful had the author taken the position that all activities in the elementary school should grow out of the needs and the interests of the children concerned and, therefore, should be an integral part of the curriculum program. Let us hope that he will direct his talents to collecting the materials for such a book to supersede this one that he has written so well." J. C. Morrison

+ — El School J 40:148 O '39 400w

MCLAVERTY, MICHAEL. Call my brother back. 261p $2 Longmans

39-4899

Chronicle of the MacNeills, a Nationalistic Catholic Irish family, from 1918 to the days of the Trouble. Living at first among the farmers and fishermen on Rathlin Island, off the north of Ireland, they later live in Belfast, but return to the island when the elder son, Alec, is killed. The narrator is young Colm, the scholarly one, who hoped to become a priest.

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
Books p10 Mr 12 '39 500w

Reviewed by Mary Manning
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 11 '39 410w
Cath World 149:380 Je '39 70w

"This is a distinguished book. The prose is luminous, astringent, free of rhythmic mannerisms. To read this novel is to get to know a working Ulster family. It's a worthwhile experience." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 25 '39 450w

"Belfast and Northern Ireland do not appear to be particularly different from the other counties. What is surprsing is that Mr. McLaverty has written distinguished short stories, some of which have appeared in an American magazine, Columbia. He is not, of course, the first good short story writer to meet defeat in the novel, although it is a problem how a man who can get fine implications and meaning into a short story can keep them out of a longer work." Harry Sylvester

— Commonweal 29:585 Mr 17 '39 240w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p7 My 9 '39 170w
New Repub 98:260 Ap 5 '39 30w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 17:748 My 13 '39 550w

"The writing has genuine distinction. The details of family life, the visits of neighbors, the small quarrels, the sudden gushes of affection, the deeply penetrating, ritualistic beauty of the Catholic religion—all this is beautifully expressed with restrained pity and compassion. The weak spot of the novel is the usual first-novel one, the characters. It isn't that they aren't real: we hear them, feel them, believe in them, but we don't see them clearly, either in relation one to the other or their background." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p7 F 26 '39 700w

"Here again we come upon that haunting prose music which is the sole and distinguishing property of the Irish writers. McLaverty has it in full measure. His book is steadily lyrical and leaves eye and ear richly gratified. . . If we would complain at all, it would be against this all-too-perfect unity of style, treating as it does of Ireland's bitter crisis in the same unfaltering lyrical terms that served for Colm's tender boyhood. It would have been a larger, stronger book if the steady music had broken where peace itself was broken. It is none the less a beautiful book." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 F 25 '39 340w
Time 33:80 F 27 '39 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Je 3 '39 200w

MCLEAN, DONALD. Knowing yourself and others; mental hygiene for young people. 275p il $2; school ed $1.40 Holt

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Conduct of life (W) 38-14253

Study of the factors in adjustment to adult living, written for boys and girls of high school age. The main problems discussed are popularity, love, and security. The author is a psychologist in the Los Angeles Institute of family relations. Index.

"This book does not attempt to solve the problems of abnormal youth but is directed, rather, to normal, wholesome adolescents. . . The book is interesting to pupils without being 'common' and is much less 'preachy' than most books for high-school people. The excellent illustrations are placed for the convenience of the printer rather than the reader; hence some of their aptness is lost. This book will be invaluable to teachers of sociology, modern problems, home economics, and any courses which touch on the family and its problems. It could be used as supplementary reading in science and English courses. Some principals and teachers will want to inaugurate a course on personal problems in order to use this book. If this course does not reach all pupils, the book could be made available for group guidance programs." J. C. Aldrich

+ School R 47:236 Mr '39 550w

"A splendid book for young people, one that guidance counselors, in school and out, will welcome."

+ Wis Lib Bul 35:35 F '39

MACLEAN, JOSEPH BROTHERTON. Life insurance. 5th ed 668p $4 McGraw

368.3 Insurance, Life 39-13638

"A chapter on Savings bank life insurance has been added; some sections have been rewritten." (Booklist) For fourth edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

Am Econ R 29:892 D '39 40w

"There are not many American insurance books that have come out in five editions. The fact that this one has, proves the high quality of the work. The new edition contains important changes; some parts have been completely rewritten, and a chapter on savings bank life insurance has been added. Therefore, it is still more to be recommended than before. However, because it is certain that in the near future a sixth and even a seventh and an eighth edition will appear, it may be in the interest of the author and the readers to propose some more alterations." Alfred Manes

+ — Ann Am Acad 207:261 Ja '40 450w
Booklist 35:383 Jl 15 '39
Management R 28:251 Jl '39 60w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. Air raid; a verse play for radio. 36p 75c Harcourt

812 Radio plays (W) 38-29024

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"The strength of the play lies in the factual, objective recounting by the announcer of the maneuvers of the bombers as they approach, then do their work. The weakness lies in the speech and behavior of the women, who, bound equally by the tradition of past wars and narrow concern with household tasks, ignore the warning that now 'the enemy makes his wars on women.' . . The verse in 'Air Raid' is less literary, less abstract, stronger in sensory images than in the 'Fall of the City.' But the diction is only slightly less archaic: MacLeish's women speak at best like characters from an early Irish folk drama. The play's dramatic ending, however, tops that of the 'Fall of the City.'" Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p9 Ap 23 '39 320w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD—Continued

"As Mr. MacLeish's second try at radio drama, this half-hour broadcast brought the praise of thousands, including critics who tagged it the best play ever broadcast. The demands of the public were met by the issuing of records of the broadcast. Now comes the book, a story with its beauty in modern poetry, its tragedy in the slaughter of women and children who innocently believe that war is still among men; a story that is at once magnificently symbolic and horribly realistic." G. E. S. Jr.

\+ Churchman 153:34 F 1 '39 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

Reviewed by Charles Powell
Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 11 '39 470w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 150:132 F 3 '40 750w

"Air Raid is in one sense a mechanical winner—it would go very well over the air, and I hope we shall be allowed to hear it in England. . . For reading, it may appear a little empty, and it is not to be compared with the far more elaborate The Fall of the City." G. W. Stonier

\+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:93 Jl 15 '39 300w

Reviewed by John Wheelwright
Poetry 54:164 Je '39 390w

Pratt p23 spring '39

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:161 F '39 50w

"The theme is so simple that it needs a poet not to make it sensationally trite. But Mr. Macleish gives to it a quality of universal tragedy. His women's voices are those of humanity itself and even the Announcer is more like a cosmic commentator than an official of the B.B.C. It is not a play that will help to popularize A.R.P. But the true contemporary conflict of life and death is in it."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Jl 8 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:48 Mr '39

"Although 'Air Raid' is more graphic as well as more gripping than its predecessor, it cannot be said that it is more effective. MacLeish's favorite device, the employment of almost unbearable tension, is used here to remarkable effect, but the high poetic suggestion of 'The Fall of the City' is rarely present. Nevertheless the play is better on the printed page than it was in the performance over the air waves." Louis Untermeyer

\+ — Yale R n s 28:611 spring '39 450w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. America was promises. 20p 75c Duell

811 (W)

This small book contains one long poem. In it the poet maintains that America was promises in the past, and still is to those "who take them."

———

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"In this new poem Archibald MacLeish restates and amplifies, with compelling eloquence and clarity, what has become his major theme. It is not a long poem; the sensitive lyric touch, the vivid imagery, and the poet's characteristic strongly accented cadences somewhat offset a tendency toward the rhetorical." Ruth Lechlitner

\+ Books p3 D 17 '39 260w

Reviewed by John Ritchey
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 27 '40 350w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 150:132 F 3 '40 250w

"This latest long poem of MacLeish's has considerable resemblance to passages in the poet's radio scripts, 'The Fall of the City' and 'Air Raid,' and to his 'Land of the Free.' In fact, since Mr. MacLeish became convinced that poetry must serve the people, he has written a good deal of verse that has as its purpose the teaching of an idea or the arousing to action. Unfortunately, such poetry is often less perfect as art than is poetry which teaches only by indirect illumination, by extension of awareness."

N Y Times p8 D 24 '39 220w

"This poem is Mr. MacLeish's saddest and most conglomerate attempt at 'public speech' to date. It opens with a sort of crepuscular question and goes on through lines which faintly parody the now public poet's early 'private' writing; there's some 'Conquistador' in it, and even a little 'Hamlet.' . . Bury his gifts though he may, Mr. MacLeish is a private, a lyric, poet through and through; it is somewhat of a loss that he did not allow himself to remain one." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 15:120 D 16 '39 480w

"There are less than twelve small pages of verse in 'America Was Promises,' and even at that the message is stretched like a tightrope. . . There is beautiful writing about pioneering and the American Dream and our squanderers of material and spiritual wealth, but there is none of the wit of the 'Frescoes' or the excitement of 'The Fall of the City.' The images are familiar and the general effect is repetitious and toneless." Selden Rodman

\+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 D 9 '39 180w

MACLEISH, NORMAN. Nature of religious knowledge. 164p $2.25 Scribner [5s Clark, T.]

201 Knowledge, Theory of. Religion—Philosophy [39-23008]

"The writer of this volume is professor of systematic theology in Ormond College at the University of Melbourne. He is concerned with religion's vital question as to how man can know God. Religious judgments are judgments as to the reality of God. How do men come to these, and what of their validity?" Christian Century

———

Reviewed by N. F. S. Ferre
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 15 '39 210w

"This compact and clearly written volume is deserving of careful reading." H. F. Rall

Christian Century 56:1203 O 4 '39 430w

MACLEOD, NORMAN. You get what you ask for. 284p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton

39-33745

The central figure of this novel of depression days, is Gordon Graham, a left-wing writer who for a time gets work on the WPA writers' project, takes to drink, and is finally cured by an emigré physician.

———

"Mr. Macleod's novel is confused, utterly lacking in warmth, vulgar rather than ribald, and badly overwritten." Fred Feldkamp

— Books p22 D 10 '39 300w

"The vivid stuff is in the picture of troubled minds and degeneration, union and WPA politics, the mechanics of living, the earnest interchange of revolutionary letter-writers and the pure helling around. It isn't a pretty picture, or a false one either." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 101:176 N 29 '39 370w

"To cap all the other irrelevancies, Mr. Macleod has had to resort to a deus ex machina to solve his central problem. One cannot but conclude that the most notable characteristic of this novel is the irresolute handling of its material. It has not even the virtue of accurate reporting." Harold Strauss

— N Y Times p24 N 19 '39 550w

Reviewed by Vince Hall
No Am 248:408 winter '40 450w

"A novel of sensitive beauty and power. . . It is true that when this fine novel touches the subject of the Federal Arts Projects, it is neither just nor wholly true. . . And many readers will feel that the crude burlesque and melodrama of the last few pages are out of key. But the book should be read by all who wish to understand the decay of human souls and bodies in the depression." Orrick Johns

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 N 11 '39 420w

MACMAHON, ARTHUR W., and MILLETT, JOHN DAVID. Federal administrators; a biographical approach to the problem of departmental management. 524p $4.50 Columbia univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

351.1 U.S.—Officials and employees. U.S.—Executive departments 39-14371

A study of the personnel of the administrative departments of the United States government both in the present and in the past. The work analyses the positions—methods of selection, functions, etc—of assistant and undersecretaries and their subordinates down to the grade of bureau heads—and briefly summarizes the careers of holders of the positions from their origins to the present. Index.

"This is a very important book for all concerned with public administration. Diligent fact-gathering, combined with clarifying generalizations based on the trends of practice, make the study one of the most notable inquiries in its field. . . It will prove valuable for academic purposes, and it should be perused carefully by all who look forward to a career in the public service." Pendleton Herring
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1086 D '39 700w

"While every student of public administration will want to examine the analytical material and sample the biographical, the approach to the main problem remains somewhat elusive. The biographical method, like that of analyzing form and structure, needs to be supplemented by an evaluation of personal and departmental substantive achievements. In some instances this has been done in a somewhat incidental fashion and then frequently by recording the subjective appraisal of a superior or an acquaintance." Harvey Pinney
Ann Am Acad 205:156 S '39 500w

"The book marks a notable and praiseworthy departure from the stereotyped grooves of study in public administration. The plan of making first, a job analysis and second, a record of the job-holders is a welcome adaptation of industrial research methods to government administration in the higher rounds. The authors are also to be congratulated upon the impartiality which they have shown in dealing both with personalities and partisan ideas." J. T. Young
+ — Social Studies 30:374 D '39 650w

MCMANN, CHARLES F. The problem of religion; an outline study. 192p $2.50 Humphries

290 Religion

"The reality of religion 'is not to be found in any extra-world deity,' says the author, but it is to be found 'developing from within man himself, as the fruitage of his ever-changing life and experience down through the ages.' From this standpoint the writer surveys religion and religions, and comes to the conclusion that the teachings of Jesus, and, indeed, Christianity, are in a class by themselves." (Books) The author was formerly a minister, who retired twenty years ago, and has since devoted himself to farming and business enterprises.

"It will seem to thoughtful readers that this humanistic book is in line with one definite trend in American thought, but that it might have greater substance. It is readable and obviously straight out of one man's life."
+ Books p11 D 24 '39 100w

"The book does not reach any significant conclusions. As a personal study it may be of help to those who themselves are trying to think through great issues." R. K. M.
Boston Transcript p5 N 18 '39 80w

"This is the sort of book every minister should take time to read. It may make him mad, but will do him good. . . While the author is not a finished literary craftsman, he succeeds well in making his message clear. He is convinced that he has discovered the truth which will save the world and sets out to make it known with the zeal of a crusader." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 17:78 Ja '40 150w

MACMANUS, M. J., comp. Irish cavalcade, 1550-1850. 320p $3 (8s 6d) Macmillan

941.5 Ireland—History—Sources [39-22773]

A collection of excerpts, dated and arranged chronologically, taken largely from old Irish books, pamphlets, and broadsides in the possession of the author. The book, "a sort of jig-saw puzzle . . . [forming] a map of Ireland," the author describes further as "a patchwork version of three hundred years of Ireland's story, offered as something possibly more readable and entertaining than the blood-and-tears chronicle of the political historians." (Foreword)

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
Books p11 Ag 13 '39 1100w

"Mr. MacManus's arrangement is effective: he interleaves the striking, the sprightly, the grim. The aim of this Cavalcade (I take it) is at once to entertain and present, by its order and by its very omissions, a suggestive whole." Elizabeth Bowen
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:690 My 6 '39 100w

"It was a happy idea, and, as far as Irish history is concerned, an original one, to make up a book of source-material extracts which, read concurrently, would give an intimate picture of life and events over a longer period of history than could be dealt with—in the same intimate fashion—by the descriptive method." Sean O'Faoláin
+ Spec 162:720 Ap 28 '39 480w

"Mr. MacManus has been a collector of old Irish books, pamphlets and broadsides for over twenty years, and several of the items in his pages are reprinted for the first time. But he wears his scholarship lightly and it is possible to enjoy the sheer variety and human interest of this witty, instructive chronicle without suspecting the labour that has gone to its making."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p236 Ap 22 '39 280w

MACMANUS, SEUMAS. Dark Patrick. 192p $2 Macmillan

39-29961

Fourteen tales about Ireland long ago, and the little dark man, called Patrick, who knew how to solve all difficulties great and small.

"Seumas MacManus counsels us to read his tales . . . 'one, only, each night, before retiring.' That would be a good way but two or twelve or fourteen at a sitting won't hurt you. But one at a time or otherwise, they are grand tales entirely." Shaemas O'Sheel
+ Books p16 N 5 '39 450w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor
Boston Transcript p1 O 28 '39 230w

"Some of these materials may be legendary. At least the story of 'The Day of the Scholars' is a retelling of one that was in a certain fifth reader more than half a century ago. But they are all grand tales well told. The reviewer did (as most readers will) ignore the author's prescription to take one—only one—on retiring, and gulped them all at a sitting with no harmful effects."
+ Christian Century 56:1442 N 22 '39 220w
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 18 '39 420w

MACMANUS, SEUMAS—Continued

"If you like to sit at your grandfather's knee before the fire and listen to tales that begin, 'It is a lee and long while since the days of Fergal the Scholar,' you will enjoy Mr MacManus's new book. All these tales . . . are whimsical in mood, and redolent of the lashin's and lavin's school of Irish dialect." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p22 O 29 '39 550w

"Recommended for readers who are tired of instructive historical novels or of novels with a social purpose and want simply a good story capitally told."

+ New Yorker 15:82 O 28 '39 50w

" 'Dark Patrick' is light fiction at its best. While the book may lack some of the detail and local color which abound in 'The Bold Blades of Donegal,' in 'The Rocky Road to Dublin' and in earlier writings of the author, it is, nevertheless, rich in Irish folk-lore and fantasy. It is narrated in Mr. MacManus's characteristic style, with quaint colloquialisms and sparkling humor." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 29 '39 750w

MACMANUS, SEUMAS. The well o' the world's end [and other fairy tales] il. by Richard Bennett. 189p $2 Macmillan

398.2 Fairy tales. Tales, Irish (W) 39-19701

Eleven tales of Irish folklore, which were first heard by the author as a child in the Donegal highlands. For grades four to six.

Booklist 36:19 S '39

"These tales have a ring and a sweep that delight the ear and the quality of stories told rather than written. The illustrations in black and white by Richard Bennett show a bold line and hearty humor." E. M. Mack

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 100w

Cath World 150:379 D '39 100w

"Both boys and girls, and anyone at all who revels in fairy tales of giants, princes and princesses, will count this book a treasure to search the world's end for. Lucky the person who may have the good fortune to hear some of the tales told!" M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 28 '39 200w

"While the themes are necessarily familiar, the manner of shaping is that of a master of storytelling who cannot help giving them his own turn of speech. . . This book will find its own place on the shelf beside the other well-loved Donegal stories." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:304 S '39 60w

"Will be useful in the story-telling collection as well as on the regular shelves." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 100w

"Folk tales, with their spirit of adventure, their sympathy with animals and the outdoor world, are a part of every child's heritage, and collections like this, distinguished by strength, authentic flavor and imagination, are welcome additions to the folk and fairy tale shelves. Richard Bennett's fine drawings have the strength and humor appropriate to the tales." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p32 N 12 '39 120w

MACMURRAY, JOHN. The clue to history. 243p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Student]

261 Sociology, Christian. Christianity and other religions—Judaism 39-13838

"Professor Macmurray, who is something of a Communist, believes in restoring action to the place in life that has been usurped by our love of reflection. He sees the dualism in our minds, the divorce between thought and action (or theory and practice) as the great Western evil. We are for ever planning ideal systems of freedom, morality, and religion which, getting no farther than the mind, produce their exact opposites in the world. This dualism of our minds is the great obstacle to our understanding Christianity, and until we understand that religion we shall never surmount the crisis of to-day, for Christianity is the motive force of our civilisation." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Reviewed by Gregory Vlastos

Canadian Forum 19:258 N '39 1200w

"Macmurray's dialectic is not convincing because it claims too much, but it is always stimulating and worthwhile." R. C. Miller

+ — Churchman 153:27 Ap 1 '39 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 16:310 O '39 330w

Reviewed by S. J. Case

J Religion 19:241 Jl '39 900w

"Professor Macmurray finds the new dawn in Russia, and one may question whether that is the true community to which we are going. But this is a book in which a strong and subtle imagination thrusts its way behind the great problems of our time, and those who wish to go deeper than the daily news will find it stimulating stuff." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 10 '39 370w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden

Nation 149:273 S 9 '39 850w

"It would be presumptuous to try to criticise so important a book in a few lines at the end of a review, yet I cannot refrain from expressing my feeling that Professor Macmurray is on occasion too clever by half. The dialectic in his hands is like the paradox in those of G. K. C.; his use of it suggests at times that conjurer who is prepared to produce on request practically any animal out of the same hat. So consistently do things turn into their opposites, so infallibly do the negations get negated, that one feels no assurance that Macmurray's own thought will not at any moment turn round and negate itself. And what precisely is dualism? We are not told. Nevertheless, this is in many ways a great book and it is a book that we should all be the better for reading." C. E. M. Joad

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:370 Mr 11 '39 1200w

Reviewed by L. W. Eshleman

N Y Times p18 S 17 '39 700w

Spec 162:192 F 3 '39 90w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Survey G 28:338 My '39 70w

"Professor Macmurray's book deserves all the respect which is owed to a piece of independent and rigorously honest thinking. It is, as he says in his preface, a hard book. . . All [the] latter part of the book suffers from the author's endeavour to cram a quart into a pint pot. The subject does not really admit of such summary treatment. The strength of the book lies in the philosophic exposition to which its earlier half is devoted."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 7 '39 550w

MCNABB, VINCENT JOSEPH. A life of Jesus Christ, our Lord. 198p map $2 (6s) Sheed

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 39-1560

Father McNabb's rather slight volume is a simple portrayal unburdened with Biblical exegesis.

"A devotional work that combines historical accuracy with a keen insight into the meaning and purpose of the mission of Christ." W. R. O'Connor

+ Commonweal 29:388 Ja 27 '39 110w

"This is an eloquent little book, deeply touching in the simplicity with which it is written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 12 '38 360w

MCNAIR, ARNOLD DUNCAN. The law of treaties; British practice and opinions [prepared under the auspices of the Columbia univ. Council for research in the social sciences]. 578p $7.50 Columbia univ. press [30s Oxford]

341.2 International law and relations. Treaties. Great Britain—Foreign relations [39-4371]

"The present volume deals with the views of the British Government on the legal principles governing the conclusion, interpretation, operation, termination and modification of international agreements as far as they can be determined after examination of United Kingdom sources." (Living Age) Index.

"This is an important book and doubtless one that will become as classic and as indispensable to students of international affairs as Moore's Digest and Hyde's International Law. . . A book of this kind fulfills a long felt need." P. S. Wild

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:327 Ap '39 550w

Reviewed by Clyde Eagleton

Ann Am Acad 203:227 My '39 450w

"The reviewer does not, by his minor criticisms, mean tc detract in any way from the high praise due to this splendid volume. In it the international practitioners and government legal advisers have a gold mine of material which will undoubtedly be of great help to them; students and scholars have abundant source material with which they can work to their hearts' content." F. J. Knauer

+ — Columbia Law R 39:557 Mr '39 650w

Foreign Affairs 17:447 Ja '39

"The book brings to light much valuable material formerly reposing in inaccessible archives, and is particularly timely at a time when treaties are being subjected to one of the severest tests ever experienced." J. B. Whitton

+ Living Age 356:96 Mr '39 470w

MCNALLY, AUGUSTIN FRANCIS. St Peter's on the Vatican. 228p il $3.50 Strand press, 225 W. 39th st, N. Y.

726.6 Rome (city). St Peter's church

A history and guide to St Peter's in Rome.

"Technically the book is a curious combination of history, factual knowledge and description. It lacks the very important essential of a guide book, an index. But it undoubtedly is a 'must' book for a pilgrim to Rome." R. A. Hewitt

+ — America 61:166 My 27 '39 120w

"Any patient researcher could have made a combined history and guide for St. Peter's; only Mr. McNally could have done it in a style which is at once gracious and salty, which makes easy—often amusing—reading out of what could so easily have been a dusty matter." H. L. B.

+ Commonweal 30:263 Je 30 '39 150w

MACNEAL, KENNETH. Truth in accounting. 334p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press [16s Oxford]

657 Accounting 39-13727

"In this work it has been [the author's] aim to present a comprehensive analysis of modern accounting theory and practice, and at the same time to suggest a definitive remedy for many serious accounting imperfections. The facts disclosed herein lead unavoidably to a conclusion that the great majority of contemporary certified financial statements must necessarily be untrue and misleading due to the unsound principles upon which modern accounting methods are based. . . A complete indictment is made of present accounting methods and a practical, easily intelligible procedure is offered as an alternative." (Pref) Index.

"Admitting that certain accounting statements have proven inadequate in the past and also realizing that methods and procedure must advance to keep abreast of ever-changing social and economic conditions, the reviewer cannot believe that Truth in Accounting has even begun to solve the problem." J. H. Jackson

— Am Econ R 29:853 D '39 850w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 30:322 Jl 21 '39 550w

Management R 28:331 S '39 600w

"The job Mr. MacNeal has attempted urgently needs doing, but it is one for an economist trained to the operational attitude of modern science rather than for an accountant. The author has himself been misled by the bewitching concept of absolute value which permeates the antiquated economics he uses. . . Mr. MacNeal's criterion is well adapted to the needs of investors, but he has mistaken it for a universal principle. Truth in accounting, as in every other field of abstraction, is relative and subject to test by results. In spite of these criticisms, investors in danger of being misled will be effectively put on guard by reading this book." J. D. Norton

New Repub 100:138 S 6 '39 550w

MACNEICE, LOUIS. Autumn journal; a poem. 96p $1.50 Random house [6s Faber]

821 [39-17629]

Journal in the form of a long poem, in which the author conveys his impressions and emotions during the crisis of September, and since that time.

Reviewed by Charles Powell

Manchester Guardian p5 Je 2 '39 550w

"It is a singularly cool and refreshing verse this to read, all in ice-blues, whites and tender pinks. Why Mr. MacNeice, in his spare time, is not the roving reporter of Fleet Street—barring Mr. Hickey—I cannot determine. On sports, processions or Parliament he would be worth his weight in gold. . . I can affirm that I have read every word of this long poem with attention and pleasure." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:872 Je 3 '39 340w

" 'Autumn [Journal]' will disappoint some admirers of MacNeice who would have him go on turning out wild songs for the barrel organ. As a complicated and brilliantly written piece of lyricism plus satire, it will delight others. It does not plumb any great depths, but it covers much ground with a detachment, sensitiveness, and wit infrequent in the 'new' writing of our day." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 15:62 Ja 27 '40 140w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman

Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 10 '40 600w

"Autumn Journal is a good news-reel, vivid, on the spot, hectic in parts, hastily assembled and imperfectly digested. Mr. MacNeice has demonstrated that a poet can be an excellent recording-van, and that verse can do an ordinary day's work as well as prose or camera." Desmond Hawkins

+ Spec 162:1140 Je 30 '39 250w

"There is much to be said for recollecting emotions in anxiety. . . The poetry written at such a time and in such a mood will no doubt be harsh, vivid rather than profound, with rapid, epigrammatic summaries rather than mature and rounded statements, quick, angry and conversational, but it will have, as this work certainly has, the merit of being written as a necessary means of expression. It will be, or should be, altogether remote from an academic exercise."

Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My 20 '39 480w

MACNEICE, LOUIS. Modern poetry; a personal essay. 205p $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

808.1 Poetry 39-8161

"Mr. MacNeice has set himself to discuss contemporary poetry in the light of his own experience as student and poet. The first half of the book is devoted to his 'case-book'—his formal introduction to poetry in preparatory school, the development of his taste in public school and in Oxford. . . The rest of the book treats technical problems—matters as fundamental as metric and rhyme, imagery, diction, the quality of obscurity. He concludes with a brief statement of his faith as an artist." Sat R of Lit

MACNEICE, LOUIS—Continued

---

"The essay is useful for those who wish a brief, intelligent, if in no way novel restatement of the factors that have gone to shape modern verse. It is chiefly interesting, however, as a piece of literary autobiography by a poet whose work, though less explicit about his beliefs than that of his favorite contemporaries, is rich in appeal for those who live with awareness in this 'incorrigibly plural' world." Babette Deutsch

+ Books p10 Ap 23 '39 450w

"The virtue in this book is that Mr. MacNeice says many independent things about modern poetry that appear to the reader as fresh and invigorating. . . In fact it should really be said that this book is a complete success. It lives entirely up to its title."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 18 '39 310w

"Good criticism of modern poetry is as rare today as good poetry. Louis Macneice has material and opportunity for both. . . A friend of Auden and Spender and a companion poet, he lives close to his subject. He is, in fact, too close for perspective, too young for maturity of judgment. His book is patently that of a man of thirty-one and reads, in part, like papers written at Oxford which seem to him a bit too good to be burned." Sister M. Madeleva

Commonweal 29:528 Mr 3 '39 360w

"It is doubtful if ever before the function of poetry was put on such a low level as it is by Louis MacNeice in his book, Modern Poetry. . . If Modern Poetry represents the ideas of many young poets today, it would appear that the poets have resigned the leadership that the men of far-reaching imagination—Blake, Shelley, Victor Hugo—assigned to them." M. M. Colum

— Forum 101:271 My '39 320w

"This is the most readable book on modern poetry that I have seen for some time." B. I. Evans

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 6 '39 240w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

New Repub 100:52 Ag 16 '39 800w

Reviewed by John Lehmann

New Statesman & Nation 17:508 Ap 1 '39 550w

"Many interesting things, sometimes interpretative, are said of the poetry of the younger English poets; and much of this comes from personal acquaintance and is worth knowing. The book in the end is best read for this familiar touch and would have been the better for more of it. It has not the force or discipline of a critical study, though it has the interest and pleasure of a poet's personality. On the whole, it is a blast against Surrealism on the one hand and pure propaganda on the other; and in between for the poetry of Auden and Spender; and with the last we should agree." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p2 Mr 19 '39 700w

"A readable combination of personal history and poetic analysis which should interest anyone who cares how modern English poets of the youngest school look at their art."

+ New Yorker 14:59 Ja 28 '39 30w

Pratt p20 autumn '39

"'Modern Poetry' is a cantankerous, keen, and wholly delightful book." D. F.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 25 '39 320w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Grigson

Spec 161:1097 D 23 '38 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p782 D 10 '38 500w

"A reader unfamiliar with modern poetry and criticism may find that by Mr. MacNeice's book he has been rather baffled than informed. . . The reasons for this are not far to seek. MacNeice, excellent poet though he is, never reveals in these pages a vigorous sense of the continuing tradition of English poetry, and accordingly never takes a really perspicuous view of the relations of the newer with the older poets. Furthermore, MacNeice is insular. . . A final if venial fault with Mr. MacNeice's essay is the occasional failure in tone. This is noticeable especially in the more difficult sections." Maynard Mack

+ — Yale R n s 29:398 winter '40 850w

MCNEILL, JOHN THOMAS, and GAMER, HELENA MARGARET, eds. and trs. Medieval handbooks of penance; a translation of the principal libri poenitentiales and selections from related documents. 476p il $4.75 Columbia univ. press [24s Oxford]

265.6 Penance 38-32774

"The handbooks of penance had an extensive circulation in the Middle Ages, and exercised an important influence. Long since fallen in disuse, they are known to but few scholars. The editors have made a fine contribution in rendering these specimens available. An introduction of more than seventy pages deals with penance in the ancient church, a general study of the libri poenitentiales, and remarks on the editions and manuscripts here utilized. The documents include early Irish penitential documents, some of early Wales, the penitentials of the Anglo-Saxon church, others which show continental influence and authorship, a group of penitentials written or authorized by Frankish ecclesiastics, selections from later sources, penitential elements in medieval public law, and synodical decisions and ecclesiastical opinions relating to the penitentials." (Churchman) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Haran

America 60:549 Mr 11 '39 650w

"Highly commendable are the inclusion of several previously unpublished manuals; the establishing of some improved readings; [some of] the special introductions. . . Several of the other critical introductions are well done but make no original contributions. On the other hand, the book is marred by numerous errors of omission and commission. . . The usually excellent translations and textual work give value to this volume of the Columbia Records of Civilization series, but the portions criticized should be used with caution and carefully checked with other works by specialists." T. P. Oakley

+ — Am Hist R 44:873 Jl '39 480w

"In these Penitentials the sociologist will find excellent sources (they must be used with caution, however, because they naturally reveal the darkest aspects of life) for early mediaeval folklore, pagan survivals in folk-superstition, legal customs, and a half-primitive society. The work is scholarly and trustworthy."

+ Am Soc R 4:462 Je '39 100w

"Speaking as an interested reader, rather than as a technically qualified critic, one may observe the extraordinary illumination which this study throws upon some aspects of mediaeval Christianity." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 55:1433 N 23 '38 550w

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington

Churchman 153:16 Mr 15 '39 250w

"The value of the book does not lie in its critical appraisal of the penitentials but in making them available with enlightening introductions to English readers. It is a source book of the shortcomings of our forebears and the method that their religious leaders employed to make them behave." George MacDonald

Crozer Q 16:150 Ap '39 280w

MCNEILL, JOHN THOMAS; SPINKA, MATTHEW, and WILLOUGHBY, HAROLD RIDEOUT, eds. Environmental factors in Christian history. 417p $4 Univ. of Chicago press [24s Cambridge]

270 Church history

Testimonial volume of essays on church history collected in honor of Shirley Jackson Case, retired dean of the University of Chicago Divinity school. The twenty-one papers extend in subject from The significance of John the Baptist for the beginnings of Christianity, to Religious bearings of the modern scientific movement. Some of the subjects are religious healing; messianic concepts; early mass reactions to the new religion; Roman, Judaistic, Gnostic, and Aristotelian influences shaping Christian practices and ideas; sources of ascetic behaviors; liturgical developments; ancient, medieval, and modern expressions of Christianity. Bibliography. Index.

"The essays display both brilliant bits of discovery and no little creative interpretation. The distribution of topics is very even and reflects Dean Case's areas of interest. . . . No New Testament scholar or church historian can afford to postpone the perusal of these articles. The average minister may also read these discussions with great profit. The authors have successfully bridged the gap between scientific research and popular presentation of their findings." C. H. Moehlman

+ Christian Century 56:1508 D 6 '39 1300w

"[The papers] are uniformly well written and bear the stamp of documented and dispassionate scholarship. But there is more here than the dry-as-dust and grist for the mill of the specialist. Such chapters as 'Christianity and the Culture of India', and 'Christianity in the Modern Japanese Environment', answer questions which certainly many contemporary Christians are asking. Other similar matters are discussed which are not easily come upon elsewhere." S. L. Riddle

+ Churchman 154:19 Ja 1 '40 230w

"If I were looking for a class text on a history of Christianity, one which would give students a good taste of solid, careful, recent, scholarly writing covering a wide range of topics and revealing the cruel truth of how wide is the range of factors shaping developing thought, I would choose this book." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 50:241 Ja '40 160w

MCNEILL, LOUISE. Gauley mountain [foreword by Stephen Vincent Benét]. 98p $2 Harcourt

811 39-22360

Vigorous poems describing the history of a section of West Virginia—the mountain, the river, the forest, and the people who inhabited the land from colonial times to the present.

"Because Louise McNeill's family has lived in the Gauley Mountain region, near Charleston, since the 1700's she is well qualified to undertake this 'verse-history' of Gauley and its people. She also qualifies as a technician, for her verse forms are skilled and varied. But because she has touched only the surface edges of her material she has sacrificed a large, well-rounded view of past and present for the small, personal-romantic approach." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p19 O 1 '39 500w

"Vigorous verse, conceived and phrased in the realistic manner, with no prettification but much strong beauty and not a little salty humor."

+ Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 70w

Reviewed by John Ritchey

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 2 '39 80w

Reviewed by Mason Wade

Commonweal 30:503 S 22 '39 200w

New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 40w

"Her book has a twofold appeal. It should be liked by the reader of simple and of colorful poetry. The folklorist should find a document as well. It is, of course, not entirely even in its quality. Miss McNeill is at her best—and it is excellent—when she takes down her home-made fiddle and plays a mountain tune. She is good—and that is good enough—when she tells a ghostly legend, or with concise strokes, portrays a character. . . Only when she attempts the modern does she meet with partial and at times with complete failure." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p2 Ag 27 '39 750w

"Good, hearty verse . . . right in the tradition of literary nationalism."

+ New Yorker 15:67 Ag 19 '39 30w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 5 '39 70w

"The peculiar charm of this book lies in its vigorous rhythms, its salty vernacular, and the simplicity of the story it tells. Miss McNeill has mastered verse technic so firmly that her verse marches forward briskly and without faltering."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 160w

MACQUEEN, JAMES WILLIAM (JAMES G. EDWARDS, pseud). Death elects a mayor. 274p $2 Doubleday

39-9398

Detective story.

"Lots of hospital jargon and three murders in all. Sure to produce jitters and a hospital phobia in the most hardened customer." Will Cuppy

Books p20 Mr 26 '39 240w

"This is a sordid yarn, not particularly well told." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p27 Mr 26 '39 180w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 25 '39 40w

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Beautiful Hawaii. 220p il maps $2.50 Crowell

919.69 Hawaiian Islands—Description and travel (W) 39-5681

Combination of guidebook and a record of personal impressions. The author enumerates sights to be seen in Honolulu; describes Waikiki, Oahu, Maui, Kauai, and other less well-known parts of the Islands; devotes chapters to native life and customs, and to the expenses of Hawaiian travel. Glossary and index.

"One of the merits of this new book about Hawaii is that it takes the reader about through the islands. Another is that it is unpretentious, clear and helpful as a guidebook. Another is that the photographs have something to say, and say it well. The author loves Hawaii, and he has gone to the trouble of really looking at it."

+ Books p12 Mr 19 '39 110w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 70w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '39 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"It is a pleasant book, written with taste and reflecting a leisurely enjoyment. The maps are adequate for their purpose of information, and the photographs are excellent."

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 12 '39 280w

Social Studies 30:240 My '39 10w

Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. How they blazed the way; men who have advanced civilization. 279p il $2.50 Dodd

926 Scientists. Inventors 39-31022

Biographical sketches of Hippocrates, Aristotle, Archimedes, Gutenberg, Leonardo da Vinci, Galileo, Newton, Watt, Audubon, Louis

MCSPADDEN, J. W.—Continued
Daguerre, Michael Faraday, Louis Pasteur, Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen, Thomas A. Edison, Marie Curie, Henry Ford, Wilbur and Orville Wright.

Booklist 36:216 F 1 '40

"The inevitable legends, such as the story of Newton and the apple are given, but in perspective; the treatment is imaginative and highly readable, but sound; and there is no condescending tone, no 'writing down' to the young reader. Mr. McSpadden knows his audience, and they will enjoy his book." H. N. Gardner
+ Boston Transcript p7 Ja 6 '40 100w

"The selection shows discrimination and the descriptions are long enough to give full proportions." Irene Smith
+ Library J 64:845 N 1 '39 40w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 65:38 Ja 1 '40 130w

MACVEIGH, SUE, pseud. Grand Central murder. 254p $2 Houghton 39-24447

Detective story.

"We liked the story just as well when it veered away from the somewhat excessive background of rails, lights, towers, switches, steam tunnels and heaven knows what pertaining to the railroad business." Will Cuppy
+ Books p19 O 8 '39 120w

"In spite of the fact that I uncovered the killer early, the concluding chase was too good to miss." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 60w

"The railroad background has verisimilitude, but is a little too technical and too labyrinthine for ordinary taste." K. I.
N Y Times p35 O 15 '39 200w

"The Casey Jones motif is pleasant and the plot is sound."
+ New Yorker 15:80 O 7 '39 40w

"Subterranean setting absorbing—if pretty confusing at times; MacVeigh and wife Sue efficient as usual, and denouement surprising. O. K."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 50w

MACVEIGH, SUE, pseud. Murder under construction. 247p $2 Houghton 39-4484

Detective story.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 Mr 5 '39 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p28 F 26 '39 160w

"Murder device exceptionally ingenious and entirely in character. Sleuth, spouse, and high-tensioned engineer capitally drawn. Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:24 Mr 4 '39 40w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. Factories in the field. 334p $2.50 Little 331.763 Agricultural labor. Migration of workers. California—Economic conditions. Agriculture—California (W) 39-27674

Factual study of the migratory field worker in California, covering both the historical background and present conditions. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:2 S '39

"For readers uninformed of the factual background for that tremendous epic 'The Grapes of Wrath,' this full-length portrait of the migratory agricultural worker in California is practically must reading. For here is the data that gives the terrible migration of the Joad family historical and economic meaning not only for the immediate present, but also for the larger canvas of American rural life at the end of a long, rich cycle." R. A. Brady
+ Books p3 Jl 30 '39 2450w

Reviewed by Russ Nixon
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 12 '39 850w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 11 '39 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '39

Reviewed by R. E. Lucey
Commonweal 30:440 S 1 '39 650w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 149:150 Ag 5 '39 1200w

"This book had to be written. This story had to be told. John Steinbeck had given us part of it in his novel, 'Grapes of Wrath,' but Carey McWilliams, a young California lawyer, appointed Commissioner of Immigration and Housing by Governor Olson, gives the rest of it in its cold, horrible, statistical reality. He is Dante on a tour of what has always been supposed to be the Paradise of America. He takes you by the hand, leads you up to that edge of heaven which is California and says: 'Look!' " Ella Winter
New Repub 100:109 Ag 30 '39 900w

"The exploitation of the migratory agricultural worker, masterfully fictionized in John Steinbeck's 'Grapes of Wrath,' is equally masterfully told, chronologically and factually, by Carey McWilliams in this book." R. C. Feld
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 30 '39 1350w
New Yorker 15:60 Jl 29 '39 30w
Pratt p6 winter '40
Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 250w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Survey G 28:759 D '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

MADELEVA, SISTER MARY. See Wolff, M. E.

MAHRT, HAAKON BUGGE. Northern sunrise; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 272p $2.50 Reynal
39-27144

Two aviators, flying thru the northern night far up in Norway, meet with disaster and one of them, the pilot, is killed. The survivor, a secret enemy tho outwardly the pilot's friend, then reviews the story of their lifelong association in an attempt to satisfy himself that he has not been the cause of the other's death. In the end he finds relief from his self-probings in a return to flying and thru the love of a woman.

Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39

"Mahrt's work is sharp, hard, nervous, a product of the world of the machine. . . If Mahrt's Norwegians are blond Viking giants, they are also psychologically stunted. With its staccato style, its deliberate assumption of callousness as a method of living, with its disillusioned personages, who repress their affections only to be dominated by their frustrations, 'Northern Sunrise' recalls Hemingway more than Hamsun, and invokes Freud rather than Odin." Maxwell Geismar
Books p3 F 26 '39 900w

"The book is exquisitely written. We have all heard the Concerto for the Oboe, I presume. It was like that, I found, pure, cool, deep-troughed grey sea, with slanting shafts of light streaming down through broken clouds. The translator deserves some reward, one of those large gold medals which he will never get. The oboe can move one as deeply as the violin—if the right man plays it." E. Garside
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 18 '39 1000w

"Even an ordinary love triangle would be impressive against a backdrop of Norway's polar nights and endless snow; and this is better than ordinary to start with. A fast-paced novel, its brooding nicely blended with the startling scenic effects."
+ New Repub 98:204 Mr 22 '39 40w

"The entire novel has an atmospheric shock that is fresh and vital. American readers should take to a dramatic story set against an unfamiliar landscape particularly as the work is admirably translated into hard, sure English. The ideas in the novel are scanty, and the dimensions of it set against the epical novels of the soil with which we have come to identify Norway are miniature. But in the realm of high-pulsed story-telling Haakon Mahrt has shown himself to be a worthy descendant of the scôp and the gleeman." Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p7 F 26 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:66 F 25 '39 60w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"The motives of Mathieson's reasoning and action are not always credible; they seem simply perverse at times, a deliberate masochism which is needless to his development. But this is otherwise a compelling minor novel, written with telegraphic concision and yet with beauty to describe that outlandish island of ice and darkness and staggering men." H. D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 18 '39 200w

" 'Northern Sunrise', . . is the work of a clever craftsman, who combines a talent for character dissection with the artist's ability for revealing the marvelous beauties of his country. Nowhere else has Mr Mahrt seen the spring come in with just the throat-catching loveliness which it possesses in the Arctic circle. And, clever writer that he is, he leaves his readers in the same frame of mind. How soon does the next tramp-steamer leave for northern Norway?"

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 600w

MAILLOL, ARISTIDE. Maillol, by John Rewald [ed. by André Gloeckner]. 168p il $2.98 Art bk. [10s 6d Imperia]

735 Sculpture

Over 150 plates, some of them colored, representing M. Maillol's work not only in sculpture, but also in drawing, tapestry, and painting. The introduction contains an account of the artist's life and career, and an appreciation of his art. List of plates.

"The plates give a very good account of that sterling artist's achievement." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p3 D 17 '39 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 6 '40 160w

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). No hands on the clock. 261p $2 Morrow

39-15265

Detective story.

"Like other members of the American round-house school, the author employs a lot of rough talk, much of it very good of its kind. His latest story is speedy, easy to read and adorned with many a sprightly and amusing phrase." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Je 11 '39 220w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 130w

"Altogether, Campbell has a busy time of it, and the story of his adventures makes lively reading—not particularly logical, but what do you care so long as it holds your interest?" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 Je 11 '39 200w
New Yorker 15:96 Je 10 '39 40w

"First-class."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 10 '39 40w
Time 34:56 Jl 3 '39 20w

MAIR, JOHN. The fourth forger; William Ireland and the Shakespeare papers. 244p il $2.75 Macmillan [8s 6d Cobden-Sanderson]

822.33 Ireland, William Henry. Shakespeare, William—Forgeries [38-32440]

The three forgers who preceded Ireland are given: Lauder, who accused Milton of plagiarism; Macpherson, who invented the Gaelic Homer, Ossian; and Chatterton, the boy poet who served up his poetry as the work of a medieval monk. The fourth forger, the subject of this work, was William Henry Ireland, born probably in 1777, who forged a play, a mortgage deed, and other supposed Shakespeare items. Ireland's purpose was to prove to his father, a great admirer of Shakespeare, that the son was not a dullard. Bibliography. Index.

"The Shakespearean scholar will certainly find it an admirable and necessary addition to his library. Mr. Mair, however, carries his learning with such ease and lightness that his book is as fascinating to the general reader as it is satisfying to the student." W. N. C. Carlton

+ Books p6 Jl 2 '39 1050w

"Mr. Mair's entertaining book tells how Ireland worked and why; how suspicion grew, and how at last the bubble of deceit was pricked. The result is as fascinating as most detective stories. Moreover it sheds a vivid if unflattering light on the critical taste of the late 18th century by showing how ready many of the learned then were to believe that the real Shakespeare must have been made in their own image."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 1 '39 230w

"Mr. Mair tells the whole story clearly and attractively. He sets the episode into the climate of eighteenth-century opinion, and, as a modern, he speculates cautiously and critically on the psychology of Ireland's forgery." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 19 '38 600w

"It is an incredible story, which Mr. Mair tells amusingly and well. He is not too drily condescending, and he even makes us feel sorry for this shabby, neurotic youth and his dreams of surpassing Chatterton. His portrait, side face, with ringlet curls on the forehead and the sensitive nose of a coati, shows a queer, furtive handsomeness. If only poor William had had a little more talent, what a hero he would be! Or if even he had been capable of blackguardly detachment, what a laugh he would have had! But he was very enthusiastic, very dull and much too frightened to enjoy the real enormity of his achievement." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:286 Ag 20 '38 1350w

" 'The Fourth Forger' is not a book which only the erudite will enjoy. It has all the elements of a well-told mystery story." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Je 4 '39 1250w

"The story . . . is well worth retelling. It is regrettable, therefore, that the present version is so imperfect. It is readable, and Mr. Mair's extensive quotations from the Ireland papers in the British Museum make the drama of the critical months more vivid than in any previous account. Yet 'The Fourth Forger' is neither a lively recreation of a fascinatingly obscure personality, nor an accurate piece of research. The author's interpolated observations on young Ireland's state of mind and motives are quite lacking in distinction, and several illuminating contemporary strokes of portraiture are passed over. It is even more seriously defective in scholarship." W. T. Hastings

— + Sat R of Lit 20:16 Je 24 '39 850w

"William Henry Ireland was famous at nineteen and discredited at twenty-one. He survived for forty years of nonentity in life, and he has suffered a century of neglect since. Mr. Mair has made an admirable job of resurrecting him." John Carter

+ Spec 161:310 Ag 19 '38 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 6 '38 1050w

MAIZE, LILLIAN TAFT. Star of hope. 322p $2 Penn

39-19895

Ever since she was a child of ten, Suzanne's father had been in prison for a crime she was sure he had not committed. Now at eighteen she has fallen in love with a handsome young doctor but she refuses to marry until her father's name is cleared. With the help of some good friends and a bit of sleuthing Suzanne manages to bring about a happy ending.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 30 '39 100w

"A mild and pleasant addition to the list of Pollyanna fiction for hot-weather reading."
N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '39 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 120w

MAJER, FREDERIC. Our country's money. 121p il $2 Crowell

332.4 Money—Juvenile literature. Money—U.S. (W) 39-30920

History of money, intended for young readers. The major part of the book is devoted to the making of American money, describing what it is, how made, and how protected.

Booklist 36:201 Ja 15 '40

"A school library will find this book and its photographs useful in many ways." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 N 12 '39 150w
Christian Century 56:1513 D 6 '39 30w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 20w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 150w

"Pompous but thorough."
Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

MAJOR, MABEL; SMITH, REBECCA WASHINGTON, and PEARCE, THOMAS MATTHEWS. Southwest heritage; a literary history with bibliography. 165p $2 Univ. of N. Mex. press

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Southwest—Bibliography 39-27090

"A summary and appreciation of writing in the southwest, from the days of the conquistadors to recent novelists. The bibliography is a selected list of 600 titles; author, title, publisher, and date are given." Booklist

Booklist 35:217 Mr 1 '39

"All who have felt the lure of the southwest will be grateful for this guide to its literature. . . The bibliography, of 600 items, does not list everything that has been written in or about the southwest, but the reviewer can think of nothing important that has been omitted."
+ Christian Century 56:124 Ja 25 '39 80w

MALKUS, MRS ALIDA SIMS. The silver llama; pictures by [the author]. 108p $2 Winston

39-31683

The young son of a Peruvian herdsman is the hero of this story for grades four to five. The boy adopted a silver colored llama, because he knew it would bring luck to his family, and thereby hangs the tale.

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

"Mrs. Malkus's interest in ethnology is well known . . . but these pictures were a surprise to me; suffused with sunshine and good humor, they carry out the impression of the tale, that Peruvian mountain shepherds must have the unshakable cheerfulness we have learned to ascribe to Tibetans." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ja 28 '40 140w

"The general format of the book is excellent for the fourth grader and it is made particularly attractive with many illustrations by the author. The story itself seems a bit far removed and filled with too much unfamiliar detail ever to be exceedingly popular with small children." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 120w

MALLER, JULIUS BERNARD. School and community. 360p maps $3.50 (21s) McGraw

370.9747 Education—New York (state). New York (state)—Population. New York (state)—Economic conditions 39-28003

This volume is one of the publications of the Regents' inquiry into the character and cost of public education in the State of New York. It consists of "a study of the demographic and economic background of education in the state of New York." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

"Although the study may have shortcomings, the abundance of evidence on the wide variety of related indices of community status used in analyzing some of America's socially complex communities, as well as the clear presentation of essential findings, should make the volume decidedly worth the attention of anyone—administrator, teacher, or fieldworker—interested in problems clustering about the field of education, sociology, and public welfare." H. H. Punke
+ El School J 40:228 N '39 750w

Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 3:433 S '39 110w

Reviewed by I. A. Eckhauser
Social Studies 30:375 D '39 450w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. No vacancies; il. by Herbert Morton Stoops. 311p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-30325

Success story for older girls. It is the story of a girl just out of college who needed a job and found one as resident manager of an apartment house.

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40

"The story cannot fail to hold the attention. It held mine." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 O 22 '39 340w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 64:1001 D 15 '39 80w
Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

MALONE, DUMAS. Saints in action. 183p $2 Abingdon

920 U.S.—Biography. Christian biography 39-23399

"Dr. Malone says he is no specialist in religious history or biography; but his work with the Dictionary of American Biography bears pleasant fruit in this small volume. Here are grouped six lectures given to . . . audiences at Drew University, and the six titles are a broad classification of noteworthy leaders in the fields of the American church, in reform, and in education." Churchman

"This excellent addition to the Drew University lectureship in biography has three great values: it will quicken interest in the lives of great Americans; it gives a broad survey of a wide variety of eminent men and women; and it keeps constantly in view the significance of religion and spiritual idealism as a factor in great personalities." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 56:1168 S 27 '39 700w

"Here are introductions to lively careers, fascinating and inspiring. The book is especially valuable to all who have no ready access to the more ambitious biographies." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 153:17 N 1 '39 200w

MANAGING TRAINING INSTITUTE, WASHINGTON, D.C. Managing low-rent housing; a record of current experience and practice in public housing; based on lectures and discussions at the Institute, Je. 13-24, 1938 [mimeographed]. 289p pa $2 Nat. assn. of housing officials

331.833 Housing

"The material on which this volume is based was presented in the form of lectures and discussions. It suffers somewhat from translation into another medium, but it remains the first published document dealing almost entirely with management of public housing. The discussions go far afield, which is understandable in view of the fact that the audience which participated in the institute represented managers and potential managers from all parts of the country, with varying backgrounds, interests, and experience." Survey

J Home Econ 31:586 O '39 50w

"This book must not be referred to either as gospel or as a textbook. If it is read as a record of the experiences and opinions of some of the people engaged in the pioneer development of public housing management, it may serve to stimulate the practices of others now entering the field." May Lumsden

Survey 75:326 O '39 300w

MANDAL, SANT RAM. The happy flute; ed. and il. by Dorothy P. Lathrop. 54p $1.50 Stokes

(W) 39-28996

Story from the Hindu of a holy man who charmed the animals with his flute and caused them to dwell together in peace and harmony.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

"This restful atmosphere is welcome in a time of tension; the incidents, appealing to the special gifts of Dorothy Lathrop, have inspired some of her most successful lithographs of young forest animals, from baby monkeys to the lion before his conversion. These are many and invariably appealing: they have the loving kindness of the text, and both give glimpses of a peaceable kingdom." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 12 '39 250w

Reviewed by Ruth Page

Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 15:294 S '39 60w

"The jungle creatures that came at the call of Kirpalu's flute to live together in peace are fit subjects for Dorothy Lathrop's sensitive pencil, which is at its happiest in portraying animal life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:50 Ja '40 80w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 150w

"In this beautiful book Dorothy Lathrop has retold the story of a Hindu St. Francis and his animals from the Hindu author's text and has made for every step in the tale a sensitive, interpretive drawing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 17 '39 240w

"A gentle, beautiful book in both its prose and its pictures."

+ New Yorker 15:88 N 25 '39 40w

"Outstanding."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w

MANDELBAUM, MAURICE H. The problem of historical knowledge; an answer to relativism. 340p $3.50 Liveright

901 History—Philosophy. History—Methodology 39-21576

"This work presents a critical appraisal of the chief theories of historical knowledge and [attempts to show] that history is not merely a 'fable agreed upon'; that the historian can discover causal relationships in history which are sufficient to permit him to describe 'how it really happened.'" (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

— Am Hist R 44:571 Ap '39 900w

Reviewed by Howard Becker

Am Soc R 4:911 D '39 400w

"Excellent book. . . Strongly recommended—especially to teachers of history." J. N. Vaughan

+ Commonweal 29:388 Ja 27 '39 480w

"This lucid and well-ordered analysis and argument is without doubt the most important study of the theoretical problems connected with historical understanding that has appeared in this country. Professor Mandelbaum is master of the large literature on the logic and methodology of historiography produced on the Continent in the last generation. He can relate these views on history with clarity and simplicity to the more general philosophic positions of their proponents. . . If he stops short with his examination just when he has laid the foundations on which he might have built further, this is in part due to the rather unfortunate thesis that dominates his discussion, especially at the beginning." J. H. R., Jr.

+ — J Philos 36:442 Ag 3 '39 1500w

MANEKJI NASARVANJI DHALA. See Dhala, M. N.

MANGHAM, SYDNEY. Earth's green mantle; plant science for the general reader; foreword by Sir Arthur W. Hill. 322p il maps $3.50 Macmillan [10s 6d English universities]

580 Botany (W) 39-27869

The author has attempted to outline "the story of man's persistent efforts to understand and utilise the almost illimitable wealth of plant life forming the Earth's Green Mantle; of some of the problems which plants have presented and of the methods used in attempting to solve these problems; of the parts played by other branches of science in the development of our knowledge of plants; and of the use made and perhaps yet to be made of such knowledge." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 36:85 N 1 '39

"The book must be set down as admirable and honest but uninspiring." H. M. Parshley

Books p13 Ja 21 '40 450w

Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 50w

"A very informing and very alluring book."

+ Christian Century 56:1241 O 11 '39 110w

"It is no doubt a useful and laudable object to explain to the general reader the place in Nature and the importance to man of the plant world. . . The variety of topics dealt with by the author is, however, so great that one wonders whether the reader will be able to digest this very ample meal. . . The book is very fully illustrated, but one feels that in this respect also the author has been too ambitious. Many of the ecological photographs—excellent in themselves—have lost a good deal of clearness by reduction in size. By a more careful selection of the illustrations as well as by some cutting down of the subject-matter the author's praiseworthy attempt to enlighten the general public on the interest and importance of the plant life would probably be more successful."

+ — Nature 144:364 Ag 26 '39 290w

Reviewed by Donald Wyman

N Y Times p32 D 10 '39 900w

"The author stresses the right things; he has an accurate sense of the balance between life the machine and life the mysterious, which commands complete respect. Scattering his human and historical incidents judiciously, dwelling on nothing too long, and treating nothing important in a dabby way, the author has done a job in which he can take pride, and which ought, in our opinion, to supplant ordinary text books in elementary courses. The illustrative material is of only fairish quality." D. C. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:22 O 21 '39 250w

MANGHAM, SYDNEY—Continued

"Excellent treatise."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 O '39 350w

"Sometimes a book of science or of biography makes more absorbing reading than fiction to anyone interested in the world about him. One of these books is 'Earth's Green Mantle.' . . . In these pages is a wealth of data that are reliable and definitely interesting, even to the general reader. The earth's green mantle will appear much more revealing and significant after a reading of this book."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 27 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

MANN, EDWARD BEVERLY. Gun feud. 275p $2 Morrow

39-27344

Western story.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

"This lively and likable tale is one of E. B. Mann's best and required reading for Western fans." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Je 4 '39 90w

"The writing is as skillful as the plot manipulation—in good English and without superfluity of words. Altogether the best story Mr. Mann has published thus far." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 16 '39 160w

MANN, ERIKA, and MANN, KLAUS. Escape to life. 384p il $3.50 Houghton

325.2 Refugees, Political. Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Intellectual life. Germans in the U.S. (W) 39-27386

In this book the son and daughter of Thomas Mann give an account of the emigration of artists and intellectuals from the countries which have suffered under the Hitler ideology. There are stories or sketches of a Princeton undergraduate, and of Albert Einstein; of Rudolf Serkin and his "pure Aryan" father-in-law, Busch; of a German actress in Hollywood and Max Reinhardt, also in Hollywood, and many, many more. Index.

For biographical sketch of Erika Mann see Wilson Bulletin 13:728 Je '39

"The book is tragic but also brave and hopeful. German thought and achievement is in exile: it is not dead." J. Rumney

+ Am J Soc 45:489 N '39 220w

Booklist 35:306 My 15 '39

"In a book that would have been the better for a little less facility and casualness, Erika Mann and her brother Klaus present a story that cannot fail to be moving. This stripping of Germany of all its most gifted, its best minds, comes to seem like a bitter, a cosmic jest directed against its rulers. . . . It is well to be reminded how great is the list of Germans who have voluntarily gone into exile, because Hitler's Germany can never be their home." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p4 Ap 23 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 220w

Foreign Affairs 17:814 Jl '39 40w

Reviewed by Karl Billinger

Living Age 356:499 Jl '39 60w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld

Nation 148:619 My 27 '39 500w

Reviewed by Nathan Asch

New Repub 99:80 My 24 '39 650w

Reviewed by Brian Howard

New Statesman & Nation 17:656 Ap 29 '39 1550w

"Perhaps it is all to the good that these children of Thomas Mann are bright as sparrows and can skip from the dark tragedy inflicted upon hundreds of thousands to the promise of new opportunity in a world which, despite everything, still has room. They are also deeply engrossed in their own social and philosophical attitudes. As a result certain important refugee groups hardly get into the book at all—an omission which a note at the conclusion does not wholly gloss over." G. N. Shuster

+ — N Y Times p9 My 7 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 30w

Pratt p28 summer '39

"A really important book. . . . 'Escape to Life' is not a statistical table of the number of refugees and their occupations, but it does give portrait after portrait of exceptionally gifted people. The portraits can be taken as good likenesses, to judge from those which are of the people I myself know. And the total effect is overwhelming." Jonathan Griffin

+ Sat R of Lit 19:3 Ap 22 '39 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

MANN, GEORGE CARLISLE, comp. Bibliography on consumer education; sponsored by Foundation for consumer education, Los Angeles, California. 286p $4 Harper

016.3394 Consumption (economics)—Bibliography. Buying—Bibliography. Cost and standard of living—Bibliography. U.S.—Economic conditions—Bibliography 39-27555

Annotated bibliography of nearly 2000 book and magazine references relating to consumer education. Citations are brought down to November, 1938. Entries are arranged alphabetically under special subjects. Author and subject indexes; lists of publishers, periodicals, and commercial concerns.

Reviewed by G. A. Tallman

Am Econ R 29:635 S '39 350w

Booklist 35:357 Jl 1 '39

Pratt p4 winter '40

"Are you an economist studying the place of the consumer in our life of today, or a housewife feeling the need of making one dollar do the work of two? Perhaps you are an educator hunting for textbooks, teaching aids, curricula and projects for the teaching of consumer education; or you are the chairman of a committee in search of a club program that is vital and timely. This volume should make it possible for you to get the information you need. And besides that it can help you buy more intelligently, whether you want clothes or cosmetics, food or fuel, automobiles or insurance." Mabel Skinner

+ Survey 75:232 Jl '39 190w

Wis Lib Bul 35:138 Jl '39

MANN, HEINRICH. Henry, king of France; tr. from the German by Eric Sutton. 786p $3 Knopf

Henry IV, king of France—Fiction (W) 39-11998

Sequel to the author's Young Henry of Navarre (Book Review Digest, 1937) carrying the story of Henry down the years to his death. English edition is published in two volumes: Henri Quatre, king of France and Last days of Henri Quatre (ea 9s 6d Secker & Warburg).

Booklist 36:9 S '39

"Amidst all these politics, rival religious faiths, wars, intrigues, and hopes, Mr. Mann has followed Henry as closely as a shadow. The man is turned inside out before the reader. . . Intimately as the author follows his hero, he does not always make him entirely plain—there are motives and actions, as well as passages of writing, which are far from clear. But through it all the glowing portrait of a courageous and heart-warming personage stands out." Iris Barry

+ — Books p4 Ag 6 '39 950w

"It moves slowly. There is a kind of Teutonic thoroughness about it. If it is not documented, one feels that footnotes could be fitted to paragraph after paragraph of the text. Enormous, exasperating, and fascinating, this novel deserves success; but whether the American public, accustomed to less toilsome books, will give it their allegiance remains to be seen." H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 1100w

"For those who desire a colorful account of the life and times of Henry, with all their dramatic high points and low points, this book provides entertainment and information." E. J. Clarke

Commonweal 30:482 S 15 '39 360w

"Herr Mann tells the squalid story well enough, if in rather a pedestrian fashion and with little creative force. For all his erudition and his industry in the accumulation of relevant data, something vital is lacking; somehow the carefully elaborated characters fail to come to significant life, and as a work of art 'Henri Quatre' remains an uneasy cross between history and fiction. Short of a work of creative genius I, for one, would rather have straightforward history." Wilfrid Gibson

— + Manchester Guardian p7 D 2 '38 400w (Review of English ed, v 1)

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 260w (Review of English ed, v 2)

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Nation 149:153 Ag 5 '39 550w

"Fictional history in the grand manner, overembroidered in phrase and incident, by a conscientious and scholarly hero-worshiper."

New Repub 100:84 Ag 23 '39 60w

"As the propaganda taints the history, so the history mars the novel, leaving Henry as neither humanist cynic, Renaissance neurotic nor political opportunist, but presenting instead a heavily Teutonic self-tortured hero with puzzled ideals of enlightened nationalism. Henri Quatre is worth criticising at such length because, taken as a whole, it is a moving and impressive book." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:1008 D 10 '38 500w (Review of English ed, v 1)

"False historical analogies vitiate much of the novel. Occasionally Herr Mann throws off a striking and effective political image—'the bandits chained together on their galley, who thus rule the world' is a well-flavoured piece of rhetoric with a pleasant double application—but generally his efforts to prove that old feudalists are new Fascists writ small are tiresome rather than illuminating. His blindness to broad anachronisms is all the more remarkable in contrast to his flair for period detail. His descriptions of the riots and triumphs, the backstairs plottings and sweaty, tumultuous receptions that made up the Renaissance social scene equal those of Feuchtwanger; he only lacks the detachment to make the psychology of his characters as convincing as their environment. . . All the same, Henri Quatre has a breadth, vigour and scholarship that makes one forgive its shortcomings." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:56 Jl 8 '39 600w (Review of English ed, v 2)

Reviewed by Katherine Woods

N Y Times p2 Ag 6 '39 1100w

"The king in Mann's story is alive and various, someone who understands himself and whom we can understand. This gives importance to Mann's book, even though everything else about it is pretty much of a mess. Thomas Mann's brother has never been a very good novelist and he should not have written any novels about Henri; he should have written a biography." Louis Kronenberger

+ — New Yorker 15:65 Ag 5 '39 1300w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"The story moves swiftly, from scene to scene, almost like a play. To speed the action it is written at times in dialogue. There is little description, and no moralizing. But the philosophy of the author, a philosophy touched by humor, shines transiently through the texture of the closely-woven style." Katharine Anthony

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ag 5 '39 420w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 163:106 Jl 21 '39 430w

"In his interpretation of the life and age of Henry IV, Dr Mann combines the erudition of the scholar with the creative talent of the artist. Out of the legendary past emerges the figure of King Henry, vital and sincere; a king who even in these days of modern ideologies impresses one with his majesty, his democratic vision and his personal charm. It is the human side of the portrait which impresses one most deeply, and which places this novel in the ranks of the notable biographies of fiction." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 1300w

Time 34:59 Ag 7 '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p783 D 10 '38 800w (Review of English ed, v 1)

Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Jl 15 '39 700w (Review of English ed, v 2)

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson

Yale R n s 29:viii autumn '39 230w

MANN, HORACE. Horace Mann at Antioch; ed. by Joy Elmer Morgan. 608p il maps $2 Nat. educ.

B or 92 Antioch college, Yellow Springs, Ohio 39-270

"Studies in personality and higher education; including Horace Mann's address, Demands of the age on colleges; his Dedicatory and inaugural address, his Baccalaureate addresses; two Antioch sermons; and other material relating to his life." (Subtitle) A volume of miscellaneous material, including 125 pages of biography and some history of Antioch college.

Booklist 35:132 D 15 '38

J Home Econ 31:118 F '39 30w

MANNER, JANE, ed. The junior silver treasury; a program anthology for high school and college students. 298p $3 French

808.8 Literature—Collections 39-2559

Selections from fiction, plays, poems, and monologs, intended as an anthology of readings for high school and college students. Author and title indexes. Companion volume to the Silver Treasury (Book Review Digest, 1935).

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39

Wis Lib Bul 35:100 My '39

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH. Women and the revolution. 314p $3 Dutton [10s 6d Secker & Warburg]

396.9 Woman—Biography. Woman—Social and moral questions. Revolutions. Women in public life 39-2659

Miss Mannin is a Marxist and advocate of social revolution, though opposed to the present Russian regime. Her book combines biographical sketches of famous women revolutionaries, from Charlotte Corday to Rosa Luxemburg, with a general argument linking the emancipation of women with the establishment of proletarian dictatorship. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Mannin's views may thrill you or make you sputter, but I cannot imagine any one reading this book without being interested, stimulated and learning something. She knows revolutionary theories and movements in many lands and the life of women in England today and she writes with an attractive combination of knowledge, fervor and naivete." C. G. Stillman

+ Books p9 F 12 '39 1050w

"If one can't go quite all the way with Miss Mannin, one can admire the flame-like devotion of those pioneers in woman's cause, and

MANNIN, E. E.—Continued
her own courageous and persuasive stand." K. P. Kempton
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 270w
Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 50w

"Unhappily the exposition of [her] thesis involves an analysis of contemporary social conditions whose extreme crudity and reliance on secondary sources suggest—in a writer of Miss Mannin's experience—great haste." M. D. S.
— Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 22 '38 180w
New Repub 98:111 Mr 1 '39 40w

"Her book is well worth reading, even by those who are very far from sharing her convictions and social creed. . . Miss Mannin clings to her faith that social revolution can carry the individual to the dreamed of goal of freedom and happiness; and she expresses that faith with skill and strength, as with sincerity, in a book which is outspoken, consistent and alive."
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 29 '39 500w
New Yorker 14:59 Ja 28 '39 40w
Sat R of Lit 19:21 F 4 '39 380w

"It is hard to convey, without giving the erroneous impression that her book is entirely worthless, just how silly she contrives to be. . . That women should understand the imminent menace of Fascist reaction, in terms of slavery as well as in terms of bombs, is good; that they should have records of the lives and heroic deeds of other women in other revolutions, is also good; but it is the reverse of good that their understanding of economic and political realities should be handicapped and befogged by that very turgidity of rhetoric, that demagogic darkening of counsel, which is Fascism's own well-tried weapon." Honor Croome
— Spec 160:594 Ap 1 '38 300w
Springf'd Republican p8 F 28 '39 800w

Reviewed by B. G. Swing
Survey G 28:551 S '39 260w

"Miss Mannin writes all through as a 'Marxist' and a faithful supporter of those pure ideals of revolution which have been betrayed by the present ruling bureaucracy in Russia. She relies a great deal upon what others have written and is perhaps a little too facile otherwise. In the concluding section of the book she discusses the probable effects of revolution upon women in this country. There are some sensible things in her comments on marriage, divorce, prostitution, the home, leisure, and so on, but too often she seems to take it for granted that change of any sort is necessarily change for the better."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 2 '38 220w

MANNING-SANDERS, RUTH (MRS GEORGE MANNING-SANDERS). Adventure may be anywhere; il. by Mary Shepard [Eng title: Children by the sea.] 262p $1.75 Stokes [7s 6d Collins]
39-4898

Describes the adventures of four boys and girls between the ages of three and fourteen during a summer vacation in Cornwall.

"The four children, each quite unlike the other, are well worth knowing; taken together, their performances and views of life and literature are good for hours of happiness to ten-to-twelve-years-old readers." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Mr 19 '39 450w

"From the first hilarious chapter (which describes the twins' night in a sleeper on the way to meet their cousins, Sally and Bang) to the last, the book is full of exciting and amusing episodes. . . It is a lively story, and the illustrations by Mary Shepard add to its appeal." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:244 Mr 15 '39 140w

"Rebecca tells the story as an aspiring young writer would, in fine long words and rolling phrases which manage to catch the feeling of the sea and the countryside, and with some endearing characterizations of the kindly Cornish folk. It is a book full of humor and youthful joy in experience and to it Mary Shepard has brought her own appreciation of those qualities in the conception of her illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 12 '39 400w

"Superior entertainment."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 10w
Wis Lib Bul 35:117 Je '39

MANSFIELD, HARVEY CLAFLIN. The comptroller general; a study in the law and practice of financial administration. 303p $3 Yale univ. press [14s Oxford]
351.71 U.S. General accounting office. U.S Comptroller general. Finance—U.S.
39-8570

A study of the organization and workings of the Comptroller General's office since its establishment, marked by adverse criticism of its achievements in the past and concluding with proposals for legislation to remedy its failings. "In 1936, the author became a member of the research staff of the President's Committee on Administrative Management, [and] had opportunity to examine the actual operations of the office and to explore its control over the financial administration of the government. The immediate results of his examination were presented to the President's Committee in a study called 'The General Accounting Office,' which was published in 1937. . . The present volume is an outgrowth, in some respects merely an elaboration, of this study." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"A book on the office of the Comptroller-General and the workings of the General Accounting Office has been greatly needed for several years. . . W. F. Willoughby and D. H. Smith, both of the Brookings Institution, published separate studies of the General Accounting Office in 1927, both dealing with the background, legal status, and functions of the office, and both inclined to be complimentary rather than critical. Mansfield's volume, appearing some eighteen years after the creation of the Comptroller-General's office, is therefore most welcome." A. E. Buck
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:502 Je '39 850w
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 8 '39 20w

"The author's recommendations, well-considered and worthy of far more attention than they will receive on Capitol Hill, are numerous and comprehensive. . . Specific proposals covering various minor phases of the problem are added, but the major contribution lies in the sound foundation of fact and argument upon which the basic recommendations are supported. This volume excellently fills a long-standing gap in our literature on financial control and administration." John McDiarmid
+ Columbia Law R 39:1073 Je '39 1000w

MANSPERGER, DALE E., and PEPPER, CARSON W. Plastics; problems and processes. 187p il $2.50 Int. textbook
668 Plastic materials (W) 38-28890

Industrial arts textbook containing instructions for making articles with plastics. Materials, tools, equipment, supplies, and directions for making a number of articles are included. Intended for school or home shops Glossary, bibliography, and index.

Booklist 35:170 Ja 15 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:28 Ap '39

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. The best plays of 1938-39; and the Year book of the drama in America. (V 20) 545p il $3 Dodd
808.82 Dramas—Collections. American drama —Collections. Theater —Yearbooks (20-21432)

Contains introductory chapters on the theatrical season in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and southern California. Excerpts from the following plays are given: Abe Lincoln in Illinois, by R. E. Sherwood; The Little Foxes, by Lillian Hellman; Rocket to the Moon, by Clifford Odets; The American Way, by G. S. Kaufman and Moss Hart; No Time for Comedy, by S. N. Behrman; The Philadelphia Story, by Philip Barry; The White Steed, by P. V. Carroll; Here Come the Clowns, by Philip Barry; Family Portrait, by Lenore Coffee and W. J. Cowen; Kiss the Boys Good-bye, by Clare Boothe. Data for all plays produced in New York City from June 18, 1938 to June 18, 1939. Indexes.

Booklist 36:107 N 15 '39

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p8 Ja 21 '40 150w

Reviewed by L. S. Wellstone
Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 230w

Cath World 150:371 D '39 200w

New Yorker 15:83 O 28 '39 20w

"Mr Mantle supplies a moderate amount of criticism—which is reasonable in tone as well as in quantity. Though the volume would be improved as a record if there were more extended descriptions of plays not rated among the 'best 10,' it conveys a good idea of major productions and is specially valuable for the complete list of plays and casts."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 O 20 '39 420w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:916 D '39 1000w

MARCH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Campbell, W. E. M.

MARCH-PHILLIPPS, GUS. Ace high. 323p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Macmillan]

39-7078

The principal characters in this story of English hunting life are John Sprake, ex-army officer with an adventurous spirit hard to satisfy, and Vivienne Day, a girl who earns her way by riding other people's horses.

New Yorker 15:86 Mr 25 '39 20w

"John Sprake, arrogant and authoritarian by temperament, is not a pretty picture of a hero, and Mr. March-Phillipps seems to be too little aware of the extent to which his story invites approval of a not very sympathetic character. Though hardly anybody can fail to quarrel with its moral values, however, 'Ace High' has narrative force and artistry of a distinctive kind. Mr. March-Phillipps, whose third novel this is, has a clean and flexible style, his scenes are sharply outlined, his interests carry an infectious, hard-bitten excitement."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p739 N 19 '38 440w

MARCU, VALERIU. Accent on power: the life and times of Machiavelli; tr. by Richard Winston. 314p il $3 Farrar

B or 92 Machiavelli, Niccolò 39-22907

Biography of the author of The Prince set against a study of the political conditions in Florence, Rome and the Italian principalities in the fifteenth century.

Reviewed by Arthur Livingston
Books p6 S 17 '39 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 7 '39 550w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:iv N '39 230w

Reviewed by Adolf Sturmthal
Nation 150:79 Ja 20 '40 1250w

"It is not a pretentious biography. There are few of the tricks in it that we have come to associate with the art of modern biography: no psychoanalysis, no debunking, no glorifying, no writing down and no playing up. The author has a terse, stripped, epigrammatic style, and he treats his subject with economy and dignity. Unfortunately one result is that Machiavelli does not quite come alive. Another is that there is not nearly so much discussion of his books as we should like." Max Lerner

+ — New Repub 100:305 O 18 '39 2000w

"Indeed it is not very possible to look at the contemporary scene without regarding also the shrewd Florentine with the thin lips and Martian bulging forehead, for he is always present there. . . For that reason a life of Machiavelli is not only exceedingly interesting but also it appears at the right time. It is 'spot news' or at any rate 'spot biography.' For to go into the mind and thinking of this 'first technician of power,' as Mr. Marcu calls him, is far more than to examine a figure of the distant Renaissance. It is to study the first and greatest exponent of the things that rule us now. It is consequently a little unfortunate that Mr. Marcu, interesting and informative though he has made his book, has not dwelt with a little greater detail upon this most essential fact." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p6 S 17 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:83 S 16 '39 30w

"Despite its subtitle the author makes no pretense of offering a biography of Machiavelli. What he has done is to give us a psychological study of power as a motive to human action and as the aim of statecraft. Machiavelli is merely a convenient peg on which to hang his theories. The factual inaccuracies frequently invalidate the conclusions, but taken by and large, the study is interesting and able, and the argument brilliant if not always convincing." G. R. B. Richards

— + Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 7 '39 800w

Time 34:70 S 25 '39 350w

Wis Lib Bul 35:186 N '39

MARCUSE, LUDWIG. Soldier of the church; the life of Ignatius Loyola; tr. from the German and ed. by Christopher Lazare. 352p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Loyola, Ignatius of, Saint (W) 39-12404

A biography, somewhat fictionalized, of Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuits. Index.

"The book is not properly the life of a saint, but a study of a great man who moved against a background that has the hues and charm of tapestry. There is tragic drama in it though not of the very highest order. It will be read through, from cover to cover, with unflagging interest even by those who might suppose they would be bored. One may add that the translation is very good, though the proof reading is not." G. N. Shuster

+ — Books p6 Jl 23 '39 1150w

Reviewed by J. L. Burke
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 460w

Living Age 356:399 Je '39 60w

"A book that would be a first-class test of Loyola's conquest of temper, if it could be sent to heaven. The leader of the counter-Reformation, who refined personality into the most impersonal of instruments, is put through such spectacular stages on the road to sainthood as would have made him dismiss himself from the Society. A good deal about sixteenth-century university life and power politics that is well worth reading, but no conception of the phenomenon of genius called sainthood."

— + New Repub 99:82 My 24 '39 80w

N Y Times p4 S 3 '39 400w

New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 20w

Pratt p6 autumn '39

"To this extraordinary story Herr Marcuse brings a nervous, epigrammatic style, a scholar's knowledge of the Renaissance, an artist's feeling for its color and paradox, and a coolly critical modern mind. He makes biography read like fiction, and if he suppresses the difference between guess and fact, sound scholarship controls most of the guesses, and the pace of the narrative excuses the rest. He has written an absorbing book from which the reader will rake a vivid impression of the surface of Loyola's life and times. But of the surface only." Garrett Mattingly

MARCUSE, LUDWIG—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:15 Ap 22 '39 490w
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 12 '39 450w

MARCY, RANDOLPH BARNES. Journal. See Foreman, G. Marcy and the gold seekers

MARETT, R. H. K. Eye witness of Mexico. 268p il map $3 (8s 6d) Oxford 917.2 Mexico—Description and travel
39-27459

"The author of this book arrived in Mexico shortly before the inauguration of the Cardenas regime and spent the following seven years in that country variously occupied as employee of the British Railways Ltd., the Mexican Eagle Oil Company, correspondent for The Times of London, as a partner in real estate operations, and in a disastrous gold-mining venture. During the entire period he pursued with unflagging interest his hobby of archaeology, which resulted in the publication of Archaeological Tours from Mexico City [Book Review Digest, 1934]. . . [The present book] is a record of his experiences during the period from 1931 to the expropriation decrees of March 1938." Publisher's note

Booklist 35:328 Je 1 '39

"By and large, Mr. Marett's book is pleasantly written, accurate as far as it goes, occasionally pleasantly naive, most interesting in its reflection of the color of the older Mexico the author found so fascinating until recent events forced him to consider more practical matters." J. H. Jackson
+ — Books p32 D 10 '39 350w

Reviewed by Frank Wood
Boston Transcript p1 Je 10 '39 500w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 6 '39 40w

"A young Englishman, many years resident in Latin America and a member by marriage of an old Mexican family, comes closer than most foreign observers to a real understanding of the Mexican point of view."
+ Foreign Affairs 18:384 Ja '40 30w
Nature 144:883 N 25 '39 450w

"Mr. Marett provides in his sober and objective book just the elementary facts which the tourist and the journalist needs when he first goes to Mexico." Kingsley Martin
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:468 Mr 25 '39 600w

Reviewed by R. L. Martin
N Y Times p9 D 24 '39 500w

"If it cannot be said that this is an important contribution to the swelling literature on Mexico, it is well written, readable, and honest." Ernest Gruening
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:15 My 20 '39 390w

"Mr. Marett's style is naive, and he gives the impression of learning while he writes, but one finishes the book with respect for the quality of the author's mind. For a man who has suffered from every form of Mexican banditry he is extraordinarily fair." Graham Greene
+ — Spec 162:642 Ap 14 '39 350w

"Mr. Marett's book is the best modern guide to Mexican affairs which has so far appeared."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Ap 1 '39 600w

MARFIELD, DWIGHT. The ghost on the balcony. 279p $2 Dutton 39-11999

Mystery story.

"This is an optional item, unfitted for advanced students of crime (unsatisfactory solution) and not so faultless as to wordage." Will Cuppy
Books p19 Ap 30 '39 140w

"In spite of the fact that a few clues point that way, the unfolding of the plot in the last chapter has a distinct 'rabbit-out-of-hat' quality. 'The Ghost in the Balcony' is really for sturdy souls who want lots of excitement and not much logic." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 My 6 '39 180w

"The puzzle of who killed whom and why is cleared up after a fashion, but the author never does get around to explaining the tolling of the bell. Not that it matters much. His explanation might have made the story even worse than it is." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p23 Ap 30 '39 80w

"Contrasting backgrounds of Chinatown dives and picturesque Spanish rancho hold more interest than super-sinous plot. Not impressive."
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 6 '39 40w

MARION, ELIZABETH. The day will come [Eng title: Time will come]. 306p $2 Crowell [7s 6d Hale, R]
(W) 39-7442

On the day of her youngest son's twenty-first birthday Mary Swift awakened early, planned the day with its family dinner party, thought back over the years since her husband's death, and decided she had done well by each of her own three children, and the nephew she had brought up as her son. Before night three of the four had declared their independence; the fourth had done that already, altho never having voiced her decree. The scene is the wheat-growing section of the state of Washington.

Reviewed by J. H. Friend
Books p14 Ap 2 '39 550w

" 'The Day Will Come' is smoothly written. It has a top layer of earthly wisdom about a quarter of an inch deep. . . There are descriptions and conversations about the farm that forms the background of the book, which are sound and lovely. But all the characters are pre-occupied with silent personal philosophizing that becomes monotonous rumination. Harry and his mother, the most forcefully drawn characters, are the least understood or credible, one feels." Jeanne Minhinnick
— + Canadian Forum 19:165 Ag '39 140w

"It is unlucky in a way that Elizabeth Marion's precocity should have been emphasized. Her style is so good, fresh and musical and only now and then a little too self-consciously poetic; her comprehension of her characters is so clear and sometimes so startlingly shrewd that her book manifestly deserves to be judged severely on its merits. One is sure it will annoy her when readers observe that she is a little rough on Mary Swift and put it down to the cruelty of youth." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '39 750w

"Miss Marion has perhaps concentrated her drama too much—that three out of four children would break away from their domineering mother in less than twenty-four hours is a little excessive. But the story is sensitively told and deeply felt."
+ — New Yorker 15:78 Ap 1 '39 60w

"The author suffers one characteristic of a young writer, in being so absorbed in what she is doing as to neglect the pulse and temperature of the hypothetical public. In other words, she is not objective or selective, but these things she can learn. She has that which is not so easily learned, a confidence in setting down what she thinks and feels which, if at times a little solemn, is not cocksure, and reveals a serious interest in working out a means of expression, and the ability to do so." I. W. A.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 8 '39 230w

"The book is written with sincerity, warmth, restrained emotion and fine characterization."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p704 D 2 '39 120w

MARIOTTI, JEAN. Tales of Poindi; tr. from the French by Esther Averill; il. by Feodor Rojankovsky. 64p $2.50 Domino press, 112 W. 11th st, N.Y.

398.2 Legends—New Caledonia 38-38711

Fairy tales or legends of the Kanakas of the island of New Caledonia in the South Pacific. The stories were told to the author in childhood, by his native foster-mother.

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

"Another unusual fairy-tale book. . . There is a quality about the prose, its simplicity, deep knowledge of the woods and birds, which reminds one of W. H. Hudson. It is a very lovely book, one that many children who enjoy The Wind in the Willows will like to hear read over and over."
+ Horn Bk M 15:27 Ja '39 490w

"Miss Averill's translation is skillful and sympathetic, so that the reader forgets he is not reading the tales in the language in which they were first written, and she has added a 'little dictionary' at the end of the book of the native or unfamiliar words appearing in the tales. Feodor Rojankovsky's stirring black and white illustrations show the tropical beauty of this country and the busy life of the birds and beasts which inhabit it. . . An unusual book that is a real contribution to folklore literature and one that boys and girls from 9 to 12 will thoroughly enjoy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 22 '39 440w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. A Christian looks at the Jewish question. 90p $1 Longmans

296 Jews—Political and social conditions 39-16538

Claiming that never before in the history of the world have the Jews been so universally persecuted, the author urges a firmer grip on the question by all members of the "civilized community." The book is based on a lecture delivered both in Paris and New York in 1938.

Booklist 36:1 S '39

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p41 D 3 '39 800w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf
Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '39 550w
Cath World 149:634 Ag '39 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

"Maritain has not, in the present essay, given us so much that is new in the way of facts or thoughts, but what he has said he has said with his customary felicity, and in passage after passage with striking freshness and brilliance of expression. There is restraint throughout, even where his white-hot indignation at the patent sham and injustice of anti-Semitism is clearly discernible. All in all, this little volume is a very worthwhile contribution to the cause of social and civic justice and charity. And it is eminently readable." J. M. Cooper
+ Commonweal 30:422 Ag 25 '39 550w

Reviewed by Martin Gardner
Ethics 50:235 Ja '40 700w
Foreign Affairs 18:372 Ja '40 20w

"It is difficult within the scope of a brief review to do justice to M. Maritain's little book. It is both reasoned and impassioned, an ideal combination, and should take a high place among examples of contemporary pamphleteering." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p18 S 10 '39 700w
New Yorker 15:88 Je 24 '39 30w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. True humanism [tr. from the French by Margot Adamson]. 321p $3.50 Scribner [10s 6d Bles]

144 Communism. Thomas Aquinas, Saint. Christianity. Humanism 39-13327

"According to this distinguished Catholic philosopher, a clear distinction must be maintained between Christianity, which is an eternal truth, and the temporal forms of Christendom determined by the varying needs of each epoch. He outlines the principles of a new social order, a 'personalist democracy,' destined to succeed capitalism and to preserve the ideas of freedom and human dignity." New Repub

"One great value of a treatise of the type written by Maritain is the discovery that it is possible to analyze great human problems from a very special viewpoint without being immersed in mere party strife and the conflict of rival propagandas. Maritain's wisdom is Catholic wisdom. It is informed throughout by a great Catholic tradition. Yet some of its insights ought to be entertained, and possibly accepted, even by those who will never be Catholics. Others, even if rejected, will not be without value to those who honestly seek for light upon perplexing social and human problems." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ Books p15 Ap 9 '39 1550w

"This work is a noteworthy attempt to translate the system of a great mediaevalist into modern terms, and Thomas could not ask for a clearer or more discerning interpretation. The strength and weakness of the author's thought are those of his master, and do not need to be pointed out again, for philosophy has had much to say about them. The tough-minded will not find much satisfaction in Maritain's deliverances on man as creature, the distinctions between temporal and spiritual, and the doctrine of a transcendent Kingdom. Nevertheless, we have here a wholesome antidote for much that is being written and done about social problems." F. G. Ensley
+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 10 '38 400w
Cath World 149:246 My '39 420w

"The present book is indispensable for those people who feel the need of guidance to understand the problems and crises which afflict the world today. . . The translation of this volume is deficient in many respects, although not as seriously so as in the case of his preceding book, 'The Degrees of Knowledge.' There is an awkwardness and infelicity in the translated style, but in this case these fortunately do not seriously interfere with the understanding of the sense. The trouble is chiefly in things like having 'only' almost always in the wrong position, and in general, having a sort of alien surface between the reader and the work." William O'Meara
+ — Commonweal 29:245 D 23 '38 1300w

"Sometimes a book comes to one's attention, and on first glancing through it one thinks it is 'just another volume to be read.' Then one begins to get into it, and soon one feels that one should stand up and cheer, so stimulating is its reading. That is the way the present book impressed the reviewer. It is so sane, so clear, so profound, so brave; and with all the qualifications one may make at point after point, it is so true." W. N. Pittenger
+ Living Church 100:134 F 1 '39 330w

"There can be little doubt that Maritain is one of the great minds of our time, fair, without bitterness, and of brilliant power." A. W. J.
+ Manchester Guardian p6 N 11 '38 220w
New Repub 97:109 N 30 '38 50w

"In its essential humility and in the integrity of its endeavour, True Humanism is a deeply challenging book. Even in disagreement, and abetted by an uncomfortable translation, it would be impossible not to be impressed by the nobility and lucidity of M. Maritain's argument. Those who wish to understand the Christian attitude to contemporary politics will find it here, expressed with an exacting precision which must spur the reader to clarify

MARITAIN, JACQUES—Continued
and sharpen his own beliefs." Desmond Hawkins
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:622 Ap 22 '39 900w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 29 '39 500w

"The author never uses a concrete when it is possible to use an abstract term. This habit deprives his analysis of the historical development and culmination of Western European society of much virtue and makes his essay in political reconstruction almost valueless." Douglas Jerrold
Spec 161:722 O 28 '38 1450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p56 Ja 28 '39 2450w

MARKS, PERCY. The days are fled. 371p $2.50 Stokes
39-21784

This is Stuart Shaw's story from boyhood to middle age. The son of a professional musician, Stuart is forced to give up all the usual pursuits of childhood to practice on the violin. He achieves some success but fails to become a virtuoso and finally settles down as a music teacher in a western town. Here in time he does achieve success as teacher and guardian of a real child prodigy, the little Italian waif, Tony Scala, who eventually wins the highest fame.

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39

" 'The Days Are Fled' has narrative merits and a varied musical background, here and abroad, but it misses the high note of excitement. It can't be exciting because Stuart Shaw is not an exciting being." George Conrad
— + Books p12 O 15 '39 400w

"The book is, in a quiet way, rather moving; but the life which Stuart Shaw finally comes to is so average, and he is so content in it, and in such a thoroughly average way, that the tone of the book itself becomes average. This is a matter of an enterprising author being overcome by, rather than transcending, his material; and this is, in a way, the proof that Mr. Marks himself lacks important talent." M. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 180w

"One is irresistibly tempted to compare 'The Days Are Fled' with another story of a gifted violinist. Not only are they strikingly similar in theme, but both are markedly better than the mine-run of novels. In other ways the contrast is complete. In 'Jake' Naomi Royde-Smith created for us with remarkable virtuosity a young musical genius who seemed as extraordinary as we fancy genius may be. Mr. Marks has convinced us of the genius of a man who is, in many important ways, entirely and even pitiably ordinary. This is surely not a lesser achievement." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p24 O 15 '39 750w

"A pleasant story about pleasant people."
+ New Yorker 15:101 O 14 '39 50w

"The novel does not project much emotional intensity, quicken the spirit by any unusual imaginative quality, or penetrate very far below the surface. But there is directness and warmth and sanity and homely humor in Mr. Marks's writing, and a spirit of affirmation which many will enjoy. Admirers of his previous novels, especially the musically inclined, should not be disappointed in his latest." J. S. M.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:19 N 4 '39 350w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 22 '39 300w

MARQUAND, HILARY ADAIR, ed. Organized labour in four continents, by H. A. Marquand and others. 518p $4 (15s) Longmans
331.87 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes

"The labour movements of eleven countries are described, a section on each being contributed by a separate author. The authors are mostly professors of economics, research workers, or trade unionists actually resident in the countries they describe. France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Scandinavia, the U.S.S.R., the United States, Canada, Mexico, Australia and Japan are the countries examined." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"There is a place for just such a volume on the shelf of every student of labor relations, and it should be particularly useful in courses dealing with the labor movement the world over. Because it has not been edited by impartial authority, but each writer has been put on his own, some chapters will be only part of the story for those familiar with the countries involved, but these chapters will be a most helpful starting point." Herman Feldman
+ Ann Am Acad 207:247 Ja '40 550w

"The chapters on Britain, France and Scandinavia are the best and the one on Italy the poorest."
+ — Foreign Affairs 18:372 Ja '40 30w
Management R 28:455 D '39 30w
Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 100w

"Only a few of the chapters make exciting reading; but the book is on the whole a competent and useful piece of work, meeting a real need." G. D. H. Cole
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:382 S 9 '39 700w

Reviewed by E. B. Cale
Social Studies 31:90 F '40 600w

"Useful as Organised Labour in Four Continents must prove to the student, one cannot help wishing that it had been a little differently conceived. . . A chapter devoted to more general ideas would have given the whole book a unifying theme which now it lacks; as it stands, it is a series of monographs, all competent and instructive, all useful, some well and some excruciatingly written, which happens to be bound into one volume." Honor Croome
+ — Spec 163:191 Ag 4 '39 700w

"The sections on the United States, by Professor Selig Perlman, and that on Great Britain are the best, both on account of the depth and sweep of the generalizations developed and of logical arrangement of the complex subject-matter. The weakness of the book is the lack of any adequate gathering of conclusions."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Ag 19 '39 380w

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Wickford Point. 458p $2.75 Little
(W) 39-27145

Family chronicle depicting life in the old Brill homestead at Wickford Point, somewhere north of Boston. The story of the various members of this self-satisfied but inefficient family is told by a cousin, Jim Calder. Jim is loyal to the family, but attempts to keep clear of their strangling affection and dependence.

"The book may be a bit long. The last five pages certainly are anticlimactic. But if, like many of us in and out of New England, you are nearly a Brill, you'll feel that you are Jim, and are telling the story yourself. And if you are completely a Brill you ought to get someone to read Wickford Point aloud to you." C. P. Curtis, Jr.
+ Atlantic Ap '39 850w
Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39

"Whether he is being sentimental, or brusque, or satirical, or yielding a little to pathos, Mr. Marquand bubbles with entertainment. I think there is not a single dull page in his novel—and that is extraordinary for a Pulitzer Prize winner. . . Well, the book has everything. Its social implications are true and unpretentious. It is written with a brilliant manipulation of scenes and incidents in time and space, a dramaturgy that comes out of sound literary workmanship. . . And despite all the intelligent purpose of the novel, it is written with an easy informality and a sparkle that make it fascinating reading." William Soskin

+ Books p1 Mr 19 '39 1600w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 18 '39 1350w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey
Canadian Forum 19:29 Ap '39 310w
Cath World 149:250 My '39 250w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 11 '39 650w

"There is satire and irony, cold intellectualism and sly sentimentalism here, blended expertly in telling about the New England family who make the story, and a grand one to read it is." E. S. H.

+ Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

Reviewed by Grenville Vernon
Commonweal 30:108 My 19 '39 240w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:iv Jl '39 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '39 400w

"'Wickford Point' is a long, sprawling book with only occasional chapters that stand out clear, witty, and illuminating. Granted that it is in many ways superior to the typical popular serial, 'Wickford Point' is nevertheless loaded down with repetitious and obvious details whose only legitimate function is to enable the reader of this week's Saturday Evening Post to connect the current instalment with the summary of the preceding chapters." Mina Curtiss
Nation 148:384 Ap 1 '39 270w

"For magazine fiction, 'Wickford Point' is extraordinarily honest; for a serious novel, it is a little pretentious, but it gets by. Mr. Marquand has tried to make the best of both worlds. That half his effort has been censored out of all knowledge, he has only himself to blame. For if he knows anything, he knows the rules of the writing game: he knows the laws of the swineherd editors who feed the public trough." T. S. Matthews

+ — New Repub 98:226 Mr 29 '39 650w

Reviewed by John Mair
New Statesman & Nation 18:650 N 4 '39 400w

"The impression I first received from reading 'Wickford Point,' as I see now, was one of overemphasis on the humor, the almost continuous entertainment provided by the novel, the satire on a family run to seed. But in retrospect these features, although in no wise dimmed, are no longer exclusive. John Marquand's deep reading of character overshadows them. He is like the king's jester: he dons motley that he may the better tell the truth. The true worth of 'Wickford Point' lies below its satiric surface. It is a novel of importance, because its underlying emphasis is upon the springs of human behavior, and because, in 'Wickford Point,' Mr. Marquand has thrown a sharp illumination on a group of people whose conduct has the actuality of life." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 19 '39 1000w

"'Wickford Point' isn't a well-made novel and it hasn't the unity of 'The Late George Apley.' But in some respects it represents a better job of thinking. Snobbery is based on the clan rather than on the individual. Hence Mr. Marquand can perform more trenchant anatomy when working, as in 'Wickford Point,' with a whole family than merely with an Apley. That, after he has dissected the corpse and laid bare its pallid bones and atrophied organs, he should, in the person of Jim Calder, still be half in love with the body is one of those paradoxes of emotional necrophilia that Thackeray, similarly fascinated, would have completely understood." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:83 Mr 18 '39 950w
Pratt p30 summer '39

"It isn't as good as 'The Late George Apley' in the sense that it is neither as direct nor as compact as that beautifully precise dissection of a man, a class, and a way of American life. But it shows—to those who may need showing—that 'The Late George Apley' was neither a sport nor an accident but the work of a man who writes of his own themes in his own way and writes of them with a skill, a style, and a sense of acid comedy that may, perhaps, outlast a great deal of admired laboriousness and earnest breast-beating. In other words, here is a novelist—and a real one—with all that that word implies." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Mr 18 '39 1150w
Sat R of Lit 19:8 Ap 8 '39 700w (Discussion)

Discussion by the author
Sat R of Lit 20:12 Ap 29 '39 1750w

"This reviewer can remember no American novel since The Great Gatsby which he has read with so much delight as Wickford Point." Graham Green

+ Spec 163:600 O 27 '39 700w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '39 600w
Time 33:72 Mr 20 '39 460w

"The imaginative motive of the book is a good one, and much might have been made of it. Unfortunately the execution is lacking in power. There are light passages of comedy and ironical little sidelights on character, but too much of the book tends to be trivial and unselective; there is not enough the reader can get his teeth into. And the pages of literary gossip, the strained snappiness of stretches of dialogue and especially the omnipresence of 'Darling!' or 'Sweetness!' are all inclined to be a little wearisome."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p611 O 21 '39 450w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R n s 28:vi summer '39 230w

MARQUARD, LEOPOLD, and STANDING, THOMAS GILBERT. The southern Bantu. 262p maps $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

968 Bantus. South Africa—Race question. Labor and laboring classes—South Africa. South Africa—Native races 39-22914

"This workmanlike guide to the native races of South Africa is specially written for the amateur. It opens with a general account of the Bantu, their origin and customs. Their special qualities of dignity, patience and shrewdness, and the cultural differences that white men stupidly blame or ignore, are displayed in objective terms, and the Bantu related to periods corresponding in European history. The authors show in detail the conditions of native workmen in the Union and Southern Rhodesia; they quote statistics and Government reports for employment and pay in towns, mines and in reserves; and, while refraining from drawing conclusions, make facts talk." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Foreign Affairs 17:821 Jl '39 10w

"Besides imparting essential knowledge, the book seeks to do something to remove the lack of sympathy—to give it a mild name—which Africans and Europeans feel for one another. Such an attempt generally means paltering with the truth in order to avoid treading on anybody's corns. The remarkable thing about Mr. Marquard and Mr. Standing is that they give the facts without either evasion or offence." L. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 14 '39 390w

"The aim of the authors, it is stated, is to remove some of the hindrances to understanding which subsist between the white race and the black. Few who have set out with the same unimpeachable purpose have come nearer success than they do."

+ Nature 143:420 Mr 11 '39 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 8 '39 110w

MARQUIS, DON. Sons of the Puritans; with a pref. by Christopher Morley. 313p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 39-27146

The scene of the author's last novel, which was left unfinished at his death, is laid in Hazelton, Illinois. It is the story of a boy growing up in a typical mid-Western environment, where the rival Protestant sects rule the town, and where Puritanism is the rule of the day. It shows him as an intelligent youth, intended for the ministry, gradually awakening to the facts of life, and to the realization that he is not meant for the ministry.

Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39

"The book is as fascinating as an old-fashioned scrap-bag, jammed with a miscellany of worn material, discards, and occasional lengths of rich, original stuff, so that it affords the interest of a treasure hunt and the nostalgic charm of a letter from home." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p4 F 19 '39 1450w

Reviewed by Mildred Boie

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 18 '39 130w

Commonweal 30:137 My 26 '39 600w

"The publishers have included selections from his notes which stand as a tentative ending. It would have been more interesting to this reader had they printed his full notes, repetitions and all, instead of these brief, edited indications. But one thing the reader can be assured of: the novel as it stands speaks grandly and compassionately of average experience. It is good to think that in 'Sons of the Puritans' the duality in Marquis's own nature between the gayety of archy the literary cockroach and the tragic poetry of 'The Dark Hours' has been, at last, somewhat reconciled." Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p6 F 19 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:81 F 18 '39 230w

Pratt p30 summer '39

"For those who wish to know how stories end, and for those who believed in Don Marquis's genius, the book is a tragedy:—it is unfinished; the approaches to death caught him at the 308th page. . . For 'Sons of the Puritans' was to be a very fine novel indeed, an American classic, I think, and even as Volume I, 'Youth,'—which is what Don Marquis has written—it is, I believe, of durable quality." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 18 '39 470w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 550w

MARSH, SIR EDWARD HOWARD. A number of people; a book of reminiscences. 420p il $3.50 Harper [15s Hamilton, H; Heinemann]

B or 92 (W) 39-16764

"A book of reminiscences, akin to the memoirs of Sir William Rothenstein. Sir Edward Marsh, in addition to serving competently as Winston Churchill's secretary, has been Maecenas, diner-out, minor poet, and general London literary-man-of-fashion for many years. His book is full of amusing anecdotes, in the staid English manner, about celebrated people, both first-raters and second-raters." (New Yorker) Index.

"These reminiscences provide the best propaganda that the British ruling classes have had in a long while: it shows them to be inordinately human, gloriously lacking in all middle-class refinement, and as self-assured as they are cultivated and impudent." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 O 1 '39 750w

" 'Here's richness!' said Mr. Wackford Squeers on a famous occasion. In recommending Sir Edward Marsh the reviewer can echo those words. Provided, that is, that he explain that the two cases are not parallel. The reviewer, unlike Mr. Squeers, is not praising watered milk." DeLancey Ferguson

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 30 '39 600w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 29 '39 240w

"Mention anybody's name, and Sir Edward Marsh is ready with stories about him or stories that he told—usually brief, always very bright, but nearly always very slight also, so that at the end we have been pleased and entertained, but scarcely know anything new that is of importance about the characters brought before us. Perhaps it is the discretion of the habituated private secretary, perhaps the natural friendliness of a disposition which sees even the world's geese as swans; but the twentieth century here depicted seems strangely less rough and raucous than the one that we know." R. C. K. Ensor

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 850w

"A Number of People doesn't go at all deep. It is an entirely superficial record and is very largely a stringing together of most excellent stories. In fact it is the best commonplace book which I remember and for this reason it will be greatly appreciated if it is put in the right place." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:462 Mr 25 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p9 O 15 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:79 S 9 '39 60w

"Kindness is the keynote of 'A Number of People'—a genuine, unaffected kindness, though limited in scope. Now kindness unrelieved is apt to be exceedingly tedious. Edward Marsh relieves his with anecdote—such anecdote as few people are able to remember, let alone to tell. From this point of view, 'A Number of People' must be described as one of the most enjoyable books to be put on the market for a long time. Some memoirs are informative, some evocative: 'A Number of People' is of the latter description." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 S 16 '39 650w

"Sir Edward Marsh appears to have known almost every writer of distinction in the last forty years. Among his intimate friends have been Maurice Baring and Rupert Brooke. In adjoining sections he polishes off both the Lawrences, D. H. and T. E., with unpublished letters from both of them. He has succeeded in breaking through the bounds of his own generation; so that his circle of friends includes many much older and much younger than himself. But to all of them is extended the same cheerful, keen and unaffected interest. Sir Edward Marsh is no severe censor of his own work; but if some of his stories seem a little light to those who have not known the protagonists, their very inclusion reflects the sympathetic character and explains the universal popularity of the author." Christopher Hobhouse

+ Spec 162:602 Ap 7 '39 650w

Time 34:88 S 11 '39 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p171 Mr 25 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 36:16 Ja '40

MARSH, GEORGE TRACY. Vanished men. 298p $2 Penn

39-21782

Adventure story of the Hudson Bay country.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Jl 9 '39 100w

Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

MARSH, JOHN THOMPSON and WOOD, FREDERICK CHARLES. An introduction to the chemistry of cellulose; with a foreword by Sir Kenneth Lee. 431p il $7.50 Van Nostrand [21s Chapman]

547.3 Cellulose 40-2522

Treats of the subject of cellulose chemistry under five heads: the occurrence and general properties of cellulose; dispersed cellulose; modified cellulose; the derivatives of cellulose; the constitution and structure of cellulose. Author and subject indexes.

Reviewed by E. C. Jahn
Chem & Met Eng 46:375 Je '39 290w

"The book represents a rich source of information; it describes a great number of publications, including about 300 patents and should be very useful as a reference book, particularly for those who are interested in the commercial application of cellulose chemistry. A number of original microphotographs of natural fibers and of rayon, as well as photographs of K. Meyer's cellulose model deserve praise." E. Heuser

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:214 Mr 20 '39 330w

"Being intended for experts, it is scarcely readable in the ordinary sense; but is full of informative detail. It cannot fail to be useful, more particularly since the literature of the subject is widely scattered, often in journals which are not everywhere available."

+ Nature 143:184 F 4 '39 250w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:5 Ja '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:318 N '39

MARSH, NGAIO. Overture to death. 352p $2 Furman [7s 6d Collins]

(W) 39-27602

Detective story.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39

"Required reading for every one in search of superior bafflement." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Je 4 '39 350w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 90w

"The tale is amusing and pathetic, the young people in love very nice, and the detective as real as the rest—I doubt if this last is an advantage. If the book is not the perfect synthesis of the incompatible, it is very good of its kind, and those who enjoy the detective novel will derive excellent entertainment from it." Max Reiners

+ Canadian Forum 19:96 Je '39 280w

"The claim Miss Ngaio Marsh makes upon the attention of the intelligent reader depends not only on her ingenuity and power of construction, so necessary to the writer of detective tales, but even more on her gifts of style, characterisation, and narrative that allow her to take rank as a novelist of distinction. Indeed, in her new story, 'Overture to Death,' the problem of the identity of the murderer has so obvious an answer that the chief puzzle for the reader to consider is whether so apparent a solution can be correct or whether the author has in reserve some startling surprise." E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 220w

"Besides its handsome colour Miss Marsh's vase holds water, only its shape is exceedingly plain and simple. One of these days Miss Marsh will find a crime plot which is not just a solitary bright idea, and we must postpone our heartiest congratulations for that happy event." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 17:544 Ap 8 '39 230w

"Ngaio Marsh has presented us with another cast of odd characters in a story that is a worthy successor to her two earlier ones." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p6 Je 4 '39 160w

"One of those perfect mysteries and Miss Marsh's best. Should put an end to amateur theatricals, too."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 3 '39 40w

"Identity of killer not very deep secret. Otherwise superbly wrought and cleverly contrived yarn with interesting psychological overtones."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 3 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 280w
Time 34:56 Jl 3 '39 30w

"A model detective story. . . . Miss Marsh makes clues and motives sufficiently transparent for any intelligent reader to discover the criminal. In this case the novel is so well written that this transparency need not detract from the reader's enjoyment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 11 '39 380w

MARSHALL, CHAPMAN FREDERICK DENDY. History of British railways down to the year 1830. 246p il maps $15 (38s) Oxford

385.0942 Railroads—Great Britain [39-3899]

"The greater part of Mr. Marshall's volume deals with the development of British quarry and colliery railways, concluding with a chapter on the Liverpool and Manchester undertaking. The author quotes much from early sources and makes no attempt to write 'in the old fashioned way' of 'continuous narrative interspersed with the author's own ideas and comments; without any reference to authorities.' The arrangement is by geographical groups rather than chronological. The work is admirably illustrated and has a good index. Mr. Marshall is a past president of the Newcomen Society." N Y New Tech Bks

"Will rank as the standard collection of what is known about the development of the 'railroad' before the Stephenson era."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 18 '38 160w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:11 Ja '39
Times [London] Lit Sup p666 O 15 '38 380w

MARSHALL, DOROTHY. The rise of George Canning. 310p il $5 (15s) Longmans

B or 92 Canning, George 39-11295

"This book, based on a great mass of unpublished papers, Canning's letters to his aunt, his cousin and his wife, and a full journal kept by Canning between 1793 and 1795, makes a considerable addition to our knowledge of Canning's life and career. It has some very interesting pictures of high politics and of the manners and habits of parliamentary life. . . So far as new light is concerned, the book is chiefly valuable for the full account of Canning's relations with Pitt after Pitt's resignation." Spec

"The chief criticism of the book as a whole and of the two final chapters in particular is the paucity of interpretation. It is obvious that Miss Marshall has not given us the full benefit of her knowledge and that interpretations along the lines of those in the very suggestive introduction by Professor Temperley would have made a good book even better." D. G. Barnes

+ — Am Hist R 45:461 Ja '40 200w

Reviewed by A. Aspinall
Eng Hist R 54:514 Jl '39 1700w

"Contains excellent material from his unpublished letters and journal; and as this is mostly given, as it should be, in its original form, those interested in Canning and Pitt or in Parliamentary and diplomatic history will find it of considerable value. . . . Miss Marshall's original contributions to the book are hardly satisfactory. The annotation of the original materials is insufficient. People are mentioned without being identified, and Miss Marshall herself apparently does not always know who they were." L. B. Namier

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 N 11 '38 750w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p9 Je 4 '39 1400w

"The author of the present work has had at her command an amazingly extensive and intimate set of materials from which to draw her fascinating portrait of a young man on his way to greatness. It is an admirably done 'speaking likeness' of a man who, whatever his other qualities, was from beginning to end a vital and colorful figure." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 F 11 '39 1000w

MARSHALL, DOROTHY—Continued
Reviewed by J. L. Hammond
Spec 161:958 D 2 '38 750w

"The book is interesting and valuable, not only as filling up many gaps in our knowledge of Canning's earlier career in Parliament and throwing fresh light on the working of constitutional government in the days before Reform, but as giving a lively picture of the political society of the time and of the leading figures in it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p823 D 31 '38 550w

MARSHALL, JAMES. Swords and symbols; the technique of sovereignty. 168p $2 (8s 6d) Oxford 320.157 Sovereignty. Political science
39-10620

"This little volume succeeds in doing what Bertrand Russell's more pretentious work has failed to do: it describes the political state as a process, as a continual shifting of points of tension and of exercise of power by the ruling class. This more or less conspicuous changing of ruling classes is due primarily to the fact that 'the weapons of sovereignty are divided' (p. 131). An analysis of these weapons and their relative uses is the chief subject-matter of the book." J Philos

---

"Mr. Marshall writes with admirable detachment and a refreshing skepticism. But aside from the wealth of historical illustration and quotations, which gives the impression of a miscellaneous erudition, the book is decidedly amateurish. There is little evidence of rigorous and systematic thinking, and even less exactness in the use of terms. Sometimes words are actually misused, as in the phrase 'the dialectics of power.' One might overlook some of this had the author offered a new and significant explanation of the ever-perplexing problem of political power. But that is not the case; much of what he has to say is commonplace." Henry Janzen
— + Am Pol Sci R 33:728 Ag '39 390w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Am Soc R 4:741 O '39 300w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 205:171 S '39 230w

"An excellent and unpretentious little book which will not only help to make the political process clear to the young people to whom the book is dedicated, but will perform the same function for, I trust, a very large number of adult citizens who, for all their political experience, are likely to have only the vaguest notion of the nature of government." Max Radin
+ Books p12 S 24 '39 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 40w

"Mr. Marshall's book will be of lasting value because of the penetrating way in which he has ransacked the armory of sovereignty. Such realism should be coupled with equal realism in the treatment of group interests and social ideals; politics should study those who obey as much as those who rule." Abraham Edel
+ Columbia Law R 39:1269 N '39 1600w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
— Commonweal 30:280 Jl 7 '39 500w

"The manner of the book is highly to be commended. Challenging comparison, among recent books, with both Merriam's Political Power and Bertrand Russell's Power, this treatise manages to put into much less compass than either the humane realism of both. For many a day political scientists and informed men of affairs may turn its lucid pages to remind themselves of the best wisdom of our time upon the complex nature of political sovereignty and of its inexorable inner relation with the energy of some ethical impulse." T. V. S.
+ Ethics 50:124 O '39 220w
Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 20w

"If the author fails to do full justice to the indefinite durability of the process of democratic accommodation, he has drawn, nevertheless, the kind of description of the politics of power that might keep us Americans from going soft on our ideals, even if the author himself does go a little soft at the end. Meantime, he has written a monograph laconic in its potency. To know that a practicing lawyer can do this is a new assurance that American culture has come of age. And to find Lenin and Trotsky quoted almost as frequently as our Founding Fathers shows a realism that is rare, a rare realism still in the grasp, fortunately, of an American idealism that remains centralsourced." T. V. Smith
+ Harvard Law R 53:154 N '39 550w

"The book is so incisive, realistic, and genuinely learned that it deserves a permanent place among the classics of political wisdom literature from which it draws." H. W. S.
+ J Philos 36:357 Je 22 '39 280w

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein
Nation 150:51 Ja 13 '40 900w

"The beauty of Mr. Marshall's work, and the quality which marks it as a contribution of major importance to the thinking of our times, is the manner in which he treats words and phrases of high emotional context with the realistic detachment one might expect in a discussion of ancient philosophies having no timely significance." J. H. Crider
+ N Y Times p10 My 14 '39 650w

MARTIN, BEN. John Black's body; a story in pictures. unp $1 Vanguard 741 War
39-29460

What war means to John Black told briefly in a series of line drawings and simple text.

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

"The humor is quite sharp, but the story tries to cover almost too much ground, considering the impatient technique of the drawings themselves."
Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 60w

"Even pacifists will not deny that this is a slight simplification of the patterns of history, but there is a tragic amount of truth in it, certainly enough to put us on guard against letting it come wholly true. The whole thing is tremendously clever in idea and execution. Its value, in addition to being provocative of salutary laughter, is as an antidote to any war propaganda that may come hereafter."
+ Christian Century 56:1608 D 27 '39 210w

MARTIN, MRS HELEN (REIMENSNYDER). The ordeal of Minnie Schultz. 282p $2 Appleton-Century 39-2493

Another Pennsylvania Dutch story, its heroine the orphaned half-sister of Henry Schultz and domestic drudge in the household tyrannized over by his second wife Kate. Kate's son by a former husband returns home to practice medicine and rescues Minnie from an unhappy situation.

"Mrs. Martin's story comes to a boil slowly, but the kettle begins to sing when young Dr. Brubaker returns to his native village to practice. At first he accepts Minnie at his mother's appraisal, which is a tribute to his devotion if not his discernment. In the final diagnosis, however, he sees the two women as they are—and as Mrs. Martin's readers knew them to be from the very beginning." Lisle Bell
Books p10 F 12 '39 250w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 F 12 '39 200w

MARTIN, JAMES WALTER. Tax exemptions. See Tax policy league

MARTIN, JOHN JOSEPH. Introduction to the dance. 363p il $3.50 Norton

793.3 Dancing (W) 39-29461

"The book consists of an analytical first part, 'The Dance in Theory,' and a live second part, 'The Dance in Action.' The latter . . . deals with recreational dance, then spectacular dance, chiefly ballet, and then 'expressional' or modern dance. In the latter field Mr. Martin discusses the outstanding talents. A chapter at the end [deals with] the dance in education." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40

"Mr. Martin, dance editor of The New York Times, occupies a position comparable to that occupied by the late André Levinson in Paris. He is an exacting judge, a sympathetic interpreter and a persuasive propagandist. He brings to the service of the art an uncompromising idealism and an unflagging capacity for exhilaration. Both of these he succeeds in making infectious." Lloyd Morris

+ Books p8 D 10 '39 600w

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 30 '39 850w

"It is not a book for careless, or quick, reading, for although the author's style is straightforward his subject is technical and his study erudite. His scholarship and meditation have united, to produce a remarkable blend of comprehensiveness and compression; there is a nugget of some sort on almost every page; and some of his convictions may arouse disagreement, of course. But if it is not easy it is none the less surprisingly fascinating. It is indisputably important in its field." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 D 31 '39 1200w

"John Martin is deeply stirred by the dance; his reactions are warm and energetic, and he represents the type of spectator that every professional dancer longs for. In his faithful reviews in the New York Times, and in his Sunday column, he has developed an unusual facility for writing about the dance in a straightforward and popular style. His published books, on the other hand, have hitherto been laboriously analytical and unsatisfactory because his reasoning has carried him so far afield. 'Introduction to the Dance' combines the lucid style of his reviews with a greater scope than his former books." Emily Gardiner

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 D 30 '39 400w

MARTIN, JOHN STUART. General manpower. 307p maps $2.50 Simon & Schuster

39-5400

The hero of this political satire set in the year 1958 is one J. Orestes Jones; president of General Manpower, Inc. who builds up a force of more than a million super-men, organizes them into a war machine and rents them out as soldiers and laborers.

"Here is imaginative fiction on a large scale, with whole races and nations maneuvered boldly. Readers who warm to time-machine novels about the future of civilization will find his book a worthy volume in the Wellsian library. . . The journalistic enterprise in the book is consistently bright and competent—and that is the essential ingredient of a political fantasy of this nature." William Soskin

+ Books p4 Ja 29 '39 1250w

"Mr. Martin—unlike Huxley, Wells, Edward Bellamy and others of his predecessors in this type of fiction—forgets that the reader likes a good yarn along with the prophecies. His story gets a very slow start, is loaded with exposition and except for the fighting in China and the capture of San Francisco, has not much liveliness." S. C.

— Boston Transcript p1 F 4 '39 250w

New Repub 98:111 Mr 1 '39 100w

"Mr. Martin's faith in current political ideas and current political leaders is strikingly weak. Few articulate men since Swift have been more thoroughly disgusted with the men and theories they have lived among. Like Swift, Mr. Martin has created an elaborate fable in which he expresses himself, but to say that he writes with energy and a wild, freebooting imagination is, on the basis of this novel, to compliment him enough. Half story and half essay, the basic materials mix rather badly." Robert van Gelder

— N Y Times p6 Ja 29 '39 650w

"Here is the raw material for an amusing satire, and some of Mr. Martin's remarks in passing suggest that he could have written one if he had so chosen. But he seems to have a serious nature, and most of his book is given to the campaigns of the General Manpower army in Asia and California—a history which will excite only such readers as can get all steamed up over Edgar Rice Burroughs's warfare on Mars." E. D.

— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 28 '39 220w

"A highly entertaining story of the future. . . Mr Martin is to be congratulated on having written an amusing adventure story. 'General Manpower' from beginning to end maintains a high pitch of interest and action. It is pleasantly fantastic without being too implausible."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 5 '39 470w

"If some of Author Martin's implications were to be taken seriously, democratic readers might well start after him in a posse. But these implications, like the story itself, are content to be arresting. The book, unlike the idea behind it, has lots of bang but little dynamite. Though General Manpower can justly be accused of ingeniously sketching out an ingenious notion, it will not be convicted of undue seriousness, in any court."

Time 33:66 Ja 30 '39 400w

MARTIN, ROBERT FITZ-RANDOLPH. National income in the United States, 1799-1938. See National industrial conference board

MARTIN, THORNTON. Hell on wheels. 290p $2 Penn

39-32488

"This story is as full of action as its title implies, and its wheels are those of the heavy motor trucks that pound along the roads at all hours of the day or night loaded with eggs and artichokes or what have you. It is the saga of the truck-driver's life with its hard driving, long hours, tricks of handling and loading, and dangers from weather and highjackers. The plot is a war between two trucking companies, one honest and wobbling financially, the other crooked and prosperous." N Y Times

"A vivid piece of fiction." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 O 8 '39 300w

Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 140w

"The yarn is lively and absorbing—a modern occupational romance and mystery." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 120w

MARTIN DU GARD, ROGER. The Thibaults; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 871p $3 Viking [15s Lane]

(W) 39-27260

A long chronicle novel dealing with the life of a French bourgeois family in the pre-War years. The original work was published in France in separate volumes from 1922 to 1936. This omnibus volume contains the first six parts of the work; the remainder is promised for publication later.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 12:298 Ja '38

Booklist 35:271 Ap 15 '39

MARTIN DU GARD, ROGER—Continued

"We are bound to recognize in 'The Thibaults' one of the great novels of our time, a work to be put beside Jules Romains's 'Men of Good Will' and Rolland's 'Jean-Christophe,' and that great untranslated series of novels by René Behaine. Martin du Gard may seem meeker than the others; there are no universal conclusions, perhaps, to be drawn from the ever-flowing river of his novel, but the grasp and recognition of life is there and the picture of a time when politics was less than passion and love was more than economic theories." Herbert Gorman

+ Books p3 Ap 9 '39 1200w

Reviewed by Julius Adelberg

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 600w

"One does not feel that M. du Gard writes of sin and disease because he enjoys them. His outlook on life is more compassionate than cynical and most of all that of an impersonal reporter. His characters are modeled with painstaking detail but we do wish that his young people were permitted an occasional healthy, cheerful instinct. The medical scenes are the most graphic, particularly the breathless description of an emergency operation upon a child. If this type of candid camera literature did not confine its reticence to all that is normal or noble, I would be better satisfied to see it gain the Nobel prize." E. V. Wyatt

Commonweal 29:724 Ap 21 '39 500w

" 'The Thibaults' has solid qualities: the characters all possess an exuberant vitality, they are no mere shadowy projections of the author's own sensibilities, but creations in the round, they are real personalities, people we know intimately and live with, at least while we read, and it seems improbable that they will fade from our memory as rapidly as do most of the ephemeral figments of the ordinary novelist's fancy." Wilfrid Gibson

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 24 '39 550w

"The chief service of the Nobel Prize to literature is not to confirm acknowledged excellence. . . A much more vital benefit is to bring before the civilized public some work of the highest value which somehow has missed popular acclaim. This is eminently the case with Roger Martin du Gard. He was not ignored in France; but he never won the popularity, the academic rewards, the obvious or esoteric authority that went to his luckier rivals. In America a translation of the earlier parts of this novel, a few years ago, created absolutely no stir." Albert Guerard

+ Nation 148:380 Ap 1 '39 1000w

"For all its encyclopedic qualities, 'The Thibaults' is not an important book. It is, however, a genuine literary curiosity. Industry and seriousness have been called in to substitute for talent, and the result is a work whose learned obtuseness is, so far as I know, unequaled in fiction. One must go to scholarship to find its match." Mary McCarthy

+ — New Repub 98:354 Ap 26 '39 900w

"Les Thibault is illuminating, varied, subtle, honest and entertaining; but it is not one of those great books which enlarge our horizons and impel us to dragoon our friends into reading them. It contains many isolated scenes and chapters which belong to the world of great fiction, and the whole of La Mort du Père (the final section of the present volume) is magnificent in its sweep and insight. But there are other passages in which the impulse of the narrative is checked and the temperature drops; while here and there the author describes his characters in what appears to me an exaggerated, 'novelish' sort of way." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:463 Mr 25 '39 1000w

" 'The Thibaults' is neither an analytical novel nor a novel of action; it preaches no social thesis. It is the perfectly human document of an epoch. Unaffected by modern literary 'isms,' Roger Martin du Gard steers his even keel in the broad stream of French Naturalism, and readers will find here surcease from the din of contemporary problems and ideologies." Ernest Boyd

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 26 '39 1650w

"There are certain easily pointed out resemblances between 'The Thibaults' and 'Men of Good Will.' . . But the differences are acute. Romains is unrolling a social panorama whose aim is completeness. Martin du Gard paints a picture—broad and inclusive, it is true—of a middle-class French family. Romains seems devoid of moral prejudices and so far his work reveals no underlying moral system. Martin du Gard is obviously affected by the values of that same bourgeois Catholic conservatism whose roots he exposes with such analytical patience. Romains is unquestionably the greater writer, more far-ranging and, in the best sense, more sophisticated. . . Yet Martin du Gard, limited as he may be, is so much less limited than all but a very few contemporary English and American writers that it becomes the duty of serious readers to accord him their whole attention." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:84 Mr 25 '39 600w

Pratt p30 summer '39

"This work, great in both quantity and quality, marks the height of its author's achievement. The first and best of the many cyclic novels popular in France since the war, 'The Thibaults' is superior also to that earlier model, Romain Rolland's 'Jean Christophe.' " Justin O'Brien

+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 Mr 25 '39 1450w

"Since The Thibaults, by its merits and reputation, claims to be judged by the highest standards, one must compare it with, for instance, David Copperfield or War and Peace; and one is then immediately aware of a lack of the variety and incident, the emotional contrasts, which are necessary if a large subject matter is to be explored and animated. . . These criticisms, however, should not conceal how much M. du Gard has achieved. The Thibaults is good enough to demand some explanation why it does not belong to the highest class of fiction; it is the more vulgar, and not the rare, qualities of the great novelists that M. du Gard lacks. His novel will certainly remain as an exceptionally accurate and penetrating picture of the society he describes, and the more fascinating for the foreign reader because French middle-class life is a profound mystery to nearly all who do not belong to it." Goronwy Rees

+ — Spec 162:776 My 5 '39 750w

Reviewed by L. C. Rich

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 1300w

"Unique among French novels, The Thibaults tells a frank, sometimes scandalous story with deceptive innocence, makes the most hackneyed theme of modern fiction—the breakup of a family—fresh, unexpected, unusual."

+ Time 33:62 Ap 3 '39 470w

"It is the soundness of M. du Gard's work, its firm and admirably proportioned realism, that impresses an English reader most. Lucid, disciplined and always humane, M. du Gard explores a solidly bourgeois Parisian milieu in the years before the War with a passion of fidelity and an intellectual discrimination that together constitute the highest degree of artistic tact. . . Nobody can fail to salute the fine perception, the intelligence and humanity of 'The Thibaults,' but nobody can forget for a single page that it is a translation from the French."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 25 '39 750w

MARTINEZ, JOSE LONGINOS. See Longinos Martínez, J.

MARY LOUISE, SISTER, ed. Over the bent world. 777p $4.50 Sheed

808.8 Roman Catholic literature—Collections. Literature—Collections

(W) 39-27599

Collection of poetry and prose selected from the writings of modern Roman Catholic authors. Material is grouped under headings: poetry, satire, biography and history, criticism, essay and miscellaneous, hagiography, foreign influences. Authors are American, English, and continental and include such names as G. K. Chesterton, Sister M. Madeleva, Padraic Colum, D. B. Wyndham-Lewis, Evelyn Waugh, Christopher Dawson, etc. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Gannon
America 61:574 S 23 '39 300w
Booklist 35:377 Jl 15 '39

"None of the selections is doctrinaire, and most are not even doctrinal. The purpose of the book is to show the literature that Catholics are capable of producing. . . Possibly the anthology is too broad in scope. Many of the selections are only snippets which frequently leave the reader with a feeling of dissatisfaction." W. M. Murphy
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 230w

"Upon the whole the prose selections are more satisfactory than those in verse, in which section of the book there are, as it seems to me, both unaccountable inclusions as well as omissions. Some of the best contemporary Catholic poets are not represented at all. . . I add by way of balance that this is a book that would enrich any public or private library. If Sister Mary Louise confesses that the compiling of it has been fun, I may promise that the reading of it will be fun too." J. K. M.
+ — Cath World 149:755 S '39 380w

"From the viewpoint of quality there are enough selections to make this book well worth the price. It supplies a substantial store for occasional summer reading, with absorbing pages to spare." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ Commonweal 30:382 Ag 11 '39 470w

"The book has a soul. It is rather remarkable that one can collect some seventy-five authors writing on various and unrelated subjects and perceive integrality. . . Here is a free unity untouched by coercion or force. If integrality is the sign of living and disintegration the sign of death, then here, it may be said, is the image of a living force in the world." M. E. Walker
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '39 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup ix N 18 '39 50w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Live and Kicking Ned. 253,224p $2.50 Macmillan
(W) 39-27887

A sequel to Dead Ned (Book Review Digest, 1938) combining in one volume the second and third parts of the author's projected trilogy of a young English doctor, convicted murderer and refugee from justice.

Booklist 36:88 N 1 '39

"Though there is a happy and triumphant ending for the man who becomes 'Ned Alive and the bright road clear before me,' Masefield contrives to incorporate nuances of satirical and reflective meaning which suggest he would be more wholesomely occupied as a Homer of adventure than an official poet for his native little island." William Soskin
+ Books p6 N 12 '39 350w

"If you were amongst the number of those who found Dead Ned so engrossing that you rebelled against putting it down unfinished even to meet demands of hunger, fatigue, work or pleasure, you will, of course, be eager to embark on this sequel. Plenty of thrills await you."
+ Cath World 150:369 D '39 150w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 6 '40 850w

"This is a rambling, unconvincing and unsatisfactory book which disappoints the expectations aroused by 'Dead Ned' and whose main excuse is that some sort of a sequel had to be written. There are of course brilliant and powerful descriptive and narrative passages, for Masefield even at his worst is a born writer. But one has an uneasy sense that in some pages the ghost of Rider Haggard took charge of affairs and (still worse!) that in others the pervasive spirit of the creator of Tarzan obtrudes." J. K. Merton
— + Commonweal 31:99 N 17 '39 400w

"Complete mastery of the material, an unfailing flow of invention, and an easy, matter-of-fact, narrative style make of 'Live and Kicking Ned' a first-rate story of adventure." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '39 300w
New Repub 101:242 D 13 '39 50w

"After propaganda and enlightenment, sentimental movies, hack detective stories, newspapers from headlines through sport columns to stock market quotations—after these the clean lusty prose of Masefield in the ancient and honorable craft of story telling should be a delight to men, tired men, who like relaxation in the way of a tale, but demand that it be written by a craftsman and an artist." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p6 O 29 '39 550w

"A grand yarn, written by a man who knows all the ins and outs of the English language."
+ New Yorker 15:85 N 4 '39 40w
Pratt p23 winter '40

"All the scenes on shipboard combine a brooding premonition with a vividness and conviction that recall Defoe. But later we leave the world of Defoe for that of Rider Haggard. And after the hero returns to England . . . the earlier mood of perilous reality is never quite recaptured. Still, the world of Rider Haggard is one of the best of all possible worlds, and if this book does not altogether fulfill the romantic promise of 'Dead Ned,' it remains entertainment of the finest." Basil Davenport
+ Sat R of Lit 21:14 N 4 '39 350w
Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec 163:662 N 10 '39 420w

" 'Live and Kicking Ned' continues and completes the story of 'Dead Ned', and nobody could ask for a more logical progression."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p623 O 28 '39 1000w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Some verses to some Germans. 10p 60c Macmillan
821 39-31550

"The author of 'August, 1914,' now Laureate, addresses a tired but touching and peace-loving poem to the nation which produced Goethe and Beethoven." New Yorker

Books p18 F 4 '40 130w

"A book so small that it took some ingenuity to make it a book at all; 10 pages, to be exact. Yet a great book, in word and spirit. The poet laureate of a nation at war is here no poet of the rolling drums, no maker of war medicine. He reminds 'some Germans'—that is, those who still have ears to hear—of the ties of cultural kinship that bind the two nations together. Masefield is here at his best, both as poet and as citizen."
+ Christian Century 56:1442 N 22 '39 90w
New Yorker 15:56 D 30 '39 30w

MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY. Königsmark. 354p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

Königsmarck, Philip Christopher von, grefve—Fiction. Sophia Dorothea, consort of George I, king of Great Britain—Fiction
(W) 39-2709

The setting of this romantic story is the little German state of Celle in the seventeenth century. Philip Christopher von Königsmark, a Swedish soldier of fortune, and Sophia Dorothea, daughter of the Duke of Celle and married to George Louis of Hanover, are the principal characters.

Booklist 35:174 Ja 15 '39

MASON, A. E. W.—Continued

"'Königsmark' is a first-rate yarn." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 Ja 8 '39 150w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 16 '38 600w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron
N Y Times p6 Ja 8 '39 550w

"Mr. Mason has dressed his tale up with considerable charm."

+ New Yorker 14:54 Ja 7 '39 40w

Pratt p30 summer '39

"This is a historical novel with a genuine flair for the picturesque and the romantic. . . . It is the characters who give body and spirit to the novel; Sophia and Philip, in particular, are presented with a boldness and sureness that make for striking portraiture, and the minor characters share with them this distinction." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ja 7 '39 250w

Discussion by Edward Prime-Stevenson
Sat R of Lit 19:9 F 4 '39 310w

"I should hardly place Königsmark among the author's most enthralling tales; it suffers, I fancy, from the very wealth of its material—too many threads have to be followed, too much information has to be conveyed. Yet it is an interesting book, though the interest may be somewhat broken, and gaps occur, fresh starts are made." Forrest Reid

+ — Spec 161:313 Ag 19 '38 360w

"It is a spirited tale, rhythmical in movement and bold in colouring, as enjoyable a piece of work as any with Mr. A. E. W. Mason's name on the title-page."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p529 Ag 13 '38 750w

MASON, ALPHEUS THOMAS. The Brandeis way; a case study in the workings of democracy. 336p il $3 Princeton univ. press [14s Oxford]

368 Brandeis, Louis Dembitz. Insurance, Life. Savings banks—Insurance department 38-28973

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Lovers of combat will be delighted by this skillfully told tale of a lusty fight. Would-be reformers may find the record of a successful campaign waged against terrific odds somewhat instructive, if they are thoughtful; otherwise an explicit statement of the principles of organization and a description of the tactics necessary for the success of social reform movements will have been wasted. Preaching economists who stay close to their cloisters would do well to take advantage of this opportunity to see why economic reform is effected at such a slow rate." E. B. Dade

+ Am Econ R 29:199 Mr '39 400w

Am Hist R 45:485 Ja '40 20w

"The author indulges in a very detailed enumeration of facts, and, with the attitude of a real lover, he forgets other matters when thinking of his beloved subject. There can be no doubt that the Brandeis way is worthy of study by every economist, social worker, sociologist, and insurance man. However, a really scientific study would need to compare the American way of handling savings-bank insurance with the method of several European countries, e.g., Belgium, which experimented with it both before and after Brandeis. The experience of savings-bank insurance is at once a good and a sad example of the slow progress of even the best ideas." Alfred Manes

+ — Ann Am Acad 203:244 My '39 350w

"The Brandeis Way, although it deals with a law and a lawyer, has no specific legal connotation. Since lawyers to so great an extent, however, continue to make and administer our law, this clinical study of the accomplishment of a social reform should be of great interest to them all. . . . As in all clinical studies the details in this book occasionally swamp the narrative. But in the main the author has presented an interesting, often a dramatic, story." O. K. Fraenkel

+ Columbia Law R 39:320 F '39 900w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:7 Ap '39 310w

"Whatever may be thought of Professor Mason's analysis and interpretation, it is impossible to deny that he has done an excellent job in arranging and presenting a mass of extremely interesting material illustrating the modus operandi of American law-making. In the savings bank insurance fight here in Massachusetts, Mr. Brandeis showed himself to be a master lobbyist in the best sense of the word. Even if one disagrees with Mr. Brandeis on the question of objectives, there is still a great deal to be learned from watching him in action. And we have to thank Professor Mason for giving us an unrivaled opportunity to do just that." P. M. Sweezy

Harvard Law R 52:1025 Ap '39 650w

"The book might have been more compact and readable if Dr. Mason had been able to keep his admiration for Louis D. Brandeis somewhat more in the background; but this admiration is well justified by the part Brandeis took in the agitation." A. G. Hart

+ — J Pol Econ 47:284 Ap '39 480w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 148:592 My 20 '39 390w

"This book will repay as careful a reading as any one can give it. It is not the swan song of a dying idealism but a challenge to the future. Mr. Mason has caught the spirit of a man whose thought, at the age of 82, is still young and vigorous." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p15 Je 4 '39 900w

Reviewed by B. H. Beckhart
Pol Sci Q 54:268 Je '39 1050w

MASON, BERNARD STERLING. Woodcraft; il. by Frederic H. Kock. 580p $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.54 Camping. Handicraft. Indians of North America—Art (W) 39-19990

The first chapters deal with woodcraft as it is used by campers—what tents are best and how to build substitute shelters, how to preserve food and how to carry it, how to make a fire under various conditions, etc. Later chapters contain instructions for fashioning tools, gadgets, articles made of bark, buckskin, horn, feathers, etc. Index.

Booklist 36:4 S '39

Christian Century 56:904 Jl 19 '39 40w

"Not only will the book prove a valuable find for Boy and Girl Scouts eager to learn the woodland arts, but for all interested in the ways of the American Indian. The link of preserving for present-day use the handicrafts and woodlore of the Indians has been done with such understanding simplicity that it cannot fail to count in the success of the whole as a well-grounded source book." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 31 '39 280w

Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 40w

"With this guide on hand even a novice can learn to live in comfort in the woods." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:304 S '39 60w

J Home Econ 31:716 D '39 30w

MASON, GREGORY. Remember the Maine [Il. with pictures by William Glackens]. 312p map $3 Holt

973.89 U.S.—History—War of 1898 (W) 39-6465

"The book opens by telling how the news of the Maine explosion was received in a Boston household, recaptures much of the surrounding conversation and some of the then existing emotion, and from that point rambles on into an informal history of the Spanish War. A good deal of attention is devoted to the difference between the actual course of events and the stories of the newspaper correspondents, and quite a bit to the correspondents themselves." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Mason's book is pleasant and superficial. It tells us nothing that we do not already know from Millis and from Finley Peter Dunne, and the Mark Sullivan technique of newspaper background does little to illuminate the story. There are some errors of judgment, and some of fact." H. S. Commager

Books p10 Mr 5 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p5 Mr 12 '39 1500w

New Yorker 15:79 Mr 4 '39 60w

"All told it is a work which reads easily, but would read better if 'The Mauve Decade' and 'The Martial Spirit' had not been written. It describes the progress of the burlesque and tragic conflict in a manner reminiscent of the latter, and annotates this account with running comment on handlebar moustaches and bicycles built for two after the style of the former; and it is written with something less than the skill of either." F. P.

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 4 '39 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 800w

Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

MASON, MIRIAM E. O happy day! il. by Mabel J. Woodbury. 216p $1.75 Stokes

39-22581

A story of life on an Ohio farm during Civil war days. The heroine is ten-year-old Margaret Wilhelmina (Miney for short), who takes great pride in helping mother but gets into mischief, too.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

"There is a tendency to repeat which leaves the impression that the author is writing down to her readers. This does not mar the story too much as the characters are strong enough to carry the interest. The historical background is excellent. Very suitable sketches by Mabel J. Woodbury add to the pleasure of the reader." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 150w

"Miney is one of the most indomitable heroines in print and so well has the author drawn her that one is convinced she never had any idea how funny she was. Her talents were worthy of greater scope and the reader is sure that in later life they got it, but the Ohio farm, with its endless chores, its round of cooking and dishwashing and guests proved a fine arena for her first efforts." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 O 1 '39 400w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, pseud). The Singapore exile murders. 271p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-23192

Detective story.

"New developments in Singapore lead to one of Mr. Mason's snappiest climaxes. The scene is highly picturesque, as in most of this author's works." Will Cuppy

Books p9 Je 11 '39 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p7 Je 11 '39 160w

"Top-notch thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 10 '39 40w

Time 34:56 Jl 3 '39 30w

MASSE, HENRI. Islam; tr. from the French by Halide Edib. 270p $2.50 Putnam

297 Mohammedanism 39-14581

"Beginning with a description of the pre-Mohammedan Arabian world, sketching briefly the life of the prophet, Professor Massé not only traces but explains both the expansion of the Moslem empire and the foundation and development of the Islamic faith; and he carries his survey of 'the historical evolution of Islam' through the eighteenth-century Wahhabite movement and the nineteenth-century doctrines of Babism and Bahaism, and ends his book with a question as to the future of the Moslem religion." (N Y Times) Index.

"A work that satisfies the general reader but disappoints the scholar." P. K. Hitti

Am Hist R 45:187 O '39 70w

Foreign Affairs 17:806 Jl '39 20w

"The comprehensiveness of such a relatively brief survey as this is at once the strength and the weakness of 'Islam.' The book is too crowded to be easy reading. Sometimes, too, the translation lacks smoothness. To a reader who knows nothing of Mohammedanism—the creed or the empire—these chapters will yield a mass of information at the price of very careful study. As an addition to the some knowledge already acquired, or an introduction to further reading, Professor Massé's book is excellent."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 1 '39 460w

Times [London] Lit Sup p721 D 9 '39 850w

MASTELLER, KENNETH C. How to avoid financial tangles [discussion of elementary legal relationships for the layman]. 160p pa $1 Am. inst. for economic research

332 Finance. Investments. Home economics

39-1378

"Chapters on kinds of property, joint ownership, investments and income, wills and trusts, suggestions for life insurance policyholders, automobile and fire insurance, taxes, and help for the widow." Am Econ R

Am Econ R 29:156 Mr '39 30w

"An unpretentious but useful manual." Elizabeth Donnan

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 120w

"Mr. Masteller's style of writing is extremely lucid and adds considerably to the value of the book."

+ Management R 27:429 D '38 160w

MASTERMAN, WALTER S. The secret of the downs. 255p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Jarrolds]

39-1038

Detective story.

Booklist 35:206 F 15 '39

"Knock-kneed in manner, but creepy." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ja 1 '39 240w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 7 '39 150w

"The solution given at the end of the story is so sketchy as to be almost worthless. Readers of mystery stories like to know not only who did the dirty work but how it was done." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p11 Ja 1 '39 130w

"Fatal Nessus-shirt, haunted barrows, buried Spanish treasure, some pretty poor comedy at start, followed by satisfactory thrills. Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ja 7 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 22 '39 170w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. More people. 192p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton-Century

811 (W) 39-21098

A further collection of character studies in verse by the author of Spoon River Anthology.

"'More People' presents some interesting characters; some lines of true poetic beauty; the rest fails to hold the attention. Mr. Masters rambles, ruminates, and, at times, fails to clarify his intent. I suppose the most regrettable part of the book is its bad craftsmanship." J. R.

MASTERS, E. L.—Continued

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '39 250w

"Masters is at one with his material, for one cannot divide the poet from the form, both in the conflict of design and the attenuation of his subject matter with a linear perspective. With blunt metaphor and phrasing, facile and accurate, he expresses to the mind, rather than to the sense, the qualities of the senses—a sort of elucidation of detail in an ordered frieze. Yet unlike Conrad Aiken, a specialist in the poetry of the psyche, . . Masters senses that humanity must accept the frenzied formulas of living, but must mould these iron patterns into a personal salvation." Harry Roskolenko

+ Poetry 55:211 Ja '40 800w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins

Spec 163:878 D 15 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p644 N 4 '39 330w

MASTERS, ROBERT W., and MASTERS, MRS LILLIAN DECKER. The curtain rises; plays to produce; il. drawn by Charles Vance. 362p $1.80 Heath

792 Amateur theatricals. Dramas—Collections (W) 38-31005

"A collection of non-royalty plays with complete production notes on staging, directing, and acting, designed especially for high school and amateur dramatic groups." (Subtitle) Of the six plays included, three are one-act in length. Of the other three one is a three-act farce, Convention Go Hang! and the other two are shortened versions of As You Like It and She Stoops to Conquer.

Booklist 35:114 D 1 '38

"Definitely in the 'lifesaver' class is another book of dramatics, with plays and instruction directly aimed at practical production. In this volume the teacher harassed by inexperience, overwork, lack of equipment, or by all three, will find a complete, self-sufficient dramatic library. It is the kind of book the pages of which will be dog-eared from constant reference. . . Every word has been written from the practical outlook, even to the point of giving a day-by-day schedule of rehearsals, with exact information as to what should be done at each meeting and how long it should last." Louis Travers

+ School R 47:155 F '39 300w

MATHER, FRANK JEWETT. Western European painting of the renaissance. 873p il $6 Holt

759 Painting. Art, Renaissance 40-3140

Traces the development of painting in Germany, France, the Low Countries, and Spain from the late Gothic fifteenth century to the national styles of the seventeenth. There is an introductory essay on the fundamental differences between the Renaissance in Italy and in the rest of Europe. The volume has some 400 illustrations. Index.

"Professor Mather has attacked the problem with confidence and inexhaustible patience, and on the whole, has acquitted himself admirably. His scholarship is above reproach; he is thoroughly at home in matters of technique, and he has covered the field from top to bottom. . . This book is an elaborate handbook, bursting with facts, packed with historical information, agreeable, for the most part, in its point of view—a book of reference, the best of its kind." Thomas Craven

+ Books p4 Ja 14 '40 950w

"Professor Mather has performed a Herculean labor and has proven himself not only a master of synthesis but also a master of logical penetration and common sense." F. H. Taylor

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 27 '40 370w

"Here is a book on art by a scholar which is simple enough for the man in the street. It is an unusual combination. The technical words of so many art books frighten the layman, but Mr. Mather talks of art in the same language he might apply to anything else. Thus it is a fine book for the non-artist to buy along with one of the volumes of colored reproductions of paintings so popular this year. I do not mean to infer that Mr. Mather's book lacks illustrations, for it has over four hundred small ones but rather that the owners of books of colored pictures might gain a great deal from his text." M. A. Ryerson

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 14 '40 750w

"It is all put together in a way which testifies to long years of practice in presenting the material through the graphic analysis, laced with sprightly anecdote, which best sticks in the mind of the student. The reader will not wish to scamp one of the 784 pages, for fear of missing such amusing thumb-nail sketches as those of Jan Scorel or Fernandez Navarrete, or of failing to pick up the portable phrases which occur on page after page." R. W. Kennedy

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 D 30 '39 700w

"While Prof Mather's book might have been more valuable if he had attempted more, or attempted less, the range of his study and experience and the weight of his critical impressions make the book an attractive and suggestive guide."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 280w

MATHEW, DAVID. The Jacobean age. 354p il $5 (15s) Longmans

942.06 Great Britain—History—Stuarts, 1603-1714. Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Social life and customs. Roman Catholics in England 39-18153

This scholarly book, based on an exhaustive study of original documents—the unpublished Hatfield House manuscripts, the Wardour manuscripts, and letters and memoirs of people who came within the range of Jacobean politics, is an interpretation of an age and a picture of the great families of the early Stuart period. Bibliography. Index.

"The very elaborateness of Mr. Mathew's studied style occasionally betrays him, as when he is guilty of the unhappy figure of speech: 'impregnated by an outlook.' But these are small blemishes upon a thoughtful and beautiful book." S. C. Chew

+ — Books p22 Mr 12 '39 800w

Cath World 149:633 Ag '39 440w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor

Commonweal 29:697 Ap 14 '39 310w

"The Jacobean Age is a learned and illuminating book." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:920 D 3 '38 1350w

"The style, allusive, picturesque, quietly satirical, gives the work unusual charm. It echoes Lytton Strachey. The artistic quality of the book, however, will not make it meaningful to any reader who does not possess a thorough factual knowledge of Jacobean England to serve as a background and as a corrective." D. A. Roberts

+ — N Y Times p26 Ap 30 '39 1100w

Discussion by D. A. Roberts

N Y Times p20 Je 25 '39 1000w

"Dr. Mathew's new book is not only a work of scholarship and discernment, as we should expect, but of a subtlety and sensitiveness all its own, and with a very original approach to its subject. I do not know another book with quite this angle of vision on the past; it is a study of historical atmosphere—and there is such a thing—almost, one may say, a study of manner and conduct; and by this approach it gives one something of the inner spirit of an age, in a way which few others have attempted, let alone succeeded in doing. . . What is important is that Dr. Mathew has defined for us the character of that society, so luxuriant, so variegated and extravagant—in a way that inevitably commands our assent. With the hand of an artist as well as a historian, he has penetrated into the spirit of that age." A. L. Rowse

+ Spec 161:sup 16 N 18 '38 550w

"Dr. Mathew has given us a book which is at once a piece of original scholarship and a work of art. . . It displays a superb width of reading, an even rarer faculty of coordination. . . Dr. Mathew's grasp of historicity is precise, his appreciation is salt."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p67 F 4 '39 550w

MATHEWS, JOSEPH JAMES. Egypt and the formation of the Anglo-French entente of 1904. 141p $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press [7s Oxford]

962 Egypt—Politics and government. Great Britain—Foreign relations—France. France—Foreign relations—Great Britain 39-9387

"Summarizes the negotiations which preceded the conclusion of the Anglo-French treaty of April, 1904, and analyzes the reception of it in England and abroad. Apart from Chapter I, which is devoted to a sketch of 'The Difficult Position of Great Britain in Egypt,' the discussion is divided fairly evenly between the problems presented by Egypt and those connected with Morocco. The monograph contains much information from British, French, and German diplomatic documents." (Am Pol Sci R) The author is associate professor of history, University of Mississippi. Bibliography. Index.

"Admirable monograph. . . It is based largely on documentary material most of which has seen the light of day in the postwar period as well as on contemporary newspapers which have not been adequately exploited in the past, and consequently it renders earlier studies obsolete." L. J. Ragatz
+ Am Hist R 45:442 Ja '40 150w

"[The book] will be found useful by students of international relations in the crowded years at the opening of the present century, although they may wish that the author had given a fuller account of the changes in the administration of Egypt which were the direct result of the Anglo-French treaty." Paul Knaplund
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:544 Je '39 90w

MATHIEWS, FRANKLIN K., ed. The Boy scouts book of indoor hobby trails; pub. for the Boy scouts of America. 276p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

790 Hobbies (W) 39-5099

Chapters on various hobbies, each written by an authority on the subject. Among the subjects studied are: ventriloquism; magic; staging plays; basketball; boxing; how to build and fly a model glider; getting out a newspaper; amateur radio; building birdhouses; reading; etc.

Booklist 35:278 Ap 15 '39

"Of necessity much of the material is too brief to be of great value to anyone but a mere beginner. Some of the material is definitely useful, however. Dr. West's thirty-five page annotated list of books for recreational reading is excellent. The value of the book lies in a stimulating quality which stirs interest in many subjects. Purchase will depend on the number of books of this inclusive type already in the library. Useful for sixth-ninth grades." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 64:614 Ag '39 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup il D 16 '39 70w

MATISSE, HENRI. Matisse, by Jean Cassou; a collection of paintings. (Masters of colors ser) 60p $1.48 Tudor

759.4 Paintings, French 39-22600

"In addition to the twenty-four plates which reproduce works of various dates between 1889 and 1938, eleven pen drawings are reproduced in the text, and an eloquent and often subtle essay by M. Jean Cassou." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Ashton Sanborn
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 12 '39 250w

"The brief critical text by Jean Cassou, assistant curator of the Musée du Luxembourg, is forthright in its admiration. However, if appreciative evaluations tend at times to appear a little over-emphatic, the qualities discussed are recognized at once as vital elements in Matisse's work. . . The two dozen color plates seem exceptional in quality. Had dates been attached to the plates, it would have been easier for the reader to follow the pictorial survey." E. A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p22 D 10 '39 120w

"No doubt M. Matisse's pictures are comparatively easy to reproduce, largely because he uses very thin paint. . . But even so it is surprising that such very good reproductions, in which one can appreciate almost every refinement of M. Matisse's elusively constructive colour, should be obtainable at so reasonable a price."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p468 Ag 5 '39 220w

MATLIN, DAVID R. Growing plants without soil; the A.B.C. of plant chemiculture (soilless agriculture, chemiculture, water culture, hydroponics, tank farming, sand culture) including plant growth hormones and their use. 139p il $2 Chemical pub. co.

631.58 Plants—Soilless culture (W) 39-17183

Study of the new science of soilless agriculture, or chemiculture. The author has been working on soilless plant growth for some years in the Belmont high school in Los Angeles, has created his own formulas, and from his own experiences has produced this book on the new method of growing plants. Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39

"To any gardener it will open the door to new and fascinating methods that give great promise."
+ Christian Century 56:857 Jl 5 '39 90w
Christian Science Monitor p13 N 24 '39 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:45 Jl '39

"The book is of interest to the amateur and professional gardener alike and to the plant chemist as well. There are helpful suggestions for those interested in the production of new or revised formulas and for testing chemical substances for the presence of ions of common metals. . . Every modern gardener, whether or not he be a soilless plant growth enthusiast, will want to read this book with care." F. F. Rockwell
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 13 '39 260w

MATSCHAT, MRS CECILE (HULSE). Seven grass huts. 281p il maps $3 Farrar

918 South America—Description and travel. Central America—Description and travel (W) 39-27600

The seven grass huts were the seven temporary homes which the author established in the Central and South American jungles, where she went as a bride, to accompany her engineer husband. The account of her adventures is humorously told whether she is crossing a frail jungle bridge to discover a seventeen-foot snake stretched out in her path, or rescuing a German scientist from an unintentional visit to a questionable section of Bahia.

Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39

"Lurid? But not luridly told. A light touch, accurate data and a sense of humor keep all in proportion. If one is going to traipse about the jungle one probably is going to happen on adventure, now and again. The professional adventure hunter would tell this story at a

MATSCHAT, CECILE—Continued
tense pitch, but Mrs. Matschat tells of the life and country because she loves it, not to thrill you. The thrills are no more of the story than the laughter and the wonder of masses of orchids, dawn in the Andes or on the Amazon. All are part of a whole and life is like that when you are the wife of a roving engineer." M. C. Hubbard
+ Books p5 Jl 2 '39 950w

"This is a frequently charming account. . . The narrative is sometimes held up by pedagogic digressions into botany and zoology and at other times by pedestrian childhood recollections. There is, however, a wealth of interesting, grisly and amusing incident largely generated by the treacherous fauna of the jungle." Jean Stafford
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"In spite of many vicissitudes the jungle has 'got' Mrs. Matschat. . . She makes a reader want to go with her, to be initiated into jungle mystery and beauty. And that—in view of her convincing relations of jungle cruelty—is no mean achievement." T. R. Ybarra
N Y Times p4 Je 25 '39 1050w
New Yorker 15:92 Je 17 '39 40w

"What makes 'Seven Grass Huts' something less than a good book is that the author seems continually to overexert herself in the effort to squeeze every last drop of drama out of her material. Many attractive photographs show the types of country, people, animals, and plants that formed the background of the adventures, and pen-sketches by the author illustrate the adventures themselves." L. J. H., Jr.
Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 1 '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 35:165 O '39

MATTHEWS, MARGARET (BRYAN) (MRS WALTER ROBERT MATTHEWS) (SUSAN GOODYEAR, pseud). Such harmony. 375p $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Chatto]
(W) 39-27147

The scene is a rural parish in western England. The story is of two sisters, Catherine, the older, married to the rector, and Rachel, who at forty is still unmarried. During extensive reconstruction work on the beautiful ancient roof of the church, Rachel acts as secretary to her brother-in-law. Gossip and jealousy stir up difficulties which are not settled until Rachel decides to marry the London architect who has charge of the work on the church.

Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p10 Mr 12 '39 460w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 90w

"The whole novel is characterized by a sure and quiet skill which is refreshing in this day of blatant attempts at virtuosity."
+ Christian Century 56:926 Jl 26 '39 110w

"The story itself isn't much, but the characterizations of the two sisters who are the main figures of the story are excellently done. Nice quiet reading." E. S. H.
+ Churchman 153:35 Jl '39 50w
Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p7 N 11 '38 440w

"It is a story that shows, through poignant situations and in language that fits each occasion with exactitude, how people torture or delight each other and how inescapably they are bound and imprisoned by the limitations and through the characters of others. It is, in short, a story whose spirituality is served up on a platter of sound and wholesome common sense. 'Such Harmony' holds the attention as fixedly and as easily as good drama because, in essence, it is drama rather than straight narrative." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 5 '39 900w
New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 30w

"The novel is well written, with a pleasant leaven of humour." Forrest Reid
Spec 161:1100 D 23 '38 270w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 440w

"The atmosphere of the village, the background of church people, the daily activities, conversations and hostile encounters are admirably reproduced, without satire or an overdose of triviality. The narrative runs quietly, the characters disclose themselves naturally and there is a pleasant touch of humour in Judy. . . The novel is a very well done piece of work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p753 N 26 '38 220w
Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

MATTHEWS, WALTER ROBERT. Christ. 149p $2 Macmillan [5s Blackie & son]
232 Jesus Christ—Teaching

This volume is one of a series in which the teachings of great men are expounded, objectively and without criticism and advocacy. The author has therefore attempted to write in a detached manner concerning the Christ but acknowledges it to be an impossible feat for one who cannot regard Jesus as merely a teacher.

"The dean of St. Paul's attempts—and, so far as is humanly possible, accomplishes—the almost impossible task of compressing into one small book a rich and well rounded discussion of the person and message of Jesus, the sources of our knowledge of his teachings, and his relation to the church and to society. Ministers and thoughtful laymen will find it highly rewarding."
+ Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 60w
Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 153:17 O 15 '39 230w
Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken
Living Church 101:5 D 6 '39 40w

"Whether the Dean of St. Paul's is dealing with the theories of the Form Critics (for whom, incidentally, he has but little use) or with the intricate problems created by such a question as the meaning to be attached to the term Son of Man or by the attitude displayed by Our Lord over the vexed question of Divorce he knows perfectly well where he himself stands. At the same time he knows with equal certainty where other scholars differ from him. Indeed, not the least among the numerous merits which this book possesses is the attention paid throughout to the contributions made by some of the best and most recent authorities."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p212 Ap 15 '39 700w

MATTHEWS, WILLIAM HENRY. Adventures in giving. 252p $2.50 Dodd
B or 92 Social work 39-12305

Autobiography of a social worker who after a short term as a minister began his life work as head of boys' club organization in Pittsburgh. Later he spent a year investigating working conditions in the steel industry on behalf of a committee of shareholders in the U.S. Steel company. For a good many years since then he has been doing work in New York City, lately in connection with state and government relief.

Booklist 35:364 Jl 1 '39
Boston Transcript p3 Je 10 '39 110w
Christian Century 56:644 My 17 '39 70w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 24 '39 650w
Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 153:17 O 15 '39 120w

" 'Adventures in Giving' is excellent both as a personal and as a social document." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p10 My 21 '39 1250w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 1700w

"'Adventures in Giving' should and will be read by every social worker in the country, but in addition it should be read by the thousands of men and women who contribute so generously each year to our manifold philanthropic activities. It will shed a new light of meaning on their gifts." Edward Streeter

+ Survey 75:194 Je '39 750w

MATTHEWS-NORTHRUP new international atlas and illustrated gazetteer, 1938; with new five-color maps giving a three-dimensional effect, latest population figures, statistical information, many unusual features and complete indexes. 264p $1.89 1938 Blue ribbon bks.

912 Atlases (W)

"This is a trade edition of the Book of the Universe, c1937, reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1938 [Book Review Digest, 1938]. The 1938 reprint has been slightly revised in accordance with recent political changes in Central Europe." Subscription Bks Bul

Subscription Bks Bul 10:34 Jl '39 40w

MAUCLAIR, CAMILLE. Turner. See Turner, J. M. W.

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Christmas holiday. 314p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Heinemann]

(W) 39-27924

Charley Mason, a nice young Englishman from an ultra-respectable family, goes to Paris for his Christmas holiday, ostensibly to see the new pictures and to hear some good music. But thru his friendship with an embittered journalist his time is chiefly taken up with seeing the underside of life. In the end he returns to his comfortable home, to the comfortable job awaiting him, but he knows "the bottom has fallen out of his world."

"I like Christmas Holiday for its keen observation, for its contrast in character, and for its English of almost Gallic precision. But I miss in it the feeling and the compulsion which make Of Human Bondage much the better book." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic D '39 350w

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

"Most of Mr. Maugham's original intent as implied in the characters of Charley and Simon is pointed for the reader in a series of speeches by Simon and the girl, Lydia. . . But the didactic tone of these speeches and the argumentation surrounding them suggest that Mr. Maugham himself realized that he did not make his ambitious purpose implicit in his story. Nevertheless, the sprightly incident, the adroit manipulation of people and the excellence of Mr. Maugham's satirical thrusts in this novel make it a thoroughly enjoyable experience." William Soskin

+ — Books p5 O 22 '39 1150w

"Mr. Maugham's story is surprisingly convincing. . . The writer's psychological intimacy with his characters is profound, even though he exhibits it in an indirect manner. For those who want something more than a story, there is Mr. Maugham's humanist philosophy. It is as cool and rational as his style is clear and fastidious." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 21 '39 900w

"It must be admitted that on the whole the book, clever and suggestive as it is, lacks something of that memorable quality, that dry intensity, characteristic of Maugham's best work. It will be read with interest and pleasure, though perhaps not with unrestrained enthusiasm. I suppose the trouble is that it does not quite leave the reader with the feeling that the bottom has dropped out of his world, and he rather expects that it should. Hence there always remains a certain hampering distance." L. A. MacKay

+ — Canadian Forum 19:27 Ap '39 500w

Cath World 150:635 F '40 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

Reviewed by F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 31:121 N 24 '39 300w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 102:260 D '39 750w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '39 500w

"Mr. Maugham is not at his best in this journal of young Charley Mason's week in Paris. . . Charley learns a good many things about life and art that he has never even suspected before, but he learns it entirely by hearing Simon and Lydia talk, and when they start talking they knock off several pages at a clip, take a deep breath and dive right in again: speeches that are virtually little stories in themselves and sound much too theatrical to be convincing."

— Nation 149:448 O 21 '39 220w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson

New Repub 101:21 N 8 '39 450w

"As an entertainment (apart from some curious lapses of style) Christmas Holiday can be recommended; but its implicit moral is suspect." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 17:212 F 11 '39 800w

"Mr. Maugham makes Charley the butt of his irony, makes the Russian girl expose what seems to be Charley's lack of taste in pictures and music, makes Simon bedazzle him with dialectics; but Charley is nobody's fool. If the bottom has been knocked out of his world, he has at least the knowledge of a reasonable kind of world to remake. It is an unsettling tale, as Maugham's are likely to be despite their suavity, a specific though indirect comment on the character of the world today. And while it is as brilliant as his other novels it is more thoughtful, more timely, more necessary to read." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p6 O 22 '39 1000w

"Mr. Maugham has taken down from the shelf a collection of soundly weathered stock types and situations and arranged them with that ingenuity of which he is past master. The net effect of the elaborate arrangement, however, is a rousing anticlimax. All of which does not prevent 'Christmas Holiday' from being good reading—unless you're searching for that timely and penetrating social study discoverable only on the jacket." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 15:91 O 21 '39 1350w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"First of all, it must be said without quibbling reservations that 'Christmas Holiday' is a first-rate novel, almost the best of the fifteen novels Somerset Maugham has written during the past forty-two years. It lacks the intense sincerity, the sweep, the autobiographical power of 'Of Human Bondage,' but is its superior in form and style." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 20:10 O 21 '39 550w

Reviewed by Evelyn Waugh

Spec 162:274 F 17 '39 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 29 '39 700w

Time 34:72 O 30 '39 50w

"It is a faintly surprising novel from Mr. Maugham's hand. His great gifts are evident all through. Though the indirect and fragmentary style of construction is not wholly suited to a work of this degree of psychological intimacy, the narrative has immense (and deceptive) ease. . . Where Mr. Maugham disappoints is in the exoticism with which he illustrates a philosophy, sometimes hovering on the edge of cynicism but never tumbling over, that is cool, rational, and essentially humanist."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 4 '39 500w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 29:x winter '40 200w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Princess September and the nightingale; il. by Richard C. Jones. [26p] $2.50 Oxford 39-27811

Sophisticated fairy tale about the nightingale which belonged to the ninth daughter of the King of Siam, and brought good luck to her, but not to her eight envious sisters.

Booklist 36:76 O 15 '39

"When this story appeared in 'The Gentleman in the Parlour: a Record of a Journey From Rangoon to Haiphong,' Richard C. Jones wanted to give it illustrations worthy of this so charming a bit of Siamoiserie. He has now provided precisely the right pictures, large and small, brilliant in color, delicately humorous in design, and one of the most decorative picture books of the season results." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 12 '39 320w

Cath World 150:377 D '39 50w

"There are many modern, quite sophisticated touches of humor in the slight story. . . The striking pictures, with their Oriental influence, fit the book for special collections rather than for everyday use." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:297 S '39 80w

"The characters in the story are real personalities, but its subtleties and humor make it definitely of interest to adults rather than children. The format is outstanding. Richard C. Jones has illustrated the story with colorful pictures in conventional design. The price will make it expensive to buy for circulation, but it is recommended for the distinctive book collections of large libraries." E. G. Mullan

Library J 64:713 S 15 '39 100w

"It is neatly told, but I don't think it has quite the true fairy-tale quality which takes a child into a make-believe world, and its humor is a sophisticated humor at which children do not laugh. For this it is hardly fair to blame Mr. Maugham, who wrote the story for his own amusement during an attack of malaria and probably never dreamed a child would ever read it." K. S. W.

New Yorker 15:85 N 25 '39 100w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 60w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET, ed. Tellers of tales. 1526p $3.75 Doubleday
(W) 39-20438

Anthology of one hundred short stories selected by Mr Maugham from the literatures of the United States, Great Britain, France, Russia, and Germany. There is a long introduction by the editor.

Booklist 36:9 S '39

"A superb anthology. . . Tolerant as to dimensions, Mr. Maugham includes a story as long as Conrad's 'Typhoon,' and others nearly as long, and so on down to one as short as Mary Austin's 'Papago Wedding.' Though I thought of myself as being fairly familiar with the best short stories, I found that at least a third of those in this volume I had never read before. Probably no one but Mr. Maugham has read them all. I recommend the volume without reservation. The only exception anybody could take to it is that it contains no story by Mr. Maugham himself."

+ Books p17 Je 25 '39 800w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Boston Transcript p1 Je 24 '39 180w

New Repub 101:213 D 6 '39 30w

"Sourly critical, chilly but alert Mr. Maugham has looked over the field of the short story and made a fine catch. Also, despite the grand spaciousness of this book, the mark of Maugham is on most of it; the personality of the anthologist tightens the collection into a whole." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 2 '39 1150w

"The long introduction is full of sense, taste, and easy learning. Add this to your anthology shelves."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 24 '39 40w

Pratt p24 winter '40

"Probably the best one-volume anthology of short stories ever published. The selection is made by a master of this particular literary form, who has written an informative and readable introduction." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Je 24 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

MAULE, FRANCES. Your next job; how to get it and hold it. 255p $2 Funk

371.425 Occupations. Applications for positions (W) 39-27991

The author insists that getting the right job does not depend on luck or pull, but in knowing what one wants and whether one is fitted for it. Having established this point, in further chapters she points out the need of tact, of a right mental attitude, of the ability to say "No," and emotional and physical health, not only in getting a job but in keeping it. The book is primarily addressed to women.

Booklist 36:125 D 1 '39

Books p24 O 29 '39 90w

MAURER, JAMES HUDSON. It can be done. 374p il $3 Rand school

B or 92 Socialism. Labor and laboring classes—Pennsylvania 39-321

Autobiography of a socialist, for fifty years a leader in the labor movement and for sixteen years president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. Index.

Booklist 35:188 F 1 '39

Reviewed by R. C. Feld

Books p16 Mr 12 '39 1000w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 500w

Reviewed by R. R. R. Brooks

Nation 149:252 S 2 '39 400w

"Full of hope and militant class-consciousness, and written with humor and deep feeling. The record of labor's struggle for fifty years, culminating in an intelligent discussion of democracy and dictatorship. A 'must' in every labor library."

+ New Repub 97:352 Ja 25 '39 40w

"When the history of humanistic democracy in America is written, Jim Maurer's review of his years will serve as a guide and a source-book." C. A. Beard

New Repub 98:81 F 22 '39 650w

"This book is not only a personal history, but a moving picture of life and personalities and events in Pennsylvania, and the country, and on occasion, the world. Maurer a radical? He sounds more like a good old-fashioned American, on the side of the rights of man." R. G. Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 6 '39 170w

"Mr Maurer of course is one-sided in some of his views, and extreme in others, and his book also includes many inconsequential elements, but to read these pages is to see clearly why certain radical leaders rise and why they gain a following. With all its extremes, the volume is not only a saga of labor but another American success story, showing how a boy from the humblest surroundings rose to make his place in the world."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 23 '39 300w

MAURY, RICHARD. The saga of Cimba; with drawings by the author. 254p map $2.50 Harcourt

910.4 Cimba (schooner). Voyages and travels 39-27200

An account of the author's voyages in a 35-foot schooner, from Nova Scotia to the South Sea islands.

Booklist 35:250 Ap 1 '39

"Richard Maury shows himself to be passionately in love with the sea and ships, and tells a sensitive story of the Cimba's voyage, of landfalls and islands, of magic ocean days, of human contacts and of the unfortunate disaster which brought the cruise to a close. One could have stood a little more about the voyage and a little less of meditation and philosophy. But it seems to be the tendency among ocean cruisers to wax pretty flowery in their accounts." Lincoln Colcord

+ — Books p24 Ap 2 '39 950w

"In a language which is nautical, but not beyond the landlubber's understanding Maury has written a book that can take its place among the best stories of the sea. Drawings by the author also have the flavor of the sea. And, leaving the story of the islands to others who have gone adventuring in the Southwestern Pacific, Richard Maury has portrayed the ordinary routine of life aboard in a fashion that makes these pages glow and sparkle." P. H. Williams

+ Commonweal 29:643 Mr 31 '39 240w

"Richard Maury's narrative of his two-year voyage on his little schooner is not just another adventure story but a book with a real quality of strength and simplicity, and a real sense of the sea. . . Richard Maury writes as if he himself were a part of his ship, and there is a spare, taut beauty, a stinging intensity, a fine exhilaration, in this saga of wind and wave."

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 12 '39 440w

"Superior adventure, whose spirit recalls that of the books of Anne Lindbergh."

+ New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 100w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 17 '39 290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 28 '39 500w

MAVERICK, MAURY. In blood and ink. 282p map pa 75c; (Starling press bk) $2.50 Modern age

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history. U.S. Constitution. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-27603

The mayor of San Antonio comments on the birth of the Constitution of the United States, and insists that it is much more alive today than Americans realize. Index.

Booklist 35:381 Jl 15 '39

"Maverick is excited about his re-discoveries of America's past and vitally concerned about America's present. Perhaps enthusiasm is a better word for it than excitement, for there is nothing febrile in his approach. He succeeds in imparting this enthusiasm and concern to the reader by establishing close contact with him at the outset and maintaining throughout the feeling that author and reader have embarked together on a co-operative venture of great moment to them both." E. C. Nothnagle

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 700w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 30:400 Ag 18 '39 350w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 149:106 Jl 22 '39 500w

"Mr. Maverick's book should be read by the millions—and it is incumbent on all who believe that liberalism makes better belly-sense than Toryism to spread word of it abroad. If liberals merely content themselves with recommending Maverick to liberals, they will be guilty of class or group navel-gazing. And they will not only deserve, they will also get, the scorn of the India-rubber man of San Antonio." John Chamberlain

+ New Repub 99:338 Jl 26 '39 1200w

"Mr. Maverick's liberalism speaks with simplicity and human warmth as well as seriousness and with a vigorous and sometimes dramatic turn of phrase. An important collection of documents, concerned with the establishment of our liberties, fills the second part of the book." K. W.

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 6 '39 380w

New Yorker 15:92 Je 17 '39 20w

"Along with much picturesque autobiographical material, a good deal of this ground was covered in 'A Maverick American' two years ago. The present book is livelier than most review lessons, but it would go better with a little more Maverick sauce." Duncan Aikman

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 1 '39 470w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 28:632 O '39 120w

MAWSON, CHRISTOPHER ORLANDO SYLVESTER, and ROBSON, JOHN WILLIAM. The complete desk book. 374p $2.50 Crowell

029.6 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. (W) 39-30796

"The aim of the book is to aid in honest measure all who write and who have to deal with what is written: not only the editor, the proofreader, and the printer, but also the newspaperman, the advertising writer, the librarian, the typist in home or office, and the college professor and student of English composition and grammar." (Pref) It contains information on all the mechanics of writing: misuses of grammar; spelling; punctuation; capitalization; compound words; word division; making an index; proofreading; typography; etc. Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40

"The brief section on 'The American Language' is in many respects grossly unscientific. And it is amusing to note that the authors object to spelling 'glamor' without the u on the ground that the word is of Scotch origin: in so objecting they imitate the grammarians whom they deride. But the value of their manual far outweighs such minor defects."

+ — Christian Century 56:1474 N 29 '39 200w

MAXEY, CHESTER COLLINS. Political philosophies. 692p $4 Macmillan

320.9 Political science—History 38-31035

In presenting a survey of political philosophy from ancient times to the present, the procedure is to give a biographical sketch of the man behind his philosophy, a concise exposition of his thought, a summary of his principal works and doctrines, and characteristic quotations from his writings. References at the ends of chapters. Index.

Reviewed by Walter Sandelius

Am Pol Sci R 33:103 F '39 650w

"Far be it from the reviewer to doubt the author's scholarship. It is more a case of a political scientist trying very hard to be conventional and not to put his one foot too far into the camp of the 'political sociologists' who view their field as an integral part of all our social processes. But Maxey may be right after all. Those who will adopt his work for their courses will be sure that their 'departmentalized' thinking will not be disturbed by this standard, stereotyped, and untantalizing book." J. S. Roucek

— Am Soc R 4:425 Je '39 800w

"In spite of reservations, Professor Maxey's book has all qualities of a first-rate primer on political thought. Attractively written, judicious, and with a rare ability for reciting complicated ideas in a lucid style, it is likely to become one of the most popular contributions on the subject." Karl Loewenstein

+ — Ann Am Acad 203:220 My '39 800w

Booklist 35:127 D 15 '38

"For beginners this is an excellent introduction to political theory—entertaining, clear, judicious, and following the conventional forms of history." H. W. S.

+ J Philos 36:277 My 11 '39 280w

"It is a distinctly readable book, the style in some cases being almost breezy. . . In the opinion of the reviewer the book is weakest in its treatment of the Middle Ages. The period from the fifth to the fifteenth century is discussed in a brief chapter of eighteen pages,

MAXEY, C. C.—Continued
and the reader does not get an adequate idea of the writers or issues of that period or of the important changes from imperial Rome to feudalism and then to the national state. . . However, the book judged as a whole is an excellent piece of work and, in the hands of a competent teacher and with students who have a good historical background, should be a stimulating textbook. In many ways it makes political philosophies more vivid and real than do most works of this type." R. G. Gettell
+ — Pol Sci Q 54:101 Mr '39 550w

"The abler, high-school seniors will be stimulated by this book."
+ Social Studies 30:95 F '39 130w

MAY, ROLLO. The art of counseling; how to gain and give mental health; introd. by Harry Bone. 247p $2 Cokesbury press

131.3 Mental hygiene. Personality 39-5128

Study of the factors involved in the guidance of young people with personality problems. The author has studied in Vienna under Adler, and has experience in guidance work in the Y.M.C.A. He considers such aspects of counseling as personality of the counselor, reading character, setting up a counseling program, the transformation of personality, religion and mental health, etc. Bibliography. Index.

"Books for the minister on psychiatric counseling are no longer scarce, but they are by no means consistent in soundness, practicality and wholesomeness. Rollo May has given us a book that emerges from sound first-hand training under the psychiatrists of Europe and from religious work and counseling with students. In it he has made more than one unique contribution to pastoral work." Blanche Carrier
+ Christian Century 56:576 My 3 '39 650w
Wis Lib Bul 35:46 Mr '39

MAYER, JACOB PETER, and others. Political thought; the European tradition; with an introd. by R. H. Tawney. 485p $4 Viking [18s Dent]

320.1 Political science [39-16383]

"The purpose of this book is to present the European tradition in political development as primarily the use of reasoning, the recognition of the dignity of human personality, and a responsibility of the individual to his community. It is designed as a statement of an opposition to state-worship and Fascist or Nazi dictatorship. It is in the form of a history of the art of government from Greek times to 1938, immediately after the September crisis. The greater part of the book, dealing with development until the sixteenth century, is by Dr. Mayer, but the development after that period is dealt with by separate authors—Mr. Crossman for British political thought, Mr. Kohn-Bramstedt for France, Mr. Sprigge for Italy, and Mr. Kecskemeti for America. Mr. Mayer himself has also written the articles on modern Germany and Russia. There are useful bibliographies at the end of each chapter. Professor Tawney's Introduction points out that the best political thought has always had reference to the practical problems of a particular community at a particular time. And throughout the book the emphasis is placed less upon the literature of political science and philosophy than upon the social changes which precede and follow the work of the great thinkers." Ethics

---

"The specialist in political theory will find much that is a tiresome repetition of what he already knows, but he will also discover many significant insights into and much pertinent commentary on the relation of thought to life. The non-specialist will find the whole a stimulating though frequently too scattered review of the course of European political thought. The authors conclude that the 'ethos of reason is the common European inheritance' without which Europe will sink into barbarism. That is their challenge." Harvey Pinney
+ — Am Soc R 4:742 O '39 300w

"This is a useful, often original, social-historical study of political ideas." R. H. Heindel
+ Ann Am Acad 205:168 S '39 500w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p21 N 5 '39 1050w

"It cannot be claimed that the result is easy to read or digest, but it can safely be said that nobody interested in the general or particular aspects of political thought will fail to find profit in these pages." E. H. C.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 F 8 '39 470w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Ethics 49:365 Ap '39 850w
Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40

"A timely work of great value for all intelligent readers." J. A. Hobson
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 20 '39 900w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 149:300 S 16 '39 450w
New Repub 99:28 My 10 '39 30w

"In spite of its practical intention, this is a book not for the general reader but for the student. Yet I doubt if it is a good students' book. It has no clear shape, and it is difficult to discern the pattern into which the chapters on the political thought of the various countries are intended to fit. There is much parade of learning, yet one cannot help but wonder whether this is the sort of subject to whose elucidation great learning is appropriate." C. E. M. Joad
— + New Statesman & Nation 17:330 Mr 4 '39 1250w

"The book as a whole, strongly influenced by the teachings of Max Weber is a vigorous Leftist analysis of freedom and social progress. It should be read and pondered by those who wish to preserve their country from fascism." S. B. Fay
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 9 '39 1600w

"This is hardly the book to compete with Mr. Sabine's recent 'History of Political Theory' —though comparison with that admirable book implies a very high standard indeed. But it has at least two virtues. It is largely the work of scholars of Central European background, and in its notes and bibliographies it brings to American readers a host of names, many of which have not yet penetrated as far as they deserve to into the minds of educated Americans. And, confused and uneven though it is, the book does help bring home the fact that what we may call loosely Western democracy has a long tradition of far greater intellectual respectability than any similar tradition the totalitarian states may appeal to." Crane Brinton
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:27 Ap 29 '39 550w

Reviewed by I. L. Kandel
Social Educ 4:67 Ja '40 700w

Reviewed by W. T. Wells
Spec 162:96 Ja 20 '39 1050w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 20 '39 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Ja 28 '39 290w

MAYER, JOSEPH. Revolution in merchandise. 222p $2.50 Greenberg

658.871 Department stores. Retail trade 39-4052

"The book deals mainly with the problems and prospects of the department store. There was a time when the department stores were riding on a wave of unbounded optimism that saw bright vistas of greater and ever greater expansion. Economic reality, however, has confronted them with an entirely different situation, and now leaders of the industry are engaged in earnest mental stock-taking." (N Y Times) "Ever since 1902 the author has been connected with department stores. . . After considerable experience in millinery . . . he became executive vice-president of R. H. Macy & Co. He has spent several years in Europe in the buying offices of the company." (Boston Transcript)

Reviewed by Brayton Wilson
Boston Transcript p1 My 20 '39 170w

Reviewed by S. F. Teele
Harvard Business R 18:128 autumn '39 400w

"As a layman and therefore not included in the professional groups for whose particular benefit the present book has been written, the reviewer wishes to acknowledge the stimulating newness of Mr. Mayer's subject and the extraordinary effectiveness with which he has presented it. 'The Revolution in Merchandise' is a vigorous and mellow discussion of a topic that is of direct concern to, though usually neglected by, millions of people who function as consumers, and is of special interest to women, since they make up the bulk of the deliberate buyers of goods." Louis Rich
+ N Y Times p35 Mr 12 '39 800w

MAYHEW, ARTHUR INNES. Education in the colonial empire. 291p $2.50 (6s 6d) Longmans

370.942 Great Britain—Colonies. Education—Great Britain 39-4047

"The evolution of educational policy in the empire, with special reference to tropical Africa, Malaya, the South Seas and the West Indies." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 17:447 Ja '39 20w

"The book is intended to be provocative and it certainly should succeed in its intention. Its perusal will lead to much searching of hearts and much criticism from sources both selfish and disinterested. All who work or intend to work in the field of education over-sea will find it invaluable. It can be confidently recommended to the many others, officials, missionaries, planters and men of business, not directly concerned with education in its narrower sense, whose work brings them into contact with native races."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Jl 30 '38 330w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Apostle of charity; the life of St Vincent de Paul. 319p $3 Dial press

B or 92 Vincent de Paul, Saint (W) 39-27742

Saint Vincent de Paul was born in Gascony in 1576 and died in Paris in 1660. From humble peasant stock he rose to eminence in the church, became the founder of the Order of the Sisters of Charity, tutored the future Cardinal de Retz, knew most of the famous figures of the age of Richelieu, established the Foundling Hospital in Paris. In 1737 he was canonized. The author of this account of his life is a Catholic scholar and author. Index.

"A fine piece of historical work, entertaining, instructive, human, literary and clear as a perfect summer day." Thomas Butler
+ America 61:525 S 9 '39 500w

Booklist 36:42 O 1 '39

"Mr. Maynard, drawing on the best French sources, has elected to tell the story in taut English prose, which does not attempt to do more than can legitimately be expected of it. Though the book is not very well put together, it is in other respects quite the author's best. Opinion gives way to fact, vividly realized and tersely stated. The historical background—and what an interesting, colorful, bizarre background it is—has been sketched in effectively, without blurring the features of Vincent himself. Thus it is a scholarly book which can be read with satisfaction." G. N. Shuster
+ Books p6 Jl 30 '39 850w

"With urbanity Mr. Maynard takes issue with the early biographies because of their legendary narratives and strained interpretations. It is this urbanity coupled with its clarity and adequate historical knowledge which makes the work both a scholarly and readable production. It should have a host of readers." J. L. Burke
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 5 '39 450w

"This is a wide canvas painted with extraordinary skill and vividness. Dr. Maynard has done nothing finer." J. J. R.
+ Cath World 149:754 S '39 600w

"Mr. Maynard has done a first-rate job in describing the monumental deeds of this great saint and in bringing out the personal qualities that made those deeds possible and combined to produce an extremely attractive and lovable man. His book is highly recommended, and it is to be hoped that he will do the same for other saints whose reputations have suffered from the slander of those horrible statutes." J. C. Cort
+ Commonweal 30:540 O 6 '39 600w

"A factual, carefully documented life, but with plenty of color."
+ New Repub 100:111 Ag 30 '39 50w

"In telling Vincent de Paul's story, and presenting [his] personality, Theodore Maynard has eschewed the piously romantic and the doubtfully picturesque, and has dealt with the known facts only, especially as they have recently been collected and examined by careful scholarship." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '39 750w

"As a pious Catholic, Mr. Maynard writes rather too often on his knees, but he writes better there than most people do at their desks."
New Yorker 15:60 Jl 29 '39 70w

"If there is a criticism of this book about him, it is that one would like to know more of the details of St. Vincent's work. Mr. Maynard treats it in a series of compactly organized topical chapters which take up nearly half his book. . . But his biographer has apparently suffered a little from the fear that readers would find these chapters dull. They are not. . . The material is fascinating, and Mr. Maynard's presentation has all the skill and charm one has come to expect of him. This is a Catholic Book-of-the-Month, but its interest knows no religious frontiers." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 S 16 '39 550w

MAYNE, MRS ISABELLA MAUD (RITTENHOUSE). See Rittenhouse, I. M.

MAYORGA, MARGARET GARDNER, ed. The best one-act plays of 1938. 392p $2.50 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Twelve one-act plays, with notes and bibliographies, useful with little theater groups, dramatic students, etc. Contents: Mañana bandits, by Betty Smith and Chase Webb; Farewell to love, by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements; The feast of Ortolans, by Maxwell Anderson; Hawk a-flyin', by E. P. Conkle; Ballad of youth, by Alfred Kreymborg; Never no third degree, by J. W. Bayly; Cloud over Breakshin, by Weldon Stone; Alma Mater, by Paul Green; Dust, by Edna Muldrow; Resurrection Ezra, by R. E. Mitchell; This is Villa, by Josephina Niggli; Good night, Caroline, by Conrad Seiler.

Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p16 Ap 30 '39 110w
New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 20w

MAYR-OFEN, FERDINAND, pseud. See Zarek, O.

MAYS, BENJAMIN ELIJAH. The Negro's God, as reflected in his literature; lithographs by James L. Wells. 269p $2 Chapman & Grimes

810.9 Negro literature. Negroes—Religion. God. Religion in literature 38-37550

"The purpose is to trace historically the development of the idea of God in Negro literature, 'mass' and 'classical,' from 1760 to 1937. . . Although the author did not set out in this study to disprove anything presented in Green Pastures, the data themselves show that the Negro's idea of God is not now and has never been what Green Pastures may lead some people to believe." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well written, contains much valuable information on this subject, and will be a valuable contribution to the literature pertaining to the status of the Negro in American life." M. F. Ham

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 16 '39 500w

"Dr. Mays has laid a solid foundation for this study of the American Negro's conception of God. He has had wide experience in work among Negroes, as pastor, as Y.M.C.A. secretary, as executive secretary for a local Urban League, as college professor and (at present) as dean of the school of religion in Howard University." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 56:154 F 1 '39 350w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
J Religion 20:106 Ja '40 100w

MAZZA, MRS IRMA (GOODRICH). Herbs for the kitchen. 312p $2 Little

641.5 Herbs. Cookery 39-27812

Recipes for salads, meats, vegetables, many of them with foreign backgrounds, but all of them making use of herbs to tone them up and make them different. Index.

Booklist 36:63 O 15 '39

" 'Herbs For the Kitchen' may not be considered a beginner's cook book, but if I knew a beginner about whose culinary development I was concerned I should put this volume into her hands with the advice that she read it from cover to cover, and with the expectation that she become a good cook." Sheila Hibben

+ Books p12 D 17 '39 350w
J Home Econ 32:41 Ja '40 60w

MEAD, MARGARET. From the South seas; studies of adolescence and sex in primitive societies. 3v in 1 304,384,335p maps $4 Morrow

572.995 Society, Primitive. South Sea islands—Social life and customs 39-27925

Reprints of the author's three studies of primitive peoples: Coming of Age in Samoa; Growing up in New Guinea; and Sex and Temperament in Three Primitive Societies (Book Review Digest, 1928, 1930, and 1935). Index and glossary at end of each study.

Booklist 36:114 N 15 '39

"For anybody with an inquiring mind and a philosophical interest in the human race I can hardly think of a more satisfactory book than Margaret Mead's From the South Seas."

+ Books p29 O 29 '39 450w

"A good book to keep."

+ New Repub 101:178 N 29 '39 60w

"These gently acute, strongly persuasive studies of the power of custom are well known to every anthropologist and to many thoughtful laymen. Their usefulness, particularly to those who are most directly responsible in the training of children, is by no means yet exhausted."

+ Time 34:72 O 30 '39 60w

MEADE, DOROTHY COLE. Death over her shoulder. 290p $2 Scribner

39-30685

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 Ag 27 '39 150w

"Woe is me, the killer gave himself completely away after the second death, and his cover-up attempts just made me mad." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 S 2 '39 70w

"The story is skillfully told and the suspense is maintained to the very end." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 20 '39 120w

"Fine creepy atmosphere, but a babe in arms should be able to unmask the murderer."

+ — New Yorker 15:64 S 2 '39 50w

"Good background, tense atmosphere, ready-made hero, sophisticated friends, and cross-currents of emotion help make a pretty tangle. Pretty maiden all forlorn center of turmoil. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 19 '39 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 210w
Wis Lib Bul 35:187 N '39

MEADE, JAMES EDWARD. An introduction to economic analysis and policy; Am. ed, ed. by C. J. Hitch; with an introd. by A. H. Hansen. 428p $2.50 (2d ed 10s) Oxford

330.1 Economics 38-21495

"The English edition of this book appeared two years ago [Book Review Digest, 1937]. This American edition, prepared by Mr. C. J. Hitch, includes only a few changes in theoretical analysis; but illustrations from American economic life have been substituted for those from English economic life, and a number of graphs have been added in the appendix." Am Econ R

"The book represents a definitely new approach, and is a consistent exposition of some of the late developments in theory. It merits the attention of every teacher of economics." John Ise

+ Am Econ R 29:126 Mr '39 90w

Reviewed by Hans Neisser
Ann Am Acad 203:237 My '39 550w

MEADE, PATRICK A. Born to trouble. 406p $3 Putnam

B or 92 39-8900

Autobiography of an Irish-born soldier-of-fortune whose experiences have been world-wide. Captain Meade now lives in the United States.

"A rich, thick, meaty volume that is easily the best thing in the travel and adventure field since George Digby's memorable 'Goose-feathers.' " Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p4 Ap 9 '39 700w

Reviewed by F. W. MacVeagh
Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 140w

"I shall not, for a long time, forget Captain Meade's story; it is one of the most thrilling autobiographies it has been my lot ever to come upon." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 26 '39 1100w

"Kipling's Mulvaney might have written this story."

New Yorker 15:88 Mr 25 '39 40w
Sat R of Lit 19:19 Ap 8 '39 310w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Bat; il. by Edward Shenton. 273p $2 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories (W) 39-6267

An exciting dog story for young readers. It describes the adventures of a bull terrier, raised in luxury, but suddenly thrown upon his own devices. The fighting instincts of his ancestors helped him thru months of dreary experiences, until he was returned to his mistress.

Booklist 35:278 Ap 15 '39

"This may not be a great dog story, but it is a story about a great dog. It has every feature that makes it remembered, and Bat cannot be lightly forgotten. The pictures have the right muscularity, whether in repose or in violent action." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 7 '39 500w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '39 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"A story that will be popular with all dog lovers. The description of entering Bat in one of the big shows in Baltimore is especially interesting and well done." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:381 My 1 '39 100w

"The story is moving, with breathless moments of suspense, but never sentimental; the plot is well-knit and credible and Bat is convincing as the hero of the tale. The drawings in black and white have strength and effectiveness, and show genuine understanding of dogs. This is a book that 10 to 14 year olds will find eminently satisfying and enjoyable." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 14 '39 170w

New Yorker 15:107 My 13 '39 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:118 Je '39

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Boy with a pack; il. by Edward Shenton. 297p map $2 Harcourt

(W) 39-27870

Lively adventures of Bill Crawford, a seventeen-year-old boy, who worked his way from New Hampshire to Ohio in 1837, peddling "Yankee notions."

Booklist 36:91 N 1 '39

"A business venture in the roaring days of old, for growing boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 12 '39 300w

"The story is vital; full of sounds and smells, creaking saddle leather and smouldering campfires. The atmospheric descriptions are as shining as those of Zane Grey."

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '39 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 1 '39 60w

Churchman 153:39 D 15 '39 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:392 N '39 120w

"A lively story of action, adventure, and wholesome living, as well as a good picture of frontier life and its responsibilities. Clear type, uncrowded pages, and attractive illustrations by Edward Shenton make the book a very real invitation to reading for both boys and girls in the senior group." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 64:1001 D 15 '39 100w

New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 40w

"There are humor and human nature in Mr. Meader's tale, the book is well written and presents an authentic and interesting picture of this country a hundred years ago. Edward Shenton's drawings are interesting and descriptive, and the end papers show a map of the hero's journey." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 17 '39 400w

"Perhaps luck is too consistently with [the hero] in his adventures, as it so often is with the heroes of children's books, but the story, involving horse thieves in Vermont, canalboat life in New York, and forwarding slaves by the Underground Railroad in Ohio, is continuously readable. Pleasing illustrations and format."

+ New Yorker 15:90 N 25 '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID LAMONTE. Aren't we lucky! [63p] il maps $1 Crowell

39-10238

Photographs and text contrast the happy lot of children in America with the lot of European, Chinese and Japanese children.

"This book has the Stars and Stripes in color on its cover; the chances are that it will have a wide circulation. So well-meaning a work seldom has an influence so unfortunate. Aren't we lucky, children, that we have a nice little ocean cuddled up on each side of us? Let us thank God we are not as other men are. There must be ways of making Americans out of our babies without making them first into smug little Pharisees." M. L. Becker

— Books p5 My 21 '39 240w

"It is to be hoped that libraries and parents will have courage equal to that of the author in putting this book into the hands of children. It does not present a happy or a pleasant picture, but it may serve to help American children to grow into the kind of citizens who will stand fast to make it impossible for such things to happen here." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:517 Je 15 '39 210w

"The unhappy world of today rather than the idyllic one of tomorrow is reflected in an unsuccessful book with a good idea. . . Also, the text about happy America is, regrettably, rather smug. A good primer of freedom is still to be written. I hope it will be."

— New Yorker 15:103 My 13 '39 130w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Adella Mary in old New Mexico; il. by Herbert Morton Stoops. 227p $2 Houghton

(W) 39-21783

Altho Adella Mary had red hair, she was no fighter, but possessed courage enough to face any danger for her beloved family. The story describes Adella Mary's trip by wagon train from St Louis to Taos where her mother lay ill, in 1846. When her father was away and Mexicans rose against the whites it was Adella Mary whose courage saved the family from destruction. For older girls.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

"It is a thoroughly sensible book for the naturally timid, thrilling yet comforting. Indeed, its thrills please the brave as well." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 29 '39 400w

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg

Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 50w

"Though not told in the simple smooth style as most of her books, this story of life on the Sante Fe trail and in New Mexico in 1846, leaves one with many vivid pictures. . . Recommended where more books of this type are needed." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 80w

"This story is for girls a little younger than those who enjoyed 'Tangled Waters' and 'Shuttered Windows,' and it is slighter in content, but it is rich in the details of a romantic period. Mrs. Means writes with sensitive understanding of the Indians who played such an important part in the life of the sheltered little girl from St. Louis." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 15 '39 280w

MEDARY, MARJORIE. Joan and the three deer; il. by Kurt Wiese. 160p $2 Random house

(W) 39-27556

Little Joan from Chicago, who spends a summer on Grand Manan, is the heroine. Joan's Aunt Sue has three half-tamed young deer as wards and Joan, who knows her fairy tales, feels the magic in these young creatures, and finds her summer a thing of enchantment.

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

MEDARY, MARJOR E—[illegible]

[illegible] account of a child's summer [illegible] of three white-tailed deer [illegible] of the same sort of charm [illegible] and will be loved by the same [illegible] who loved that. It has little [illegible] indeed of a startling kind: the [illegible] of the deer and the never-ending [illegible] of a child at finding herself so close [illegible] so magical give the book at- [illegible] that serves instead of plot to hold it together." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 My 7 '39 400w

[illegible] is an unusual story, [illegible] [illegible] will want [illegible] B. Shaw

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 24 '39 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"In this story of a city child who comes into contact for the first time with wood creatures and wild life at her aunt's farm in Grand Manan, Miss Medary has etched some exquisite moments and scenes from memories of her own experiences on the island. . . The story is so slender that young readers, expecting more developments from the opening chapters, are likely to be disappointed in the repetition of incidents with slight variations."

+ — Horn Bk M 15:225 Jl '39 200w

"A book of incidents, each with its own suspense and thrill. Appealing in its simplicity and simple beauty. Reminds one of both Bambi and The Yearling. Author shows rare understanding of both children and animals. Make-up very attractive, with excellent and charming illustrations in sepia by Kurt Wiese. Will perhaps be most popular with girls of third to fifth grade." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:518 Je 15 '39 150w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:842 N 1 '39 80w

"Here, as refreshing as a sea breeze, is another distinguished story of the outdoors by the author of "Topgallant.". . It is the understanding with which the author has endowed Joan, her sensitive kinship with those half-wild creatures, the imagination which prompted her to delicious moments of fairy-tale fancy, which lifts this story out of the ordinary run of animal tales and brings it close to the experience of every child who has not outgrown the conviction that animals are really people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 18 '39 400w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

MEDSGER, OLIVER PERRY. Edible wild plants; with an introd. by Ernest Thompson Seton. 323p il $3.50 Macmillan

581.6 Botany, Economic. Food
(W) 39-27261

Edible fruits from nearly all the chief orders of flowering plants of the United States and Canada are described in this volume. Contents: Edible wild fruits; Edible nuts; Edible seeds and seed pods; Salad plants and potherbs; Edible roots and tubers; Beverage and flavoring plants; Sugars and gums; Mushrooms. At the end of each chapter is a list of other wild plants not so well known. Indexes.

Booklist 35:265 Ap 15 '39

"Mr. Medsger has produced a book whose science is impeccable and underlies all the easy and delightful style of his popularization. The drawings are correct, competent and lifelike penwork that would really enable one to identify partridge berries and passion flowers and sweet birch." D. C. Peattie

— Books p8 Jl 23 '39 300w

"This unique volume is scientific as well as practical, and thoroughly illustrated."

+ Christian Century 56:418 Mr 29 '39 40w
Churchman 153:35 Je 15 '39 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

"Delightful sketches and photographs, convenient arrangement and clear statement of information, ingenious finding lists, and a good index are combined in this vade mecum for the person who is interested in the edible possibilities of the plants he sees as he travels."

+ J Home Econ 31:400 Je '39 70w

"A fascinating book about edible wild plants."

+ N Y Times p18 S 24 '39 320w
Pratt p13 summer '39
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 1 '39 420w
Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Rusty, a cocker spaniel; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. 296p $2 Penn

Dogs—Legends and stories 38-36503

"Though Major Meek's animal stories are written primarily for youngsters entering their teens, many an 'oldster' has succumbed to the engaging personalities of the Major's four-footed characters. His latest book, 'Rusty,' is the story of a little, pint-sized red spaniel's adventures and misadventures, both at home and afield, not the least of which was the winning of an open all-age stakes for cockers. For though Rusty was a runt, he had the heart, ccurage and grit of a St. Bernard." Boston Transcript

"This is a story for any one—the publishers say from twelve up—who loves a puppy for his own personal qualities regardless of commercial value of potential show points. If you are especially interested in cockers, all the better: Rusty is one." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 18 '38 350w
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '39 90w

MEESE, MRS MILDRED FOULKE. The wagon to the star; a novel for girls; il. by Louise Costello. 318p $2 Bobbs

39-21781

Novel for older girls. Mary Carstens leaves the orphanage, where she has spent all her life, for her last year of high school in a nearby town. Her ambition is to forget her shabby clothes, and make friends. Her year is filled with hard work and difficulties, but she realizes her ambition. The book closes with graduation time and college in the offing.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"A human and entertaining novel."

+ Cath World 150:382 D '39 70w

"A fresh, penetrating story uneventful by outward standards but exciting because the suspense is skillfully handled and the personality development is convincing. . . It is seldom that one book can combine so many elements as vocation, boarding school, mystery, personality adjustment and romance and be, withal, so well integrated and appealing to the sympathies. Devoid of sentimentality, it far transcends Daddy Longlegs, Nobody's Girl, English Orphans and other books in similar vein which were absorbing favorites of earlier generations." Maude Adams

+ Library J 64:952 D 1 '39 280w

"Classroom recitations, rules of high school discipline, basket-ball games and class parties, even sundaes at the local sweetshop, play their various parts in a plot which seems so well-integrated it [seems] not to be so much a plot as the natural unfolding of a personality. The problems which in after years seem to have been so simple have here a contemporary complexity which any girl of the teen age will recognize as valid, and the values, like Mary's own, are true values." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '40 400w
Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

MELCHER, DANIEL. Young Mr Stone, book publisher; with a foreword by Frederic G. Melcher. 249p $2 Dodd

(W)

Story for high school age readers about two boys and a girl who run the school paper, and later branch out into full-fledged publishing jobs. The book contains information on many aspects of publishing, notably requirements, duties, salaries, and book trade practices.

Booklist 36:201 Ja 15 '40

"The plot is purely vocational; I am glad to find it uncomplicated by love interest. The book would no doubt be dull to a boy with engineering tastes, but it was not written for such boys. It was fascinating to me, and would have been when I was much younger than I am now." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 4 '40 450w

"While the three young people show an amazing amount of knowledge and ability . . . Martin's success does not come easily, and not too rosy a picture is painted of publishing and its opportunities. There is too much technical information to make the story of interest to any but the young person specifically interested in the publishing field." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 210w

"A book cram full of meaty considerations of the angles of [publishing]. Must for would-be inner sanctumites."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 40w

MELLAND, FRANK HULME. Elephants in Africa; il. by Stuart Tresilian. 199p $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Country life]

599.61 Elephants [39-20142]

"The elephants in Africa have been made suspicious of man, and even savagely disposed toward him, because of the cruel greed of the ivory hunters, but the elephant is naturally, says Frank Melland, a truly lovable as well as an exceedingly intelligent beast. . . Mr. Melland tells us of the family life of this very domestic wild beast, discusses the question of elephant charges and stampedes, considers the individual characteristics of rogue elephants and has a great deal to say on the subject of the elephant's intelligence." Books

"From his first-hand study Mr. Melland has written a comprehensive and genuinely interesting book about elephants, to which the drawings of Stuart Tresilian add an interest of their own."

+ Books p23 My 7 '39 210w

"Mr. Melland is well qualified to write about elephants and about a great part of Africa. He spent twenty-six years there, most of them in elephant country. He traversed the continent from North to South in 1910, when the journey was still something to talk of and not, as now, a piece of tourism. He knew most of the great hunters of his day intimately and seems to have read the written works of all the rest. He has been a close and sympathetic observer of his neighbors, two-footed and four. He therefore writes with insight and authority."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 4 '39 230w

MELLEN, IDA M. A practical cat book for amateurs and professionals. 230p il $2.50 Scribner

636.8 Cats (W) 39-27388

Handbook for the cat fancier. Contains information on breeds and standards, feeding, care and training, showing, diseases, shipping, and the art of photographing cats. Describes in detail the various cat breeds found in the United States. Lists institutions which render service to cats. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

"All things considered, this latest of cat-owners' manuals is likely to please more people, for more reasons, than any other. . . The point is that in all this the book plays no favorites, respecting cats as such, whether Siamese, Silver Tabby, Persian, Manx, Abyssinian, or just cat, and showing the owner of a just cat that it has a name and a standing among judges that will add pride to his affection for his pet. The advice on ailments will save a non-professional money by describing home treatment and show when a vet is needed to save the cat. Ideas on feeding are sound, and knowledge of cat psychology fundamental—and you get nowhere with cats without this basic understanding."

+ Books p17 Ap 16 '39 250w

"This book must, it would seem, inevitably become the indispensable book for all cat owners, whether they breed for show purposes or not."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 13 '39 280w

"For all its definite purpose of helpful information, this book is not dry or even impersonal. Stories about cats and their odd individual ways enliven the pages of practical fact. Cat photographs make charming illustrations and offer a good deal of variety as well. And there are smiles awaiting the reader in the brief section where the author corrects eighteen popular misconceptions."

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 16 '39 250w

Pratt p16 summer '39

"The book, as a whole, presents cat science in the guise of workable everyday information."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 160w

Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

MELONEY, FRANKEN, pseud. See Franken, R. D. and Meloney, W. B.

MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN. In high places. 237p $2 Knopf

39-25704

A dictator, here called The Power, learns from his doctors that he has a brain tumor with no chance of life except one—an operation at the hands of a member of a persecuted race. The Jewish doctor is finally discovered in his hiding place and brought face to face with The Power. This scene between the two forms the climax of the tale, but not its ending.

"It's the picture of Dictator and the Doctor, facing each other, that makes the book memorable among the books of the Dictator lands." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Ag 13 '39 370w

"All readers who wish an impressionistic, emotional and dramatic residue of the worst elements of dictatorship, as well as strong racial character studies should read Mr. Meloney's novel. Although written with less restraint, 'In High Places' has more narrative force than Kressmann Taylor's successful 'Address Unknown,' and both have enough force to curdle the blood of a democratic reader." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 20 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 40w

"The story is pretty effective; at least it is interesting throughout. It would have been still better as a short story than as a short novel, and in that form might have approached the effectiveness of 'Address Unknown.' As it is, it suffers from the mixture of realism with which conditions in Germany are described, and the obvious wish-fulfillment element in the central situation." G. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 9 '39 250w

"As has been said there is little action to 'In High Places.' There are, to be sure, some scenes of brutality and some love interest, but they are secondary. Mr Meloney's main object seems to be the development of the man behind the heils and parades and salutes and he has done it well enough so that at times one feels sorry for the Power without ever in the least liking or admiring him."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 490w

MELVILLE, ROBERT. Picasso: master of the phantom. 52p il $1.50 (3s 6d) Oxford

759.6 Picasso, Pablo 40-361

"In this little testimony and 'confession' Picasso is a master of the phantom not only in his work but in his effect upon the author, an Englishman who at sixteen was first tormented by the Spanish painter. At eighteen, after six months of writing, Robert Melville was permanently deflected from what he thought was his chosen profession. Ever since—he is now thirty-two—he has been the slave of Picasso. His book is as personal as his experience. He discusses a good score of paintings." Nation

"This is a queer, packed little book, valuable as appreciation and a good instance of what might be called a fruitful obsession." Jerome Mellquist

+ Nation 149:226 Ag 26 '39 270w

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell

N Y Times p22 D 10 '39 140w

New Yorker 15:67 Ag 19 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 15 '39 130w

MENDELSSOHN, PETER. Across the dark river. 339p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) [40-1855]

The story concerns the fate of fifty people expelled from a village near the Austrian frontier in the spring of 1938. Traveling by night the party, most of them Jews, were pushed back and forth between frontiers, until they finally took refuge on a barge anchored in the Danube. One of the main characters is an Aryan cobbler who throws in his lot with his unfortunate compatriots and loses his life.

Booklist 36:198 Ja 15 '40

"Mendelssohn was cast out of Germany because he had a Jewish grandparent. He told that story in a previous novel. The commendable thing about his present story is the detached manner in which it is told. The facts are reported and they speak for themselves; there is no superfluous personal bitterness." Theodore English

+ Books p18 D 10 '39 500w

"It is a vibrant and moving story, told with simple beauty and even with humor by a man who is himself an exile from his native land because he had a Jewish grandparent."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 27 '40 550w

"Few books which are important social documents are at the same time so beautifully written, so well told and so convincingly peopled. 'All that matters is the man, all that counts is dignity!' Such is Mendelssohn's creed. 'Across the Dark River' is a book that lingers in memory, that leaves the reader with a great, helpless sadness, quietly powerful, a damning indictment of human cruelty as it exists in the Germany of today." August Derleth

+ Commonweal 31:290 Ja 19 '40 140w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '39 200w

"Although every incident in this saga of persecution could probably be documented with newspaper reports, the plot moves so rapidly from episode to episode that it reads more like an adventure story than like a novel of protest. Perhaps, after all, the best we may hope for the future is that in days to come readers will turn away from stories like 'Across the Dark River' and 'Mr. Emmanuel' with a smile of disbelief, classifying us as a generation whose tastes in fiction ran to the bizarre and fantastic."

Nation 150:80 Ja 20 '40 280w

"Mr. Mendelssohn employs no extraordinary insight in distinguishing his refugees; he doesn't construct for them much of a private life to be carried over to the disaster; he rarely falls back on satire, the weapon that's a natural for the indignant reformer. What he has turned out, rather, is the very clear, forceful enlargement of a picture that does nothing whatever to ease a troubled world conscience. It is an enlargement that brings out sharply the chilly half-tones of nightmare." Miriam Borgenicht

+ New Repub 102:28 Ja 1 '40 360w

"Readers of a brief news item carried on Sept. 1, 1938, by the New York Times must have had their imaginations and their emotions deeply stirred. What terrible sufferings lay behind and what still greater suffering was portended by the laconic notice of ejection of exiled Jews from an old barge in the Danube not far from where Austrian, Czecho-Slovakian and Hungarian borders touched? Peter Mendelssohn has here, with unsurpassed technical skill, great intuition and profoundly sympathetic understanding, told the story behind the news." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 D 10 '39 600w

"Mr. Mendelssohn writes simply and well. His story is not only an indictment of Nazi inhumanity but a clear argument for the abolition of all frontiers."

+ New Yorker 15:121 D 16 '39 80w

"An exceedingly fine novel. Peter Mendelssohn, a descendant of the composer and an exile from Germany, has told [the story] very carefully, very thoroughly, and movingly." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 D 9 '39 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p703 D 2 '39 300w

MENKE, FRANK GRANT. Encyclopedia of sports. 319p pa $2 Frank G. Menke, inc, 235 E. 45th st, N.Y.

790.3 Sports 39-4429

"Brief histories, with notes of records and champions, of many competitive sports, arranged for easy reference." Booklist

Booklist 35:360 Jl 1 '39

Pratt p22 summer '39

MEOFOR, DAVID. Breath of all living [poems] foreword by Alfred Wrench. 98p $2 Imagery press, 148 W. 23d st, N.Y.

811 39-1946

"David Méofor is a Jewish postman born on New York's East Side. He was taken from public school and set to work when fourteen. Considering everything, his poetry is certainly remarkable. He is a self-styled atheist, torn by a ceaseless search for a 'limitless and non-existent God.' He writes Whitmanically, transcendentally, also in fixed forms and colloquially." Sat R of Lit

Forum 101:240 Ap '39 10w

"One has a great deal of sympathy with his honest outcry; but he is more a spontaneous inveigher than a craftsman. Words and music are heady intoxicants to him, though he can also write more gently. He will use words and expressions like 'sonant,' 'lethal,' 'bedecked,' 'pelf,' and 'Cosmic Cry,' but there is also genuine vigor and a proper, earnest questioning here of the paradoxical evil in Man."

Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 130w

MERIAM, LEWIS, and SCHMECKEBIER, LAURENCE FREDERICK. Reorganization of the national government; what does it involve? (Inst. for gov. research. Studies in administration) 272p $2 Brookings

353 U.S.—Executive departments 39-4894

This report is in two parts: part I, An analysis of the problem, has been prepared by Lewis Meriam; part II, a brief history of reorganization efforts, by L. F. Schmeckebier. "Whether they say so specifically or not [the] authors . . . take the position that Federal reorganization should be made the vehicle for drastic economies, with a balanced budget in view. This brings the study into immediate clash with the New Deal philosophy, and for the time at any event gives the work chiefly academic interest." (Christian Science Monitor)

Reviewed by J. A. Tobey
Am J Pub Health 29:795 Jl '39 120w
Reviewed by L. M. Short
Am Pol Sci R 33:499 Je '39 700w
Reviewed by W. B. Graves
Ann Am Acad 206:184 N '39 650w
Booklist 35:324 Je 1 '39
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 12 '39 400w
Management R 28:252 Jl '39 40w
Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Nation 148:620 My 27 '39 900w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. The new democracy and the new despotism. (Whittlesey house publication) 278p $3 McGraw

321.8 Democracy. Despotism. Political science 39-16384

Study of the conflict of democracy and despotism in the world today, by the head of the department of political science at the University of Chicago. "Most of the discussion centers around the objectives of democracy and the means for realizing to a greater extent these objectives. The author denies, as is at present so frequently argued, that a democratic form of association is incapable of dealing with the direction of the social and economic forces now disturbing the internal life of modern states." (Boston Transcript) Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Beard
Am Pol Sci R 33:884 O '39 1050w
Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Ann Am Acad 206:171 N '39 450w

"If American democracy ever goes under it will not be through lack of literary defenders. Among the many recent books on the subject, 'The New Democracy and the New Despotism,' is one of the most thoughtful and carefully reasoned. . . Professor Merriam's arguments are cogent and intellectually convincing. The chief weakness of the book lies in its extremely academic style. It is ponderous, slow moving, unnecessarily hard to read. If democracy is as good a thing as the author thinks it is, surely it might be made to seem a little more exciting." E. S. Bates
+ — Books p12 Jl 16 '39 500w

"A most lucid and clear-cut analysis of the fundamental assumptions of democracy and of despotism." Virginia Gott
+ Boston Transcript p11 Jl 14 '39 550w
Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 20w
Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 149:300 S 16 '39 350w
New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 50w
Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p19 S 10 '39 800w

"Professor Merriam's statement of the case for enlightened democracy is highly opportune." D. H. Popper
+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 8 '39 600w
Reviewed by R. V. Sires
Social Educ 4:141 F '40 1100w
Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:630 O '39 200w

MERRIAM, HAROLD GUY. Edward Moxon, publisher of poets. 223p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [14s Oxford]

B or 92 Moxon, Edward. Authors and publishers 39-20446

Biography of the Yorkshire publisher's apprentice, the friend of Charles Lamb, who married Lamb's protégée, Emma Isola. In 1830 Moxon set up his own publishing house, and during the years following brought out editions of some of England's best-known authors: Lamb, Rogers, Wordsworth, Southey, Landor, Leigh Hunt, Sheridan Knowles, Barry Cornwall, Disraeli, Robert and Elizabeth Browning, Patmore, Monckton Milnes, Harriet Martineau, and Tennyson. Bibliography. Index.

"Doctor Merriam has given us a well-told story, less the crisp biography and more the colorful account of a literary friend. For the collector there is much bibliographical material that will help him collate his library." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 17:80 Ja '40 380w

"Mr. Merriam has done an excellent job with the material at his disposal, producing a book that is both enjoyable and instructive. His achievement is the more valuable for the fact that his work is one of original research as well as synthesis." Frances Winwar
+ N Y Times p19 Ap 16 '39 700w

"Mr. Merriam's volume, though it can be recommended as a useful compendium of known but hitherto scattered facts, with a few fragments of interesting new material (notably in connexion with Harriet Martineau and Wordsworth), is too unskilfully handled and too much a specialist thesis on one minor aspect of a huge subject, to have much value as a contribution to the history of nineteenth-century publishing."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p218 Ap 15 '39 850w

MERRICK, ELLIOTT. Frost and fire. 334p $2.50 Scribner

39-20243

Jan McKenzie, half Scotch and half Eskimo, is the hero of this story of the bitter struggle for life in Labrador. Inured to hardship from earliest childhood, Jan at the age of twelve began his battle for a better price for furs, a better way of living, for the members of the little community. Together with Luce, who had spent two years in Boston, and then returned gladly to the rough life and the man she loved, he finally won the first round in his battle against the Trading company.

Booklist 36:9 S '39

"While this book shows technical weakness as a novel, it will hold the reader's attention for its description of the north and for the stories of trappers which undoubtedly are rooted in fact." Rose Feld
Books p2 Jl 16 '39 850w

"Not the least interesting thing about this book is the variety of strands that are twisted into it. The exposition of the situation is very much in terms of contemporary economic thinking, but the solution is still much of the age of enlightened and public-spirited individualism. . . Jan is one of the most attractive heroes in recent fiction." H. C. White
+ Commonweal 30:590 O 20 '39 500w
New Repub 100:56 Ag 16 '39 40w

" 'Frost and Fire' is a strong and sober novel. It is not Mr. Merrick's fault if there is also a fairly exciting Class B movie in it. The color and violence are there because they belong, because they are part of a firm and intelligent underlying purpose. Mr. Merrick is not so much romancing as reporting. He proved in 'True North' that he knows the Labrador wilderness. He proves here that he has the kind of imagination a novelist needs to get inside a set of alien characters, to present their lives in terms one feels would be perfectly intelligible to them." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '39 700w
New Yorker 15:75 Jl 22 '39 50w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"The well-told story is more than merely one of red-blooded adventures; it is a wholesome romance, rich in incident, personalities

MERRICK, ELLIOTT—Continued
and scenes which leave with the reader a pleasant memory."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 450w

"This is anything but a peaceful story, but it is peaceful to read at this time, for its values are clean and simple and its struggle is in the grip of natural forces which are beautifully realized and most delicately described."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p687 N 25 '39 400w

Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

MERRILD, KNUD. A poet and two painters; a memoir of D. H. Lawrence. 369p il $3.50 Viking [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Lawrence, David Herbert (W) [39-2355]

With two Danish painters, Merrild and Gotzsche, D. H. Lawrence and his wife Frieda spent the winter of 1922-23 at a little mountain ranch near Taos, New Mexico. Merrild has written a highly detailed account of this winter, expanding his own recollections of Lawrence by conversations drawn from the text of his novels. Index.

"Sometimes it seems that the unquiet ghost of D. H. Lawrence must be forever walking on the hills above Taos and 'Mabeltown,' whimpering down the wind because his friends will not let him go, till one could almost cry out, 'Let the poor ghost rest.' But now comes a book by a Danish painter which is very different from most of the books about Lawrence, because the manner of man writing it is so different. As Aldous Huxley says in the introduction, it has the quality of disinterestedness, a precious quality and one too little associated with Lawrence's biographers." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p4 F 5 '39 1200w

Reviewed by F. W. MacVeagh
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 11 '39 360w

"Merrild's account is done without nervousness or pretense. Lawrence irritated him beyond all bounds, but he acknowledges Lawrence the friend and generous benefactor. What is of most importance is his pity for Lawrence. This pity, akin to Miriam's, sets the memoir in a totally different category from the books wherein individuals have built Lawrence up, for their own satisfaction, into a Messiah or a demon lover." Louise Bogan

+ Nation 149:153 Ag 5 '39 440w

"Not an outstanding memoir but interesting for its picture of the novelist living serenely among 'men he was at peace with.' "

+ New Repub 98:56 F 15 '39 40w

"Far the best account of Lawrence that I have read. The reason is partly that the Danes, as they were always called, were of a less complicated, more manly and sensible type than the run of disciples, partly that only by living at close quarters could one get to know Lawrence's best side, which in my experience was when he was cooking and doing the housework and arranging all the details of daily life. . . Merrild is the only writer about the later Lawrence who gives any idea of how delightful he was to live with when things went well." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 15:1066 Je 25 '38 1350w

"Knud Merrild has put together quite the best book on Lawrence that has, as yet, been written. It is good because it is honest and unpretentious. It is important because it is frank and makes no apologies for the impossible side of Lawrence. . . That Merrild has encompassed this complicated personality in his book is ample testimony to his honesty of observation and ability to transfer to the reader what he has seen." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 F 5 '39 1600w

New Yorker 14:67 F 4 '39 40w

"This book is by a man of wide nature and an instinctive belief in justice. In the second place, he is a man of talent, and so is sensitive to beauties of spirit and proportion in human beings. This quality was essential to understanding, not to say living with, Lawrence. Not once does Merrild harbor anything but a broad and glowing affection for a man whom he has seen at his best and also at his worst." Paul Horgan

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 F 11 '39 750w

"It is a valuable and, within the limits so honestly set by the author, an admirable portrait." Catherine Carswell

+ Spec 161:74 Jl 8 '38 440w

"Mr Merrild is a candid, but not unkindly, narrator. With the aid of letters and passages from Lawrence's books, he achieves a persuasive close-up picture of Lawrence's mind and personality, without probing or suggesting any psychological mysteries. . . . Despite redundancy and occasional tedium of details, he achieves a narrative which creates its own interest not only as a portrayal of Lawrence but as an account of mildly adventurous experiences and agreeable observations in a strange land."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 29 '39 1150w

"Among the flood of memoirs—mostly by women—which have appeared since Lawrence's death in 1930, this one comes nearest to giving an objective picture of Lawrence."

+ Time 33:71 F 13 '39 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Je 18 '38 2500w

METCALF, CLYDE HILL. A history of the United States Marine corps. 584p il maps $4.50 Putnam

359 U.S.—History, Naval. United States. Marine corps 39-6652

Comprehensive, sober history of the United States Marine corps from the time of the Revolution to the present. Index.

"This is a readable and entertaining book. . . The author, who is the officer in charge of the historical section of the marine corps at Headquarters in Washington, has had access to all the official records, and he has used his sources in the most scholarly fashion. . . The concluding chapters deal with the participation of the marine corps in the World War, which the author considers by far its greatest experience. He has done full justice to this part of his subject and has presented a clear, accurate, and entertaining account of the various battles in which the 'soldiers of the sea' had no insignificant share." R. W. Neeser

+ Am Hist R 45:411 Ja '40 380w

Reviewed by R. F. Armknecht
Books p11 Jl 2 '39 1150w

"A highly interesting volume." C. W. E. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 25 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 17:811 Jl '39 20w

Reviewed by L. C. Speers
N Y Times p14 Ap 23 '39 550w

Pratt p7 winter '40

"The period from the Civil War down occupies more than three-fifths of the book; and this is correct, since the marines, long in existence, have assumed an important role in the national military and political economy only in recent years. They have borne the unpleasant burden of the occupation and administration of many banana republics in that period. We have heard often of the why of these invasions, both pro and con; but never before this book has anyone thought of the how—the heroisms and forbearances of men whose names never made the headlines. For this Col. Metcalfe deserves our gratitude and that of the corps which has found so good a chronicler." F. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 8 '39 160w

METROPOLITAN OPERA GUILD, INCORPORATED. The Metropolitan opera guide; by Mary Ellis Peltz and Robert Lawrence; il. by Alexandre Serebriakoff. 512p $1.25 Modern lib.

782 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. (W)

Guide to the operas now in the repertoire of the Metropolitan, as selected by the present general manager, Edward Johnson. Short résumés are given, and the music of some of the best known themes in each. Bibliography, list of operatic recordings, and alphabetical list of operas.

Booklist 36:152 D 15 '39

"The book avoids the horrors of libretto English and presents the plots as clearly as the involutions of opera sentimentality permit." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 50w

"The authors have given us a pedestrian and amateurish compilation of opera plots. . . Not a sensible word about opera and its own esthetics, not a sentence which would indicate a faint understanding of the soul-searching qualities of the lyric drama, nothing but prosaic marginal directions of stage movements and such elaborate and authentic historical data as the exact degree of membership of certain composers in the Legion of Honor, and the burying place of the original heroine of 'La Traviata'. Even the scant introductions to operatic periods are liberally sprinkled with inaccuracies." P. H. Lang

— Sat R of Lit 21:11 Ja 6 '40 750w

METZELTHIN, MRS PEARL VIOLETTE. World wide cook book; menus and recipes of 75 nations; decorations by Tony Sarg. 681p $3 Messner

641.5 Cookery 40-2562

Contains menus, usually two each, from more than seventy countries, and over 500 recipes. Countries are taken up individually with a brief essay on the characteristic customs and foods preceding the menus and recipes. The final pages contain a bibliography, purchasing guide and indexes.

"I am not prepared to say whether the recipes are all authentic (there are some from Ecuador, Alaska and Indo-China) but they are appetizing, which seems to me is just as important. The longest and most interesting chapter in the book is on Chinese cooking, and I am prepared to accept every word in this section as gospel, since nobody would conceivably have the courage to take on Chinese cooking who hadn't the wit to understand it. The author also has had the good sense to leave culinary curiosities alone, unless they happen to be savory as well as freakish, so that the volume can be used as a dependable kitchen guide as well as a library item." Sheila Hibben

+ Books p12 D 17 '39 240w

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 80w

MEYER, JACOB GIBBLE; HAMER, OLIVER STUART, and GRISSO, LILLIAN. The Old World and its gifts; unified social studies. 552p il maps $1.96 Follett

910 Geography—Juvenile literature. History—Juvenile literature 39-770

This textbook for courses in social studies develops the thought of the American heritage from Old World lands, by means of travel sketches, history summaries, and many pictures of life and customs in Europe, Asia and Africa. The authors are professors in Manchester college, Indiana, and a teacher in an elementary school in India.

"Despite the criticisms cited, the book is well written, and its language has been kept well within the range of the grades for which it is intended. If world-history must be taught to pupils in the intermediate grades, the writer knows of no textbook better adaped to that purpose than The Old World and Its Gifts." M. L. Whittaker

+ — El School J 40:394 Ja '40 700w

Reviewed by J. K. Dillon

Library J 64:614 Ag '39 80w

MICHEL, EDOUARD. Flemish painting in the XVIIth century; tr. from the French by Prudence Montagu-Pollock [ed. by André Gloeckner]. 46p 96pl $3.48 Art bk.

759.9 Paintings, Flemish 39-27661

Brief discussion of the Flemish school of painting, followed by examples of the work of seventeenth century painters, with short biographical sketches of each. Most space is devoted to Rubens and Van Dyke. Index.

Booklist 36:12 S '39

"Prof. Michel gives a well balanced survey of the entire school. He adds, by the way, a useful table of the chief painters. This is an instance of the art book as handy picture book, adequate as to its text but with the emphasis placed upon the illustrations. Some of the best of these are in color but most of them are handsome gravure prints." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p3 D 17 '39 80w

"The reproductions in gravure are upon the whole satisfactory and sometimes particularly good. This, however, cannot be said of the examples offered in a four-color process. It might, in the circumstances, have been better had black and white been used throughout." E. A. Jewell

+ — N Y Times p16 O 15 '39 150w

MICKLEM, NATHANIEL. National socialism and the Roman Catholic church. 244p il $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

261.7 Roman Catholic church in Germany. Church and state in Germany. Germany—Nazi movement [39-22727]

"The dolorous history of Catholic Christianity in the Third Reich is of such importance, interest and pathos that there ought to be a wide audience for the book which the Principal of Mansfield College, himself an Anglican, has written on the basis of information most of which was obtained from private but authoritative sources. . . National Socialism is itself a religion that will brook no rivals. Principal Micklem establishes this difficult point in masterly fashion, buttressing his argument on Nazi word and deed." Commonweal

"The author has made a conspicuous contribution to the understanding of the mighty struggle now going on in Germany for the perpetuation of the Christian religion. His book deserves the close attention of scholars and careful reading by large numbers of people whose interests are more general." J. K. Pollock

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1105 D '39 400w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Books p20 N 5 '39 600w

"Packed full of information, clearly arranged and well documented." J. McS.

+ Cath World 149:757 S '39 250w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 56:1473 N 29 '39 800w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss

Churchman 153:16 S 1 '39 350w

"A good many things that happened are not included in the survey; and it is rather lacking in information on several important topics, for example the labor and youth movements. Yet even so it is highly informative, reliable and ably written. I think I may say that anyone interested in getting the facts in the case may have implicit confidence in the author, though he might not wish to assent to every nuance of opinion or inference." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 30:383 Ag 11 '39 460w

Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 50w

MICKLEM, NATHANIEL—Continued

"Dr. Micklem's book is a remarkably thorough piece of work, the result of close scrutiny of all the available material." J. L. Hammond

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:986 Je 24 '39 700w

"The present work is a model of its kind. Dr. Micklem is to be congratulated in the first place on the success with which he has assembled his facts. . . He is further to be congratulated on his historical detachment. Much of the material which he has to notice shocks him both as a scholar and as a Christian, but he never allows himself to be diverted from exposition to denunciation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Je 17 '39 900w

MIDDLETON, HERBERT. Systematic qualitative organic analysis. 279p il $2.50 Longmans [8s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

543.8 Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative. Chemistry, Organic [39-16337]

"This book on qualitative organic analysis appears to have been designed for pharmaceutical students with a quite elementary knowledge of organic chemistry. The general scheme follows Mulliken closely, the first classification being made on the basis of elementary analysis and physical state. But little emphasis is placed on solubility for further subdivision. About 600 pure organic compounds, including most of those given in the British Pharmacopoeia, are considered. These have been carefully examined by the author, and a systematic procedure which gives decisive results is described." Am Chem Soc J

"The newer derivatives for many classes of compounds have been omitted. The manual therefore does not seem well suited for the general course in qualitative organic analysis, but it may well be recommended for those students for whom it primarily was written." T. L. Jacobs

Am Chem Soc J 61:1934 Jl '39 220w

Nature 144:366 Ag 26 '39 230w

MIDDLETON, ROBERT DUDLEY. Dr Routh. 278p il $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Routh, Martin Joseph [39-4575]

"Martin Joseph Routh was born in 1755, was elected President of Magdalen at the age of thirty-six, and died in his hundredth year, still President of Magdalen. His most important work was the Reliquiae Sacrae, five volumes of texts collected from the more obscure pre-Nicene Fathers. . . The Reliquiae earned Dr. Routh a European reputation. Moreover, as one who linked the theology of the Nonjurors and the Caroline Divines with that of the Oxford Movement, he is still venerated among High Churchmen, and it is principally for their benefit, no doubt, that a full and scholarly life now appears." New Statesman & Nation

"This story will, to be sure, appeal more to people on the other side of the water, but all who are interested in the lives and opinions of great men of the past, or in particular, in the thought-world of Oxford at the beginning of the Tractarian Movement, cannot fail to be entertained by this well-written biography." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 153:16 F 1 '39 160w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 16:459 S 24 '38 1200w

"This is a work of piety and scholarship. It will interest those who are interested in the Church of England, perhaps those who are interested in Oxford, most of all, there can be no doubt, members of Magdalen." A. L. Rowse

Spec 161:524 S 30 '38 800w

"A popular life of Routh would be, perhaps, a contradiction in terms; but if Mr. Middleton had kept a chronological sequence and had drawn in the background of Oxford life with greater detail he might have gone some way to attracting a wider public."

Times [London] Lit Sup p601 S 17 '38 900w

MIDLETON, WILLIAM ST JOHN FREMANTLE BRODRICK, 1st earl of. Records and reactions, 1856-1939. 318p il $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Murray, J]

B or 92 [39-21581]

Memoirs of an English politician, who first entered parliament nearly sixty years ago, when Beaconsfield and Gladstone were still alive. He has known twelve prime ministers and held cabinet offices under Queen Victoria and King Edward. Anecdotes of many of the famous persons whom he has known during his long life appear. Index.

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel

Books p16 Jl 23 '39 800w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 29 '39 140w

"Though prosaic, his Memoirs nevertheless have some interesting stories, not least among them the picture of the Kaiser being genuinely offended that the English would not help him to snatch South America from under the nose of the Monroe Doctrine." V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '39 90w

Foreign Affairs 18:380 Ja '40 10w

"Not an important book, but the student of politics will find occasional passages of real interest." Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 17:617 Ap 22 '39 300w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p9 Jl 2 '39 850w

"Lord Midleton's memoirs possess all the essential virtues. They are straightforward, human, unpretentious, and always more apt to minimise than to magnify the writer's part in great events. But many of the events are great enough to give the volume real historical value." H. W. H.

+ Spec 162:722 Ap 28 '39 650w

"It would be an exaggeration to say that [this] autobiography stands in the first rank but it is of considerable interest and is certain to be consulted by all future students of his times."

Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Ap 8 '39 750w

MIKHAILOV, NICHOLAS. Land of the Soviets; a handbook of the U.S.S.R; tr. from the Russian by Nathalie Rothstein. 351p il maps $2.50 Furman

914.7 Russia

An official handbook on the economic development of the Soviet Union. The author is a Soviet geographer. Index.

Foreign Affairs 18:378 Ja '40 10w

"A well written, richly illustrated and highly informative handbook."

+ New Repub 100:251 O 4 '39 30w

MILES, ARNOLD. How criminals are caught; il. by Theodore Eron. (Peoples lib) 123p 60c Macmillan

364 Crime and criminals. Police—U.S. 39-29408

The book describes how the police go about the capture of a criminal, and how the public can aid in their work. The text contains many real cases. The author is secretary of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Booklist 36:152 D 15 '39

"This convenient-sized volume is a worth while addition to the growing list of the Peoples Library. The illustrations, unfortunately, give little aid to the printed text. However, the reader will enjoy the unaffected, easy style of Mr. Miles and should gain a new respect for America's police." Jay Beck

+ — Books p9 Ja 7 '40 400w

Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 40w

Christian Century 56:1476 N 29 '39 80w

Wis Lib Bul 36:12 Ja '40

MILES, JOSEPHINE. Lines at intersection. 58p $1.60 Macmillan

811 39-4687

First collection of poems by a young American author. "The cumulative effect . . . is that of a cool detachment, an ordered observation that stands just beyond the poetic substance and yet molds it to a purpose." (N Y Times) Some of the poems have been previously published in periodicals.

Booklist 35:303 My 15 '39

"The poems in this book show some neat observation, some technical care and most of them reflect or employ the contemporary scene; the usual never-never of the American poetess is almost absent. Miss Miles is aware of the world in which she lives and this is to her credit. But the present limitations of her verse have their basis precisely in this awareness." Peter Craft

+ — Books p12 S 3 '39 120w

"The title is a true description of this verse that is clean, aware, and unadorned."

+ Forum 101:240 Ap '39 20w

New Repub 99:288 Jl 12 '39 40w

"If Miss Miles will deepen her emotional center and shatter some of her composure she is very likely to achieve an eminence in American poetry that still lies some distance ahead of this her first book. Her promise is as evident as her carefully combed independent phrasing, but that profounder utterance that is the secret of lasting poetry (whether it be personally emotional or metaphysical) has as yet not been reached by her disciplined mind." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 23 '39 320w

"A fine first book whose poems combine intellect and emotion working at even speed."

+ New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 30w

Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 26 '39 220w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 150w

Time 34:75 O 9 '39 250w

MILLAN, VERNA CARLETON (MRS IGNACIO MILLAN). Mexico reborn. 312p $3 Houghton

917.2 Mexico—Politics and government. Mexico—Economic conditions 39-24714

A combination of autobiography and a detailed commentary on Mexican manners and morals of the present day. The author is the American wife of a Mexican doctor, and has lived in Mexico since 1933. Index.

"Mrs. Millan's book has two very real merits. It is honest, and it gives one the sensation of living in the country, a thing by no means easy to do when writing of a country so enigmatic and exasperating as Mexico. . . A general looseness of style, and a few errors, such as the statement that the Cedillo revolt occurred in 1939, do not greatly rob Mrs. Millan's book of its value." Ralph Bates

+ — New Repub 102:59 Ja 8 '40 650w

"The autobiographical passages are stilted, self-conscious and a trifle too soul-searching for comfort; while the broader political interpretations appear altogether too much inspired to be trustworthy. Fortunately, the bulk of the volume consists of a very readable, entertaining, if slightly one-sided, commentary on Mexico, always well above the level of the commonplace and sometimes stingingly suggestive of the 'enfant terrible.'" R. L. Martin

+ — N Y Times p9 O 22 '39 1150w

"Mrs Millan writes with intensity, and her earnestness finds expression at times in overemphasis. There is no part of her book, however, which can be labeled dull. 'Mexico Reborn' undoubtedly summarizes an intelligent interpretation of Mexico, despite some inconsistencies, and it gives to the American reader, whether he likes it or not, a better understanding of how the Cardenas policies, especially in regard to oil, came to be formed, and why they are likely to be maintained in face of American disapproval."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 N 17 '39 850w

MILLARD, RUTH TRACY. To-night and forever. 304p $2 Penn

39-10758

Tho Dr Duane was a psychologist, a behaviorist, when he heard that his wife had left another man's room at three in the morning, he forgot his psychology, and shot the other man. This act brought out the innocent lovers' secret, branded them in society, but finally gave them happiness.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p12 Je 4 '39 150w

"A light romance of a pleasant type. . . The leading characters are rather too highminded at all times to appear wholly as in real life, and the outcome of the plot is a little too stereotyped."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT (MRS E. J. BOISSEVAIN). Huntsman, what quarry? 94p $2 Harper

811 (W) 39-27460

Collection of lyrics and sonnets. One section of the book reflects the poet's feelings for Czechoslovakia, China, and Spain. Another group of poems is in memory of her friend, Elinor Wylie.

"There are two things in Miss Millay's poetry which justify its claim to excellence. The first is a simple epigrammatic neatness and inevitability, and the second is an incantatory control of rhythm, especially in her use of the sonnet. Both are well illustrated in this new volume: a poem such as 'The True Encounter' exemplifies the first, and the concluding group of sonnets exemplifies the second. They are musical, they are nicely controlled, they have a turn or twist which often scrapes the edge of universality. . . Yet Miss Millay's faults are here, too. A thoroughly successful poem is we may say, like the human skin: though it is essentially one substance, it may roughly be divided into three layers. There is the sensuous appeal of the sound, there is the emotion, and there is the pattern of thought. If, for purposes of analysis, the three are illegitimately separated, what we find, as far as Miss Millay's poems are concerned, is that the first two layers are usually firm enough, but that the third is likely to be flimsy." Theodore Spencer

+ — Atlantic Je '39 400w

Booklist 35:327 Je 1 '39

"Here, once more, is that exact geometry of image and idea which Miss Millay has made almost a walled estate of her own. Going among her lyrics is like going into the woods before the leaves are completely out, going among delicate tracery of shadows and finding the sharp-pointed arbutus and wintergreen berries hanging like red Chinese lanterns from bronze leaves. Every breath is timed, every line is true, every curve seems right; every track of mouse, every wing that leans away from the wind 'adroiter than a sail.' . . I think the reader will see a great advance in these new songs. And it ought to discourage those critics who keep warning us that Edna Millay will outgrow her essentially youthful subjects of love and the worshipfulness of the moment. This advance is a widening of Edna Millay's reach to take in troubled and eager lovers of life en masse." R. P. T. Coffin

MILLAY, E. ST V.—Continued

+ Books p3 My 21 '39 1550w

"What most seriously mars her work is the absence from it of that depth of thought, that intellectual flame, which irradiates all truly great poetry. It is sad, therefore, to look back from the vantage point of this book and realize the extent to which its author has failed to live up to the promise of her first, because all these years she has been at the mercy of her feelings and has therefore apparently never had the great experiences out of which great poetry is made." B. M. K.

— Cath World 149:631 Ag '39 500w

"Miss Millay is more than mistress of the facile phrase. She is a mature though not a spiritual poet. She looks to the senses for enjoyment, to the earth for comfort, without expecting anything of lasting value from either. Hers is a major talent that finds itself unable to reach to any spiritual heights." John Ritchey

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

Reviewed by Charles Powell

Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 1 '39 400w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Nation 148:618 My 27 '39 450w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 99:135 Je 7 '39 600w

Reviewed by Stephen Spender

New Statesman & Nation 18:464 S 30 '39 100w

"Distinguished as her poems always are in their lyric perfection, there is also evident here a deepening of thought. One may say that this comes of maturity, but the obvious answer is not quite enough. Miss Millay, in growing older, should, by formula, lose something of the pristine sprightliness, something of the magic of her earlier poetic touch. But this, most happily, is not the case." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p4 My 21 '39 440w

"Miss Millay has always fought, and is still fighting, injustice. She is still subject to moods of self-disgust as well as to moods of mutiny against mankind's infringements on its own human decency. Once or twice she contemplates a truce which 'slackens the mind's allegiance to despair.' And twice . . . she writes as beautiful lyrics as she has ever written. But what has happened to the kind of development announced in 'Wine from These Grapes' the most kindly disposed reader cannot say. If Miss Millay should give up for good the idea that 'wisdom' and 'peace' are stuffy concepts, perhaps that development might be renewed." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 15:92 My 20 '39 600w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld

Poetry 55:47 O '39 600w

Pratt p23 summer '39

"The old figures of speech have not been discarded; nor the sentimental ones nor the archaic ones. . . But though few of the poems show any development from 'The Buck in the Snow' or 'Wine from These Grapes,' the section devoted to comments on Spain and the three sonnets at the end of the book deserve special attention. The war poems may be said to represent Miss Millay's effort to adapt her idiom to the issues she thinks she should be discussing. This is not to imply any hypocrisy or mere opportunism on her part. . . An indication that Miss Millay is not entirely unaware of the dilemma and may yet purge her writing of these synthetic elements is contained in the three sonnets at the end of the book. There is a refreshing realism in them." Selden Rodman

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 20 '39 950w

"Miss Millay has a practised and skilful hand, her phrasing is well chosen, and she writes her particular kind of poem as well as anyone living. The best of Huntsman, What Quarry? is rare enough to survive the usages of fashion; particularly Theme and Variations, with its sardonic final section." Desmond Hawkins

+ Spec 163:300 Ag 25 '39 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 480w

Time 34:72 O 9 '39 400w

"For the most part there is a real advance in that true simplicity which should be the crown of a cultivated artistry, equally when the verse is metrically free as in 'English Sparrow' or when it is technically bound as in 'Three Sonnets in Tetrameter.' Her gift, too, for crystallizing what is poignant in a personal relationship is as great as ever and in a longer poem entitled 'Theme And Variations' she exercises it with an unusual imaginative intensity. Some of the verses, too, in tribute to Elinor Wylie are among her best, and there are lyrics such as 'The Rabbit' in which she sees nature as vividly as she finds a human meaning in it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Jl 1 '39 480w

Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

Reviewed by Eugene Davidson

Yale R n s 29:171 autumn '39 210w

MILLER, ALICE (DUER) (MRS H. W. MILLER), and MYERS, SUSAN. Barnard college; the first fifty years; with a foreword by Nicholas Murray Butler. 194p il $2 Columbia univ. press

376.8 Barnard college 39-31292

A history to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Barnard college, written by two of its graduates. "The authors have outlined the history of the college decade by decade, followed it through the war and the depression, traced the enlargement of its activities and interests, shown the importance of its position in New York City." (N Y Times) Index.

"This history of its first fifty years will be welcomed not only by graduates of Barnard, but by those everywhere who care for the education of women as a significant feature of American social and cultural advance." C. M. Thompson

+ Books p2 N 26 '39 850w

"A welcome contribution to the history of education."

+ N Y Times p4 N 26 '39 200w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 D 23 '39 1000w

MILLER, ALPHONSE BERTRAM. Thaddeus Stevens. 440p $4 Harper

B or 92 Stevens, Thaddeus 39-10116

Biography of the bitter leader of the radical Republican wing in Congress, who was an abolitionist during and after the Civil war, and led the impeachment proceedings against Andrew Johnson. The work is based on years of research. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by B. B. Kendrick

Am Hist R 45:478 Ja '40 230w

"Miller's fine octavo of over four hundred pages is a scholarly work and his treatment judicial. . . Not every author is so fortunate with his first book as Alphonse B. Miller is with his, in substance, treatment, style, and subject. Both he and his readers are to be congratulated." B. A. Konkle

+ Ann Am Acad 205:180 S '39 220w

"Mr. Miller's biography of 'Old Thad' is neither exhaustive nor critical, but it is lively and shrewd, excellent in its appreciation of character, well porportioned, and reasonably accurate. If it does not rehabilitate Stevens it does re-create him; if it does not justify the ruthlessness of the radical policy it goes far to explain it." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p5 My 14 '39 1350w

Reviewed by P. H. Buck
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 700w

Reviewed by Edwin Mims, Jr.
New Repub 100:275 O 11 '39 1200w

"Mr. Miller has written what is in some respects the best life of Thaddeus Stevens yet produced. While not at all distinguished in style, it is excellent in its thorough exploration of the sources." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p4 My 7 '39 1650w

"Stevens' virtues and flaws were fascinating and Mr. Miller does ample justice to them."
+ New Yorker 15:123 Ap 29 '39 60w
Pratt p26 autumn '39

"This reviewer is in disagreement with many of the author's attitudes toward Reconstruction. He almost adopts Stevens's tone toward Andrew Johnson, whose chief sin as President was that he believed in making peace something other than a curse for the prostrate South. But be this as it may, the book is well written, its style has movement, pungency, and occasionally delightful satire. Furthermore, Mr. Miller does not insist upon making Old Thad anything other than what he was. He paints him as of the earth more than earthy. And he stands out as an extraordinary man." G. F. Milton
+ Sat R of Lit 20:12 My 13 '39 800w
Time 33:87 My 1 '39 320w
Wis Lib Bul 35:166 O '39

MILLER, CHARLES CONSTANT. Cannibal caravan; with an introd. by L. L. Stevenson. 318p il map $2.75 Furman

919.5 Netherland New Guinea 39-19172

The author and his wife spent their honeymoon in Dutch New Guinea, where Mr Miller was recording the life of the head-hunters for the movies. The account of this adventure is exciting, humorous, and exotic.

"Attention, Dick Tracy and all the rest of you adventure mongers. For close calls 'Cannibal' Miller can give you pointers and material enough to keep you going for months." M. C. Hubbard
Books p9 Jl 16 '39 500w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 410w

"Tops in horror is the chapter in which the author tells of becoming chief of a tribe of cannibals and taking part in a head-hunting raid on a native village. A combination of circumstances over which he had little control let him in for an experience that he would have given a good deal to forego, and there are at least a few people who will feel the same way about reading the story." E. F. Allen
N Y Times p9 Jl 16 '39 700w
New Yorker 15:88 Jl 8 '39 30w
No Am 248:207 autumn '39 170w

"Miller has brought back a passel of tales which raise the hair and eyebrows as high as any published since William Seabrook's Jungle Ways."
Time 34:67 Jl 10 '39 330w

MILLER, DAYTON CLARENCE. Sparks, lightning, cosmic rays; an anecdotal history of electricity. 192p il $2.50 Macmillan

537 Electricity—Juvenile literature (W) 39-27499

Three lectures for young people, delivered at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, have been elaborated and illustrated for this volume. The first part deals with early electrical experiments; the second with the discoveries of Franklin and his contemporaries; the third with cosmic rays. Index.

Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39

"The presentation is as clear as it can be made."
+ Christian Century 56:743 Je 7 '39 90w

"The author, a recognized authority in this field, has a real talent for popular exposition, and the numerous illustrations add much to the charm and value of the narrative."
+ New Repub 99:287 Jl 12 '39 50w

"The illustrations are as crystal clear as the narrative. Everything has been designed for simplicity and for maximum pedagogical effectiveness. The book may well serve as a model for future expositions and should stimulate as many similar popularizations as possible. There are altogether too few of such excellent presentations where conditions exist among the laity for an almost inexhaustible demand." W. M. Malisoff
+ N Y Times p4 Je 18 '39 950w

"Professor Miller must have done considerable research into the literature not only in the older branches of electricity but also in its more modern aspects as shown by discussion of and reference to original papers in cosmic rays. The book is well written and illustrated and reminds one of those other delightful books which have come as a result of children's Christmas Lectures, those of the Royal Society. It should prove pleasurable and profitable reading not only to those familiar with the science of electricity but to the general public who can gain an insight into the way this science has come about." R. J. Stephenson
+ R of Scientific Instruments 10:292 O '39 600w

Reviewed by G. R. Harrison
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 15 '39 270w

"As optional reading in school courses, Dr Miller's book should do much to stimulate scientific interest."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 11 '39 240w
Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

MILLER, GLADYS. Decoratively speaking; the essentials and principles of interior decoration; with line drawings by John Burton Brimer, and phot. by Bruce Moore. 374p $4 Doubleday

747 House decoration (W) 39-27927

Outline of the essentials and principles of interior decoration. The author begins her survey with Italian and Spanish influences on decoration, discusses seventeenth-century English furnishings, late seventeenth and early eighteenth century, Georgian, colonial and early American, French period, nineteenth and twentieth century furnishings. Photographs and line drawings. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:106 N 15 '39

"Very wisely, the author has written from the broad viewpoint of underlying principles of decoration, rather than taking up current trends. The result is a book of value to every one who has ever given more than a passing thought to furniture design or room arrangement."
+ Books p13 F 4 '40 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"An interesting and comprehensive survey."
+ N Y Times p16 S 24 '39 280w
Pratt p15 winter '40

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Next to my heart. 256p $2 Appleton-Century 39-2494

Story of five men and a girl—the girl, an attractive motherless waif, and four of the men, members of the Towne family who took her into their home and, one after another, fell in love with her. The fifth man is her father, a race-track gambler.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 F 5 '39 300w

MILLER, HELEN—Continued

"[Mrs] Miller hasn't spent years deviously leading her heroines to happy endings for nothing, and even Kathie who is far from the best of this author's creations is 'done right by' too." M. P. J.

Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 140w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p23 F 12 '39 200w

Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Song after midnight. 245p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

39-32821

Jo B. Crane's grandmother had wanted to be an artist so when Jo (short for Josephine) showed signs of talent she was sent off to New York to study. But Jo fell in love with an art teacher and married him only to discover that their ideas of money and honesty were incompatible. Eventually, after a brief interlude in Louisiana, Jo escapes back to the Texas ranch home, her own painting, grandmother—and a man who can give her real happiness.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 O 8 '39 230w

"Mrs. Miller has learned from her experience in writing the value of dramatic contrast and has made skillful use of it in her treatment of characters and setting. Her story is a truly absorbing one." Regina Madden

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 90w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 240w

MILLER, HENRY. The cosmological eye. 363p $2.50 New directions

818

"This book, whose title—The Cosmological Eye—might well be a description of Miller's artistic role, presents a comprehensive picture of his whole literary activity. It is made up of stories, sketches, an autobiographical note, philosophical and critical essays, and prose poems, revealing the scope of Miller's talent and the versatility of his style." Publisher's note

"The author of some half a dozen books, all of them published in France, Miller has met with hostility if not anathema in his native land. His works are difficult to obtain here, and the present volume . . . is the first to issue from an American press. In spite of its multiform character the book has unity, presenting as it does the several facets of the hard, sharp, brilliant individual whose mind was its matrix. . . There is not much music in this book. But if we are ever again to hear a song that will rise above the bellowings of the dictators, the shrieks of the injured and the refined susurrations of the damned, Henry Miller will be among those who have helped to unleash that music." Babette Deutsch

Books p30 D 3 '39 1250w

"At his best Miller is as unpredictable and individualist as Saroyan, and much more eloquent and intelligent. Like Saroyan, and Proust, and Joyce, to all of whom he has been compared, he is at times breath-taking in his conceit, and masochistic in his self-interest. A case might even be made out for the madness of Mr. Miller, but he manages to seem so much saner than the world we all live in that his madness is a relief." Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 19:293 D '39 550w

Reviewed by Dunstan Thompson

New Repub 102:61 Ja 8 '40 850w

"Mr. Miller is a sort of surly Saroyan. His I-am-God attitudes are childish and may be discounted, but stories like 'Max' (an X-ray of suffering) and 'The Tailor Shop' (low-life horrors, powerfully exploited) are not in the least childish and are well worth shivering at. Those who have an affection for vanguard writers and are not afraid of a little sewerage should look up Mr. Miller and his Dali dialogues." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:105 N 18 '39 200w

"This volume is an introduction to Miller, a collection of stories, essays, surréaliste rhapsodies, and chapters from longer works. As such it is fairly representative of the man. And it proves (and the proof was needed to offset the myth) that he is not only a satirist of Swiftian power, but also a very great master of language. Unfortunately, it cannot suggest his ability to sustain." Dudley Fitts

Sat R of Lit 21:12 D 16 '39 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 250w

MILLER, HENRY SIEFKE. Price control in fascist Italy. 146p $2 Columbia univ. press

338.5 Prices—Italy 39-1222

Study of price control in Italy during the last seventeen years, based largely on the author's own researches in Italy. Contents: Early price measures; Central control begins; The effect of the devaluation of the lira; The corporative control of prices; The aims and theory of price control; The origin of the control committees; Trusts and prices; The methods and effectiveness of local control; The statistics of Italian prices. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. N. Whitney

Am Econ R 29:603 S '39 160w

"Even though the very diligence of Dr. Miller's research leads this reviewer to regret that more attention and space were not devoted to a discussion of the theoretical problems of price control and the probable significance of the present system of control for the future development of the Italian economy, the monograph under review is to be welcomed as a distinct contribution in an important new field." W. G. Welk

+ — Ann Am Acad 204:193 Jl '39 410w

"Should be required reading for those who admire the fascist state as the savior of business."

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 14 '39 40w

"This book is an interesting survey of the legal and administrative mechanism of price control in Italy, but it is not much more. This is not the fault of the author, who has done his best to make a lot of bricks with very little straw."

Economist 134:445 Mr 4 '39 250w

Foreign Affairs 17:637 Ap '39 10w

"Mr. Miller has collected a good deal of useful information. He quotes the writings of many Italian economists who used to be considered the exponents of the so-called corporate economy and who have since lost every influence because of their Jewish origin. He has also made an extensive use of official statistics and has come to the conclusion that they are not always reliable." Max Salvadori

+ Living Age. 356:97 Mr '39 460w

Management R 28:180 My '39 30w

Reviewed by Gaetano Salvemini

Nation 150:134 F 3 '40 450w

MILLER, MADELEINE (SWEENY) (MRS JOHN LANE MILLER). My hobby of the cross; stories of a quest in many lands; phot. by J. Lane Miller. 189p $2 Revell

247.9 Cross and crosses 40-1584

Account of the author's experiences in pursuit of her hobby, the collecting of crosses. "This book does not aim to be a history of Christian iconography. . . It is [rather] the informal story of a personal collection made during more than one hundred thousand miles of recent travel to countries which through the centuries produced their own types of Christian symbol. It aims to paint in, the religious, cultural and human-interest backgrounds where we found these crosses." (Foreword) Index.

Christian Century 56:1580 D 20 '39 70w

"There is nothing of the antiquarian (nor of the sectarian!) between the covers. The book preserves and reproduces the glowing vitality due such a mighty Sign. A lovely book!" M. L. E.

+ Churchman 154:34 Ja 15 '40 70w

"By and large, it is an interesting book, though not always free from careless editing. . . On the other hand, this book deserves special praise for the beauty, variety and informative interest of its fine photographs of crosses from many lands and many ages."

+ N Y Times p6 D 31 '39 450w

MILLER, MRS OLIVE KENNON (BEAUPRE). Heroes, outlaws and funny fellows of American popular tales; il. by Richard Bennett. 332p map $2.50 Doubleday

398.21 Legends—America 39-29163

Collection of American folk tales, ranging from Maine to California in locality, and from Paul Bunyan to Johnny Appleseed in character. For children up to fourteen.

Booklist 36:180 Ja 1 '40

"Though collected by a woman, these twenty-five tall tales will surely win the approval of those who think books for children are too effeminate. Well told, humorous, lively and different." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 100w

"More good tales than most Americans realize have sprung from our soil. Will also appeal to grown-ups."

+ New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 40w

"Very uneven."

Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

MILLER, PATSY RUTH. That Flannigan girl. 282p $2.50 Morrow

39-23529

Story of a Hollywood screen actress, the great Denise Arden, who began her career as little Dora Flannigan from St Louis. The story is set in a framework of a few critical days in Denise's life at thirty-four, but the greater part of it tells of earlier years and loves.

" 'That Flannigan Girl' sheds no fresh light on love, but it is an entertaining display of its artifices in an artificial world." George Conrad

Books p8 S 10 '39 350w

"Briefly 'That Flannigan Girl' is an honest slice of Hollywood, a surprising first novel by a young woman who was once a movie star herself." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p23 S 10 '39 500w

Sat R of Lit 20:21 O 7 '39 200w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY. The New England mind; the seventeenth century. 528p $3.75 Macmillan

917.4 Puritans. Religious literature. American literature—New England 39-22760

"This volume is no mere defense of the Puritans from charges they were unduly austere or lugubrious in their attitude toward life and its amenities. What the author attempts, rather, is to prove they were normal people, with a normal interest in becoming prosperous and enjoying the good things of this world—but people who were also endowed with an intellectual and theological outlook which distinguished them in some ways from most other groups. This outlook Prof Miller examines in great detail and from many angles, being convinced it is the key to a proper understanding of early New England." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"Professor Miller's book lays the foundation for a new history of American thought." Edmund Morgan

+ Boston Transcript p13 O 19 '39 750w

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington
Churchman 153:18 O 15 '39 250w

J Philos 37:79 F 1 '40 250w

Reviewed by Odell Shepard
N Y Times p9 D 17 '39 1500w

"Mr. Miller has written a fascinating and indispensable book for all Americans who are interested in the genealogy of their own ideas." William Haller

+ Sat R of Lit 21:38 D 2 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Merle Curti
Social Studies 31:37 Ja '40 450w

"Although the volume demands cooperation on the part of readers, it is well worth the effort to all who are seriously interested in the ideas which molded the thought of early New England's intellectuals. The author has a happy gift of style which helps to make his solid and exhaustive work far from dull, in spite of its concentration on theoretical minutiae." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 1 '39 2000w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY, and JOHNSON, THOMAS HERBERT, eds. The Puritans. 846p il maps $4 Am. bk.

810.8 American literature—Collections. Puritans 38-34986

This work is an anthology of Puritan literature, chiefly of the seventeenth century, with introductions, notes and classified bibliographies. The selections are grouped under the following headings: History; Theory of the state and of society; This world and the next; Manners, customs, and behavior; Biographies and letters; Poetry; Literary theory; Education; Science. There is a general introduction viewing Puritanism as a whole. Index.

"The book should be more widely read than the usual run of anthologies designed for academic consumption. Not only is it a convenient collection of material inaccessible to the ordinary reader, but the introductions and short discussions heading the nine general divisions are, in most cases, masterly summaries of Puritan culture. Mr. Miller's introductory essay, 'The Puritan Way of Life,' compresses into 64 pages a statement of Puritan thought that is comprehensive, lucid, and provocative. . . For richness of content and critical discussion, this anthology is unsurpassed." Daniel Aaron

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 7 '39 440w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:122 Ja 25 '39 330w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p22 Mr 5 '39 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Ag 5 '39 60w

MILLER, REX. I, John; an autobiography of the beloved apostle. 255p map $2.50 Putnam, George P.

226.5 Bible. New Testament—St John. John, Saint, the Evangelist 39-31041

"Rex Miller has undertaken and successfully carried out the presentation in the first person of John's story as recorded in the Fourth Gospel, supplying certain background not appearing in the narrative itself and projecting the highly appealing picture against a screen of authentic history." Christian Science Monitor

---

Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 40w

"Rex Miller is well known as author, teacher, traveler, and journalist. The book is excellent in its literary character and contains no dull pages. To read the first chapter is to insure its perusal to the end." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 11 '39 250w

MILLER, REX—Continued

"Those who accept the traditional view of the apostolic authorship of the Fourth Gospel, the Johannine Epistles and the Apocalypse will find this book interesting, with sufficient historical background, but no imaginative departures from the biblical narrative. It presents an excellent picture of the Christ of the Gospels and of the history of the early church, with the Fourth Gospel as the center. The critical historian will object to it as untrue to the probable facts." W. L. C.

Churchman 153:39 D 1 '39 90w

MILLET, JOHN ALFRED PARSONS. Insomnia; its causes and treatment. 195p il $1.75 Emerson

616.84 Insomnia. Sleep 38-30805

The author, a physician and psychiatrist, discusses the physiology of sleep, the causes of insomnia of various types and degrees, and the ways it may be cured. A few case histories are included, illustrative chiefly of cures by psychiatric methods. Bibliography.

"Excellent survey." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p20 Mr 5 '39 470w

"The style of this book is pleasant and readable. The work contains many pertinent observations and shrewd explanations, and is not over-formal or over-statistical. The reader, being spared unnecessary charts, is 'carried along into' and is 'helped to share' the medical point of view. This book is not, and does not pretend to be, a scientific treatise, but it is an educational one, and can be recommended to anyone interested in insomnia." Dr Merrill Moore

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 15 '38 550w

MILLIKAN, ROBERT ANDREWS. Cosmic rays; three lectures, being the revision of the 1936 Page-Barbour lectures of the Univ. of Va. and the 1937 John Joly lectures of Trinity college, Dublin. 134p il $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

539.7 Cosmic rays (W)

"The three chapters of this compact volume contain the substance of three lectures by the American physicist who has long been the recognized leader in the study of cosmic rays. They were delivered originally as the 1936 Page-Barbour Lectures of the University of Virginia and later in revised form as the 1937 John Joly Lectures of Trinity College, Dublin. The material has been subsequently expanded to include new data secured as recently as the spring of 1939. . . In his first chapter Dr. Millikan considers generally the value of pure science to human society at large and cites the discovery of cosmic rays as a type of scientific progress. The second chapter deals with 'superpower particles' and explains the use of the cloud-chamber as a means of measurement of the energies of 'cosmic-ray bullets.' . . The third chapter, comprising more than half the entire book, discusses the earth's magnetic field and cosmic-ray energies." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 36:195 Ja 15 '40

"Designed for specialists, most of it is intelligible to laymen with only a moderate amount of scientific training."

+ Christian Century 56:1580 D 20 '39 80w

"Dr. Millikan gives an interesting account especially of the American contribution to his fascinating subject, and he has also made some comments on the relation of science to society." J. G. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '39 200w

"There are no philosophizings on the subject and no concessions to the lay reader; and Dr. Millikan and his co-workers have reached no final conclusions."

New Repub 102:30 Ja 1 '40 40w

"There is [a] field of writing in which Millikan ranks very high. It is the field of semi-popular exposition of highly technical matters. His book, 'Electrons (+ and —),' is an outstanding example of the successful semi-popularization of a triumph of science. The present volume, 'Cosmic Rays,' is another example of the same kind. In such reports knowledge takes precedence over mere opinion, and opinions are voiced with elaborate escape clauses." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p4 D 31 '39 1150w

"As the book progresses more and more technical material is brought in, but the author's clarity of style should keep even the layman of limited scientific training abreast of the argument." G. R. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:22 Ja 13 '40 240w

"The genial informality of the original lecture style has fortunately been preserved. The result is a clear account of the remarkable research and stimulating theories pertaining to cosmic rays, that will be read with profit not only by specialists in the field but also by others with no more than general scientific training."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 Ja '40 300w

"This compact little volume, though of particular interest to specialists, can be perused with a great deal of interest and profit by anyone having a basic knowledge of physics and mathematics." C. B. Moore

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 31 '39 1050w

"A brilliant example of scientific exposition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 6 '40 70w

MILLIS, HARRY ALVIN, and MONTGOMERY, ROYAL EWERT. Labor's progress and some basic labor problems. (The economics of labor, v 1) 584p $3.75 (21s) McGraw

331 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. 38-22842

"This book is the first of three volumes on the subject of labor, and also the first of a new series of publications on business and economics which will emphasize 'the changing relationship between government and business.'" (Survey) Contents: Background: problems at issue and methods of attack; The trend of real earnings; Share of the workers in the increasing national income; A survey of wage theory: some explanations of the trends; Distribution of income among persons and families: poverty and inadequate earnings: distribution of wealth; Governmental regulation of wages; Women in industry; Child labor; Hours of work. Name and subject indexes.

"The extended account of income and wages is a well-organized and instructive statistical survey with appropriate emphasis upon methods; but in these 240 pages—and in the entire two volumes, for that matter—there is a total absence of graphic presentation. . . While non-academic readers may find in some of it more than a trace of doctrinal scholasticism, the authors have shown by their own example that theoretical orthodoxy can be compatible with liberalism in labor legislation. The chapters on minimum wages, women in industry, child labor, and hours are, for the most part, compactly and interestingly written." J. B. Andrews

+ — Columbia Law R 39:552 Mr '39 390w

Reviewed by B. M. Selekman

Harvard Business R 17:361 spring '39 230w

"I know that as an intelligent general reader I am supposed to do some thinking and draw some conclusions for myself, but I feel entitled to know what the expert thinks about what he sets himself to discuss. Over these many and useful pages there hovers a gigantic questionmark, the problem of poverty and its alleviation." L. L. Jaffe

Harvard Law R 52:546 Ja '39 750w

Survey 74:335 O '38 50w

"Social insurance has become a major concern of government, and a major problem of economic policy. Until our system of social insurance is adequately organized, financed and administered the job of planning and reforming the social insurance laws must actively worry lawyers, economists and public officials. Professor Millis' volume collects some of the materials which anyone approaching the job needs for background, but it breaks no path toward a solution." E. V. Rostow

Yale Law J 48:920 Mr '39 500w

MILLIS, HARRY ALVIN, and MONTGOMERY, ROYAL EWERT. Labor's risks and social insurance. (The economics of labor, v 2) 453p $3 (18s) McGraw

331 Unemployment—U.S. Insurance, Social. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. 38-31418

In this volume the first six chapters deal with unemployment and sickness; the other two with industrial injuries, and old age security. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Kulp
Ann Am Acad 202:204 Mr '39 650w

"[The chapters on unemployment and sickness] are of outstanding excellence. Comprehensive and concise, they offer one of the best available brief accounts of the problems and of the methods developed to deal with them. . . The two remaining chapters . . . are relatively brief, but they also are comprehensive and serve to round out the picture." J. B. Andrews
+ Columbia Law R 39:553 Mr '39 330w
Economist 134:182 Ja 28 '39 160w

Reviewed by B. M. Selekman
Harvard Business R 17:361 spring '39 230w

Reviewed by L. L. Jaffe
Harvard Law R 52:546 Ja '39 750w

Reviewed by E. V. Rostow
Yale Law J 48:920 Mr '39 500w

MILLS, DOROTHY. Renaissance and reformation times. 345p il maps $2.50 Putnam

940.21 Renaissance. Reformation
(W) 39-14080

A popularly written history suitable for high school students. The book contains illustrations from contemporary sources, maps, and a time chart. Index.

"It is late in the day to introduce to any one trying to make European history a subject in which young Americans will take an interest, the work of Dorothy Mills. She wrote an admirable popular guide to 'The Middle Ages,' of which this is in a sense the continuation. The period from the thirteenth through the sixteenth century is one of the hardest to present to young people with vigor if it is also to be presented—as it should be—without prejudice. It is also one of the most exhilarating to young people if its political, religious and economic changes can be shown with clarity, temperance and an inward drive, as they are here." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 O 1 '39 400w

"Children have the same right as the rest of us to accuracy; if they are asked to memorize dates, the dates should be correct; if they are offered explanations, the explanations should not have been discarded long ago by adult historians. And children have a special right to a clear and significant selection and arrangement of the facts they study. On these counts this book does not seem very suitable for its public." G. M.
— Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 17 '39 140w

"There are a score of well chosen illustrations in the volume; better yet, Miss Mills gives numerous quotations from standard books; to one reader, these seem the best features of this work. Miss Mills's own contributions seem not only elementary (which is to be expected) but lacking in insight, commonplace, unimaginative, and uncritical. While this book may find a place on the shelves of high school libraries, it can hardly be said to meet a long-felt want." A. H. Sweet
— + Social Studies 30:284 O '39 260w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Autobiography [Eng title: It's too late now]. 315p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27813

Autobiography of the English author who has written many essays, plays, and novels, but who is still best-known for his children's books: When We Were Very Young, Winnie-the-Pooh, etc.

Reviewed by Frances Woodward
Atlantic N '39 180w
Booklist 36:66 O 15 '39

"It would be stupid to pretend that some of this [section on] self-called Shirley Temple childhood is not dull, and in the recollector's own phrase, 'too winsome for words.' On the other hand, much of it is downright witty, deeply felt, admirably written, and studded with excellent portraits. . . . I should like to recommend this book. Don't ask me why." David McCord
+ Books p3 O 8 '39 1700w

Reviewed by Katharine Toll
Boston Transcript p1 O 28 '39 360w
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 21 '39 600w

"It's a rare autobiography: it's never solemn." James van Zant
+ Churchman 153:23 D 15 '39 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"This book is worth reading, for it is a real book and an honest one. . . When Mr. Milne turns to a discussion of his work, he permits himself no pose. He is professional, pragmatic, amused. He is satisfied if his peers and his public consider him a good workman who has given them the best he had. . . He has many wise, down to earth observations to make on the subject of writing. There is little or no discussion of his contemporaries, no old scores paid off and no exposés. Mr. Milne is artist enough to feel that this book is history and not a cultural or social history of his time." J. G. E. Hopkins
+ Commonweal 30:568 O 13 '39 400w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:v N '39 120w

" 'It's Too Late Now' is, naturally, a well-mannered and well-written book. One does not turn to it for large and striking observations and suggestions; it is the chronicle of quiet, prosperous, and thoughtful living and with a war interlude. It has wit for its relish, and makes a delightful relief from current news of the world." Ivor Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '39 300w

"If you are a Milne fan already, you will enjoy this; if not, you probably won't."
Nation 149:447 O 21 '39 280w
New Repub 101:27 N 8 '39 40w

"This is a harmless and well-written book, but I found myself getting very angry with it—envy, possibly, of A. A. M.'s fat cut of the douceur de vivre, but irritation, certainly, at the gentlemanly good taste which veils both a shrewd eye on the main chance, and perhaps a fear of life. Such an impeccable, Times—leading article of a petit-maître existence, all success and whimsy, with never an unkind word for anyone else, and a deprecating smile for the humble recipient of so much honour—one wonders what Christopher Robin himself is like now, and what he would make of it." Cyril Connolly
New Statesman & Nation 18:688 N 11 '39 170w

"The book is the very reverse of sentimental, of course. Nor may you call it 'whimsical' unless you are incorrigibly determined to convert that word into a synonym for 'individual,' as seems to be a modern tendency. . . You will have read here of disillusionment and even betrayal, and the facing of sorrow is between the lines; but you will have had a delightful time on every page of this autobiography and you will have been enjoying some soundly nourishing literary fare as well.

MILNE, A. A.—Continued
There are wisdom and bright courage, along with skill, in a personal record that is built with such unassuming sureness of balance and lightened with so serene and deft a wit." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 O 15 '39 1600w
New Yorker 15:78 O 7 '39 30w
Pratt p22 winter '40

"One lays down Mr. Milne's 'Autobiography' with a liking for an honest man. He has always written what he wanted to write. When he has occasionally tried to do otherwise, he has found it impossible. Modest about his achievement, though naturally glad of his successes, he remains an individual whose sense of values seems in a healthy condition." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 O 14 '39 450w

Reviewed by Anthony Powell
Spec 163:480 O 6 '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 1100w

"Milne's Autobiography is a humble, honest, shrewd and vigorous apologia for the integrity of gentle art, the kind that storms no heavens and descends into no hells, that poses no momentous issues and proposes no revolutionary answers, that merely demonstrates the goods which life affords when it is courteously and intelligently lived." George Beiswanger
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:838 N '39 1350w
Time 34:69 O 2 '39 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p564 S 30 '39 850w
Wis Lib Bul 35:186 N '39

MILNE-THOMSON, LOUIS MELVILLE. Theoretical hydrodynamics. 552p il $11.25 (31s 6d) Macmillan

532.5 Hydrodynamics [39-11549]

"This text, requiring no mathematics beyond the elements of calculus, applies both to hydrodynamics and aerodynamics. The author is Professor of Mathematics in the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, England. 'This . . . is the first textbook in English, in which vector methods are used consistently in developing the mathematical theory of fluid motion.'" (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The 508 examples which are included in the book lead one to assume that Prof. Milne-Thomson intends the book to be used for teaching purposes. Unfortunately the price is prohibitive so far as most students are concerned. The book, however, is a valuable asset in any library, as it indicates clearly and fully what has been done and what can be done by classical processes and by vector notation. It is to be hoped that some day Prof. Milne-Thomson will turn his attention to more modern theories, and will give us as clear an exposition of them as he has of the foundations of the subject." L. Rosenhead
+ Nature 142:1136 D 31 '38 1250w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:9 Ja '39

MILTON, JOHN. Milton on himself; Milton's utterances upon himself and his works; ed. with an introduction and notes by John S. Diekhoff. 307p $3.50 (15s) Oxford

B or 92 39-12291

"From the writings of John Milton, in prose and verse, in English, Italian, Latin and Greek, Mr. John S. Diekhoff has extracted and set in order those passages in which the poet speaks of himself and his works, his aspirations and intentions, his motives and achievements. . . The editor has wisely not included those speeches of Satan and Samson which, though it is possible to read into them references to the poet, are nevertheless, on the face of them at any rate, dramatic in intent. Only those things are included which are indisputably autobiographic." Books

"It was a good idea to assemble and arrange logically this large body of material, some of it familiar to every lover of English poetry; other parts of it buried in controversial tracts which are today well-nigh unreadable. The result is a book which will be of service to every student of Milton and his period."
+ Books p12 Je 11 '39 500w

"Mr. Diekhoff has wisely allowed Milton to speak for himself—as he is able to do largely, grandiloquently, passionately, incisively, scurrilously, as the case may be. . . The reader must be on guard against misleading suppressions; he must fill in gaps left either deliberately or because Milton lacked the proper perspective, and he must read the avowedly autobiographical passages against the background of the poet's whole work." S. C. C.
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 10 '39 950w

"It is not a new idea to collect Milton's comments on himself. . . Dr. Diekhoff, however, has made the first complete collection. . . The volume offers stimulating reading for all interested in great men or the art of poetry. For students of Milton it is an essential tool." D. A. Roberts
+ N Y Times p2 Je 4 '39 500w

"Diekhoff has done a great service to those who are interested in Milton and in English thought and history. In assembling Milton's autobiographical passages, he has wisely relegated himself to the background. His excellent introduction and notes make no effort to interpret Milton's writings for us. They serve merely to give us the necessary tools for a clear understanding of Milton's interpretation of himself." M. L. Zisowitz
+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 17 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Je 10 '39 50w

MINER, HORACE. St Denis; a French-Canadian parish. 283p il maps $3 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

917.14 St Denis, Quebec (parish). French Canadians 39-15698

Study of a typical French-Canadian parish in rural Quebec. "The objectives of the study reported in this volume were threefold: the ethnographic description of the old rural French-Canadian folk culture in its least-altered existent form, the analysis of the social structure of the society, and the consideration of the factors responsible for culture change in the direction of urbanization and anglicization." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. C. Lehmann
Am Soc R 4:866 D '39 350w

"St. Denis is not only an excellent contribution to ethnological and social research but it makes first class reading for the layman as well. . . The composition and treatment of the subject is exemplary. From what must have been a vast quantity of material the writer has selected only the cogent and the essential. Therefore, while other students may dispute his conclusions, they will have no basis for a quarrel with his methods. The approach is scientific and dry, of course, but only rarely does the academic manner intrude. This may seem invidious criticism of a book whose primary intent is academic." Eleanor Godfrey
+ Canadian Forum 19:196 S '39 380w

"Dr. Miner has disregarded the traditional points of departure, and, utilizing the objective techniques of the ethnologist, has concerned himself with the basic cultural life of a single French-Canadian parish. The results are both refreshing and instructive. . . The Redfield approach could not have been more skilfully applied. Whatever their failings, Canada could do with more experiments of this kind. The present one demonstrates the richness of the field to be explored." S. D. Clark
+ Canadian Hist R 20:333 S '39 550w
Christian Century 56:582 My 3 '39 70w

"On the whole, Mr. Miner is to be congratulated for his interesting and well written study of the French-Canadian paysan." Louis-André Vigneras

+ New Eng Q 12:573 S '39 1300w

MIRRIELEES, EDITH RONALD. The story writer. 295p $2; school ed $1.50 Little

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Short story 39-1241

A book of advice on how to improve one's technique as a short story writer and what to do "to subdue a particular refractory story." Contents: To use a book; The substance of the story; Time; Points of observation; Repetition; Implication; Characterization; Dialogue; Words; Conclusion: to place a story.

Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39

"This is a sensible book on story-writing with a remarkably sensible first chapter. It will not make a writer out of you in five easy lessons. Nor does it promise that. But it can and does point out certain remediable faults that are common in the work of a great many apprentice writers." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 11 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:100 My '39

MIRZA, YOUEL BENJAMIN. The rug that went to Mecca; il. by Boris Artzybasheff. 60p $1 Stokes

Children in Persia 39-27743

Simply told story of the making of a Persian prayer rug, which was to be taken to Mecca. Each step in the making of the rug is described from the shearing of the lamb, thru the carding, spinning and dyeing of the wool, to the weaving of the rug. For fourth and fifth grades.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"The story is a simple one, told by a man whose childhood was spent among just such scenes. It is beautifully printed and beautifully illustrated with realism and satisfies." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:299 S '39 80w

"Any library that needs material on this one particular phase of Persian life would find this a conscientious account." E. G. Mullan

Library J 64:761 O 1 '39 110w

MITCHELL, DWIGHT EMERSON. Journalism and life; a textbook for secondary schools. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 477p il $1.50 Little

070 Journalism. College and school journalism (W) 39-12610

This textbook for secondary schools presents the principles of journalism and newspaper work illustrated chiefly with examples of work done for high school papers. The author is teacher of journalism at the Boise High school, Boise, Idaho. Selected glossary and bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:373 Jl 15 '39

"This textbook covers thoroughly the topics which have become traditional in state and local courses of study in journalism. . . In addition, the author has devoted an entire section of the book to a discussion of 'Newspapers and Society,' in which appear chapters dealing with the historical backgrounds of American journalism and with libel, freedom of the press, public opinion, community service of the modern newspaper, and the specialized fields of journalism. It is in this section that the author has made a distinctive and valuable contribution. Approximately a third of the book is devoted to the special problems of school publications, including the newspaper, the yearbook, and the handbook. Secondary-school administrators would find it profitable to read the chapter on publicity." R. E. Blackwell

+ School R 47:551 S '39 700w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. Maine summer; il. by Ruth Lepper. 210p map $2.50 Coward-McCann

917.41 Maine—Description and travel (W) 39-27601

Leisurely essays on some of the aspects of the state of Maine, especially that section along the coast from Portland to Eastport. The author discusses islands, quaint villages, antiques, old houses and taverns, shipbuilding, and other matters of interest to summer visitors. Map on end papers. Index.

Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39

"A refreshing bit of travel talk." Elizabeth Ring

+ Books p10 Jl 2 '39 900w

New Repub 99:260 Jl 5 '39 40w

" 'Maine Summer' is as likable and as readable a book as one could ask for. And it is a 'must' book for any one planning to visit the perpetually fascinating land of the pointed fir." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 16 '39 1200w

"His highly unromantic account of Dixie Bull, the pirate of Pemaquid, will be of some interest to readers who know the more picturesque local legends, but on the whole readers acquainted with Maine will find his book inadequate, and others will find little reason for reading it." B. D.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 8 '39 180w

"Mr Mitchell, a light-hearted delver into the recent past of New England, provides his readers with an entertaining sojourn on the Maine coast. If a more searching attitude toward some of the material could be desired, there will be little complaint."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 800w

MITCHELL, JANET. Spoils of opportunity. 290p maps $3 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-4897

"The book gives a lively record of adventure in four continents. Miss Mitchell was born in Australia and her first important post was that of Thrift Service Director to the Government Savings Bank of New South Wales. For experience in this work she toured part of the United States. When the thrift scheme collapsed in the slump of 1931 she went to Manchuria. . . From Harbin she went to Korea, then to Japan, and eventually to London as a free-lance journalist." Manchester Guardian

" 'Spoils of Opportunity' has both the immediacy of an autobiography written in midstream and the gaps reticence is likely to impose on an author whose life is still very much in the making. . . Miss Mitchell must be a good reporter and her book, doubtless according to her intent, is of greater interest as an account of the places she has visited and the events in which she has participated than as a picture of herself as a person." Mary Ross

+ Books p14 F 26 '39 850w

"Miss Mitchell describes it all with that kind of racing fluency which carries the reader easily along. Her judgments are swift and generous and she knows exactly when to leave a subject with its glow of interest unworn by too much handling." M. A. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 21 '38 380w

New Repub 98:176 Mr 15 '39 50w

"It has been a life of conscientious work, serious reflection, frequent uncertainty, and occasionally—as during the strange months in Harbin while the Japanese armies came nearer—great excitement. Through its surprising changes she has developed a steady and somewhat severe philosophy, a serene and courageous faith. It is these as much as the adventures which give the book its interest, and it is the combination of all its different elements which makes it so uncommon: almost, indeed, unique."

+ N Y Times p26 F 26 '39 600w

MITCHELL, JANET—Continued

"Miss Mitchell, who is stated to be the only British woman journalist to make the journey to Mukden and Harbin when the Japanese were occupying Manchuria, finds difficulty in striking a mean between the descriptive, historical, and purely personal elements that make up her story. She is most at home in the world of conferences, delegates, and eager feminine enthusiasms, that hang like a fog round Geneva." Anthony Powell

+ — Spec 161:736 O 28 '38 180w

"There is little attempt to evaluate or analyze the varied scenes and events. Admittedly superficial and sketchy, 'Spoils of Opportunity' is, nevertheless, a readable book reflecting a colorful personality."

Springf'd Republican p14 F 24 '39 360w

" 'Spoils of Opportunity' is not for the reader who likes swift impressions of places, politics and people. For such bold judgments Miss Mitchell is too careful and diffident, too honest and unprejudiced, it may almost be said. The real core of the book is found in the spiritual progress of the author."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p766 D 3 '38 330w

MITCHISON, MRS NAOMI MARGARET (HALDANE), and CROSSMAN, RICHARD HOWARD STAFFORD. Socrates. (World makers and world shakers ser) 109p $1.25 Stackpole sons [1s 6d Hogarth]

B or 92 Socrates [38-24555]

Short biography of Socrates which is also a history of Greece in the fifth century B.C.

Cath World 149:126 Ap '39 110w

"A splendid book to read aloud and a book which should be in every high school library."

+ Horn Bk M 15:40 Ja '39 60w

"Mrs. Mitchison has an unsurpassed gift for bringing the past alive, and Mr. Crossman's recent book showed his brilliant power of explaining the relevance of Plato. In this book they often use modern instances as analogies: the short-lived slaves in the Laurium mines are compared to the negroes on the Rand, the crowded agitation of besieged Athens to Madrid. A more felicitous collaboration could not be achieved. And my only serious complaint is that the sophistry of Socrates himself receives no comment." Roger Marvell

+ New Statesman & Nation 14:26 Jl 3 '37 270w

"Mrs. Mitchison has a delightful imaginative faculty for reconstructing externals. And so she brings back to life for us the 'ugly, bright-eyed smiling man' who was Socrates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p460 Je 19 '37 140w

MITFORD, EVELINE BERTHA. The life of Lord Redesdale; ed. by F. J. Weaver. 311p il $6 (15s) Longmans

B or 92 Redesdale, John Freeman-Mitford, 1st baron 39-24093

"Lord Redesdale, born plain John Mitford, outpaced his barrister father to become, successively, solicitor general, attorney general, speaker of the House of Commons, a peer of the realm, and, from 1802 to 1806, Lord Chancellor of Ireland. His fame rests secure as one of England's foremost judges, but his historical importance rests largely on his plunge into the whirlpool of Irish politics, and his manner of navigating those troublous waters is the main theme of this biography. . . The author of this work was a collateral descendant of Lord Redesdale. Her death in 1931 found the manuscript not quite completed, so her friends prevailed upon Professor F. J. Weaver to round it into shape for publication." Boston Transcript

"The book gives evidence of careful research, is thoroughly documented, and is as free from bias as one could possibly expect. Indeed, the author seems to have gone out of her way to be cool and detached, with the result that there is no effort to make warm, human and alluring a character who in all truth had no surplus of these qualities. Lovers of the romantic biography will do well to shun this book, but scholars and historians and particularly students of Irish history, will find it valuable." Barrett Williams

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 10 '39 650w

"Miss Mitford's account of Lord Redesdale's career possesses all the virtues, and a few of the vices, of a first book. Undoubtedly it will prove to be of interest and of some value to historians as well as to interested officials and publicists." L. W. Eshleman

+ N Y Times p9 S 10 '39 750w

"Miss Mitford has made a good case for Lord Redesdale against the charge of mishandling the position before and after Emmet's rebellion, and cleared him of anything worse than indiscretion in his unhappy relations with the Roman Catholic leaders. She also had no difficulty in showing how groundless were the attacks made on him by Lord Cloncurry and others of the 'patriot' party. But her complete sympathy with Lord Redesdale made her accept his opponents at his valuation. . . Her description of the state of Ireland gives the measure of her understanding of Irish affairs. She exaggerated lawlessness and corruption to fill the whole picture, and like Lord Redesdale, saw only the superficial levity of the Irish character."

Times [London] Lit Sup p259 My 6 '39 490w

MOCK, JAMES ROBERT, and LARSON, CEDRIC. Words that won the war; the story of the Committee on public information, 1917-1919. 372p il maps $3.75 Princeton univ. press

940.488 U.S. Committee on public information. Creel, George. Propaganda, American. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 39-27871

Account of the work of the Creel committee on public information, during the period of our participation in the European war of 1914-1918. The work is based on the papers of the committee now in the files of the National archives, believed to be but one fourth, however, of the original bulk. Index.

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Atlantic Ja '40 50w

Booklist 36:86 N 1 '39

"To those who are fearful that America, once again, may be swept off its feet in a frenzy of emotion 'Words That Won the War' will be counted a useful book. It takes its place with other standard volumes which reveal objectively how the emotions of Americans were worked-up and canalized at the time of the first World War." C. R. Miller

+ Books p3 Ja 21 '40 1650w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 30 '39 600w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 51:4 D '39 30w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

New Repub 101:118 N 15 39 1100w

New Yorker 15:119 D 2 '39 20w

No Am 248:411 winter '40 500w

Pratt p20 winter '40

Sat R of Lit 21:8 O 28 '39 950w

Time 34:104 O 16 '39 750w

MODDER, MONTAGU FRANK. The Jew in the literature of England to the end of the 19th century. 435p $2.50 Jewish pub.

820.9 Jews in literature. English literature—History and criticism 39-30795

"This is both literary and social history. While tracing the Jew in English literature, both as author and as subject matter, it shows that anti-Semitism has its roots in economic maladjustments and disturbed social conditions.

It is therefore, in effect, a history of the changing attitude of the English people toward the Jews seen against the background of the total stream of cultural and economic development." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 56:1442 N 22 '39 150w

"There is plenty of scholarly detail, but it does not dampen the author's direct and lively style."

+ New Repub 101:296 D 27 '39 70w

MODERN encyclopedia of photography; a standard work of reference for amateur and professional photographers; general ed: S. G. Blaxland Stubbs; associate eds: F. J. Mortimer [and] Gordon S. Malthouse. 2v il $12 Am. photographic pub.

770.3 Photography—Dictionaries 38-17100

"The Modern Encyclopedia of Photography is a collection of articles on the principles, processes and techniques of modern photography. It is printed in England and distributed in America under the imprint of the American photographic publishing co. The editors of the Encyclopedia and its contributors are British. . . The arrangement is alphabetical, but since topics are generally grouped under broad headings the detailed index at the end of volume 2 is necessary. There are no 'see references' in the body of the book, but cross references from one article to another are a helpful feature. A classified, up-to-date list of selected modern works on photography precedes the index. Publishers and dates are given for the books listed in the bibliography." Subscription Bks Bul

"One does not need to be an Anglophobe to be annoyed when one finds that the materials recommended for one's photographic needs are not on the American market. However, if this encyclopedia stimulates awareness of the crying need for a sound, authoritative and American work of general photographic reference it will have served a good purpose."

N Y Times p26 S 10 '39 100w

"For picture-taking methods the material in these volumes is valuable to the professional as well as to the amateur photographer. . . The British terminology and other evidences of the set's foreign origin frequently constitute a disadvantage to the American reader. This is not generally true of the material dealing with processes, since there is slight variation between British and American practices, but it does apply to information on cameras, enlargers, films, developing tanks, etc. . . The Modern Encyclopedia of Photography nevertheless contains much material of value to the amateur photographer of this country, especially in the absence of any similar American work on the subject. It is recommended for libraries in communities where there is an active interest in amateur photography."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:40 Jl '39 700w

MOFFATT, JAMES. The first five centuries of the church. (London. Univ. London theological lib) 262p $2 Cokesbury press [6s Univ.of London press]

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church (W) 38-25503

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"One greets expectantly a new book by Professor Moffatt, whose writings always display ample knowledge and fine literary taste. These qualities are abundantly present in this volume. . . But the reconstruction of the history of the church seems unduly truncated and superficial." S. J. Case

+ — Books p21 F 26 '39 500w

"This book is disappointing. From its title one expects a story of the social origins of Christianity—how Christian ideas and ideals, customs and practices, beliefs and doctrines became acceptable to the people and influenced their ways of living. . . But that hope is not fulfilled. How Christianity began is not explained. . . The vital human element of peoples uprooted, distraught, seeking new sanctions and securities, is neglected. Dr. Moffatt has given us rather a well defined history of doctrine without, however, making his reader see clearly the origins of and the reasons for these doctrines." R. E. E. Harkness

— Christian Century 56:482 Ap 12 '39 800w

"Among the various excellent works which have come out recently on the history of the early church, Dr. Moffatt's might better be considered as a syllabus than a complete treatise. The text seems not particularly brilliant, and requires some previous information to grasp, but the author has done a splendid thing in providing for each of the five centuries he discusses a secular chronology and a church chronology, printed on opposite pages and providing at a glance a most helpful synchronism of events secular and ecclesiastical." S. L. Riddle

+ — Churchman 153:27 Ap 1 '39 140w

"No one has a greater reverence for facts than Dr. Moffatt, and his bibliography of fiction is preceded by a much longer one of authoritative works. And at the beginning of each chapter the 'facts' are meticulously stated in chronological tables, before his study of the meaning of the facts—the latter being the most important part of the book and the part that makes his treatment unique. He is so completely master of his subject that time and time again the significance of a man or a movement is summed up in a pungent sentence that is unforgettable." B. S. Easton

+ — Living Church 100:201 F 15 '39 320w

MOFFITT, VIRGINIA MAY. Great Horse, a forest pony of long ago; il. by Dan Sweeney. 179p $2 Winston

38-31622

Story for young readers about Tergo, a boy of the Cro-Magnon age, who was the first to capture and make use of a horse.

Booklist 35:177 Ja 15 '39

"The simple plot is consistent with the characters, and the style of writing successfully suggests primitive reasoning and speech. The format and illustrations are attractive. Recommended for boys and girls of fifth to seventh grades." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 64:79 Ja 15 '39 160w

MOHOLY-NAGY, LADISLAUS. The new vision; fundamentals of design, painting, sculpture, architecture [tr. by Daphne M. Hoffmann]. (New Bauhaus bks) rev and enl ed 207p il $3.75 Norton

701 Art. Architecture. Sculpture 39-27037

New edition of a book first published in 1932 (Book Review Digest, 1933). The original Bauhaus having been "liquidated" by the Nazis, a new Bauhaus was recently established in Chicago and this book, setting forth the basic principles of design which the school teaches, is illustrated by examples of its first year of work in this country. Index.

Booklist 35:208 F 15 '39

"Without its numerous illustrations the book would be almost unintelligible. With them it will provide the careful reader with a new stimulus and a new curiosity, and give him at least a vague notion of what Moholy-Nagy calls 'The New Vision.' It would be roughly true to say that Moholy-Nagy is to William Morris what Einstein is to Sir Isaac Newton." Eric Newton

Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 4 '39 600w

Pratt p17 spring '39

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts Mo 23:153 F '39 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p235 Ap 22 '39 420w

MOLEY, RAYMOND. After seven years. 446p il $3 Harper

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-22916

One of the early New Dealers, long regarded as one of Mr Roosevelt's most intimate advisers, here presents an "inside" story of the Roosevelt policies and maneuvers, writing, apparently, with utmost frankness. Index.

Booklist 36:104 N 15 '39

"This picture is an invaluable contribution to the proper understanding of American history. Mr. Moley has filled in the details with the ruthless realism of a candid camera. Mr. Roosevelt and his friends may well resent it bitterly. But by the time the reader has viewed this picture from every angle it has become abundantly clear that the artist-author has, in depicting his friend, at the same time painted himself with a sure hand. The result is extremely unflattering to Mr. Moley." Nicholas Roosevelt

— + Books p3 S 24 '39 1300w

"Professor Moley had a little notebook, and in his every moment of privacy he put down in his notebook what had been going on. He reproduces photostats of some of his jottings. There is no reason to doubt the essential accuracy of the accounts. They are an important and rare contribution to our knowledge of the times. But it must be remembered that the reporting, the interpretations, the sequences, the elisions, the explanations, the colorings and shadings, are all Professor Moley's." E. D. C.

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 30 '39 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:374 Ja '40 70w

"It may be said that Professor Moley sinks below his Olympian standards in sprinkling a little acid on some of those who momentarily impeded his progress; but no one will deny that he has written a historical document which the well-informed can ill afford to miss, a document which requires—one might almost say demands—an answer from the present administration." J. H. V. A.

Forum 102:vi D '39 500w

"Mr. Moley deserves hosannas for his frequent lapses—for one of the professorial fraternity—into first-rate writing. As a class, sociologists and economists are guilty of probably the most dismal and inexpert writing in the country. Mr. Roosevelt's leading ghost for five years knows all the fundamental tricks and the advanced devices of the craft of writing, which much of the time he is at pains to conceal in his wry editorials for Newsweek. His book is compulsory reading, whatever your affections or distaste for its subject." Lamar Middleton

Living Age 357:289 N '39 850w

"Conceding that Moley is an excellent phrasemaker and that he probably is an accomplished teacher in the field of criminology, admitting that he has written an important and enormously interesting book, one may still be glad that he has nothing to do with the latter-day New Deal." K. G. Crawford

Nation 149:390 O 7 '39 550w

"Of the propriety of Mr. Moley's narrative, there can be only one decent opinion: he should have waited until after 1940 before publishing certain sections of these memoirs. . . It is too bad that Ray Moley let his pique get the better of him when dealing with personalities in 'After Seven Years.' For there is a good deal to be said for his analysis of the course of the New Deal as it turns from its earlier, so-called 'nationalist,' phase of 'planning' to a Wilsonian phase that may end in grandiose disaster." John Chamberlain

— + New Repub 100:274 O 11 '39 1250w

"Mr. Moley has had the first important say, and it is a fascinating composition of revelation, background, philosophy, wit, thumbnail and full-length character sketching, and first-rate writing. No historian of these times, no student of the many-faceted prism which is the personality of Franklin Roosevelt, can possibly make a just appraisal of the New Deal without it. This makes the book a contribution of consummate value. And, unlike many such, it has fire and pace." Arthur Krock

+ — N Y Times p1 O 1 '39 1350w

"Absorbing reading for students of American politics, who must keep in mind that this is far from being an objective book."

New Yorker 15:79 S 23 '39 50w

Pratt p21 winter '40

"Moley's book is crammed with 'inside' stuff. He lashes out now and then at various of his contemporaries in the New Deal. Concerning some of them he is brutally frank, but not, in my opinion, unfair. Others are left as incomplete characters. Although he can be coldly objective, Moley is the kind of man who stands by his friends and is willing to let the world know whom he dislikes." E. K. Lindley

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 23 '39 1500w

"While some aspects of the account, especially those dealing with matters in which Mr Moley was controversially concerned, will need supplementation, the account as a whole is an important contribution to contemporary political history in its inside phases."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 120w

"With a style, lucid, graphic and flippant, he ruthlessly strips both himself and the President, and many others who have had the misfortune to move in his orbit, of all vestiges of personal privacy. The result is a book which is replete with intimate quotations and is, at the same time fascinating, informative and revolting. A candid camera man at the President's side with a hidden camera could scarcely have been more graphic than Mr. Moley. Few will escape the impression that the author underestimates the President and over-estimates himself." R. B. Scandrett, Jr.

+ — Survey G 28:757 D '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

"It is very difficult to review this book as a piece of literature. The acidulous comment on men still prominent in the circles the author himself forsook leaves the reader little choice but to agree or disagree, and that emphatically. To friends of President Roosevelt it is a spiteful ex parte polemic. To the President's foes it is a merciless portrayal of the caprice and impulsiveness which they have suspected right along and refused to accept for greatness. Members of both camps have referred to it as 'The Sour Grapes of Wrath.' To read it is to stir your blood; to criticise it is to take sides in a political debate that will last as long as the United States maintains the ballot box." A. W. Griswold

Yale R n s 29:407 winter '40 850w

MONK, EDWIN. Modern boat building. 104p il $3 Scribner

623.8 Boat building (W) 39-27677

A book of directions and specifications designed both for the amateur and the beginner in professional boat building. The book is illustrated with many plans, diagrams and photographs. The author is a naval architect; the book is based on articles first published in Pacific Motor Boat.

Booklist 36:3 S '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 24 '39 250w

MONRAD-JOHANSEN, DAVID. See Johansen, D. M.

MONRO, ISABEL STEVENSON, ed. See Sears, M. E., ed. List of subject headings for small libraries

MONROE, ELIZABETH. The Mediterranean in politics. 260p maps $4 (10s; 7s 6d) Oxford

940.5 World politics. Mediterranean sea (W) [39-1659]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by H. L. Hoskins
Am Hist R 44:914 Jl '39 330w

"The style is sprightly and readable. The material is accurate, illuminating, and well-ordered. The author has not only read much 'though the work is not highly documented', but has travelled, observed, and reflected. . . . She is muddled about Spain. She envisages the Ciano-Perth accord 'which she fails to analyze adequately' as a means of detaching Il Duce from Der Führer, while in fact, like other concessions to the Caesars, it but binds them more closely for collective blackmail. In short, she has in some measure been 'taken in' by the stereotypes which Downing Street desires British subjects to accept, and she sees little of the purposes and motives behind the stereotypes. But for all of that, no other single volume in English constitutes so useful a survey of international currents in the Mediterranean." F. L. Schuman

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:145 F '39 280w

"This book, the result of two journeys of a careful and trained observer to the Mediterranean in 1937 and 1938, will be useful to the general reader. It is well informed, pleasantly written, and shows a well-balanced and optimistic restraint in stating the position in the Mediterranean. It discusses primarily the conflict between British, French, and Italian interests, but devotes also some attention to Turkey and Spain. The book is too brief to be of any value to the student who has already done some reading on Mediterranean affairs, but it covers within its limited compass a great wealth of material." Hans Kohn

+ — Ann Am Acad 204:192 Jl '39 360w

Booklist 35:221 Mr 1 '39

"An extraordinarily competent, colorful and enlightening volume on power politics in the Middle Sea." J. F. T.

+ Cath World 149:244 My '39 280w

Geog R 29:338 Ap '39 900w

Reviewed by O. I. Janowsky
Living Age 356:396 Je '39 200w

Reviewed by H. B. Kranz
Nation 148:354 Mr 25 '39 380w

Pratt p25 summer '39

MONTAGUE, SYDNEY ROBERT. North to adventure. 284p il map $2 McBride

919.8 Baffin land. Northwest mounted police (W) 39-27329

Account of the author's three years in the Arctic, as a member of the Royal Canadian mounted police. His adventures were for the most part peaceful; he never had to shoot at anyone, nor was he ever shot at. His work and that of his associate was to pave the way for civilization in the form of an airbase. During the process he learned to know and respect the Eskimos, and more than once his life was saved by them.

Booklist 35:288 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Demie Genaitis
Books p27 Ap 2 '39 300w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 60w

"Of even greater interest than that of adventure is the portrayal of the Eskimos' life and character. Mr. Montague cultivated their friendship and learned to like them. He lost a good many of his preconceived ideas about them, one of which was that they had no notion of cleanliness, and, within limits, he makes a good case for them." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 30 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p718 D 9 '39 500w

MONTESSORI, MARIA. The secret of childhood; tr. and ed. by Barbara Barclay Carter. 286p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Longmans]

136.7 Child study 39-27744

The famous Italian educator and child psychologist here presents her fundamental theories in regard to the pre-school child and his relation to the adult world.

Booklist 36:35 O 1 '39

Reviewed by Regina Madden
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 380w
No Am 248:205 autumn '39 140w

"A book which everyone who has a genuine curiosity about that strange, anomalous, contradictory sphere of human nature—the mind of a little child—will welcome and enjoy. Though Dr. Montessori is best known throughout the world as the inventor of the pedagogical method which bears her name, she is also one of the shrewdest and, in its fundamental sense, most scientific observers of young children that ever lived. Here she has written a book which belongs with the few classics on child psychology." Grace Adams

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 16 '39 500w

MONTGOMERY, LUCY MAUD (MRS EVAN MACDONALD). Anne of Ingleside. 323p $2 Stokes [8s 6d Harrap]

(W) 39-18157

Continues the story of Anne of Green Gables. Anne and Gilbert have been married fifteen years and have six children, but Anne is just as full of the enjoyment of life as she was in her youth, a habit of living which she has imparted to her children.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 30 '39 110w

"Victorian bustles and hair-do's brought up to date have a delicate charm of their own, heightened by sophistication. Anne of Ingleside has the same charm in an intensified degree, but with no sophistication at all." J. S. Southron

N Y Times p7 Jl 30 '39 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p477 Ag 12 '39 50w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. High country. ltd ed 248p il $7.50 Derrydale

799.29788 Hunting 38-39423

"Mr. Montgomery describes such typically Western sport as mountain lion hunting, wapiti hunting and rainbow trout fishing. There is much about horse-wrangling, pack trains, wolves, bears and snowy mountain trails, as well as many incidental natural history notes designed to explode some widely current nature faking. . . . The book is illustrated with photographs." Books

Books p9 D 25 '38 120w

"A man who loves hunting in the west has written a book about hunting. The reader who shares this passion will enjoy the book if he does not mind a tinge of the Rover Boys."

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 80w

MONTROSS, LOIS (SEYSTER) (MRS ROBERT STAFFORD). With land in sight. 305p $2 Appleton-Century

39-17102

At eighteen Kent Salidin ran away from home to settle in Tahiti. After ten years his grandfather died leaving him all his wealth and a large estate in Vinyard, New York. Armed with a large capacity for friendship and a fund of Eastern philosophy, Kent returned to America, determined to live as he wished, only to find himself gradually falling into line and following the pattern of living that was expected of him.

MONTROSS, LOIS—Continued

"'With Land in Sight' meets all the standard specifications of romantic fiction . . . and it will have no difficulty entertaining the regular clients. It also has some original and deftly delineated characters from outside this author's customary orbit, and a maturer style. In our opinion, it's about the most satisfactory excursion into make-believe that Lois Montross has charted." Lisle Bell
+ Books p9 Jl 30 '39 450w

"Simple in structure, delicate in touch, Lois Montross has written another book which is considerably better than average light fiction. It is like a refreshing breeze on a hot, sultry day, the kind welcomed with a sigh of relief." M. L. Rossbach
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 23 '39 470w

"The book is composed to pattern. It is charming, light, not badly written, but the overtones of Indian philosophy and the wild, hot background of Tahiti are both unconvincing. And we have read too many novels about unfettered characters who settle down in staid tree-lined New England towns to get particularly excited about the same old story again, especially since none of the characters have any profoundly arresting qualities." K. W. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 29 '39 200w

MOORE, ANNE CARROLL. My roads to childhood; views and reviews of children's books; decorations by Arthur Lougee. 399p $2 Doubleday

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography
(W) 39-33401

"The contents of this book were first published separately under the titles, Roads to Childhood in 1920, New Roads to Childhood in 1923, and Cross Roads to Childhood in 1926. It is now brought up to date with a new introduction, a list of representative children's books published between 1926-1938, and an essay on trends and developments in children's books during that period." (Note) Index.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Ja 28 '40 140w

"Here is a survey of twenty years in children's books; a guide so informed by a keen critical mind, so rich in humor, so warm with life, and so illuminated by an understanding of children in their world today, and in those inner, timeless worlds of their own, as far to exceed the margins of the twenty years with which it is concerned." F. C. Sayers
+ Horn Bk M 15:373 N '39 1600w

"Here, so happily designed and so well printed that it is a delight to look at and to hold in the hand, is a book of charm and significance. . . It is [Miss Moore's] faith in human nature, this belief in things of the spirit that makes the reading of 'My Roads to Childhood' an exhilarating experience. It is a book that no one who has anything to do with children and young people can afford to neglect. It is also one that for readers who have hitherto paid little attention to what is being written for boys and girls will open up fresh fields of interest." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 14 '40 700w

MOORE, AUDREY. Serengeti; an account of the wild life and safari in the African game sanctuary, Serengeti; foreword by Sir Philip Mitchell; il. with author's photographs. 281p map $4 Scribner [10s 6d Country life]

916.8967 Serengeti. Game protection

"Audrey Moore is the wife of the warden of Serengeti, an African closed game reserve, lying east of Lake Victoria, in the most famous lion country of the world. The book 'Serengeti' is an informal, graphic account of their life; camp-fire tales of beasts of the bush, and one small oasis of civilization. While enforcing the game laws the Moores make countless observations of the life and habitat of their charges, which are carefully recorded here." Boston Transcript

"When some one really loves a particular way of living, has keen power of observation, and then can transmit both feeling and information, one has hopes of excellence. And Audrey Moore qualifies. . . Some naturalists have so sentimentalized wild life, injected human qualities into their animals to such an extent that one loses faith in the matter presented. But though Mrs. Moore tells stories of her wild friends and calls some of them by first names, she presents them as animals, not near humans." M. C. Hubbard
+ Books p2 Jl 23 '39 850w

"The gently whimsical prose overlies significant documentation. Anyone at all interested in animals or life on the bush could not fail to be pleased with Serengeti. There are excellent photographs, a map of the reserve and a scholarly set of appendices on the fauna and flora. The author is devoting the proceeds of this book to improve the water supply for the animals." Lucretia Hildreth
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 220w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen
N Y Times p8 S 10 '39 460w

MOORE, FORRIS JEWETT. A history of chemistry; revision prepared by William T. Hall. 3d ed 447p il $3 McGraw

540.9 Chemistry—History 39-27929

"The story of chemistry from the early beginnings down to the present time is told, the text dealing more or less chronologically with the various people important in the unfolding of this story. Chemical knowledge and chemical theories are tied in with much interesting biographical material about the men involved. The brilliant men of every nation receive their due recognition." (Chem & Met Eng) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1918. Index.

"This latest edition of Professor Moore's book is a careful attempt to retain the general characteristics of the earlier editions and at the same time incorporate into the volume recent advances in chemistry, many more biographical notes and valuable additions to the older periods which had been somewhat neglected. . . There are but few adverse criticisms. A number of corrections suggested by Professor Oesper in his review of the second edition unfortunately have not been made. . . There are quite a number of new illustrations and some of the former dubious and less important ones have been eliminated. . Instead of feeling that the book is a trifle too brief to be used as an essential purchase by students of the history of chemistry, the new edition contains enough material to make the reviewer feel that it gives a splendid foundation from which to start toward further reading." Virginia Bartow
+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:235 Ja '40 450w
Booklist 36:114 N 15 '39

"The historical literature of chemistry has been enriched by this new edition. It is interesting reading. Old friendships can be renewed and familiar names become living personalities as the effective exposition of the development of chemistry unfolds." M. W. Grafflin
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:35 Ja 10 '40 500w

"By carefully studying the workings of the minds of scientists who preceded us, the would-be-scientists of this generation should avoid many pitfalls. This book provides an excellent text for such study."
+ Chem & Met Eng 46:723 N '39 170w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:53 O '39

MOORE, HARRY THORNTON. The novels of John Steinbeck; a first critical study. (Normandie house bk) 102p map $1.50 Black cat

813 Steinbeck, John 39-27393

"This study was from the first intended as an explanation and a commentary rather than abstract criticism." The writer discusses all of Steinbeck's books to date in chronological order; and includes a brief biographical sketch, and a bibliographical check-list of first editions. A map is included showing the section of California in which Steinbeck's novels are set and places associated with his life.

Booklist 35:303 My 15 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p15 Jl 23 '39 600w

"It's a little too early in the game for so solemn a study as this. Still it's useful enough, especially on the biographical side, and collectors will value the check list of first editions and the map of the Steinbeck Country."
New Yorker 15:78 Ap 22 '39 40w
Pratt p17 winter '40

"In the latter part of this rather badly scrambled little volume, Mr. Moore writes sadly (and awkwardly), 'A man like Steinbeck presents a difficult combination to find the key to.' Unfortunately his 'study' does not go very far toward resolving the combination. . . . This is not to condemn Mr. Moore wholesale. A good deal that he writes is valid; some of it is worth putting into print." J. H. J.
— + Sat R of Lit 20:19 Je 10 '39 450w

MOORE, HERBERT. Psychology for business and industry. 527p il $4 (24s) McGraw

658.3 Psychology, Applied. Business. Efficiency, Industrial. Employment management 39-3897

"A college text emphasizing the practical aspects. The author has had access to private files and gives techniques used by various successful companies. He discusses hiring the worker, making and using tests, job analysis, employee promotion, training, motivation, fatigue, accidents, difficult employees, and psychological problems in advertising and selling." (Special Libraries) Index.

Booklist 35:286 My 1 '39

"Perhaps the book suffers most from an attempt to cover too much ground, with the result that it is very uneven. Probably no single work could cover so wide a field anyway, no matter how experienced and talented the author. For the general reader, however, the volume will prove stimulating and interesting, and it should encourage him to further specialized reading." E. N. Hay
+ — Management R 29:36 Ja '40 750w

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:315 N '39

MOORE, JOHN MORRISON. Theories of religious experience. 253p $3 Round table

201 Experience (religion). James, William. Otto, Rudolf. Bergson, Henri Louis 39-9141

"Prof. Moore has written his book around the theories of William James, Rudolf Otto, and Henri Bergson. A chapter is devoted to each, in which the relevant material is critically examined and the theories evaluated. In a fourth and final chapter the author sets forward and discusses some fundamental problems in the theory of religious experience." Churchman

Reviewed by Harold Buschman
Christian Century 56:578 My 3 '39 900w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 153:17 Jl '39 300w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
Ethics 50:241 Ja '40 160w
J Philos 36:358 Je 22 '39 200w
Living Church 101:10 O 25 '39 100w

MOORE, THOMAS HENDRICK. Beyond the altar rail. 112p $1.25 Fordham univ. press

264.025 Roman Catholic church—Eucharist 39-10369

"In ten brief chapters Father Moore brings out clearly the nature of the Eucharistic sacrifice as set forth by the Council of Trent, and its relation to the Sacrifice of the Cross. With Father de la Taille as guide he proves that the Mass is a true sacrifice, shows how the glorified Christ can be a Victim, and answers the Protestant objection that the Mass is derogatory to the sacrifice of Calvary." (Cath World) Index.

Reviewed by Paula Kurth
America 61:358 Jl 22 '39 170w
Cath World 149:764 S '39 140w

MORA, CONSTANCIA DE LA. In place of splendor; the autobiography of a Spanish woman. 433p map $3 Harcourt

B or 92 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 (W) 39-29401

Autobiography of a Spanish aristocrat who broke with her family and the traditions in which she had been raised to become one of the leaders of the Loyalist cause. Index.

Reviewed by Alvah Bessie
Atlantic F '40 500w
Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p5 N 19 '39 1200w

"The book is written from the Loyalist viewpoint, containing ready-made copy for the 'New Masses.' Its fundamental premise is that in war one country is definitely the hero and another definitely the villain. Consequently she overestimates the hostility of the American newspapers, though it is true the treachery of Julian Besteiro, which brought the war to a close, received little notice here except in the radical press. Except for a number of such crusading abberrations, Miss de la Mora's book is an informative background and exciting summary of the war." Mario Collaci
Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 400w
Cath World 150:498 Ja '40 1100w

"This 'Autobiography of a Spanish Woman, as the book is subtitled, has continuity, ardor, and an inside touch the best reporter would have difficulty in achieving." M. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 1 '39 450w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson
Churchman 153:23 D 15 '39 250w

Reviewed by Leigh White
Nation 149:713 D 23 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Vincent Sheean
New Repub 101:209 D 6 '39 700w

"A document which holds interest both for the dramatic story of the emergence of a personality and the historic events in which she played an important part." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p6 N 19 '39 1100w
New Yorker 15:106 N 18 '39 30w

"It is an extraordinary book, a fascinating autobiography, of which every page is precious. Well-written and well-proportioned as it is, one can wish that its pages were twice as many. Like all books that deal with its subject and share its point of view, it is heart-breaking reading for the would-be believer in democracy who must face the fact that Republican Spain was defeated not at Toledo or Madrid, not even in Berlin and Rome—but in London, in Paris, and in Washington." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 18 '39 550w

Reviewed by B. G. Swing
Survey G 29:35 Ja '40 550w
Time 34:82 N 20 '39 350w

MORDAUNT, MRS EVELYN MAY (CLOWES) (ELINOR MORDAUNT, A. RIPOSTE, pseuds). Pity of the world. 323p $2 Greystone [7s 6d Joseph, M]

39-8610

Story of an English family living on a plantation in Kenya in East Africa. The family consists of Charles Fleming, an aristocrat but rather a black sheep; his wife Molly, exchorus girl; Sally their daughter; and Mgeni—The Stranger—the child whose life and death had so great an influence on all the others.

"Elinor Mordaunt writes with intensity and a raw vigor well suited to her material. She knows jungle sounds and smells and how to convey in words their oppressive and unescapable presence. She makes you feel the enervating atmosphere of the tropics—the dampness, the mud and the things that crawl. And she presents an arresting study of the restlessness, the moodiness and the rather desperate jauntiness of these homesick, self-exiled English." Lisle Bell

\+ Books p15 F 26 '39 200w

"It is impossible not to reflect that 'Pity of the World' seems much better in its parts than in its whole. This may be a fault of motivation. Possibly the accidental character of Mgeni's affliction, upon which so much of the final action turns, robs the story of some meaning we feel it ought to have. The background is unusually effective." Margaret Wallace

\+ N Y Times p24 Mr 5 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:82 F 18 '39 60w

"The world would have lost very little if Miss Mordaunt's novel of an English family in Africa had never been written. As a study of human relationships it is regrettably lacking in ordinary common sense. As a plain piece of writing it is heavy-footed and obscure." R. S.

— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 4 '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 110w

"Mrs. Mordaunt is an adept at making a local scene in some far part of the world a relevant and integral part of her story. The test of relevancy is whether the characters portrayed would have been the same had they been placed elsewhere, and there is little doubt that life for the Fleming family would have worked out differently had they lived anywhere but in Kenya. It is this sense of the values of a country, with its resulting influence on the lives of human beings, that gives Mrs. Mordaunt's work distinction, when allied to her clear perception of character."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 12 '38 380w

MOREHOUSE, WARD. Forty-five minutes past eight. 267p $2.50 Dial press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Theater—New York (city)

40-1039

About twenty years ago the author came to Broadway from an Atlanta, Georgia, newspaper. His two ambitions were to "cover" the Broadway theater district, and to write a play. He has succeeded in both, and this book is a record of his ups and downs during his rise to success. Sketches of many famous persons, connected with Broadway in some capacity, are included. At present Mr Morehouse runs the column in the New York Sun entitled Broadway After Dark.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p12 Ja 7 '40 400w

"Mr. Morehouse's book is written in the clipped, peripatetic style which is characteristic of his column. He presents an honest, straightforward story of his career. His candor and honesty are beguiling—Broadway failed to make him tough or 'sophisticated.'" L. S. Wellstone

\+ Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 360w

"An amusing, personal book chock full of information concerning people in and about the theatre." J. D. B.

\+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 27 '40 360w

"The book itself is a list of names: a gay, gleeful, slightly bewildering and just a little too vociferous roll-call of celebrities. In between the names we find a jolly recital of Mr. Morehouse's newspaper experiences and his travels, a lot of entertaining information about First Nights and the Critics' Circle and Broadway and Hollywood, and some items of personal interest about some of the people whose names fill so large a portion of the text."

\+ N Y Times p14 Ja 14 '40 320w

MOREY, GEORGE WASHINGTON. The properties of glass. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 572p $12.50 Reinhold [62s 6d Chapman]

666.1 Glass 38-33161

"Although this comprehensive work by a member of the staff of the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., was begun in 1924, publication was postponed to await the results of extensive researches by the author and other experts. The twenty chapters show scientific thoroughness, emphasis having been placed on physical properties as functions of composition. Chapter I (26 pages) is an excellent account of glass history. There are numerous footnote references." N Y New Tech Bks

"George W. Morey's recently published book on the properties of glass gives an authoritative, readable and critical survey of our knowledge of this topic. Few persons are equally well equipped for the task." C. W. Parmelee

\+ Chem & Met Eng 46:375 Je '39 160w

Reviewed by Alexander Silverman

J Phys Chem 43:547 Ap '39 700w

"An eminently scholarly and exhaustive monograph which is bound to be of immense value to the wide circle who have to do in some way or other with glass. The author's expert knowledge has enabled him to sort the wheat from the chaff in regard to the reliability of much of the information in the literature."

\+ Nature 143:1046 Je 24 '39 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:8 Ja '39

Pratt p16 spring '39

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. The pageant of electricity. 363p il $3.50 Appleton-Century

537 Electricity—History (W) 39-27992

"History of the development of electrical science, from the time when ancient man first noted the magnetic qualities in the lodestone to the present day." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 36:128 D 1 '39

Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:54 O '39

Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 N '39 450w

MORGAN, ANN HAVEN. Field book of animals in winter. 527p il map $3.50 Putnam

591.54 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Zoology (W) 39-27745

"Miss Morgan, who has already done a splendid job with her fieldbook of ponds and streams, takes up in succession such subjects as migration, hibernation, winter communities of land animals, seasonal changes in freshwater animals, pond life under the ice, and those astounding creatures the various 'snow insects,' as well as the winter activities of salamanders, frogs, snakes and turtles. Placed last, because highest in the scale of evolution, come birds and mammals under winter conditions." (Books) Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39

"Here's a neat little job if ever there was one. . . It has the virtues of compact size, a wealth of super-excellent illustration, a text that miraculously manages to be both full and short. . . Some of the text on the birds, particularly the life of the pheasant in winter, is excellent. But I cannot conceive how author or publisher would pass up such popular and needed illustrative materials as the tracks of mammals in the snow. One sees so much more of the spoor than the creatures." D. C. Peattie

+ — Books p17 O 15 '39 410w

Pratt p9 winter '40

"This is a handbook, a book of reference, attractively put out by the publishers. Its accuracy and preciseness of observation, the bibliographies to the various chapters, the thoroughly satisfactory index, the four color plates, the photographs, and the detail sketches, all contribute to its usefulness and its authority. Yet it is also a book that can be read leisurely and with a pleasurable savor. Dr Morgan, working with the exact and demanding care of the scientist and scholar, has not forgotten that such a book can be read as well as consulted." S. R. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 390w

Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

MORGAN, ARTHUR EUSTACE. The needs of youth; a report made to King George's Jubilee trust fund. 446p il $3.50 (10s) Oxford

309.142 Youth. Great Britain—Social conditions

"Under a clearly significant title, the Council of King George's Jubilee Trust here considers 'the physical, mental, and spiritual welfare of the younger generation.' By 'youth'—or 'adolescent'—the author especially denotes the boys and girls who have passed their fourteenth birthday but not yet reached their eighteenth: those who, as he puts it, are 'floating vaguely between tutelage and responsibility,' out of school but not yet adult. And although the survey is confined to the youth of Great Britain, both its facts and its conclusions challenge the attention of all those who are interested in youth, throughout our modern civilization, in the conditions of today." N Y Times

Economist 136:158 Jl 22 '39 1650w

"Dr. Morgan has travelled in all parts of the country and among all social classes in search of material, and from innumerable contacts and qualitative impressions has been able to distil a human, sympathetic, penetrating, and, at times, pungent account of the strange perplexities and perversities of adolescence and of the even more mystifying indifference of the community to the consequent social problems. Dr. Morgan is judicial, but his conclusions are invariably downright." J. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 22 '39 390w

Reviewed by R. Brightman

Nature 144:723 O 28 '39 2750w

+ N Y Times p11 S 10 '39 440w

"Dr. Morgan's conclusions, though of the greatest interest, are not the best part of the book. His review of the facts and his clear exposition of their significance, the broad picture he has given of young England as it is and his vision of what it might be—these give the book the greater part of its value. Here is a man, the reader feels, who knows England through and through and whose love for it is wise and discriminating as well as deep. Anyone who cares for the future of England and realises that those who will have the making of it are the boys and girls with whom this book is concerned, must feel that the Jubilee Trust has never done anything wiser or more far-sighted than to charge Dr. Morgan with the task which he has performed so brilliantly." J. F. Roxburgh

+ Spec 163:23 Jl 7 '39 1400w

"Although Dr. Morgan's book is a survey undertaken for the King George's Jubilee Trust, it is not a bloodless, severe document; if the word were not unpopular it would be fair to speak of it as an excellent piece of propaganda. Comment and fact are so intermingled that there is danger that many readers will put down the book and become ardent but not very well informed crusaders."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Jl 8 '39 550w

MORGAN, GEORGE CAMPBELL. The Bible four hundred years after 1538; some constructive reconsiderations. 159p $1.50 Revell [3s 6d Marshall, Morgan & Scott]

220 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 39-8753

A series of essays, first delivered as lectures, then published in The Christian, now gathered in book form in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the placing of the English Bible in the churches. Partial contents: The romance of the Bible; The study of the Bible; The unity of the Bible; The final authority of the Bible; The Bible and the nation; The church and the Bible; The Bible and the child; The need for the Bible teacher; The Bible and the Evangelical faith.

Boston Transcript p7 My 27 '39 30w

Christian Century 56:323 Mr 8 '39 20w

MORGAN, HELEN. You can't eat that! foreword by Walter C. Alvarez. 330p $2.50 Harcourt

641.563 Allergia. Cookery. Diet in disease (W) 39-10983

"A manual and recipe book for those who suffer either acutely or mildly (and perhaps unconsciously) from food allergy." (Subtitle) Following chapters on the general aspects of allergies, the author gives some two hundred pages of recipes which may be of assistance to those afflicted by some particular food. A section titled What's in it? lists the contents of canned goods, etc., which may be harmful to allergics. Indexes.

Christian Century 56:453 Ap 5 '39 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39

"Miss Morgan has shown uncanny skill in relating the habits of allergy and how to overcome it, all in words of scarcely more than two syllables. . . An excellent book, in which one might especially commend Miss Morgan for the lucid way in which she has explained the phenomena of sensitization, though one may question how many persons will be able to unravel this tangle that mystifies the physician himself. A perfectly safe parlor game, though." E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 29:726 Ap 21 '39 210w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 101:vi My '39 250w

J Home Econ 31:400 Je '39 60w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 13 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

MORGAN, JOHN HILL. Gilbert Stuart and his pupils; together with the complete Notes on painting by Matthew Harris Jouett from conversations with Gilbert Stuart in 1816. ltd ed 102p il $3.50 N.Y. hist. soc.

927.5 Stuart, Gilbert. Painters, American. Portraits. Painting 39-15372

"This little book . . . grew out of a wish of the late Lawrence Park that we knew more about Stuart's pupils. Stuart kept no record of these, but Mr. Morgan, after years of patient research, has discovered twenty-two artists who found inspiration and practical help in the master-painter's studio. Among them are many whose names the average reader will recognize: Mather Brown, Trumbull, Jouett, Rembrandt Peale, Sully, Frothingham, Sarah Goodrich, Francis Alexander, and S. F. B. Morse. The illustrations show to what extent they profited

MORGAN, J. H.—Continued
by his methods. . . Each biography records all that is known of the intercourse of master and pupil." New Eng Q

"The slender volume in which the distinguished scholar in Americana, John Hill Morgan, has written of 'Gilbert Stuart and His Pupils' has significance beyond its modest scale. It is well for the student to be enlightened as to just what certain of our earlier painters did to assimilate and continue Stuart's tradition, and here in a score of brief essays the problem is authoritatively considered." Royal Cortissoz
+ Books p8 N 12 '39 350w

"Charming little book." C. K. Bolton
+ New Eng Q 12:811 D '39 500w

MORGAN, JOY ELMER, ed. See Mann, H. Horace Mann at Antioch

MORGAN, MRS STELLA (EMBREE). Again the river. 306p $2.50 Crowell
(W) 39-25557

Jasper Morton lived in Low Town, loved the land he farmed and loved and feared the river. Three times in his lifetime the river rose to unprecedented heights, twice Jasper rebuilt his home, but finally the house he believed would withstand any flood carried Jasper to destruction.

Booklist 36:111 N 15 '39

"Like most really good books of its kind this novel flows in its deep force and simplicity with the rhythm of parable, and it comes to us as something universal, though such experiences and such characters as these may be known only to a few." Katherine Woods
+ Books p3 O 15 '39 750w
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '39 500w
Churchman 154:35 Ja 15 '40 30w

" 'Again the River' is a very fine book. It is wrought with simplicity and integrity, with sympathy and tenderness and strength. Mrs. Morgan's ear is keyed to the nuances of both the spoken word and the thoughts that nourish utterance and her hand is expert in giving testimony of her knowledge." R. C. Feld
+ N Y Times p7 O 15 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:101 O 14 '39 30w
Pratt p24 winter '40

"Mrs. Morgan conveys the spirit of these stubborn, indomitable people. But the story moves with monotonous regularity from flood to flood, the dialogue leaves something to be desired, and a certain crudity in the writing is emphasized by a melodramatic, spuriously apostrophic ending." J. S. M.
Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 11 '39 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 29 '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

MORGAN, VERA ELEANOR. Vocations in short stories. preliminary ed 47p pa 50c A.L.A.

016.371425 Profession, Choice of—Bibliography. Occupations—Bibliography. Short stories—Bibliography (W) 38-27820

"A selected, classified, and annotated list of short stories that have some vocational significance. Only those stories have been included which give information about the job itself, the ethics of the occupation, and the training required. Vocations for both boys and girls were chosen; those requiring less expense and training are emphasized. The form of the story itself was considered secondary to the informational content. Some of the volumes listed are out of print but available in many libraries." Booklist

Booklist 35:59 O 15 '38
J Home Econ 31:118 F '39 40w
Library Q 9:127 Ja '39 110w

MORGAN, WILLARD D., and LESTER, HENRY M., eds. Miniature camera work; emphasizing the entire field of photography with modern miniature cameras. 303p il $4 Morgan & Lester, 100 E. 42d st, N.Y; Simon & Schuster [21s British periodicals]

770 Cameras. Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. (W) 38-16312

"The new ideals and forces behind modern photography are emphasized throughout, with descriptions of new methods and viewpoints. The book covers a wide field and is written by a number of collaborators. Advice is given on selling pictures. Profusely illustrated with excellent photographs, some colored." (Booklist) Partial contents: Formal and informal portraiture, by Manuel Komroff; Photo-journalism, by W. D. Morgan; Sport and action photography, by J. A. Davis; Color photography, by H. B. Tuttle; News photography, by Alan Fisher; Photography of after-dark entertainment, by Leo Pavelle; Surrealism for the photographer, by Lewis Jacobs; Miniature camera club, by Augustus Wolfman; Photographic facts and data, by H. M. Lester.

Booklist 35:4 S 1 '38
Pratt p20 spring '39

MORGAN, WINONA LOUISE. The family meets the depression; a study of a group of highly selected families. 126p $2 Univ. of Minn. [9s Oxford]

392.3 Family. U.S.—Social conditions 39-10617

Follows Lindquist, The Family in the Present Social Order (Book Review Digest, 1931). The first study reported on the circumstances of several hundred normal American families during a period of prosperity (1927). The present study compares conditions in 331 of these families in 1927 and in 1933, a depression year. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. H. Britt
Am J Psychol 53:155 Ja '40 550w
Reviewed by Willard Waller
Ann Am Acad 206:215 N '39 300w
Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39
J Home Econ 31:400 Je '39 210w
Reviewed by D. S. Klaiss
Social Forces 18:136 O '39 330w

"This study, which is intended largely for students of home economics, will impress the social worker as somewhat less vital than the one published last year by Cavan and Ranck, entitled 'The Family and the Depression.' It is refreshing, however, to read the record of a group of families which was not subjected to the havoc which the past decade has wrought. The book contains a very excellent and complete bibliography on family life." Benjamin Glassberg
+ — Survey 75:294 S '39 650w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. The second voyage of Christopher Columbus from Cadiz to Hispaniola and the discovery of the Lesser Antilles. 112p maps $2.50 (6s) Oxford

973.15 Columbus, Christopher. America—Discovery and exploration

"On his second voyage to America Columbus made his first landfall at the Lesser Antilles in November, 1493, and sailed on to discover and name nearly all of them. . . Professor Morison has had the happy idea of following Columbus's track in a yacht, sailing at the same time of year and as nearly as possible in the same conditions of wind and weather. As a result he has made some important corrections in the accepted beliefs about Columbus's course." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"Mr. Morison has produced a delightful little book that is well worth reading by anyone interested in the work of Columbus. It is a valuable contribution to Columbus literature." G. E. Nunn

+ Am Hist R 45:234 O '39 230w

"The book makes intensely interesting reading; for perhaps the finest thing about this author's historical work is that he writes so well. He brings to the case the reality of a vivid sea experience, the joy and excitement of fresh discoveries, and a power of description that makes the scene live before the eye." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p10 My 28 '39 700w

Pratt p21 winter '40

"This is a little book, trim and jaunty as a pleasure yacht, but everything needful is aboard, references, charts, and time tables, all shipshape and Bristol fashion. One would gladly sign on with the same skipper for another such voyage over a longer course." G. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 130w

"Professor Morison writes with verve and imagination, making his readers see the lovely islands of Dominica, Guadaloupe and Montserrat as Columbus and his motley crews of Europeans first saw them rising from the sea. Altogether a delightful book, well documented and illustrated with good maps."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 18 '39 220w

MORLAND, NIGEL. Murder at Radio City [Eng title: A knife for the killer]. 286p $2 Farrar [7s 6d Cassell]

[39-16106]

Detective story.

"Mrs. Pym now ranks among the leaders in her field, as you may prove by perusing her latest and perhaps slickest adventure." Will Cuppy

Books p12 S 10 '39 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 100w

"The story is one of fantastic adventure in the ordinary imitation Edgar Wallace style." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p22 S 10 '39 160w

"Has all tempestuous attributes of Pym cycle, including new kind of racket which involves English medical profession and causes grisly finish. Spirited."

Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 9 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p285 My 13 '39 120w

MORLAND, NIGEL. A rope for the hanging. 307p $2 Farrar [7s 6d Cassell]

39-2928

Detective story.

"Swift entertainment in the Edgar Wallace manner." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ja 8 '39 230w

"Mrs. Pym is not a person we ever expect to meet, but she is certainly impressive. Having stewed about Scotland Yard's 'hush-hush' policy we are overjoyed to meet a detective (female at that) who battles it from within. And to add a frosting, Mrs. Pym is adept with her fists, has no regard for persons and precedent, and doesn't give a hoot what happens to her clothes (wonderful woman) when she is hot on the trail." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 7 '39 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 8 '39 180w

"Lively reading if Mrs. Pym's character doesn't overpower you."

New Yorker 14:56 Ja 7 '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 19:19 Ja 14 '39 40w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Kitty Foyle. 340p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 39-27954

Kitty Foyle is the daughter of a retired Philadelphia night watchman, a Londonderry Irishman with a taste for cricket. In this autobiographical novel Kitty's story from childhood to the age of twenty-eight is told in the stream-of-consciousness method. Her language is frank and open, her reactions completely modern. The scene is successively Philadelphia, Illinois, and New York; the time is from about 1918 on.

Reviewed by Katherine Woods

Atlantic Ja '40 500w

Booklist 36:111 N 15 '39

"You've seen Kitty Foyle on a Fifth Avenue bus, you've seen her behind a counter, you've seen her taking dictation, you've seen her giving dictation, you've seen her in cafeterias at noon and you've seen her at night clubs after the theater. When Christopher Morley put her into a book, he gave you a portrait of the American girl that is as real as anything in your family album. With this difference: the family portraits give you the bone and muscle structure of the features of your sisters, your cousins and your aunts; 'Kitty Foyle' gives you the heart and spirit which lie beneath them." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 O 29 '39 1100w

"It is rather unnerving to a woman reviewer to discover that men do know what women talk about in moments of confidence among friends of their own sex. As a woman, we take the liberty of congratulating Mr. Morley on his expert knowledge of our thoughts and emotions." M. G. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 500w

"Mr. Morley is too good a writer to be betrayed into the posturings of the free love school, but this 'natural history of woman,' as the blurb characterizes the book, has brought him very close to Tiffany Thayer. It is too bad that such excellent talent has been wasted."

— Cath World 150:368 D '39 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

New Repub 101:122 N 15 '39 50w

"There is no use trying to pick good things out of this book. Something on almost every page clamors for quotation. Whatever its fate in other directions, 'Kitty Foyle' seems destined to be the most-read-aloud book of the current season. . . Only a man of considerable wisdom and experience could have written this sparkling novel. So it is not surprising that some of Kitty's reflections seem a trifle out of character for a girl in her twenties. . . Some of the fans will be surprised to find here a tougher Morley than the one they have sworn allegiance to. They have never had a wittier or more humane Morley. And that, as they will agree, is saying quite a lot." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p2 O 29 '39 850w

"In 'Kitty Foyle' Christopher Morley does for the Philadelphia Main Line what Mr. Marquand in 'Wickford Point' did for the phosphorescent relicts of Boston Brahminism. Though it crumples a bit toward the end and betrays the flaw of all Morley novels (too much Morley, not enough novel), I think it's pretty successful. . . Those who have been afraid of Mr. Morley because they figure his whimsy will come off on them should not on that account steer clear of 'Kitty Foyle.' It has the Morley touch, all right, but the fancifulness is restrained, and somehow the book seems pretty close to certain realities of the twenties and early thirties." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:77 O 28 '39 800w

Pratt p24 winter '40

"A vivid and entertaining novel filled with wise humor and a good deal of pathos,—a skillfully written book which defeats itself in a measure by its own brilliance and the limitations of its form." J. P. Marquand

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 O 28 '39 800w

MORLEY, C. D.—Continued

"Author Morley's 46th book is apparently a reaction against his cloying reputation for whimsy. . . At once too sophisticated and too crude, too literary and too 'natural,' [the heroine's] confessions are a departure from the old Morley Mellowness into a sort of Muley Naturalism."

Time 34:72 O 30 '39 50w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Letters of askance. 318p $2.50 Lippincott

814 (W) 39-10834

Collection of the author's incidental prose. Partial contents: Personals; Drug store; A successor to Mark Twain; O rare Don Marquis; Creative writing; The worst Christmas story; Courting John Donne; South America pilot; The troupers' Yule; "No Crabb, no Christmas;" St Agnes eve.

Booklist 35:328 Je 1 '39

"Whatever relates to men, women, and books is of sympathetic, enthusiastic interest to him. He has the eye of a star reporter for the minor phenomena of the American scene, describes them with the skilled pen of the experienced journalist, and gives to his writing the flavor of the traditional English familiar essay." W. N. C. Carlton

+ Books p4 My 7 '39 900w

"The remarkable thing about him is that he should have changed so little. He is doing exactly what he did ten years ago. . . Possibly it is the world's fault and not his that his whimsy strikes so false a note." W. M. Frohock

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 350w

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 27 '39 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

Reviewed by Christopher Janus

N Y Times p2 My 7 '39 900w

"The tributes to Don Marquis are perhaps the finest pieces in the book."

New Yorker 15:91 My 6 '39 30w

"It is so long since one has turned to our poets for charm or to our essayists for companionship that one opens Morley's 'Letters of Askance' with a measure of astonishment; for the writer is content to enrich our lives rather than to revolutionize them, and to lead us by the hand rather than by the nose. Happy himself, he wishes to make his readers happy, too, and is blessedly unconcerned with propaganda, blatant or sly. He is not preaching communism or fascism or atheism or Buddhism. He does not even fear the charge of using literature as a 'means of escape.'" C. B. Tinker

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 My 13 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

MORLEY, MRS EVELYN GOURLEY (TODD) (TAIT MORLEY, pseud). Town house. 278p $2.50 Smith, Richard R.

39-24446

"[This novel] tells the stories, tragic, amusing and never less than intriguing, of the people inhabiting the six 'flats' (that is, apartments), made out of a fine London old mansion." N Y Times

"Unhappily, the reader of 'Town House' is too often told rather than shown. . . [However] the theme cannot help holding interest, whatever is done with it."

+ — Books p22 D 10 '39 260w

"To speak of a novel so soundly integrated and so well written as 'promising' would be a pale and lifeless understatement of the effect produced. At the same time it is a first novel that, over and above its own intrinsic value, has distinct—and very suggestive—potentialities." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p27 O 15 '39 750w

"'Town House' has humor, wit, pathos, near tragedy and not-too-deep touches of philosophy. But the book's principal features are too acute and inartistically exaggerated. 'Town House' has a proper beginning, middle and ending, all carefully balanced for suspense and plot development; it includes a number of epigrams, some of them good, and it has a well chosen set of characters. But it has missed fire somewhere in the composition."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 260w

MORLEY, TAIT, pseud. See Morley, E. G.

MORRIS, GOUVERNEUR, 1752-1816. A diary of the French revolution; ed. by Beatrix Cary Davenport. 2v 618;652p il $9 Houghton [42s Harrap]

944.04 France—History—Revolution. France—Foreign relations—U. S. U. S.—Foreign relations—France 39-6489

"In 1832 Gray & Bowen of Boston published Jared Sparks's three-volume life of the Minister; in 1888 appeared the two-volume 'Diary and Letters of Gouverneur Morris,' edited by Anne Cary Morris; and now, in 1939, we have [these volumes] edited by Beatrix Cary Davenport, another descendant of the Morris family. This new work does not cover all the ground in the 1888 edition; it stops short with the 'Diary' in January, 1793, but it does give (what Anne Cary Morris's work did not) the complete 'Diary.' . . There can be no doubt that Mrs. Davenport will eventually add a third volume covering, by means of the many letters that exist, Morris's last years in France and other European countries." (N Y Times) Index at end of volume two.

"We are thankful to have this capital work in convenient, handsome and unexpurgated form, or almost unexpurgated, for the dauntless lady editor does balk at a few words. Our sincere tribute to the editor. She performed her task with great gusto." Albert Guerard

+ Books p5 Ap 2 '39 1050w

Books p29 Ap 2 '39 500w

Reviewed by A. L. Cross

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 450w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 13 '39 650w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 98:357 Ap 26 '39 950w

"Morris had a great reputation with his contemporaries for political foresight, but I do not think this journal is exciting either for the penetration with which he analyses political personalities and events, or for the quality of his ideas. What it affords is a solid factual picture, which, although at times boring, does not fail for a moment to impress and convince one." Stephen Spender

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:252 Ag 12 '39 1050w

"As a whole, we may say that Mrs. Davenport's editing of Morris's 'Diary' (and how excellent the many footnotes are!) is a genuine addition to that fascinating field of early Americana wherein we see what the founders of the Republic had to cope with and how intelligently they met their laborious tasks." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 26 '39 1850w

"Morris was an unpleasant man and a rabid snob, but this does not detract from the historical importance of these two handsome, well-illustrated volumes."

+ New Yorker 15:87 Mr 25 '39 50w

"The diary of Gouverneur Morris has long been one of the mainstays of conservative historians of the French Revolution. . . Diary fans will find pretty good fare. Morris tells all, or almost all, about his love affairs. . . For readers not especially fond of the diary as a form of literature, the book cannot be very strongly recommended. Morris is no

Pepys; and many readers will find his business engagements, teas, dinners, physics, and gallantries a bit wearying in the repetition." Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 25 '39 900w

Reviewed by Christopher Hobhouse

Spec 162:1004 Je 9 '39 1250w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 1000w

Time 33:74 Mr 27 '39 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p344 Je 10 '39 900w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Yale R n s 28:827 summer '39 360w

MORRIS, HILDA. The main stream. 327p $2.50 Putnam

(W) 39-27328

Novel of American life which follows the fortunes of the Denwoods, a New York state farm family, from the last years of the nineteenth century to the present. It charts the course of the lives of each of the three who left the farm, with stress on the life of Flora, the youngest, who after years of teaching in New York city returned gladly to the farm.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

"Miss Morris has handled her material with a smooth command and a broad awareness of its implications. The novel is unhurried and reflective, keyed up to a rather low dramatic and emotional pitch, and bears the stamp of quiet competence. Within its limitations it gives articulate expression to much 'slow and philosophic thought'—a phrase Miss Morris applies to one of her characters—and its abundance of accurate detail skilfully illuminates the lives and circumstances of a group of representative Americans in a period of profound unsettlement." J. S. Mabon

+ — Books p7 Ap 23 '39 700w

"Taken as a commentary on social relations or as a good story, told with wit and warmth, 'The Main Stream' is refreshing." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 26 '39 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"Always a thoughtful novelist, concerned with interpretation as well as mere description, Miss Morris appears to have consolidated her viewpoint toward American life. Unfortunately, she remains a sentimentalist—and a writer with little gift for portraying intimate human emotions. Her love scenes, for example, are clumsy, superficial. She is more at ease when she is dealing with homely, concrete details. As before, she has excellent material, but she lacks, seemingly, the skill and imagination to convert it into a first-rate novel. 'The Main Stream' is pleasant, readable, intelligent, but it is not quite the real thing." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 23 '39 800w

New Yorker 15:77 Ap 22 '39 50w

"The material is significant; the point of view honest and full of insight; the whole study of a changing way of life believable and appealing. . . There is a fine dignity to Miss Morris's treatment of her material. She has given intelligent attention to the drama of social conflict as it almost universally shows itself nowadays in the circle of a family. She expresses her sympathies with reserve and her protests without prejudice, enclosing the whole picture of a struggle in an atmosphere of shrewd, humorous compassion." James Gray

Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 22 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

MORRIS, PERCY A. What shell is that? a guide to the shell-bearing mollusks of eastern North America. 198p il $2.25 (8s 6d) Appleton-Century

594 Mollusks. Shells (W) 39-8731

"In a pocket-size guide-book, Mr. Morris, a member of the technical staff of the Peabody Museum of Natural History at Yale University, gives in succinct form descriptions of the representative shell-bearing mollusks of eastern North America. His introduction 'describes the basis of classification of mollusks, explains how they are given their scientific names, comments on their commercial aspects, and discusses the interest and technique of shell-collecting as a hobby.' . . One hundred and sixty-eight species were selected as the most common and typical from among many thousands. Each is given a page, with a picture and information on its size, color, structure, occurrence, geographical habitat, life habits, and economic or scientific significance. A glossary of unusual terms used in the text completes the volume." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39

Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Ap '39 170w

MORRIS, RICHARD H. How to write job-getting letters. 58p pa $1 Harper

331.1152 Applications for position 38-13777

"This is a sound guide to the writing of letters which should prove effective in securing positions. In compiling his data, the author interviewed employment and personnel managers of many of the country's leading organizations, and he has based the book largely on their opinions as to what constitutes a correct and forceful letter of application. The illustrative material—notably the 'model letters,' which are actual applications that have secured positions or interviews for the writers—is of unusual interest." Management R

Management R 27:251 Jl '38 80w

Special Libraries 30:28 Ja '39

MORRISSEY, ALICE MAGDALEN. American defense of neutral rights, 1914-1917. 230p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

940.32273 U.S.—Neutrality. U.S.—Foreign relations. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 39-5486

"The conclusions of this monograph are that 'The United States went to war with Germany because it passed a moral judgment on her behavior, because it insisted upon a broad interpretation of neutral rights, and because after developing a huge economic interest in one side, it lacked an economic deterrent to going to war with the other.' " Foreign Affairs

"This book presents an account of the betrayal of American neutrality by the Executive in 1914-1917. In the light of the works of Grattan, Millis, Tansill, and others the author's thesis is not new; yet, although much of the material is fairly well known, the author has made a distinct contribution by avoiding quotations from documents, presenting her story in narrative form, and employing her limited space for penetrating interpretative comment." Edwin Borchard

+ Am Hist R 45:424 Ja '40 850w

"The book has historical value insofar as it recites chronologically events as they occurred, but due to the fact that the narrow legal viewpoint was assumed in writing the book, the broader aspect of affairs has been eliminated." W. G. Weaver

Am Soc R 4:745 O '39 500w

Reviewed by H. W. Briggs

Columbia Law R 39:1275 N '39 550w

"Certain omissions in the bibliography throw doubt on the author's thoroughness."

Foreign Affairs 18:161 O '39 60w

MORROW, ELIZABETH REEVE (CUTTER) (MRS DWIGHT WHITNEY MORROW). A pint of judgment [il. by Susanne Suba]. 43p 50c Knopf

39-32607

Christmas story of a loving little girl who had a mistaken idea about a present for her mother, and what came of it.

"Amusing, kind-hearted little Christmas greeting." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 12 '39 150w

"An altogether charming little book."

+ Cath World 150:376 D '39 50w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 18 '39 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

"This is very pleasant in style and its spirit expresses the author's humor and affection." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 100w

"This small volume is charmingly made and its green cover adorned with drawings of Christmas tree ornaments, its end papers sprinkled with pictures of Christmas gifts and its lively little illustrations of Sally and her family make it an attractive and seasonable present for child or an adult." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 D 10 '39 160w

"This is an enchanting story with a simplicity and a warmth all its own. It gives a pleasant picture of a happy family and has a humorous twist at the end." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 180w

MORROW, MRS HONORE (MCCUE) WILLSIE. Demon daughter; the confession of a modern girl and her mother. 378p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 Morrow, Felicia (W) 39-27091

In alternate chapters a married daughter and her mother describe the harrowing details of the upbringing of the daughter, from the age of two to her marriage at twenty-one. The scenes of that difficult feat were New York, Connecticut, and England.

Booklist 35:222 Mr 1 '39

"Mrs. Morrow has told a warm-hearted story of family life, with a full-length portrait of Bessie, the colored nurse, which is the most touching thing in the book. It is a question whether distracted parents will learn very much about their own Little Problems, but at least they can say to themselves, 'Mine aren't as bad or as mad as Felicia, and, look, she came out all right.' Recommended to mothers' clubs." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p13 F 26 '39 600w

"A tale that will fill you with fury, laughter and sympathy. Mrs. Morrow talks with candor and friendliness, as though her reader, too, is a very special person. Tender and intimate as her confessions are, they are dignified by that very continental restraint that was acquired by Felicia with such pain for everyone. It is a rare pleasure to spend a few hours in the company of the Morrows, whose demon daughter insures their never being dull." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 650w

"Mrs. Morrow's entertaining book . . . provides much illuminating material for anyone interested in the psychology of the modern adolescent. . . The background of a cultured and pleasantly luxurious home is well indicated and the picture of herself inadvertently drawn by Mrs. Morrow is both delightful and admirable."

+ Cath World 150:125 O '39 120w

"This is a story of happy family life continually disturbed by the caprices of the Demon Daughter. It is always lively, frequently surprising and never dull. But the unsympathetic character of its main personage keeps it from being a thoroughly enjoyable book." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 26 '39 700w

"Autobiography that has the form of a novel, although it sounds real enough. An amusing account of pleasant people."

+ New Yorker 15:67 F 25 '39 40w

"A lot of women are going to read and enjoy it. On the other hand few men are likely to get far into it, and many of the women are going to be bored, or shocked, or derisively annoyed. . . Some of it is charming. Lots of it is cloying. Almost none of it is downright dull. All of it is going to be read by a vast number of women, and a lot of them are going to be cheered by it, in a wistful way." Frances Woodward

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:10 Mr 4 '39 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p753 D 30 '39 260w

MORSE, MRS HARRIET (KLAMROTH). Gardening in the shade; planting the shaded garden with shrubs and herbaceous perennials. 205p il $3 Scribner

635.9 Gardening (W) 39-27262

Manual for the amateur gardener, describing the possibilities of gardens in varying degrees of shade: woodland gardens, formal gardens, city yards, and terraces. Descriptive list of 500 annuals, perennials, and shrubs and trees suitable for different degrees of shade. Index.

Booklist 35:265 Ap 15 '39

"This book of Mrs. Morse's should be of wide interest, for it is essentially an informative book written against a background of practical experience and yet kept within ordinary limits by the fact that the author is, despite her experience, an amateur, too. As for the book's subject matter: the problems of successful plantings in shaded locations is one of great interest to all amateurs and yet one in which little practical material is available." W. H. Clark

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 18 '39 290w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"The author considers herself an amateur, but she has approached her subject so intelligently, and has consulted such recognized authorities, that a very convincing quality and reliability is apparent in her book."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 14 '39 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Ag 26 '39 100w

Wis Lib Bul 35:61 Ap '39

MORSE, JAMES KING. Jedidiah Morse, a champion of New England orthodoxy. 180p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Morse, Jedidiah. New England—Church history 39-11247

"The following essay is an attempt to reveal, by documentary evidence, the intricate religious pattern and the 'incredible story' of a formative and confused period in our American church history—1783-1819—as it is reflected in the mind and career of that protagonist of orthodoxy, Jedidiah Morse. No attempt is here made to write a biography. Only his participation in the controversies of his day is described, the aim of this study being to clarify the general issues at stake." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 40w

"Mr. Morse's monograph is a well documented study of so much of the story of the rise of American Unitarianism as is involved in the career of its most contentious and militant opponent." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 56:1139 S 20 '39 500w

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet
J Religion 19:396 O '39 950w
Reviewed by Constance Rourke
Nation 149:327 S 23 '39 150w
Reviewed by Conrad Wright
New Eng Q 12:567 S '39 1150w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 3 '39 460w

"An excellent study of a theme of great interest to the historian of social and intellectual change."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 50w

MORTON, ANTHONY. Alias Blue Mask [Eng title: Alias the Baron]. 320p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Low] 39-5468

Adventures of the Baron, alias the Blue Mask, after he had purchased an emerald necklet, supposed to bring bad luck to its owners. Robberies, safe-blowings, and several hair-breadth escapes were his lot.

"A bit lurid here and there, like all tales about these gents outside the law." Will Cuppy
Books p23 Ap 2 '39 130w

"The conclusion is one of the wildest we have found in some time; the whole story takes us definitely back to our childhood." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 1 '39 120w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 Ap 2 '39 140w

"Blood and thunder."
Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 1 '39 40w

"Adventures almost too complex for light reading."
Times [London] Lit Sup p124 F 25 '39 50w

MORTON, ANTHONY. Challenge Blue Mask! [Eng title: The baron at large]. 315p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Low] 39-23039

Detective story.

"Fair to middling." Will Cuppy
Books p13 O 22 '39 90w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 70w

"The tale is as good and as bad as the run of its kind." K. I.
N Y Times p35 O 15 '39 160w
Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 30w

MORTON, DAVID. All in one breath; a book of fifty lyrics. 57p $1.50 Macmillan 811 39-4927

A book of fifty brief lyrics, most of them on nature themes.

"Technical advances on earlier work are apparent, and Mr. Morton becomes more and more concerned with 'singing,' 'the word,' his own occupation, in short. He comes off quite well in this treacherous field. If the lyrics are slight and originate in a rather commonplace view of the function of poetry, many of them are nevertheless sufficiently fresh to be charming." John Craft
+ Books p10 My 28 '39 140w

"Trepidation attended my opening of this volume, but it quickly gave place to sheer delight as page after page yielded something like perfection. In that very invariability of perfection consists, perhaps, this poet's chief defect. . . The fifty lyrics, separate and individually complete though they are, have a striking unity, a unity which originates in the bent of the author's mind, his habitual preoccupation with the beauty of earthly things such as flowers and trees and birds, of things that are not all earthly, such as children and the human spirit." B. M. K.
+ Cath World 149:503 Jl '39 280w

"Clear and delicate as Venetian glass is the work of David Morton. There is a quiet beauty in his lyrics, and they are pleasant if not exciting reading. Emotion is crystallized in thought, and thought shaped deftly into lines which glow with a pale transparency."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '39 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

"Here are fifty brief lyrics; the voice: deft, pleasant, restrained, practised. . . These are lovely lyrics, indeed. What is more, readers will look forward to David Morton's sonnets, which will be published soon, with expectancy." Stephen Baldanza
+ Commonweal 30:82 My 12 '39 240w
Forum 101:240 Ap '39 30w
Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 26 '39 120w

"In a day when so much poetry raises its voice to be heard, it is refreshing to come upon a book of poems as gentle and as quietly sure of itself as this new volume by Mr Morton. Here are to be found those graces and devotions that modern life so generally lacks: clarity, courtesy, restraint, good form, deep loyalty. What Robert Herrick was doing three centuries ago David Morton with his own individual accent, is content to do today."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:100 My '39

MORTON, DUDLEY JOY. Oh, doctor! my feet! 116p il $1.50 (5s) Appleton-Century
616.7 Foot. Foot—Diseases (W) 39-27149

In a narrative, largely conversational in style, this book explains the causes of foot ailments and shows that the person to go to about them is the family physician, not the shoe dealer. Dr Morton is also the author of a technical work: The Human Foot, Its Evolutionary Development, Physiology, and Functional Disorders (Book Review Digest, 1936). Index.

"Oh, Doctor! My Feet! can be read with profit by the public, particularly by the parents of growing children, as it will give them much information regarding a very important and much abused part of the body. It may be added that it would make excellent reading for most physicians as well." F. D. Dickson
+ Am J Pub Health 29:1362 D '39 600w
Booklist 35:227 Mr 15 '39
J Home Econ 31:646 N '39 100w

"In his text the authority on foot physiology and disorders does not try to be too popular—that is, too easy and colloquial—as he acquaints his readers with the facts about foot trouble. He casts his material, however, in an easy mold of narrative."
+ N Y Times p24 F 26 '39 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

MORTON, MARMADUKE BECKWITH. Kentuckians are different [reminiscences and sketches of Kentucky]. ltd ed 337p $2 Standard ptg. co.
917.69 Kentucky 39-2084

"M. B. Morton of Kentucky has been a newspaper man for more than fifty years. He saw the last of slavery in Kentucky, and in two and a half years in Washington Territory he saw the last of Western pioneer life. His childish memories are shadowed by the war between the States and the sufferings of the Reconstruction period. . . His book as a whole is focused, as the title suggests, on Kentucky. And it is not really an autobiography, but a collection of quaint, lively, and really evocative anecdotes and sketches, a scrapbook." N Y Times

MORTON, M. B.—Continued

"People are described with adjectives instead of action. It's stuff that might be better talked than written."

— Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 50w

"This is a well-filled scrapbook from American life."

+ N Y Times p26 F 26 '39 320w

MOSCA, GAETANO. The ruling class (Elementi di scienza politica); tr. by Hannah D. Kahn; ed. and rev, with an introd, by Arthur Livingston. 514p $4.50 (25s) McGraw

320.1 Political science 39-2657

This translation of the work of an Italian scholar in the field of political science is based on the edition of 1923 with some reorganization of the material and some omissions. The work was first published in 1895. Index and bibliography.

Reviewed by F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 33:521 Je '39 750w

"Mosca's book will have to be read and studied by all social scientists, even by those who resent the possibility of having their scholarly localism and provincialism shattered by being interested in a borderline field—political sociology—to which Mosca really belongs today." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 205:166 S '39 1050w

"It is clear that like all deductive systems Mosca's political theory stands or falls by the validity of its major premise. And that premise, despite its plausibility and the evidence brought to support it, is far from invulnerable. . . Furthermore, there is good reason to hope, as well as to fear, that human nature may be much more malleable than Mosca ever admits. Nevertheless, he is still to be praised for raising issues that are so fundamental to all political theory." E. S. Bates

Books p21 Mr 5 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Michael Mayer

Boston Transcript p1 My 20 '39 320w

Reviewed by J. A. Lapp

Commonweal 29:694 Ap 14 '39 1000w

"This work, already a classic in Europe, deserves the widest attention in America. The author is the foremost political philosopher in Italy and his teachings have been drawn on heavily by Pareto and others."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:628 Ap '39 30w

Reviewed by C. B. Hoover

J Pol Econ 47:877 D '39 1000w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook

Nation 148:562 My 13 '39 1800w

"Highly selective, and with a particular neglect of economic forces, Mosca's book can best be described as a sociology of politics. From the ancient Persians, the medieval Arabs, the modern Italians—in fact from the political life of all peoples of all times Mosca selects materials which he enlightens by penetrating insights into individual and group psychology. Especially impressive is Mosca's appreciation of the role of the unconscious. His analysis is surely not scientific but science has no monopoly on the truth." Eli Ginzberg

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:18 Mr 18 '39 850w

"The picture Mosca gives of the ruling class, of politics and of political behavior is one which students in these fields cannot afford to neglect. In times like ours when political instincts are loosed among politicians and authors as well as among the masses, a thorough survey such as this without the slightest trace of heat or rancor, is most welcome." A. T. Mason

+ Survey G 28:340 My '39 480w

MOSES, WALTER FARRINGTON. Artistic anatomy. rev and enl ed 57 il $3.50; spiral binding $2.50 Borden pub. co, 727 W. 6th st, Los Angeles

743 Anatomy, Artistic 39-7533

"Black-and-white drawings, reproduced in 57 plates, show the skeleton and muscles of the human body. Names of bones and muscles are given on the page facing each plate; the action of the muscles is indicated. The 1930 edition is not available for comparison." Booklist

Booklist 35:383 Jl 15 '39

Pratt p15 winter '40

"Certainly one of the most sensible and best arranged books on anatomy that we have seen."

+ School Arts 39:3a N 4 '39 160w

MOSHER, JOHN S. Liar dice. 302p $2 Simon & Schuster

39-23528

Tale of international intrigue and murder laid in Tientsin, China.

"You may accept the author's quantities of local color and Far East lore as authentic. Mr. Mosher has spent twenty years in China, seven of them in the consular service. His first book is a don't-miss item." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 17 '39 200w

"Original and clever mystery tale." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 S 17 '39 200w

"Opium smuggling, Japanese complications, love, and murder should take your mind off the good earth." Written with authority."

+ New Yorker 15:80 S 23 '39 30w

Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 16 '39 40w

Time 34:71 O 2 '39 40w

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER. A history of American magazines. v2-3 608;649p il ea $5 Harvard univ. press [ea 21s Oxford]

051 Periodicals—History (39-2823)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by B.-M. Stearns

Am Hist R 44:937 Jl '39 490w

"I confess I began reading this history with some doubts as to whether the game would be worth the candle, whether the result could justify the labor and expense invested. I hadn't read far before I knew that Mr. Mott had splendidly justified his design, done a masterly job. He has written a thorough and well-documented history which puts, and will for decades continue to put, all students of American history and literature greatly in his debt. But he has done more than that. In the processes of research, tabulation and analysis he has never forgot that magazines, like books, are—if you will allow the syncopation—men. He who touches a nation's periodical literature touches its people." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 25 '39 600w

"Dr. Mott has certainly produced one of the most notable contributions to the history of journalism ever made." John Bakeless

+ Commonweal 29:529 Mr 3 '39 270w

"For the researcher or for the casual lover of Americana this series is invaluable. Professor Mott has done an almost incredibly able job." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:vii Ap '39 180w

"Invaluable and vastly entertaining history of American magazines. . . Of the general sections of these volumes, those dealing with the business aspects of the magazine are especially good. Not only is much new and not easily available material presented, but Mr. Mott's own comments on business management, circulation, payment of authors, and advertising are very illuminating. To me the least satisfactory are those sections which deal with literary trends and taste. . . My chief objection to Mr. Mott's two volumes is that they are not at least three. Possibly when the series is finished, Mr. Mott will consider publishing one or two supplementary volumes which will consist of the material excluded from the original ones. As a student of American literature, I hope so." Napier Wilt

+ Library Q 9:230 Ap '39 550w

"Mr. Mott keeps his narrative lively, weaves in specific references without obscuring the major themes, and communicates to his readers a generous share of his own enthusiastic concern with them. He succeeds because he intelligently selects and arranges his data, and because he writes fluent and well-accented prose. Quite apart from the value of its contents his book should be read because it shows so clearly some of the ways by which meticulous and thorough scholarship may be presented without the taint of mechanical dullness." K. B. Murdock

+ New Eng Q 12:576 S '39 700w

"About the most useful sections of Professor Mott's three volumes are those devoted to separate historical sketches of what he regards as the leading magazines of each period. . . An unconscious process of selection, however, has gone on here; and though Professor Mott finds room for such relatively insignificant titles as The Danville Quarterly Review and Demorest's Monthly Magazine, he has found no space for even a two or three-page sketch of some one of the farm journals of the agrarian revolt. . . It is a serious gap—a gap which some other writer will have to fill—in an otherwise admirable work." Newton Arvin

+ — New Repub 98:350 Ap 26 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p196 Ap 1 '39 360w

MOTT, JOHN RALEIGH, ed. Evangelism for the world today; as interpreted by Christian leaders throughout the world; pub. for the International missionary council. 295p $2.50 Harper

253 Evangelistic work 38-30776

"Brief and pregnant messages from more than one hundred persons concerning the meaning of evangelism, the aspects of the gospel most relevant to the needs of our time, and the more fruitful methods of disseminating it." Christian Century

---

"The book is a disappointment. Few persons answered a questionnaire adequately. Definitions of the term evangelism fall far short of the mark. A searching, scholarly study of the subject is needed. As individual statements, these notes are not without interest and importance." R. K. Morton

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 22 '39 80w

"That there should be much repetition in such a symposium is inevitable, and not regrettable. But there is also variety in both thought and expression. The book is a stimulus not only to thought about evangelism, but also to evangelistic action."

+ Christian Century 56:124 Ja 25 '39 80w

"Dr. Mott has done a fine service in editing this volume—excellent for reference and stimulating as a study of missionary effort and the propagation of the gospel of Jesus." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr 1 '39 150w

Reviewed by G. S. Young

Crozer Q 16:225 Jl '39 800w

MOTT, JOHN RALEIGH. Five decades and a forward view. 139p $1.50 Harper

266 Missions 39-31040

An account of what the missionary movement has accomplished in the past five decades and something of the plans for the future. The material was originally given in the form of lectures at the Union Theological Seminary of Virginia in 1939. Index.

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

Christian Century 56:1475 N 29 '39 70w

"Lay-folk, as well as ministers, will find this book very useful in getting a condensed but clear view of the major tendencies of world-wide missions during the past fifty years." A. L. M.

+ Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken

Living Church 101:7 D 6 '39 40w

Reviewed by Mabel Skinner

Survey 76:29 Ja '40 250w

MOTTRAM, RALPH HALE. Autobiography with a difference; 16 collotype il. from pencil drawings by A. H. Mottram, and photographs. 287p $3.50 Appleton-Century [12s 6d Hale, R]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [39-1366]

"Everything in these reminiscences is derived from the Book of Gays. In East Anglia, Gays are coloured pictures, and those set before the author as a small boy in the eighties were of three types. There were people who had a special function in life—the Workman, the Traveller, the King; objects of universal importance—the City, the Mill, the Theatre; scenes and ideas—the Battle, the Lure of Gold, Spring. Each of these and many more serve as facets by which Mr. Mottram diffuses his reflections." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Autobiography is always cramped and often choked by the obligation to keep to the chronological order of events. Mr. Mottram ranges free—and one who does that has far more chance of taking people along with him." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 My 7 '39 600w

"The book ends almost where it began, but the life depicted in between is dynamic—a gallery of portraits come alive at their daily tasks in Norwich. Of the portraits those of the mother and father are fullest and best; but the entire book is a treasure house—an autobiography 'with a difference.'" W. C. Brown

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 6 '39 500w

"A very pleasant collection of portraits, reminiscent and far more interesting than the 'Gays,' the book makes. Mr. Mottram's quality is his piety toward fact, his love of simple ordinary things. His commentary is not particularly remarkable, but he has a soothing faithfulness to his subjects." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 F 1 '39 180w

"The more some things are proclaimed to be 'different' the more they are the same, but Mr. Mottram's new work fully justifies its title. He has really found a new recipe for autobiography." Gilbert Thomas

+ Manchester Guardian sup xviii D 9 '38 290w

New Repub 99:112 My 31 '39 50w

Reviewed by Flora Grierson

New Statesman & Nation 16:995 D 10 '38 40w

"This is a book of gentle evocation, charming, lovable, human; a book, too, of insight and charity. But its echoes have their sharpness. In terms of an autobiography 'with a difference,' and with suggestion often instead of definition, it is an English journey into one man's remembered time." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 My 14 '39 1250w

"'Autobiography with a Difference' is a small masterpiece, written as are the author's novels, with lucidity, balance, and intelligence. The influence of Galsworthy (freely admitted by Mottram) is evident in the understatement, the quietness, the sharp response to beauty and fortitude, and the earnest attempt to understand as well as condemn the discreditable and ignoble. In spite of the author's sociological bent the autobiography is in Galsworthy's own phrase, highly humanized history, another precious recapturing of the past." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Ap 29 '39 700w

Reviewed by Anthony Powell

Spec 162:28 Ja 6 '39 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p711 N 5 '38 390w

MOTTRAM, RALPH HALE. Traders' dream; the romance of the East India company. 322p il $3 (12s 6d) Appleton-Century

382.0942 East India company (English). British in India. India—History 39-23332

History of the British East India company from its beginnings in the charter granted by Queen Elizabeth in 1600 to the aftermath of the mutiny of 1857. Illustrated with reproductions of old prints. Index.

Booklist 36:83 N 1 '39

"This is a book which reflects the erudition, enthusiasm and the originality of its author." C. J. Finger

+ Books p25 O 29 '39 800w

"The story is a long and fascinating one, and Mr. Mottram has told it understandingly and well. He has carefully balanced the economic necessities of Indian trade, the historic factors tending toward British imperialism, and the personalities that made the East India Company, and in a maze of fact has never let the reader's interest become lost." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 4 '39 650w

"Few chapters in history are as colorful, as dynamic as the story of the British East India Company. . . Mottram has done it full justice, incorporating much new material into a book which is as authentic as it is vivid." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 51:4 N '39 240w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p9 O 15 '39 700w

"Reading this book raises the question whether a good novelist is wise to turn historian. We cannot help wishing that Mr. Mottram had stuck to his fiction. To justify such a departure requires far more in the way of study and research, accuracy of statement, and balanced judgment than he displays. Granted that he is writing for the same audience that enjoys his novels and that some of them may enjoy this new book, still, the kind of hit-or-miss effect he manages to achieve with facts makes it hard for a reviewer to recommend the book." A. M. Davies

Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 30 '39 500w

Spec 163:602 O 27 '39 70w

"The reader . . . will certainly welcome this vivid narrative. . . The subject was presumably an entirely new one to Mr. Mottram when he began his researches, and he succeeds in conveying to his readers something of his own freshness and enthusiasm. Doubtless the professed historian will challenge some of his statements and will point out important omissions. It is on the latter that the critic will chiefly fasten. . . Twenty-five illustrations have been provided, mostly reproductions of old prints. It would have added to the value of these if their sources (and dates) had been given; while some readers at least would have been grateful if one or more maps had been added."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p589 O 14 '39 550w

MOULLIN, ERIC BALLIOL. Spontaneous fluctuations of voltage due to Brownian motions of electricity, shot effect, and kindred phenomena. 251p $6 (17s 6d) Oxford

537.5 Vacuum tubes [39-19691]

"'This book describes many phases of the study of voltage disturbances arising from thermal and shot effects, especially in connection with the bearing of these problems on vacuum theory and practice.'" N Y New Tech Bks

---

Nature 144:900 N 25 '39 170w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:38 Jl '39

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN. Financial organization and the economic system. 515p map $3.50 McGraw

332 Finance. Money. Banks and banking (W) 38-30590

The author's earlier volume, Financial Organization of Society (Book Review Digest, 1921) succeeding editions of which appeared in 1926 and 1930, has been largely rewritten, greatly amplified and newly entitled to convey more clearly the scope and character of the analysis as a whole. Index.

"The book is one that the teacher may find useful in many ways, as a text for a general course in finance, or as background reading for students in more specialized courses, where some general perspective is desirable. The clear, simple and interesting style and well-organized marshalling of the facts make the book one that students should have no difficulty in using to advantage, either with or without the aid of classroom instruction." A. M. McIsaac

+ Am Econ R 29:408 Je '39 320w

"In matters of fundamental importance. Professor Moulton's new volume is important enough to demand examination by all those who are seeking a textbook that is accurate, up to date, and interestingly written." F. C. James

+ — Ann Am Acad 204:216 Jl '39 320w

Booklist 35:101 N 15 '38

Reviewed by J. W. Bell

Harvard Business R 17:236 winter '39 160w

Reviewed by L. L. Watkins

J Pol Econ 47:426 Je '39 800w

Management R 28:144 Ap '39 70w

MOUNIER, EMMANUEL. Personalist manifesto; tr. from the French by monks of St John's abbey. 298p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

335 Personalism. Civilization—Philosophy 39-454

"Emmanuel Mounier [is a] youthful French philosopher and leader of an international organization known as the Amis d'Esprit. Personalism according to the 'Manifesto' is any doctrine that affirms the primacy of the human person over the material environment in which man lives and over the techniques man uses to promote his well-being. Personalism places man at the center of the social order. A personalist civilization is because of man and for his sake. Personalism then represents a revolt against a concept of culture which subjects man to the play of economic or biological forces." (Commonweal) Index.

"Despite the indefatigable labors of the Benedictine translators of St. John's Abbey, Minn., under the lead of the lamented Virgil Michel, the book is none too clear. It is welcomed as a sincere contribution to the collective efforts directed to a program of social reconstruction." W. J. Benn

+ — America 61:261 Je 24 '39 420w

"A stimulating and a valuable book." R. K. Morton

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 1 '38 550w

Reviewed by Ernest Thomas

Canadian Forum 18:285 D '38 340w

Cath World 148:759 Mr '39 370w

"The entire book rewards careful study. At times it places the average reader at a temporary disadvantage by its free use of the technical vocabulary of various fields, but the author is usually careful to give some clue to the meaning of the terms. Perhaps the most important thing about the book is the fact that it represents an incisive attempt to meet the contemporary challenge of collectivism and regimentation as final forms of social life." Harold Bosley

+ — Christian Century 57:20 Ja 3 '40 1000w

"Not only have the translators given us a fine English version of the 'Manifesto,' but Father Michel's Foreword is of especial value to the American reader for it tells us something of the Amis d'Esprit and furnishes us with an excellent interpretative commentary." Charles O'Donnell

+ Commonweal 28:590 S 30 '38 480w

"The book will be of great interest to all who are concerned with the decay of civilization. Its French background makes some of its material foreign to our situation, but the clarity of its French style—well preserved by the translators—and the searching quality of its analysis give it wide application. And the emphasis upon the person make it both very Christian and very American, if one can use that word in this surprising connection. While parts of the discussion are not easy going, a clear arrangement of the topics and a fine index aid in reading that is rewarding." T. J. Bigham, Jr.

+ — Living Church 100:236 F 22 '39 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 1 '39 600w

MOURNIAN, MRS UNA PRENTISS (TAYLOR). In those days. 326p $2.50 Macmillan

917.4 Frontier and pioneer life—New England. Reynolds, Hiram Hogan 39-23403

Stories of events relating to life in the frontier settlements of the New Hampshire land grants at the time of the Revolution and the War of 1812. The work is based upon the narrative of Hiram Reynolds, who died a short time ago in San Diego, California, aged 108.

"Throughout, the book is filled with good stories, and much solid information about how rural Yankees lived a century and more ago. It is done in the vernacular of the oldtime backwoods Yankee, but don't let that frighten you; Mrs. Mournian has a fine ear; the talk reads naturally. . . It is an excellent job of reporting a man who must have been about the last of the old Nestors to have talked with soldiers and others of the Revolutionary period." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p20 O 29 '39 450w

Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 50w

Christian Century 56:1511 D 6 '39 70w

Christian Science Monitor p21 D 2 '39 700w

New Repub 100:322 O 18 '39 40w

"One of the grandest pictures of settlement life that have ever been recorded. . . 'In Those Days,' by the way, is Mrs. Mournian's first book. May it not be her last." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p4 O 1 '39 1300w

"The book is full enough of humor and humanness and drama to make your hair curl. It includes a personal Devil who walks, followed by a coterie of witches. It is not a long book, but there's everything in it—except dirty words and love." C. B. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 20:12 S 23 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 13 '39 700w

MOWAT, ROBERT BALMAIN. The American entente. 286p $2.50 Longmans [7s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S.

A survey of the relations, diplomatic, political and social, of Great Britain and the United States from the close of the American revolution down to the present. The author, an English historian, says he wrote the first part of the work in England, finished it in Los Angeles—where the Englishman still "feels at home." He further explains his title—not an alliance but an entente, good relationship, exists between the two countries. Index.

Booklist 36:208 F 1 '40

"[A] timely and unpretentious book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:966 D 30 '39 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p698 D 2 '39 800w

MOWRER, EDGAR ANSEL. The dragon wakes; a report from China [Eng title: Mowrer in China]. 242p maps $2 Morrow [6d Penguin]

951 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. China—History. China—Civilization (W) 39-27038

An American foreign correspondent sends back a report of the fighting in China which includes a description of what he actually saw behind the lines along the Yellow river. His considered opinion that Japan cannot win is based on two reasons: the "inability of the Japanese to occupy more of China than the ground their troops stand on"; and the awakening in China of an invincible national spirit. Index.

Booklist 35:203 F 15 '39

"This man knows how to get information, how to meet people worth meeting, how to size them up and, for a tyro in China where millions of people are busy all day long making things appear as they are not, how to construe his observations." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p5 F 12 '39 1250w

Reviewed by Hannibal Towle

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 170w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 1 '39 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

Economist 135:254 Ap 29 '39 150w

Foreign Affairs 17:643 Ap '39 20w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson

Nation 148:238 F 25 '39 100w

"Edgar Ansel Mowrer's book is an extremely able report by a veteran journalist, who knows how to get the material, how to sift it and how to write an informative and entertaining story." V. A. Yakhontoff

+ New Repub 98:172 Mr 15 '39 280w

"This cannot be called an objective book, for the author starts with a point of view and keeps it; but in many respects it is a piece of good reporting and is lively reading." E. J. Young

+ — N Y Times p2 F 26 '39 750w

"Tense, well argued, and with the author's Chinese bias admitted."

+ New Yorker 14:82 F 11 '39 40w

Pacific Affairs 12:208 Je '39 210w

"Mr. Mowrer's book is chiefly valuable for its analysis of conditions in the central government's territory, a field about which little has been written. He successfully conveys a sense of the nationalist spirit which grips the Chinese nation and its people." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 F 25 '39 500w

Time 33:70 F 20 '39 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 21 '39 250w

MOWRER, EDGAR ANSEL. Germany puts the clock back. rev ed 410p $2.50 Morrow

943.085 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Nazi movement 39-29402

"A new foreword and three chapters of recent history bring up to date this able history." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933. Index.

Booklist 36:154 D 15 '39

Cath World 150:502 Ja '40 450w

New Repub 101:269 D 20 '39 40w

"In this new edition of his deservedly popular book, Mr. Mowrer adds a foreword and three chapters, totaling about one hundred pages.

MOWRER, E. A.—Continued
In most of his new material, dealing almost exclusively with diplomatic events, he unfortunately substitutes indignation for accurate reporting. . . In contrast to the powerful descriptive writing and shrewd political analysis of the original volume, the new pages are a disappointing combination of factual narrative and second-hand interpretation." J. F. Green
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 D 9 '39 190w
Times [London] Lit Sup p982 D 25 '37 150w

MOYER, JAMES AMBROSE, and FITTZ, RAYMOND UNDERWOOD. Air conditioning. 2d ed 455p il $4 (24s) McGraw

628.8 Air conditioning 38-37233

"Increased by sixty-five pages, this practical and theoretical work is brought down to date, notably in the simplification of Chapter I and the inclusion of new material on sun effect, heat transfer through building materials, the calculation and selection of the proper size of unit air conditioners of various types, automatic control, and a set of practical problems devoted to design. The authors are State Director of University Extension in Massachusetts, and Assistant Professor of Mechanical Engineering in Tufts College, respectively." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933. Index.

Booklist 35:175 Ja 15 '39
Eng N 121:829 D 29 '38 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:19 Ap '39

MUDD, J. S. Leather finishes; their formulation, manufacture and application; foreword by M. C. Lamb. 113p il $4.25 Chemical pub. co. [10s 6d A. Harvey, 17 Leathermarket st, London, S.E. 1]

675 Leather [40-2975]

"The primary object of this book is to give the users of all types of finishes information on their composition, the raw materials used in their manufacture and the methods by which they are produced. It gives the finish manufacturers information on the various problems involved in the application of their materials and so assists them in formulation. In addition, the book should not be without interest to certain sections of the paint and pigment industry since the book devotes a chapter to this subject covering such aspects as selective absorption, earth colors, grinding, air flotation, precipitation, etc. Pigment finishes are of utmost importance because of the regularity of color and increased cutting value given the leather." Chem & Met Eng

Chem & Met Eng 46:492 Ag '39 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:40 Jl '39

MUENSCHER, WALTER CONRAD LEOPOLD. Poisonous plants of the United States [il. by Helen Hill Craig]. 266p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

581.692 Poisonous plants. Botany—U.S.
(W) 39-27039

Manual for the identification of poisonous plants in the United States. Part one is a general discussion of plants, exclusive of the fungi, which are poisonous to man or animal. Part two is a detailed treatment of the plants, arranged by families, together with conditions of poisoning and with some hints on treatment. Author is professor of botany at the New York College of Agriculture. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:201 F 15 '39
J Home Econ 31:400 Je '39 60w

"A book of practical value and usefulness as well as of value to students."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 18 '39 550w
Wis Lib Bul 35:61 Ap '39

MUHLEN, NORBERT. Schacht: Hitler's magician; the life and loans of Dr Hjalmar Schacht; introd. by Johannes Steel [tr. by E. W. Dickes] [Eng title: Hitler's magician]. 228p $3 Alliance bk. corp. [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Schacht, Hjalmar. Germany—Economic policy (W) 39-27263

Biography of Hjalmar Schacht, demonstrating his power as an uncanny manipulator of German finance, his share in the establishment of the present Reich, and his influence in the rearmament of Germany.

"As a biography Herr Norbert Muhlen's study has little claim to serious attention. . . The biographer's treatment throughout is hostile, scrappy and unconvincing. But as an exposition of deeds and facts, particularly the flow of marks, pounds and dollars, it is good medicine for a part of the world which is accustomed to gulp down docilely the myths of the 'tragedy of reparations' and 'export or die.'" Alzada Comstock
— + Am Econ R 29:569 S '39 600w
Booklist 35:268 Ap 15 '39
Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Commonweal 30:53 My 5 '39 180w
Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:7 My '39 550w
Foreign Affairs 17:814 Jl '39 20w

"Perhaps the main value of the book lies in the insight it gives into the nature of totalitarian economic policy, of which Dr. Schacht is the originator, that sinister mixture of finance, propaganda, and force designed to further German interests in every sphere." J. B.
Manchester Guardian p7 D 9 '38 500w
Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 148:471 Ap 22 '39 550w
New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 30w

"This documented story of a mysterious career delves deeper into the bedrock of Nazidom than a thousand refugee stories."
New Yorker 15:87 Mr 18 '39 60w
Pratt p26 autumn '39

"Even though this study is almost constantly interesting, it hardly illuminates either the magician or his magic. . . It views the man entirely from the outside, never furnishing any first-hand information about his thoughts and motives. Dr. Schacht remains just as cold, shrewd, and unknown as before. Mr. Muhlen surveys the whole post-war history of German fiscal policy, but really adds little to our knowledge of its fantastic operation. Some day both Dr. Schacht and Nazi finance will receive comprehensive analysis; at present they are only outlined in a shadowy and tantalizing introduction." J. F. Green
Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 18 '39 500w

"A biography of Dr. Schacht in the English language was long overdue, for the remarkable personality of the German banker-statesman has aroused keen interest in this country and in the United States. The English translation of Herr Norbert Mühlen's book fills this gap to a considerable extent. . . While the factual material provided by the book is very valuable indeed, the author's interpretation of Dr. Schacht's character and policies suffers from his prejudiced attitude against the subject of his biography. . . Nor does the author do justice to Dr. Schacht's character. He lays too much stress upon Dr. Schacht's political opportunism and does not give him credit for the fact that under the Nazi régime he had the courage to take a highly unpopular attitude at the risk of his personal safety and possibly of his life. . . It is a pity that the author has missed the opportunity of enlivening the book by reproducing some of the outstanding examples of Dr. Schacht's delightful sense of humour. His jokes at the expense of various Nazi leaders, and his biting sarcasm in his dealings with them, must have contributed at least as much to his decline as the stubbornness with which he sought to resist heterodox Nazi economic and financial policy." Paul Einzig

— + Spec 161:sup6 N 18 '38 800w

"Not a little of what Mr Muhlen says must be taken on faith, since very few references to authorities are cited—not even the title or author of what he describes as a 'semiofficial biography' of Schacht is mentioned. In general, the statistics offered agree with those to be found in the usual yearbooks and similar sources of information. But some of the author's interpretations of recent history—such as his belief that financiers outside Germany were 'forced' to invest vast sums in that country after the war—are open to question."
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 30 '39 650w

"This work is written from a hostile standpoint, and what could be replied on behalf of Dr. Schacht could hardly be gathered from its pages. Yet the author is clearly well informed, and offers chapter and verse for his statements."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p734 N 19 '38 600w

MULLEN, MRS MARY JOANNA (FUNK), and MULLEN, WILLIAM BOONE. The little-monkey-with-wings-on-his-tail [pictures in two colors by Joey Mullen]. [32p] $1.50 Harper

39-7259

Story for children about a little monkey who was born with five pairs of neat little wings on his tail. This unusual addition made him proud and uppity, and got him into a peck of trouble besides.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 S 10 '39 230w

"For all the lesson that may be drawn from it, the story is happily conceived in a vein of pure nonsense and skillfully told in a minimum of words. It has been left to Joey Mullen to bring out the humor of the situations and this has been done in the drollest of pictures, drawn with a beautiful simplicity and imagination which makes them truly distinguished." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p11 Ap 9 '39 320w

MULLETT, CHARLES FREDERIC. The British empire. 768p maps $5; college ed $3.75 Holt [12s 6d Harrap]

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies. Great Britain—History 38-9891

Textbook on British imperial history comprising a study of the basic similarities and differences in the political and economic development of the several separate parts of the empire. Bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

"After an excellent general chapter on 'Colonial Policy and Ideas since 1815', the treatment becomes less closely articulated as developments in each part of the empire are taken up in turn for the years before responsible government and again in rotation for the later period, the whole being concluded by a brief general chapter. In the development of the second empire more recognition might have been given to the needs of defense and to elements of genuine humanitarianism as factors in influencing attitudes and policies both in Britain and in some of the colonies. The comprehensiveness of the author's intention is commendable, yet so much local detail is sometimes included as to result in a condensation of statement that tends to be cryptic, ambiguous, and occasionally erroneous." R. G. Trotter
Am Hist R 44:579 Ap '39 380w

"An excellent text-book. . . The book is well written. In the cases where space precludes extended discussion of a particular point, the author happily avoids the pit-fall of being misleading through an effort to be striking." A. G. Dewey
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:116 F '39 250w

MUMFORD, ELIZABETH, pseud. of BESSIE JUDITH JONES and MRS ELIZABETH HERZOG. Whistler's mother; the life of Anna McNeill Whistler. 326p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Whistler, Anna Mathilda (McNeill) (Mrs George Washington Whistler) 39-29106

This biography of Whistler's mother extols the virtues and makes light of the faults of the woman behind the famous painting. Various printed sources were used, but the primary source was the biographee's own diary and correspondence.

Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

" 'Whistler's Mother' is warm and sympathetic, even sentimental at times. Few faults are allowed to creep into this picture of the devoted wife and mother. Occasionally qualities are imputed to her that seem apocryphal." Rosemary Benét
Books p5 N 5 '39 500w
Christian Century 56:1410 N 15 '39 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton
Churchman 153:22 D 15 '39 160w

"Elizabeth Mumford is somewhat inclined to sentimentalize, not so much the story itself as her way of telling it. . . On the other hand, she brings Whistler's mother to life, even though her own style approaches the fulsome at times. The American wife and mother is felt as a real person in the St. Petersburg years." Katherine Woods
+ — N Y Times p4 N 5 '39 800w

"This attempt to write an interesting book around a famous and fascinating portrait has failed partly because of bad literary method, partly because of the inherently uninteresting character of the biographical material itself. In the use of quotation marks the author leaves it uncertain when she is quoting diaries and letters and when she is merely putting words into the mouths of the Whistlers—a confusing and irritating procedure." F. J. M., Jr.
— Sat R of Lit 21:42 D 2 '39 270w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 19 '39 650w
Time 34:88 N 13 '39 380w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Men must act. 176p $1.50; pa 75c Harcourt

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. Fascism. Democracy. World politics (W) 39-27092

After analyzing the opposed fundamental principles of democracy and fascism, Mr Mumford offers a definite program for the United States, not appeasement and cooperation with the states looking toward collective security, not isolation, but an active policy of non-intercourse with the fascist powers even to the point of war.

Reviewed by C. R. Walker
Atlantic My '39 420w
Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39

"The book, whatever its faults, deserves a wide reading. For at worst, Mr. Mumford has fearlessly suggested a positive policy and a positive program instead of the negative policy and do-nothing program which are all that we have at the present moment." E. S. Bates
+ — Books p4 F 19 '39 1250w

"There will be those who will go part way with Mr. Mumford, but will not accept his uncompromising line of action. There will be those who will look for, but will not find, a detailed program for the strengthening of democratic processes within this country—such a program as Lerner gives in 'It Is Later Than You Think.' And the increasingly bewildering problem of how to assail the fascistic tendencies within our own frontier, signposts of which can be seen daily in our rabble-rousers, professional patriots and radio demagogues, is a vital problem which Mr. Mumford scarcely touches upon." Joan Hopkinson
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 11 '39 650w

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued

"There may be disagreement on the premises and the conclusions which Mr. Mumford has presented. To this reviewer both are cogent and correct. He is not dogmatic about means; he is precise as to ends. His analysis is the most persuasive—and the most inspiring—which has yet appeared among the prognoses of what seems an almost inevitable struggle for power over the spirit and the will even more than over the lives of men." Phillips Bradley

+ Christian Century 56:282 Mr 1 '39 750w

Reviewed by O. B. Warford
Christian Century 56:1546 D 13 '39 700w
Christian Science Monitor p16 F 27 '39 470w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 153:15 My 15 '39 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39
Foreign Affairs 17:633 Ap '39 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 101:iv Mr '39 240w

"What depresses and frightens the reviewer is that a man of Mr. Mumford's superb intelligence, a man of generous and humane sympathies, a man who represents the full flowering of democratic civilization, can outline a remedy which bids fair to multiply the evils he would efface. He writes under the impress of a great fear, indeed in the agony of unbearable pain. He strikes out against the evil that torments him and he would have us strike out with him against the great beast. But hatred, even the most righteous hatred, is not enough." Leo Gershoy

Living Age 356:296 My '39 400w

"I think this program will sustain itself because it is simple and forthright, because it comes close to popular feeling, and because it is built upon fundamentals in our character and tradition. In the rush of dark events it provides a touchstone and a philosophy." Constance Rourke

+ Nation 148:206 F 18 '39 1800w

"A serious fault with Mr. Mumford's proposal is his debonair dismissal of serious difficulties. In a chapter of twenty-eight lines, 'Implementing Non-Intercourse,' he admits that his plan would involve serious dislocation to American economic life and tragic losses to individual Americans. He simply says that 'none of these problems is of overwhelming difficulty' and lets it go at that; there will be others lacking in such optimism." E. M. Earle

New Repub 98:133 Mr 8 '39 1050w

"The book is lucid and eloquent. In words of fire and light Mr. Mumford restates the pleas of Thomas Mann, Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Hans Kohn and Aurel Kolnai. . . At the risk of being deemed a defeatist, I fear that Mr. Mumford will be answered with empty echoes and hollow bellowing. Those who choose suicide cannot be made wise or brave or taught the arts of self-defense." F. L. Schuman

+ New Repub 98:133 Mr 8 '39 600w
New Statesman & Nation 17:596 Ap 22 '39 130w

"Mr. Mumford's own attitude is in some respects disturbing. He quotes with approval AE's warning that a man becomes the image of the thing he hates. Yet his own tone is too shrill. He allows himself to be carried along by the rush of his own rhetoric." Henry Hazlitt

N Y Times p2 Mr 12 '39 950w
New Yorker 15:83 F 18 '39 70w
No Am 247:395 summer '39 70w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Pacific Affairs 12:455 D '39 350w

"If one can see objections to the American foreign policy proposed by Mr. Mumford, there can be nothing but praise for his analysis of the reasons that compel us to have a foreign policy—and to have a good one, or else. He understands the nature of fascism considerably better than the optimists who think that if you keep on saying 'Good doggie' and tossing them enough bones, the wolves will quiet down." Elmer Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:8 F 18 '39 1900w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 26 '39 950w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
Survey G 28:341 My '39 300w

"There is some solid philosophy behind Mr. Mumford's wild language—his point, for example, that democracy is now synonymous with civilization just because of its insistence on the individual's right to think his own thoughts. There is force, too, in his argument that, before many years have gone by American opinion will be affected by fear of attack from the air and that will be the end of the old and still orthodox isolationism."

Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Ap 22 '39 170w

MUNFORD, KENNETH. John Ledyard: an American Marco Polo. 308p maps $2.50 Binfords

B or 92 Ledyard, John 39-10646

A popular, somewhat fictionized, biography of an American Marco Polo, who in the early days of our republic explored the west coast, voyaged with Captain Cook, attempted the trip across Europe and Siberia to Alaska, and finally died in Cairo on the eve of an expedition into Africa.

"Holding fast to facts but filling in lacunae with pertinent description and interjecting probable conversations, Mr. Munford has made a very readable book which is alert and journalistic, its style bright and intelligent." C. J. Finger

+ Books p4 Jl 2 '39 900w

Reviewed by Daniel Rochford
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 240w

"It is an extraordinary story, against a broad and colorful background which itself is peopled with many famous men. And John Ledyard as an individual is well worth a place in one's personal collection of historic masters of derring do. Unfortunately, the story is not very expertly told here; the author writes with little gradation of emphasis, and his characters and events do not spring into the vigorous life that is their due."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 23 '39 500w
Pratt p26 autumn '39

MUNITZ, MILTON KARL. The moral philosophy of Santayana. 116p $1.75 Columbia univ. press [9s Oxford]

191 Santayana, George 39-25949

Critical study of the philosopher Santayana in the various stages of his development. "Dr. Munitz fits the course of Santayana's thought into a dialectical scheme: in youth, composing poetry, he chose pessimistic aesthetic as a refuge from loss of religion through the impact of nineteenth century science; in maturity, as author of The Life of Reason, he took hope in the technological advance of the time; in the fullness of age, while writing The Realms of Being, he escaped to imagination from the confusion, violence and barbarism of the present. But while Santayana's biography may account for the fluctuation of his interest, Munitz believes that the two poles of it are there for everyone, and can say that his attention has simply shifted from the field of human activity to its metaphysical setting, from the foreground to the background of experience." (Christian Century) Index.

"A person who cares about moral philosophy in the sense of wishing 'to understand the conditions and limits of human happiness,' whether a reader of Santayana or not, should welcome this able summary and criticism of his thought." Van Meter Ames

+ Christian Century 56:1202 O 4 '39 550w

"This is an excellent expository and critical study. . . It might be objected that the word 'moral' in the title is redundant, since moral philosophy, in the sense of 'the hierarchy of goods, the architecture of values,' has long been recognized as Santayana's 'chosen subject.' . . Dr. Munitz casts his vote for Santayana the Aristotelian as against Santayana the Platonist. While not markedly original in its main theme, his essay is laudably, brief, pointed, workmanlike, and sympathetic." H. A. L.

+ J Philos 37:51 Ja 18 '40 190w

MUNTHE, WILHELM. American librarianship from a European angle; an attempt at an evaluation of policies and activities. 191p $2 A.L.A.

020.973 Libraries—U.S. (W) 39-27557

"A frank, objective appraisal of American library policy and practice by the director of the University library at Oslo, who was invited in 1936 by the Carnegie corporation to make this study. Libraries of various types and sizes in 36 states were visited. Dr. Munthe's criticisms, commendations, and comparisons with European practice are presented in a direct, facile style. The writer is no visionary; his clear statements go straight to the point and make good reading." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:357 Jl 1 '39

"In this reviewer's opinion no book on American libraries that has appeared in recent years is more stimulating or more worth reading. It should shake many of us out of our natural complacency; it should irritate us just enough to set our thinking processes to work; in short, it is worth-while reading for librarians of all sorts and ranks." K. D. Metcalf

+ Library Q 10:112 Ja '40 1300w

"Dr. Munthe sees American librarianship as many librarians see it, and fortunately is in a position to express his views freely. His sincerity is enhanced by his humor. . . Dr. Munthe touches every library problem briefly but vitally. His praises are generally admitted as well deserved; his adverse criticisms, though seconded by many librarians, have not been broadcast. It is for this reason that his critical attitude is emphasized in this review." Geza Schutz

+ Survey 75:388 D '39 380w

MURAD, ANATOL. The paradox of a metal standard; a case history of silver. 212p $2.50 Graphic arts press

332.41 Silver as money. Currency question 39-16382

"This book tells the history of silver's demonetization and gives the background of the repeated attempts here to reverse the process. . . To the average citizen, a puzzling phenomenon is silver's repeated success in Congress. The strategic position of the West in the Senate is appreciated; but the reason for persistence of the silver myth in the light of the metal's history and its demonstrable economic unimportance, even to the West, has caused persistent wonderment. This book should help the public's understanding. The author's historical work is not based on manuscripts, but is confined chiefly to readily available books." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

"The volume will prove valuable in the classroom and the library, and should appeal to a wider audience, thanks to recent events." H. M. Bratter

+ Am Econ R 29:879 D '39 400w

"This is a capable study of the paradox of the silver standard and an introduction to the study of a more important issue—the paradox of the gold standard." J. S. M. Allely

+ Ann Am Acad 206:205 N '39 270w

MURDOCK, KENNETH BALLARD. The sun at noon; three biographical sketches. 327p il $2.75 Macmillan

920 Falkland, Elizabeth (Tanfield) Cary, viscountess. Falkland, Lucius Cary, 2d viscount. Rochester, John Wilmot, 2d earl of 39-11071

Three biographical sketches of seventeenth-century English characters. They are Elizabeth Cary, Viscountess Falkland, an eccentric poetess, who defied family and court to turn Catholic and live in poverty; her son Lucius Cary, scholar and poet, who defended the king's cause in 1643, and lost his life thereby; and John Wilmot, Earl of Rochester, whose profligacy shocked even the court of Charles II. Index.

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Books p10 Jl 23 '39 700w

"Professor Murdock's scholarship, which presupposes an intimate knowledge of the period, has not the advantage of simple statement which is so essential to biography. . . He lacks the dramatic sense which would bring his characters to life objectively, but one feels that he understands their mental processes. Elizabeth Cary is well worth such an introduction." E. VR. W.

+ — Cath World 149:507 Jl '39 490w
Christian Century 56:516 Ap 19 '39 90w

" 'The Sun at Noon,' while far from being exhaustive as history, is a thoroughly enjoyable book." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p3 Je 4 '39 850w

"On the whole these three studies, scholarly, intelligent, and urbane, are no more than half satisfactory. In undertaking to write a popular study of seventeenth century religious temperaments the writer undertakes to interest the reader in minds which worked in terms of theology. These days that is not easy. But once the challenge is accepted, the problem should be met, not avoided, no matter with what deftness and grace." Garrett Mattingly

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:28 Ap 29 '39 700w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 110w

"The author at times labors his point that these three intellectuals had evolved sets of 'values' enabling them to face the problems of their day. Using his assumptions and following his methods, it might perhaps be argued that any saint or sinner or average man who ever lived and did anything good or bad, or did nothing at all of importance, is to be explained by reference to the 'values' he had worked out. Apart from this, Prof. Murdock has written a book that in subject-matter and in style is highly interesting." Donald Derby

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p524 S 9 '39 1250w

MURPHEY, EUGENE EDMUND. Wings at dusk, and other poems. 58p il $2 Longmans

811 39-3323

Poems about birds by an ornithologist and physician, "an amateur at verse, but [one who] by keeping his ear on the language, has made some excellent poetry." (Books)

"This volume represents a triumph of common sense, wit, imagination and knowledge, over the 'poetical.' Dr. Murphey . . . has two great merits: a gift for common speech that keeps his poems shapely and resonant, and a resource in diction that lets him call up 'luetic,' 'gracile' and 'swiving' when he needs them." John Craft

+ Books p10 My 28 '39 140w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 20w

MURPHY, CHARLES C. Basketball; il. by Katherine C. Tracy. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 94p $1 Barnes, A.S.

796.32 Basketball (W) 39-27227

"This book has been printed from the plates of The Book of Major Sports edited by William L. Hughes [Book Review Digest, 1938], with the exception of the photographic illustrations which were supplied through the courtesy of Mr. Owen Reed of Scholastic Coach." (Publishers' note) Index.

Booklist 35:273 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by J. R. Sharman
School R 47:553 S '39 90w
Wis Lib Bul 35:110 Je '39

MURPHY, GARDNER, and LIKERT, RENSIS. Public opinion and the individual. 316p $3 Harper

301.15 Attitude (psychology). Public opinion—U.S. Students 38-14429

Report of a psychological study of student attitudes on public questions carried on among students at seven universities, with a retest five years later given to members of two of the original groups. Bibliography. Index.

"Drs. Murphy and Likert have made a significant contribution to the field of attitude study, and they have, in addition, indicated a number of new fields of research that should be cultivated in the near future." E. D. Monachesi
+ Am J Soc 44:481 N '38 120w

"The report is particularly valuable in that it leaves a distinct trail of workmanship. The careful investigation is fully reported, including the tests, the data, the correlations, the reliability coëfficients, as well as the conclusions." H. C. Beyle
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:149 F '39 280w

MURRAY, HENRY ALEXANDER, and others. Explorations in personality; a clinical and experimental study of fifty men of college age, by the workers at the Harvard psychological clinic. 761p il $8.50 (42s) Oxford

137 Psychology, Pathological. Personality 39-1420

"This book is an account of a three-year study of fifty college men by twenty-eight psychologists of various schools, among whom were three physicians and five psychoanalysts. The purpose of the investigation is clearly expressed in the introduction—first, to construct methodically a theory of personality; second, to devise techniques for getting at some of the more important attributes of personality and, third, by a study of the lives of many individuals to discover basic facts of personality. The emphasis throughout is upon emotional and behavioral reactions, what previous experiences determined them, to what degree and in what manner." N Y Times

"So naïve is Dr. Murray with respect to the social determinants of personality that he regards social institutions as the products of individual needs, thinks of them as something to which one can belong. He dismisses the sociological approach to personality by saying that the greater part of a person's life is private and subjective, hence could not be connected with his membership in organizations. By thus misconstruing the sociological approach, he fails utterly to understand the sociocultural determinants of personality. Under such auspices the 'science of personology' gets off to a bad start." Kingsley Davis
Am J Soc 45:130 Jl '39 350w

Reviewed by Kimball Young
Am Soc R 4:579 Ag '39 2250w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 1300w

"To begin a study of this nature is not a step but a great advance in the right direction. If there is any hope of dissolving bias and water-tight compartment thinking from which psychology has suffered and if there is any chance of placing the more fluid techniques such as psychoanalysis on a strictly experimental basis, it is along the lines that these men have traveled. The problem of human personality is so gigantic that it is not quite fair to make any criticism of the few results that were obtained within the span of three years. The author is more aware than any one of the vast expanse of his materials, and evidence of his caution is manifested on almost every page." Livingston Welch
N Y Times p12 Mr 5 '39 500w

MURRAY, JAMES ALAN CAMERON. An introduction to a Christian psycho-therapy. 291p $3 Scribner [7s 6d Clark, T]

132 Psychotherapy. Faith cure 39-18172

"Mr. Murray's thesis is that any adequate or complete psychology must be thoroughly religious. Without a religious foundation it cannot deal with any of the more meaningful aspects of life, and without religious understanding it cannot help sick individuals to the happier, saner life. Materialistic psychology can analyze to an extent, but it cannot synthesize; it can tear down but not build." Christian Century

"The only serious criticism I should suggest against this book is its dependence on the Jungian branch of psychotherapy, and a consequent misunderstanding of some of the Adlerian and Freudian tenets. . . [However] this is an excellent book, presenting the central truths of Christian theology and psychotherapy in what appears to me to be the most satisfactory confluence yet attained. Though it is not the last word, it presents many words which will last." Rollo May
+ — Christian Century 56:283 Mr 1 '39 900w

"Doctor Murray's book should prove to be stimulating and thought-provoking but should be read with very great caution." E. J. Humphreys, M.D.
+ — Crozer Q 16:233 Jl '39 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p791 D 10 '38 160w

MURRAY, JOSEPHINE, and BATHURST, EFFIE GENEVA. Creative ways for children's programs. 396p il $2.40 Silver

371.365 Schools—Exercises and recreations 38-17547

Describes school programs to be used for study or entertainment in elementary schools. Lists of sources for program material are included. Intended as a guide for teachers or parent-teacher organization. Selective bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:77 N 1 '38

"One of the best features of the book is a 'Selective Bibliography,' well organized and annotated. The simple, direct style used is also commendable, and there is everywhere unmistakable evidence of sound theory and effective practice. Both authors occupy strategic positions for the improvement of teaching in their own right, and they have drawn liberally on other recent contributions, especially those of their adviser, Fannie W. Dunn. Users of this book may need to be on guard against two dangers: (1) the implications of the title and (2) unwise emphasis of the program." C. W. Stone
+ — El School J 39:633 Ap '39 1050w

MURRAY, RAYMOND WILLIAM, and FLYNN, FRANCIS THOMAS. Social problems. 612p $3.50 Crofts

301 Social problems. Sociology, Christian. U.S.—Social conditions 38-31205

"The firm stand of Catholic teaching on many contemporary American social problems has made it plain that a book by Catholics, done in the light of Catholic ethical doctrines, would be welcome both to Catholic students who seek a clear statement of current problems from the Catholic point of view and to non-Catholics who are interested in Catholic social thinking and teaching. At best, this book will be no more than that." (Pref) Bibliographies at ends of chapters. Indexes.

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter
Am J Soc 45:499 N '39 20w

"Alike to the general reader, the social worker and the student the book will prove stimulating and informative." Elizabeth Morrissy
+ Commonweal 29:218 D 16 '38 300w

MURRAY, ROSALIND. The good pagan's failure. 177p $2.40 (7s 6d) Longmans

201 Christianity—Philosophy. Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works. Humanism 39-22340

Miss Murray, the daughter of Professor Gilbert Murray, "became a Roman Catholic some years ago and here writes her Apologia in the form of a general consideration of the place of the Christian religion in human experience, and of the insufficiency of the humanistic alternative. The book examines the main lines of misunderstanding between these two opposing points of view, and attempts to explain the Christian standpoint to the 'Good Pagan' in his own terms." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by E. P. Burns
America 61:381 Jl 29 '39 320w

"Miss Murray's book is a personal apologia of irresistible appeal, and a brief for the Catholic faith of serene beauty and devout conviction." J. H. Holmes
+ Books p13 Je 4 '39 450w

Christian Century 56:825 Je 28 '39 220w

Reviewed by Roger Marvell
New Statesman & Nation 17:584 Ap 15 '39 700w

Reviewed by Edwyn Bevan
Spec 162:454 Mr 17 '39 750w

"If she tends to underestimate the defects in practice of the religious attitude, her account, too, of the 'Good Pagan' is altogether too summary, as is her curiously arrogant assurance that the 'totalitarian Christian' can learn nothing from him. Her clear-cut distinction between those who believe in God and in Man hardly, indeed, does justice to the complexity of the problem. But as a statement of the two views of life at their extreme and of the crisis to which an irreligious view has logically led her book is clear and cogent. And it is delightfully written."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p132 Mr 4 '39 460w

MURRELL, GLADYS CLARKE (CALLAHAN) (MRS J. L. MURRELL). Doorways to devotion; worship services for women. 138p $1 Abingdon

264 Liturgies 38-35766

This small book, topically arranged, including Scripture, hymn, meditation, and prayer, is intended to meet the needs of services for women's devotional meetings.

Christian Century 55:1162 S 28 '38 10w

"Mrs. Murrell reveals in this extremely useful volume not only excellent taste and good sense, but a wide practical experience. We recommend the book with enthusiasm for use in meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary and parish guilds." J. Van Z.
+ Churchman 153:34 Mr 1 '39 110w

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. The price of leadership. 189p $2 Harper [5s Student]

261 Civilization, Christian 39-20832

Study of a Christian theory of society. The book is based on a series of lectures, which were to have been delivered before an English educational society. "'What is in issue today,' writes Mr Murry, 'is the life or death of Christian civilization. . . Christianity alone can save Democracy from degenerating into tyranny. . . The continuance of Democracy depends upon the ruling class being consciously Christian.' With such challenging statements the author urges the Christianizing of what remains of democratic societies, most of which derived directly from the struggle for religious freedom." (Publisher's note)

"Here is theology, if you please, but theology written by a layman in lay terms, and with pungency. Here is social science, too—and social science in a challenging form. This is a book to be pondered by every man perplexed by the plagues and alarmed by the outlook of society today. If the interpretation it presents is true, it is almost as good as a blueprint for future efforts of sound citizenship. Personally, I believe that the interpretation it presents is true." R. H. Stafford
+ Boston Transcript p13 D 15 '39 600w

"As all his readers know, Mr. Middleton Murry stimulates thought beyond almost any other living English writer. Yet it seems to me that his latest book to be printed in America, The Price of Leadership, must be placed among his less inspired works. Perhaps this opinion is partly due to the fact that his discussion is so closely based upon the peculiar social, political and educational conditions of England that it is often elusive to the ordinary American mind." H. A. Eaton
Christian Century 56:1340 N 1 '39 300w

Reviewed by R. L. Clayton
Living Church 101:10 N 29 '39 200w

"A stimulating little book."
+ Nature 144:343 Ag 26 '39 2000w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:693 N '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p264 My 6 '39 2600w

MUSMANNO, MICHAEL ANGELO. After twelve years. 415p $3 Knopf

343.1 Sacco, Nicola. Vanzetti, Bartolomeo 39-27873

A review of the Sacco-Vanzetti case by one of the attorneys for the defense, who is now a judge of the court of common pleas of Pennsylvania.

Booklist 36:83 N 1 '39

"[The story] is told with simplicity but with a keen sense of the dramatic. The older reader is shocked anew as he turns these pages; young people of today will rub their eyes in sheer astonishment as they read." J. N. Ulman
+ Books p6 Ja 7 '40 950w

"Except for a few passages which sound like perorations to a jury, the story is well told and exceptionally readable. There is little here to appeal to any one who is absolutely certain that justice was done, for it is not written disinterestedly, but to others and especially to those who are interested in civil liberties it is highly recommended." R. M. Chisholm
+ — Boston Transcript p10 O 7 '39 310w

"For youthful readers Judge Musmanno's narrative, written twelve years after, will serve as a revelation of what the struggle to build such a movement [a militant and united labor movement] may sometimes involve. For any lover of justice, old or young, it is a tragedy to be reread and remembered." Mc Alister Coleman
+ Nation 149:352 S 30 '39 700w

Reviewed by Louis Stark
N Y Times p5 N 12 '39 700w

New Yorker 15:79 S 23 '39 20w

"Judge Musmanno writes of the Sacco-Vanzetti case as a lawyer for the defense, not a judge. And it may be said that certain parts of the book are damaged by his tendency to believe nearly every detail of the defense argument and to reject the case of the state quite completely. Yet how could anybody be impartial on examination or reëxamination of the evidence?" H. F. Pringle

MUSMANNO, M. A.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 S 23 '39 850w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 110w

MUZUMDAR, HARIDAS THAKORDAS. Gandhi triumphant! the inside story of the historic fast. 103p $1 Universal pub. co.

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand.
India—Politics and government 39-18149

A composite book made up of editorials written by the Mahatma, state documents and correspondence, with some chapters of more or less general comment, all dealing with Gandhi's political influence and fasts, and particularly with his latest fast by which he won a victory over the Thakore of Rajkot. Index.

Christian Century 56:612 My 10 '39 20w
Reviewed by Martin Gardner
Ethics 49:508 Jl '39 50w
Foreign Affairs 18:381 Ja '40 30w
Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 148:617 My 27 '39 550w

"For all its hysterical tone and babu English, it supplies an important picture of British colonial administration as the sun sets upon the Empire."
+ — New Repub 100:28 Ag 9 '39 50w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 3 '39 170w

MY book house; ed. by Olive Beaupré Miller. 12v set $49.50; to schools and libraries ea $2.75; set $33 c1937 Book house for children, 360 N. Michigan blvd, Chicago

808.8 Children's literature

"This is a revised and enlarged edition of the six-volume set of My Book House, reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for October 1930 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The contents include: v.1, In the nursery; v.2, Story time; v.3, Up one pair of stairs; v.4, Through the gate; v.5, Over the hills; v.6, Through fairy halls; v.7, The magic garden; v.8, Flying sails; v.9, The treasure chest; v.10, From the tower window; v.11, In shining armor; v12, Halls of fame. The fundamental plan of arranging stories, poems and songs (without music) progressively according to their appeal for children of different ages remains the same, but new material has been added and some of the older selections have been eliminated or shifted from one volume to another. . . The index appears in revised form in volume 12, including in a single alphabet authors, titles, leading characters, subjects, and ethical themes." Subscription Bks Bul

"Although there is much interesting material in My Book House, the set as a whole is somewhat lacking in freshness and vitality. Many of the adaptations, which attempt to eliminate all that might seem crude or harsh to children, seem lifeless or sentimental. A large proportion of the more interesting stories and poems are available in separate volumes found on the shelves of public libraries. In many homes, especially where parents have a limited acquaintance with children's literature, the compilation may be of value as an introduction to good reading for children. It is recommended for this purpose."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:42 Jl '39 500w

MYERS, ALONZO FRANKLIN, and KIFER, LOUISE M. Problems in public school supervision. 212p $2 Prentice-Hall

371.2 School supervision and supervisors. Teachers. Public schools 39-3569

"Using the case-method approach, 40 representative problems that supervisors and teachers must face at times are stated. Actual situations illustrating each problem are given, with questions intended to stimulate the reader to discover solutions. Extensive references to books, parts of books, and periodicals on each subject." Booklist

Booklist 35:284 My 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

MYERS, ALONZO FRANKLIN, and others. Coöperative supervision in the public schools. 340p il $2.50 Prentice-Hall

371.2 School supervision and supervisors. Teachers 38-18898

"This book is addressed to teachers as well as to supervisory and administrative officers. Four major assumptions given on page 13 sound the keynote of the book: '(1) In a democracy, the dominant aim should be preservation and perpetuation of democratic ideals, traditions, and practices. (2) Education itself must be democratic if it is to accomplish its first purpose. (3) We cannot expect to find a democratic relationship between teachers and pupils if there is not a democratic relationship between teachers and supervisors. (4) The amount and kind of supervision needed depends primarily upon the qualifications of the teaching staff.' By tracing the development of teacher training in the past century and the rise in requirements for certificates, the authors indicate how teachers have come to be capable of planning and directing their own work, with supervisors acting only as consultants and coordinators." (Social Educ) Index.

"The volume is not a major contribution to supervision. It is a good treatment of certain aspects of the field. The discussion is not always well balanced although the writing is, in the main, very good. Bibliographies are limited. Exercises and study questions are omitted. The book's chief merits lie in the concrete, specific illustrations in some of the units and in the consistently followed effort to be practical." W. H. Burton
+ — El School J 39:468 F '39 550w

"The book is challenging to those in teacher training courses and for those in the special subjects named, and it is helpful with its definite suggestions especially in follow-up work in teacher training. Although the theme of coöperative supervision does run through the book, it seems that a title indicating teacher training would better suggest its content." R. M. Johnson
+ Social Educ 3:144 F '39 700w

MYERS, GUSTAVUS. The ending of hereditary American fortunes. 395p $3.50 Messner

339.2 Wealth. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 39-32428

The author of History of the Great American Fortunes (first published in 1909, Book Review Digest, 1910) attempts to show in this sequel how the American tradition, first evidenced in the destruction of the laws of primogeniture, has been gradually but more and more effectively destroying the possibility for the formation of huge hereditary fortunes. Index.

"Most of this book is excellent journalism on a substructure of good history. Its denunciatory portions are the least valuable. Mr. Myers tends to be undiscriminating in his attacks upon rich men, he is more rhetorical than scientific in his remarks on the 'arrogance' and 'corruption' of great wealth, and he neglects the great services of unfettered individual enterprise in a period of rapid national development. . . But the last half of the volume, treating of the struggle for social control of wealth since 1896, is well done. . . Valuable as parts of the book are, it would have been better had it gone more deeply into the recent change in public opinion and outlook as regards great fortunes." Allan Nevins
+ — Books p6 N 26 '39 550w
Reviewed by A. D. Noyes
N Y Times p14 F 4 '40 900w

New Yorker 15:107 N 18 '39 30w

"Such a book will be a useful manual for soap-box orators and rabble-rousers. It is largely propaganda and muckraking, a smearing of the 'haves' in order to bolster a plea for sharing the wealth. The late Huey Long would have given this work his unqualified approval." W. O. Scroggs

— Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 6 '40 450w

Time 34:84 N 27 '39 450w

MYERS, HENRY. Our lives have just begun. 212p il $2.50 Stokes

39-4483

Story of the Children's crusade. The leader of the French section of the Crusade is Stephen of Cloyes, a simple shepherd boy of ten. Mistaking Adam Brisson, a strolling troubadour for the Lord, Stephen listens to Adam's song and story of the Crusades and becomes obsessed with the idea of leading a band of children to the Holy Land. The story of that disastrous undertaking follows.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Rosemary Benét

Books p2 F 26 '39 500w

Reviewed by John Lydenberg

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 1 '39 270w

"An exquisitely told story deriving inspiration from an episode obscured by legendary accretions. . . . Mr. Myers's composite picture of the Children's Crusade is true in spirit. Factually it would, but for its different locale, have been more strictly true of the German Children's Crusade of similar date. The hardships encountered by the German children must, however, have enormously exceeded even those so vividly portrayed here and this alone might seem to explain Mr. Myers's discretionary selection. His tale is a pitiful one but not oppressively harrowing, as it must have been had he followed the terrible foot-journey from Cologne to the Italian coast." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p21 F 26 '39 700w

New Yorker 15:67 F 25 '39 50w

"The book gives a simple, sometimes sardonic, account of this remarkable expedition. The historical background of the year 1212 is well indicated. History itself furnishes the best part of the tale, for no more remarkable story can be found in its pages. Truth is again much stranger than fiction. The children, poor sparrows, deserved a better fate—but one is obliged to reproach history, not the author, that such innocent faith did not triumph." R. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:21 F 25 '39 270w

Time 33:62 Mr 6 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:51 Mr '39

MYERS, HENRY LEE. The United States Senate: what kind of body? 125p $1.50 Dorrance

328.73 U.S. Congress. Senate 39-17349

Observations and reminiscences of a former senator from Montana who served from 1911 to 1923.

Reviewed by C. L. Larsen

Am Pol Sci R 33:1122 D '39 210w

Christian Century 56:999 Ag 16 '39 60w

MYERS, LEONARD MORRIS. Electron optics, theoretical and practical. 618p il $12 Van Nostrand [42s Chapman]

535 Optics, Electronic [39-16642]

"This advanced work of more than 600 pages by a member of the research staff of Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Co., Ltd., treats of the analogies between light and electrons, the electron trajectory, electron lenses, aberrations, the electron multiplier, vacuum technique, the electron microscope, and miscellaneous applications. There is an extensive bibliography." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Mr. Myers is to be complimented on producing the first book on the subject to be published in Great Britain, and a truly comprehensive and readable book. He has spared no pains in bringing the matter up to date, and his exhaustive survey of the whole field includes some eight hundred references." L. Jacob

+ Nature 144:401 S 2 '39 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:23 Ap '39

"This is easily the most impressive volume on electron optics—so far, at least, as over-all dimensions are concerned—which has yet appeared. . . . It would be pleasant to report that, on examining the book more closely, one finds these favorable first impressions fully confirmed, but this, unfortunately, is not the case. From nearly the first page onward through half the book, which is as far as the reviewer has read, one finds a text sadly marred and disfigured by every fault a mathematical treatment may have and by numerous surprisingly unorthodox notions regarding purely physical matters." C. J. Davisson

— R of Scientific Instruments 10:287 O '39 900w

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum

Special Libraries 30:318 N '39

MYSTERY book; one full-length novel and four novelettes, by Anthony Abbot [and others]. 600p $2.50 Farrar

40-2010

Contents: About the disappearance of Agatha King, by Anthony Abbot; Death stops at a tourist camp, by Leslie Ford; Mr Pinkerton: passage for one, by David Frome; The curve of the catenary, by Mary Roberts Rinehart; Red threads, by Rex Stout.

"Here is a large and joyous bargain for all who wish to follow clews, sit in on killings of various astounding sorts, or just read a lot of mysteries at almost the price of one." Will Cuppy

+ Books p32 D 3 '39 400w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 D 3 '39 450w

New Yorker 15:124 D 16 '39 30w

"Five Star Extra."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:43 D 2 '39 40w

Time 35:60 Ja 8 '40 10w

N

NAMIER, LEWIS BERNSTEIN. In the margin of history. 304p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

904 History—Addresses, essays, lectures [39-33080]

A volume of essays, most of them first published elsewhere, by the professor of modern history in the University of Manchester. The essays are grouped under the headings: Foreign affairs; Judaica; Under the Georges; Napoleon; Men who floundered into the war; T. E. Lawrence.

"There are thirty-three essays, of which the 'Manchester Guardian' published eighteen and the 'Observer' six. Had they appeared first as an original book everyone would have given them a warm welcome—as they should now,—saying that here are learning but learning lightly carried, reasoned argument even if one disagrees with it, readable seriousness and, a too rare product of the academic mines, well-written English." W. P. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 4 '39 1250w

NAMIER, L. B.—Continued

"Professor Namier, like Mr. F. A. Simpson, belongs to a genus that appears obsolescent—he is an historian with a style. Popular writers upon historical subjects, firing off their epigrams and daubing their bright colours, fail to be either good historians or good writers, while those who pride themselves upon being scientific seem to pride themselves also upon being unreadable. Professor Namier is a scientist when he collects his material, an artist when he presents it." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:94 Jl 15 '39 700w

Reviewed by A. L. Rowse
Spec 164:22 Ja 5 '40 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Jl 8 '39 600w

NASH, A. S., ed. Education for Christian marriage: its theory and practice; with a foreword by the Archbishop of York. 304p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Student]

173 Marriage

A symposium on marriage, sex instruction, family life, etc., written chiefly from the point of view of members of the Church of England. Partial contents: Education for marriage as a contribution of the Christian church to the life of the world; Marriage and the family in the New Testament; Medical aspects of marriage; Moral disease, sin and responsibility; The legal status of marriage and the family; The social function and the educational significance of the family; Education of individual couples; Bibliography.

Booklist 36:103 N 15 '39

"This symposium, edited by the secretary of the Church of England moral welfare council . . . represents the best Anglican thought in this field and is the most thorough treatment of the subject that has come to our attention. It is designed not primarily to discuss the problem and methods of education for Christian marriage but to furnish the materials for such education."

+ Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 70w

"It is heartening to find [birth control] so sanely and frankly dealt with. Certainly most valuable to the clergy." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 153:18 N 15 '39 150w

"A most commendable book." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 50:240 Ja '40 130w

"Considerable latitude has been allowed for the expression of individual points of view. Even the subject of contraception is admitted as being a topic which needs ventilation and discussion. The book should be of great help to those who anxiously seek, to-day, a middle way between the paganism of some thinkers and the rigid conventionality of others."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Jl 15 '39 230w

NASH, JAY BRYAN. Teachable moments; a new approach to health. 243p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

613.07 Hygiene. Hygiene—Study and teaching 38-36000

The author is professor of education and chairman of the department of physical education and health in the school of education, New York university. He states that in the health field there are certain moments when one is in a position to learn efficiently: when a child shows curiosity or feels that he is being made conspicuous, when an adult is scared, or when, as parents, they want something better for their children. These suggestions on safe and sane hygiene are to be inculcated at these "teachable moments."

"Expressing challenging and critical statements about health education, the book should provoke discussion and stimulate thought about ways in which present methods of teaching health in schools can be improved so that no author can again call it 'a remnant of the Middle Ages philosophy of scholasticism.'" Muriel Bliss

+ Am J Pub Health 29:395 Ap '39 350w
Christian Century 55:1402 N 16 '38 90w

Reviewed by L. B. Chenoweth, M.D.
El School J 39:713 My '39 400w

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE STUDY OF GROUP WORK. New trends in group work; ed. by Joshua Lieberman. 229p $2 Assn. press

360 Group work 39-15551

A collection of articles by various hands, gathered under the general heads: Group work and the social scene, Group work as education, Leadership in group work, Relation of group work and case work, Record keeping in group work. Among the contributors are: Grace L. Coyle, John Dewey, Eduard C. Lindeman, William H. Kilpatrick, Goodwin B. Watson, Arthur L. Swift, Jr., and others.

Reviewed by E. E. Ghiselli
Am J Psychol 52:664 O '39 400w

"The articles are well selected and represent a wide range of thought in the field: the editors have rendered a distinct service in making them available in this form. The volume reflects the weaknesses of the movement: the rather uncritical acceptance of progressive educational theory by leaders in the group work field and the almost complete absence of material describing experimental group work efforts." C. H. Young

+ — Am J Soc 44:1015 My '39 180w
Am Soc R 4:154 F '39 170w

"This book should certainly be read by all social workers and any others interested in social work. Because the book presents a basic philosophic (but practical) approach it should be of particular value for group work agency board members whose attitudes and points of view are really the determining factors in their acceptance of the procedures and practices attempted by group working agencies." R. E. Dodd

+ Social Forces 18:309 D '39 600w

"The original publication dates of the essays which make up the volume, and the group organization connections of the authors are not given, an unfortunate omission it seems to this reviewer. It is fervently hoped that this volume will generate enough cerebral friction among group work practitioners to arouse them to their professional responsibility to produce a book setting forth group work aims, procedures and techniques, evolved from their own experiences in group work practice." Josephine Strode

— Survey 74:366 N '38 240w

NATIONAL cyclopædia of American biography; ed. by George Derby. Current vol. E (Current living ser) 563p il $15; 20 per cent discount to libraries 1938 White, J.T.

920 U.S.—Biography

"Volumes I-XX and the current volumes, A, B and C of the National Cyclopaedia of American Biography were briefly reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1931. Current volume D was reviewed in April 1935 and volumes XXI-XXVI of the 'Permanent series,' together with the index volume, were reviewed in April 1938. Current volume E, the fifth volume of the 'Current series,' partially supersedes current volume B and marks a change in the policy of keeping the series up to date. The loose-leaf feature has been discontinued and, according to the preface, 'when the contents of any Current Volume become obsolete the biographies of those who have retained their positions in current affairs will be brought up to date and republished in a new Current Volume.'" Subscription Bks Bul

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 20 '39 270w

"The index to the Current series includes topics as well as persons. It has been greatly improved by resetting in a clearer type to conform to that of the general index to the Permanent series, by a more systematic arrangement of sub-topics under main entries, by the addition of dates of death to entries for individuals now deceased and by the more extensive indexing of vocations. In spite of these improvements, however, the index shows a number of omissions and other shortcomings likely to confuse the user. . . Like other volumes of the National Cyclopaedia of American Biography, volume E contains much useful material but also much of doubtful importance for many libraries. It is recommended only for large libraries or those owning the other volumes of the Current series."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:25 Ap '39 700w
Wis Lib Bul 35:197 D '39

NATIONAL encyclopedia; editor in chief, Henry Suzzallo; editorial-director, William W. Beardsley. 10v il pl maps $59; to libraries and schools $44.25; tan fabrikoid $39.50 c1939 Collier

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 39-8205

"The first edition of the National Encyclopedia, published in 1932, was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. While the set has not been thoroughly revised since that time, it has been frequently reprinted with some revisions, including entirely new articles as well as more or less extensive changes in existing material. . . Among the topics which, according to the publisher, have been added or entirely rewritten since the publication of the first edition are those on: Aviation, History of; Brewing; Cellulose transparent wrapping films; Conservation; Electro-therapy; Federal farm credit administration; Forests and forestry; Kidnaping; Nursing; Optometry; Osteopathy; Plastics; and Veterinary science." Subscription Bks Bul

"The range of subjects covered in the National encyclopedia is comparatively limited and their treatment generally brief and simplified. For these reasons the set is not adequate for the needs of public libraries, though it might be used to supplement the more comprehensive encyclopedias. It is suitable for the home library where a comparatively inexpensive set is desired. The simplicity of treatment may appeal to young people and to adults of limited education. The National Encyclopedia, 1939, is recommended under such conditions, though it would not be needed by those having the 1932 edition."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:58 O '39 500w

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. Differentials in industrial wages and hours in the United States, by M. Ada Beney. 203p $3.50 The board

331.2 Wages—U.S. Hours of labor 38-27352

"This study comprising some 40 pages of text and 163 pages of tabular material, is an important contribution to the analysis of the wages issue and toward a better understanding of wage problems in American industry. In particular, the study sets out to ascertain primarily the facts as to wage differentials for communities of different size, for establishments of different size, and for different parts of the country. A similar effort is made to ascertain variations in working hours. The data were assembled largely from questionnaires sent to employers in the cotton, foundry and machine, furniture, lumber, and fruit industries. Certain other available information was also utilized. In all, nearly three-quarters of a million workers were covered in all parts of the country." Am Econ R

Reviewed by H. M. Diamond
Am Econ R 29:170 Mr '39 430w
Booklist 34:330 My 15 '38
Management R 27:288 Ag '38 50w

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. National income in the United States, 1799-1938, by Robert F. Martin. 146p $3.50 The board

339.2 Income. U.S.—Economic conditions 39-27201

"This book gives detailed figures of national income, broken up according to industrial origin and type of payment, every ten years from 1799 to 1899, and thereafter annually. Figures for the years after 1899 are based largely on the works of King, Kuznets, and others, besides the National Industrial Conference Board's own studies. Earlier figures, which are evidently far less reliable, are based on census returns, to which various chain indices are applied." Am Econ R

"This will be valuable as a book of reference, but it is to be regretted that no indication is given of the degree of error to which the earlier figures are subject." E. A. Radice

+ — Am Econ R 29:432 Je '39 110w

Reviewed by J. G. Smith
Ann Am Acad 205:207 S '39 650w
Booklist 35:245 Ap 1 '39
Management R 28:178 My '39 380w

NATIONAL law library; an encyclopedia of law for the modern reader; ed. by Roscoe Pound, Nathan Isaacs and William W. Beardsley. 6v $17.50; to libraries and schools $13.15 c1939 Collier

340 Law—U.S. 39-8999

"The National Law Library is designed as an authoritative but nontechnical survey of law for the layman. It is limited in scope to the law of the English-speaking lands having a common legal inheritance. . . The contents are as follows: v. I, The History and System of the Common Law, by Roscoe Pound. . . v. II, Crime and Criminal Law, by Morris Ploscowe. . . v. III, Public Law, by Howard L. Bevis. . . v. IV, Business Law, by Nathan Isaacs. . . v. V, Property, by Francis S. Philbrick. . . v. VI, Legal Relations. . . The set is well indexed, with an individual index in each volume and, in v. VI, a combined index to the whole set. Notes are supplied in many of the volumes, either as footnotes or appendixes." Subscription Bks Bul

"The final impression which lawyers will receive from the volumes is unfavorable. Perhaps the laymen for whom the volumes were primarily designed will be less sensitive to such deficiencies as those which I have mentioned. There is little reason to believe, however, that they will be less disturbed by repetitious sketches of difficult subjects than those who are trained in the field." M. D. Howe

— + Books p16 O 1 '39 500w

"Professor Philbrick's volume on 'Property' is probably the most scholarly section of the library, devoted as it is to a historical study of an esoteric branch of our law. It is no reflection on Professor Philbrick's scholarship and skill of presentation to suggest that it may be of little practical importance to the modern reader. Having in mind, however, the avowed purposes of the editors, the National Law Library satisfies them fully." Chester Rohrlich

+ N Y Times p8 O 15 '39 500w

"The National Law Library is readable in style as well as authoritative, the phraseology being as nearly nontechnical as possible. This is not so much a reference set, to which one would turn for the answer to a specific question, as a set to be read for a general understanding of the principles upon which the law of our times is based. As such it will be helpful to the beginning law student as well as to the general reader who wishes to inform himself on the subject. The National Law Library is recommended for this purpose in the home library, the public library and the law library."

NATIONAL law library—Continued
+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:59 O '39 650w

NATIONAL RECREATION ASSOCIATION. Party book. See Breen, M. J.

NATIONAL service manual; a perpetual maintenance data service supplying the combined authoritative service information from all automobile and equipment manufacturers, kept up to date by loose-leaf supplements. San Francisco, National automobile service, 1938. Approx. 1800p loose-leaf leatherette $29.50; annual supplements, approx. 200p ea $6.50 per year

629.2 Automobiles

"This automobile service and repair manual has been prepared for the use of garage mechanics, trade schools, and home repairmen. It presents detailed information on the servicing of the mechanical and electrical equipment for all American-built cars of the years 1931 to 1938. Annual supplements keep the manual up to date." Subscription Bks Bul

"The National Service Manual is primarily of value to automobile mechanics, home repairmen, and students in trade schools, who can use it directly in connection with their work. It is also of value for reference purposes in the technology departments of large city libraries or other libraries serving a large number of automobile workers. It is recommended under such conditions."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:26 Ap '39 700w

NATIONAL year book, 1939; covering events of the year 1938 [editor: W. W. Beardsley]. 767p il maps $7.50; to subs $2.45 c1939 Collier

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Yearbooks (39-17311)

"The 1939 National Year Book is the first of a projected series of annual supplements to the National Encyclopedia. . . As in the main set, the material is contributed by authorities whose initials are signed to the more important articles. Events of the year in various parts of the world and developments in many fields of knowledge are discussed in articles which are usually short but in a few cases cover 10 or more pages. Biographies include living persons as well as important persons who died during the year. There are a chronology for the year, a necrology, and lists of chief executive and legislative officers of the United States." Subscription Bks Bul

"The 1939 National Year Book contains reliable, up-to-date information on the topics covered, but it is, like the parent work, comparatively limited as to the number of subjects included and the degree of detail with which they are treated. It should be interesting and useful in the home libraries of individuals owning the National Encyclopedia and is recommended for that purpose, though it might also be used in public libraries as a supplement to the more comprehensive annual encyclopedias."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:59 O '39 240w

NAUJOKS, WALDEMAR. Forging handbook. 630p il $7.50 Am. soc. for metals

672 Forging 39-27464

"This authoritative and comprehensive work, filling a gap in the scanty literature of the subject, has been prepared with the cooperation of numerous manufacturing concerns and organizations. It deals with nearly all phases of forging practice; history, equipment, die block and process operations, steels, dies and tools, forging practice, finishing, heat treatment, cleaning, testing and inspection, materials handling, plant design, plant maintenance, furnaces, designing the forged part, forging materials, job estimating, costs and cost engineering, and safety. There are mathematical tables, also forging definitions." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:39 Jl '39

NAY, CAROL. Timmy rides the China clipper; pictures by [the author]. 96p maps $1.50 Whitman, A.

39-30372

Story of a boy's trip to China via the China clipper. Honolulu, Guam, Wake, Manila—all the colorful stopping places on the way are described. The mechanism and workings of the great clipper come into the book. For grades five and six.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 30w

"Mechanically minded youngsters will find 'Timmy Rides the China Clipper' fascinating."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 70w

NEAL, ROBERT MILLER. Editing the small city daily; with a foreword by John M. Imrie. 436p $3.35 Prentice-Hall

070.41 Newspapers. Journalism (W) 39-27419

Textbook in journalism which emphasizes the work of the editor or editors in handling the news brought in by reporters. Index.

Booklist 35:299 My 15 '39
Springf'd Republican p7e My 14 '39 800w

NEBLETTE, CARROLL BERNARD. Photography; its principles and practice; a manual of the theory and practice of photography. 3d ed 590p il $6.50 Van Nostrand

770 Photography 39-264

"A technical manual which requires some knowledge of physics and chemistry. The second edition has been partly rewritten and several new chapters have been added. Well recommended by users." (Booklist) Indexes.

"It would indeed be ungracious to lay stress upon a few misprints, such as the structural formulas of benzene derivatives. The solid merit and usefulness of the volume are everywhere apparent." G. S. Forbes
+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:537 F '39 250w

Booklist 35:349 Je 15 '39

"It is clearly written, and covers the field most completely. . . To those interested in color photography this reviewer can recommend the various chapters on the subject." Maximilian Toch
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:33 Ja 10 '39 240w

NEEDHAM, JOSEPH, and PAGEL, WALTER, eds. Background to modern science; ten lectures at Cambridge arranged by the History of science committee, 1936, by F. M. Cornford [and others]. 243p il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

509 Science—History 39-693

"Edited by the chairman and secretary of a committee from the faculty boards of biology, physics, and chemistry of Cambridge University, this volume represents an effort to supply opportunity for the study of the history of science. It comprises the lectures in a course on the modern period of science from 1895 to 1935, by 'scientific investigators who had themselves made fundamental contributions to science during that time.' Among those here printed are the last public lectures given by Lord Rutherford and Professor Nuttall before their deaths." Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by M. P. Ravenel
Am J Pub Health 29:934 Ag '39 400w

"Being historical, the content of the lectures offers nothing new, but there is no other book in which so many leaders of modern scientific thought have reviewed the work of their own era and given it historical evaluation."
+ Books p17 Mr 26 '39 200w

Reviewed by R. C. Stauffer
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 8 '39 360w
Christian Century 56:387 Mr 22 '39 110w

"To praise the work of the distinguished authors would be both superfluous and impertinent. Within the very brief space at his disposal—some twenty-four pages—each author has succeeded in giving a vivid, personal, and authoritative 'eye-witness's account' of the progress on his own section of the scientific front." J. A. C.
+ Nature 143:8 Ja 7 '39 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:29 Ap '39

"Their lectures are models of clearness, competency and inspiration. Every one of the scientist-authors was himself responsible for some important advance in the last few decades. Every one has caught the spirit of the enterprise." W. M. Malisoff
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 22 '39 1100w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 F '39 450w

"The student of science will use this volume as a reliable review of the general field of scientific advancement, while the casual reader in the subject will find it an excellent brief manual covering the essential facts to be known for an intelligent estimate of the present state of scientific learning."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 2 '39 600w

NEIFELD, MORRIS R. Personal finance comes of age. 324p $3.50 Harper

332.3 Finance companies. Loans. Credit
39-18610

A study of the legal, social and business status of the small loan or personal finance business. "Personal finance as used in this book may be defined as the business of making loans of $300, or less, to the lower income groups, under state license in accordance with special state legislation, most of which is modeled after the Uniform Small Loan Act." (p. 7) Index.

"This is a scholarly work. It analyzes a large amount of new material obtained from the personal finance industry itself, from reports of regulatory agencies, and from special field studies. The exposition is clear and the discussion should be interesting to all save those to whom business statistics are inherently dull." H. L. Reed
+ Ann Am Acad 206:188 N '39 650w
Management R 28:288 Ag '39 40w

"The book should be read by bankers, social workers, lawyers, legal aid attorneys. It is a substantial and painstaking contribution to the literature on the subject." J. S. Bradway
+ Survey 75:389 D '39 650w

NELSON, WILLIAM. John Skelton, laureate. 266p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Skelton, John

John Skelton, scholar, humorist, tutor of Henry VIII, and poet laureate of early Tudor times, is the subject of this biography. A study of each of Skelton's poems is included and obscurities, as far as possible, are now cleared up. Chronology of Skelton's works, bibliography, index.

"Mr. Nelson's book is an academic study, and it has the virtues and faults of its kind—more of the virtues and fewer of the faults, however, than most such theses. It is somewhat dry, and it is remorselessly thorough, and it is better when it has to do with documents and sources than when it is dedicated to appreciative criticism. But it tells us a good deal about Skelton which was not hitherto known, and it makes clearer much that was imperfectly understood." David Tilden
+ — Books p10 Jl 23 '39 800w

"The book is more a critique of the poet's works than a definitive biography, but that fact is clearly admitted in the Introduction. The style is critical and suggestive, as might be expected of a work in a field as yet under cultivation. Usually the reader feels the lack of personal color in the story of Skelton and wishes the author's attention had been more equally divided between him and his works." R. E. Keighton
+ — Crozer Q 17:79 Ja '40 280w

Reviewed by W. D. Clark
J Religion 20:107 Ja '40 150w
New Repub 100:321 O 18 '39 40w

"Mr. Nelson, only indirectly influenced by the fact that Skelton happens to be in fashion, has written the first full-length biographical study of the poet against his background. His book is the fruit of painstaking research and frequently brilliant scholarship, and makes a valuable contribution to the study of Tudor literary history." Thomas Merton
+ N Y Times p2 My 28 '39 850w

"A book of the highest interest to students of early Tudor culture in general and of that remarkable man and poet, John Skelton, in particular."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Ag 26 '39 600w

NETHERCOT, ARTHUR HOBART. Sir William D'Avenant; poet laureate and playright-manager. 488p $4 Univ. of Chicago press [20s Cambridge]

B or 92 D'Avenant, Sir William 39-2122

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"The exhaustive studies of D'Avenant's achievements as a writer of court-masques, as a dramatist, as the author of what has been called the first English opera, and as a theatrical-manager do not contain so much fresh material. It was not to be expected that they should, for a great deal of research has been devoted by Professor Hotson, Father Summers, Miss Boswell, Mr. Harbage (in his second book, 'Cavalier Drama'), and other scholars to these subjects. It is convenient, however, to have all this material assembled in so far as it bears upon the story of D'Avenant's career; and, in sum, it may be said that Mr. Nethercot has amply justified the publication of this new biography."
Books p9 Jl 2 '39 500w

"The study is minutely documented, and rests upon painstaking research which has resulted in discoveries varying in importance from the complexities of theatrical ventures to the names of obscure (and numerous) offspring. But Professor Nethercot's élan has not sunk under the dust of record offices. If the evidence is in his foot-notes, the lively raciness of Cavalier and Restoration London is reflected in his style." A. E. Barker
+ Canadian Forum 19:32 Ap '39 420w

"From the pages of this readable, amply documented biography emerges a full-length likeness of one of the important figures of a troubled age. . . Much might be written in praise of Professor Nethercot's volume. The few trifling errors may be passed over silently." J. G. McManaway
+ — Library Q 9:242 Ap '39 900w
Manchester Guardian p7 My 9 '39 130w

NETHERCOT, A. H.—Continued

"Scholars will be grateful for this careful study of the Restoration dramatist. . . It should be the standard biography for a long time to come."

+ New Repub 98:83 F 22 '39 40w

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:948 Je 17 '39 450w

Discussion by C. W. Barrell
N Y Times p33 Mr 5 '39 650w

Discussion by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p27 Ap 2 '39 120w

Discussion by E. R. Gebhardt
N Y Times p27 Ap 2 '39 650w

"Professor Nethercot's book is a genuine contribution to our knowledge of life during this time. D'Avenant himself touched many facets of the age. . . The author is to be congratulated both upon the thoroughness and upon the freshness and vitality of his biography." Allardyce Nicoll

+ Sat R of Lit 19:19 F 4 '39 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p323 Je 3 '39 440w

NETTLETON, GEORGE HENRY, and CASE, ARTHUR ELLICOTT, eds. British dramatists from Dryden to Sheridan. 957p il $4 Houghton [15s Harrap]

822.08 English drama—Collections 39-14340

Anthology of twenty-five plays from Dryden to Sheridan, with some supplementary and critical material.

"The texts of the plays are edited with painstaking care, and the volume shows what careful scholarship goes into the making of college text books nowadays."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 40w

"The textual and other material at the end of the volume is all that the student could desire; and in one particular this book is unique. It prints for the first time from the original manuscript, now in the Riggs Memorial Library in Georgetown University, the text of The School for Scandal as Sheridan sent it to Mrs. Crewe in 1777."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p459 Jl 29 '39 250w

NEUHAUS, EUGEN. The art of Treasure Island. 185p il $2 Univ. of Calif. [10s Cambridge]

606 San Francisco. Golden Gate international exposition 39-27500

"First-hand impressions of the architecture, sculpture, landscape design, color effects, mural decorations, illumination, and other artistic aspects of the Golden Gate international exposition of 1939." (Subtitle) Includes planting lists of flowers and shrubs used in the different parts of Treasure Island and a ground plan of the exposition.

Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

"This very readable book is by no means a piece of uncritical, boosting propaganda. The author is at pains to weigh all of his evaluations and does not refrain from adverse critical judgment." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p15 Je 18 '39 320w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 My 13 '39 1150w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 21 '39 750w

NEURATH, OTTO. Modern man in the making. 159p il maps $2.95 Knopf

901 Civilization—History. Progress. Statistics (W) 39-27750

The author, director of the International Foundation for Visual Education at The Hague, is the inventor of the isotype—a symbolic picture used to present facts graphically. In this book he has employed a vast number of such illustrations combined with some text, to tell the story of how mankind has progressed to the present degree of civilization.

Booklist 36:37 O 1 '39

"Dr. Neurath is blazing new trails. Some day no accredited statistician will scorn to use his methods. They are designed for ready assimilation by the human cortex, combining the reasoning faculty with the visual faculty. They are psychologically correct, built for the kind of minds most of us happen to have. . . On the whole, Dr. Neurath's batting average is remarkably high." Stuart Chase

+ Books p5 O 8 '39 1000w

Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 60w

"This is not a picture book alone. Nor is it a book in which the pictures serve to illustrate the text. The two are blended together and must be read as one. Dr. Neurath's text is as excellent as his best pictures. He writes simply, clearly, and to the point. The book is immensely stimulating." Leo Huberman

+ Living Age 357:290 N '39 330w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 29 '39 150w

"When one puts the work aside one really has had a quick but most impressive walk through the landscape of the modern world. If this walk raises as many questions as are answered by it, it is not the fault of the author, who limits himself consciously to a presentation of facts. His method brings them often into an order full of meaning; statistical material otherwise dry and boring becomes unforgettable and exciting." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 149:352 S 30 '39 700w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
New Repub 101:22 N 8 '39 700w

"My chief criticism of the book is that Dr. Neurath gives too few actual figures, and is much too general in his indication of sources, so that it is impossible either to check the validity of some of his charts, or to use them as a basis for quotation in terms of actual magnitudes. As the book is most likely to be useful to teachers who will wish to treat it as a source-book for making picture-charts of their own to illustrate points arising in the course of their teaching, these omissions are unfortunate. There are, indeed, certain notes at the end giving references for some of the pictures, but these are inadequate and often unsatisfying. Moreover, the letterpress is scanty in relation to the wealth of the pictorial data." G. D. H. Cole

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:48 Ja 13 '40 600w

"Those whose trade is words will not, one supposes, begrudge Dr. Neurath his isotypes. The isotype, rightly used, should save the writing brotherhood a great deal of uninspiring drudgery and the reading public many dull moments. For the isotype, generally speaking, is a lively creation. It is fun." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p2 O 1 '39 1300w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 15:81 S 16 '39 500w

Pratt p20 winter '40

"What can be said of this method of conveying information and arousing popular interest? Doubtless for the generality of readers, this volume will have an immense appeal. . . Just what picture of the whole they will have in their minds at the end of their excursion through the fairyland of presentations will depend upon their previous training and their capacity for integrating disparate items. But the hardened student of history and sociology who is nimble with his mathematics will probably prefer his information straight." C. A. Beard

Sat R of Lit 20:10 S 30 '39 2000w

Social Studies 30:335 N '39 40w

Reviewed by Honor Croome
Spec 163:907 D 22 '39 900w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 12 '39 350w

NEVINS, ALLAN. Frémont: pathmarker of the West. 649p il maps $5 (21s) Appleton-Century

B or 92 Frémont, John Charles. West—Discovery and exploration (W) 39-8219

"An account, done in Professor Nevins's usual solid manner, of a remarkably versatile American. Based in part on an earlier biography by the author." (New Yorker) Index.

"The volume could have been made twice as interesting in half the space, and such a reduction would have been in keeping with the subject's place in history. It adds nothing to our knowledge of Frémont, but it is the best camouflage of the man that has appeared." Cardinal Goodwin

— + Am Hist R 45:478 Ja '40 250w

Reviewed by A. B. Miller

Ann Am Acad 205:181 S '39 550w

Booklist 35:311 My 15 '39

"Well aware that he is telling a story which still stimulates hot controversy, nearly fifty years after the subject's death, Mr. Nevins tackles the job with vigor and infectious zest. Frémont fascinates him; that is the long and short of it. And this enthusiasm coupled with genuine scholarship results in his coming as close as any biographer may to seeing his subject whole. If this is not Frémont, it is as near to him as any one is likely to get." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p2 Ap 23 '39 1750w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

Boston Transcript p2 Je 17 '39 360w

"Whether or not this becomes a Pulitzer prize biography for this year, it is in the running. Nevins, of course, writes biography (or history) of that quality, and Frémont is a subject which furnishes both colorful and controversial material."

+ Christian Century 56:798 Je 21 '39 300w

"Mr. Nevins has not cleared up all the puzzles in Frémont's career; but he has no doubt written the definitive biography of the great explorer. And he has raised biography to the level of literature." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 22 '39 600w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 30:241 Je 23 '39 600w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 101:vi My '39 220w

New Statesman & Nation 18:322 Ag 26 '39 230w

"As far as one can judge, this biography merits the adjective definitive. One can't see how very much of value can be added to what Professor Nevins has found, nor how the job could be better done. Mr. Nevins possesses a valuable combination of gifts. He is careful, accurate, a tireless researcher. He has a style for which his years of newspaper work must be given some of the credit. He has in this book a warmth and at times a poetic quality which were missing in some of his more formal writings. He is both objective and sympathetic. One may say, in short, that in this biography he has really found himself. It is a book at once distinguished and engaging." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 16 '39 1300w

New Yorker 15:80 Ap 1 '39 20w

Pratt p25 autumn '39

"This is history, not Ludwig. And it is nearly bedrock. If it is not as substantial as Nevins's 'Cleveland,' it is because Frémont's strange personality exfoliates into conjecture." E. D. Branch

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 15 '39 850w

"A contribution of first-rate significance to the history of the United States in the 19th century." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 1050w

Time 33:78 Ap 10 '39 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p330 Je 3 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

NEW Century dictionary of the English language; based on matter selected from the original Century dictionary and entirely rewritten, with the addition of a great amount of new material, and containing the great mass of words and phrases in ordinary use; 12,000 quotations; 4,000 pictorial illustrations; ed. by H. G. Emery and K. G. Brewster; with supplements of synonyms and antonyms, foreign words and phrases, biographical names, geographical names, etc. new ed 2v $12 c1938 Appleton-Century

423 English language—Dictionaries 38-10735

"This set was offered 'to registered Britannica owners only,' in combination with the 1938 Britannica Book of the Year, at a prepublication price of $14.75 for the two titles. The printed circular issued by the Encyclopaedia Britannica, inc., in which the combination offer is made, quotes $25 as the price of the New Century Dictionary, 2-volume edition, alone. The Publishers Trade List Annual, 1937 lists the price of a 2-volume edition of the New Century Dictionary as $12, as given in a note in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1934 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. . . According to the Appleton-Century co., its publishers, the new edition which is being sold in combination with the Britannica Book of the Year is substantially the same as that reviewed, though some additions to bring it up to date have been made in this as in other reprintings since the review appeared." Subscription Bks Bul

Subscription Bks Bul 10:4 Ja '39 160w

NEW FABIAN RESEARCH BUREAU, LONDON. Democratic Sweden; a volume of studies; ed. by Margaret Cole and Charles Smith. 334p $3 Greystone [12s 6d Routledge]

330.9485 Sweden—Economic policy. Sweden—Social conditions [39-27115]

"In 1937 the New Fabian research bureau organized a party to study conditions in Sweden. Definite information was obtained, from observation and study, on the achievements and character of Swedish social democracy." (Booklist) Contents: Constitution, by H. R. G. Greaves; The administrative system, by J. E. MacColl; Political parties, by John Parker; Trade unions, by H. D. Hughes; Budgetary policy, by Geoffrey Wilson; Public works policy, by Geoffrey Wilson; The banking system and monetary policy, by Hugh Gaitskell; International relations, by "Anglo-Swede"; Industry, by R. W. B. Clarke; Agriculture, by Dunstan Skilbeck; Power, by Graeme Haldane; Wages and the cost of living, by G. R. Mitchison; Retail trade and the co-operative movement, by G. R. Mitchison; Sweden in world trade, by G. D. H. Cole; Social services, by Mrs I. M. Bolton; Population policy, by D. V. Glass; Education, by Margaret Cole; Publishing, press and radio, by Raymond Postgate; Appendices; General list of books; Index.

Booklist 35:226 Mr 15 '39

Economist 133:155 O 22 '38 700w

Foreign Affairs 17:813 Jl '39 10w

Manchester Guardian p5 D 30 '38 450w

"Four papers in this volume stand out for their special competence: Power by Graeme Haldane, Wages and the Cost of Living by G. R. Mitchison, Education by Margaret Cole, and Publishing, Press and Radio by Raymond Postgate. It is to be regretted that the appendix on Liquor Control is so brief. Certainly, this subject, which to many persons is one of the sore thumbs of Swedish life, deserved more than a scant two pages." Eric Estorick

+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:1135 D 31 '38 600w

"For all interested in the improvement of the general welfare of their country, 'Democratic Sweden' is the most informative and accurate book on Sweden I have examined. The Swedes are trying to work out—and have succeeded rather spectacularly in working out —an orderly system, an abundant life, a modus vivendi for the whole population. We can profit much from them." Hudson Strode

NEW FABIAN RESEARCH BUREAU, LONDON—Continued

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 9 '39 1150w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Survey 75:295 S '39 550w

"The essays which compose the volume are authoritative as well as informative and lucid."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p634 O 8 '38 400w

NEW human interest library [ed. by S. E. Farquhar]. 1937 rev ed 7v il maps $37.75 c1937 Midland press, inc, 1811 Prairie av, Chicago

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 37-19180

"This set, arranged by broad subjects for the purpose of inducing consecutive reading, is designed to supplement the school work of young people, particularly in the elementary and junior high school grades. The editor is S. E. Farquhar and the advisory editors are W. D. Howe and L. P. Benezet. A six-volume edition published in 1928, was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for July 1930, p.10 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. . . Part of the material in this set is interesting and useful. . . The revisions of the past 10 years, however, fail in many respects to bring the set up to date." Subscription Bks Bul

"The set is not up to date in appearance, due to the inclusion of many old-fashioned photographs and line drawings. Many illustrations are not clearly and attractively reproduced. The New Human Interest Library may prove of interest as a browsing set in the home where the topical arrangement of information is desired and where up-to-dateness is not considered of great importance. It is recommended only for such purposes."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:5 Ja '39 1000w

NEW SCHOOL FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH. Graduate faculty. War in our time; Hans Speier and Alfred Kähler, editors; with foreword by Alvin Johnson. 362p $3 Norton

172.4 War (W) 39-27342

"Collection of papers from the general seminar of the graduate faculty of the New School for Social Research. . . The editors see war as now a concern for everybody and see it straight ahead unless the principle of cooperation is invoked with brotherhood and understanding. They apply this reasoning to various social problems, such as regulation of population, economics, finance and labor, as well as to international and diplomatic problems." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by William Orton
Am Econ R 29:833 D '39 300w

"The book is rich with ideas on a current problem of prime importance, and is marked by clarity and, except in a few instances, by restraint." H. J. Tobin

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:682 Ag '39 600w

"This book has its high spots and also some very, very low ones. In general, however, the high spots more than make up for the depressions." W. G. Weaver

+ — Am Soc R 4:743 O '39 600w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
Ann Am Acad 207:224 Ja '40 600w
Booklist 35:284 My 1 '39
Christian Century 56:611 My 10 '39 250w

"Thorough and timely as the work may be, it lacks integration. In some ways this lack is due to simple matters of construction, such as the overlapping of subjects, and the absence of an index. Its style is academic in the manner of German scholarship; its words are too often polysyllabic, its phrases involved; its ideas must be dug out of their context. Primarily, however, integration is lacking because the authors have no finished conclusions." E. M. Lynskey
Commonweal 30:440 S 1 '39 700w
Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 101:v My '39 170w

"Symposiums are usually rather drab affairs, largely because they lack plan and organization. But in this book we find collaboration at its best. For the first time an attempt is made to view the impact of modern war and war preparations on society as a whole." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 149:225 Ag 26 '39 390w
New Repub 99:82 My 24 '39 50w

"The dearth of new material stands in the way of the volume being an important contribution to current knowledge about war. Throughout most of the pages one gets the impression that the authors wrote from a bookish rather than an actual contact with the situations discussed." E. W. Hullinger

N Y Times p16 Je 4 '39 650w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Pol Sci Q 54:636 D '39 400w

" 'War in Our Time' is indispensable reading for anyone interested in the drift of public policy both domestically and internationally during the coming decade. While most of the work is of high quality, individual contributions are, of course, uneven. The opening chapter on power politics and peace plans by Hans Simons is irritatingly vague, and full of judgments that define error without revealing the yardstick of truth that was used in the process." H. D. Gideonse

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 8 '39 1150w

"The papers are all of high quality, of insight, scholarship and timeliness."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 13 '39 250w

NEW standard encyclopedia of art; architecture, sculpture, painting, decorative arts; based on the work of Louis Hourticq and tr. under the supervision of Tancred Borenius; fully rev. under the supervision of J. Leroy Davidson and Philippa Gerry; with the assistance of the staff of the Index of twentieth-century artists College art assn, New York city. de luxe ed 2v in 1 375p il pl $3.95 Garden City pub. co.

703 Art—Dictionaries (W) 39-16979

"This is a reprint from the same plates of Harper's Encyclopedia of Art [Book Review Digest, 1938]. . . The two titles differ only in format, except that the colored frontispieces of Harper's Encyclopedia of Art have been omitted from the New Standard Encyclopedia. The preface and the separate title pages and plate numbering of Harper's Encyclopedia are preserved in this one-volume edition. . . The New Standard Encyclopedia of Art was designed, according to the preface, 'to bring together in compact and accessible form the pertinent facts of the whole history of art,' from the earliest times to the present. It is intended for the use of both the specialist in art and the general reader interested in art." Subscription Bks Bul

"The volume contains a great deal of interesting and useful information, copiously illustrated, arranged alphabetically under entries for persons, places, and buildings of artistic interest and for the terms, media, periods, and movements of art. As a whole this material, though brief, is presented in intelligible and readable style. It includes critical as well as factual information and locates various objects of art described. . . In spite of certain deficiencies, the New Standard Encyclopedia of Art brings conveniently together much authoritative information on many phases of art. It is recommended for high school, college or public libraries which serve teachers or students of art, art clubs, and others interested in the subject."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:28 Ap '39 900w
Wis Lib Bul 35:198 D '39

NEW wonder world; a library of knowledge. rev ed 11v il maps $66.50; rainbow fabrikoid $76.50; to schools and libraries, buckram $59.85; rainbow fabrikoid $69.85 c1932-37 Schuman & co, 203 N. Wabash av, Chicago

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 37-20165

"This set is not an encyclopedia but a compilation for children of stories and information on various subjects, edited by J. Ralph McGaughy, Professor of education, Teachers college, Columbia university, assisted by Marion Florence Lansing, author of several children's books, Roma Gans, Associate in education, Teachers college, Columbia university, and Walter Kent Munroe. An earlier edition was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, April 1932, p.25 [Book Review Digest, 1934]." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The material in the New Wonder World is in general simply and clearly presented. There are many signed articles. . . The information on science and industry is essentially up to date. . . . As the earlier review indicates, the New Wonder World is primarily an interesting browsing set. Its organization and indexing are not such as to make it readily useful for reference purposes. . . The New Wonder World is recommended for the home or school library in which an interesting set for general reading on a variety of subjects is desired."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:7 Ja '39 1100w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Bauhaus, 1919-1928; ed. by Herbert Bayer, Walter Gropius [and] Ise Gropius. 224p il map $3.75 Museum of modern art [16s Allen, G.]

707 Dessau.Bauhaus. Weimar.Bauhaus. Design 39-2436

"Twenty years ago Walter Gropius, a gifted German architect, founded an arts and crafts school called the Bauhaus. Out of its practical work grew a whole new philosophy and from its students came also the first sleek designs for furniture, pottery, lighting, for a hundred familiar things of the sort now generally called 'modern.' A handsomely illustrated book, Bauhaus 1919-1928, assembles the record of their progress. . . There is hardly a field in which their influence has not been felt: architecture, textiles, typography, movies, advertising stand in their debt." Forum

---

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 101:v F '39 200w

Reviewed by C. H. Reilly
Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 550w

Pratt p17 spring '39

"In the light of the importance of the Bauhaus of Weimar and Dessau to the world of modern design in the fine and applied arts, it is to be regretted that a clearer exposition of its aims, and the results of these first ten out of fourteen years of vital experiment is not presented. . . The book suffers from a plethora of heterogeneous illustrations; it becomes an annotated scrapbook." C. F.

— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 7 '39 160w

"The Bauhaus buildings at Dessau, after suitable Nazi alterations, have been turned to Nazi purposes. But the soul of the Bauhaus goes marching on. This is a book to stimulate everybody who is concerned with art to-day. It records the past, but it points to the future."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p310 My 27 '39 550w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Picasso. See Picasso

NEW YORK (state). UNIVERSITY. Regents' inquiry into the character and cost of public education in the state of New York. Education for American life; a new program for the state of New York [written by Luther Halsey Gulick]. 167p maps $2 (12s) McGraw

370.9747 Education—New York (state)
(W) 38-28664

"Summarizes in simple terms the central conclusions and the specific recommendations growing from the entire study. These findings have been brought together in . . . Part I of this volume. Part II deals briefly with three important aspects of the study, district organization, the State Education Department, and costs." (Pref)

Booklist 35:200 F 15 '39

Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 3:433 S '39 110w

NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE. Landmarks in medicine; introd. by James Alexander Miller. (Laity lectures) 347p il $2 (8s 6d) Appleton-Century

610.4 Medicine—Addresses, essays, lectures. Medicine—History 39-6826

Seven essays dealing with various aspects of medical science from the days of the barber-surgeons to modern X-ray. Contents: From barber-surgeons to surgeons, by F. R. Packard; The meaning of medical research, by A. E. Cohn; Dr. Watson and Mr. Sherlock Holmes, by H. S. Martland; Medicine in the middle ages, by J. J. Walsh; The search for longevity, by Raymond Pearl; Medicine and the progress of civilization, by Reginald Burbank; X-ray within the memory of man, by L. G. Cole.

"All the lectures here collected are excellent, and the selection of a few for special mention is no disparagement to the authors of the others. It is hard to praise the collection too highly. The printing and make-up are excellent." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 29:542 My '39 400w

Booklist 35:286 My 1 '39

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 1 '39 50w

NEW ZEALAND INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Contemporary New Zealand; a survey of domestic and foreign policy. 283p $4 (10s 6d) Oxford; 10s 6d for sale by Whitcombe & Tombs

993.1 New Zealand 39-21583

"A factual survey of New Zealand's economic and social policies and of the Dominion's relations with the Empire and the rest of the world." Foreign Affairs

---

Foreign Affairs 18:171 O '39 20w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
N Y Times p27 Ap 2 '39 450w

Reviewed by J. B. Condliffe
Pacific Affairs 12:105 Mr '39 300w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Cousin Toby; pictures by [the author]. [32p] $1.50 Harper

(W) 39-24445

Colored pictures and simple text describe the visit of Jill, who was six, going on seven, and Gordon, who was four, going on five, to their little cousin Toby, aged two.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"The expressions on their wide-eyed faces, the set of his chubby legs, the artless poses in which the little people group themselves, are so completely childlike they bring an unaccountable lump into the throat of any one

NEWBERRY, CLARE—Continued
whose children have grown up. . . These are more than portraits of little American children such as we all know. They are portraits of childhood itself." M. L. Becker
+ Books p11 N 12 '39 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 40w

"A slight story for children from three to six. Neither in text nor pictures does the book have the appeal of Mittens, and Babette." E. G. Mullan
Library J 65:37 Ja 1 '40 80w
New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 30w
Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 60w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Herbert the lion; pictures by [the author]. new enl ed [64p] $2 Harper 39-6121

The first edition of Herbert the Lion, published by Harcourt, Brace at $1.75 (Book Review Digest, 1931) has been out of print some time. The present book has been enlarged, the number of pictures increased, and reset.

Booklist 35:314 My 15 '39

" 'Herbert the Lion' must not be overlooked by any collector of children's picture-books, old or young." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Mr 12 '39 160w
Boston Transcript p1 My 13 '39 30w

"The original Herbert had a compact story-form and a humorous touch that pre-school children particularly enjoyed. In this new version there is a padding that lengthens the story without adding anything to it and an introduction of humor that is out of key. However, libraries that are Herbert enthusiasts may be glad to have him back in his present attractive form. Libraries who have not had the book before may wish to add it to their picture-book shelf where we still lack variety for our ever growing clientele of pre-school children." M. F. Potter
Library J 64:331 Ap 15 '39 130w

"Elaborately becurled and long of limb, Herbert suggests the lions of Assyrian art. Children are delighted with the drawings which amusingly suggest the rapidity of Herbert's growth and motion, and effectively indicate the situation created by his impetuous disposition. Beginners in reading will find the text an inspiration." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 My 28 '39 280w
New Yorker 15:104 My 13 '39 50w

"The amiable Herbert is funnier than ever. Delightful."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 20w

NEWBOLD, NATHAN CARTER, ed. Five North Carolina Negro educators [pub. under the auspices of the Division of cooperation in education and race relations; cooperating organizations: State dept. of public instruction, Univ. of N.C. [and] Duke university]. 142p il $1 Univ. of N.C. press
923.7 Negroes—Biography. Educators
39-24948

Biographical sketches of five Negro educational leaders of North Carolina. Contents: Simon Green Atkins; James Benson Dudley; Annie Wealthy Holland; Peter Weddick Moore; Ezekiel Ezra Smith.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

"The book is more than a gesture toward interracial understanding."
+ Books p23 N 5 '39 200w

NEWILL, MRS PHYLLIS KRAFFT. Good food and how to cook it. 555p il $2.50 Appleton-Century
641.5 Cookery
39-27203

"A cook book in which the author has attempted, with apparent success, to tell everything the cook needs to know in terms that cannot be misunderstood. Cooking time is given for each recipe, every step in the process is outlined, and each recipe is numbered, making a system of cross references possible." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 35:247 Ap 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39
J Home Econ 31:400 Je '39 80w
Pratt p17 summer '39
Times [London] Lit Sup p442 Jl 22 '39 150w
Wis Lib Bul 35:61 Ap '39

NEWMAN, BERNARD. The Mussolini murder plot. 288p $2 Hillman-Curl [7s 6d; 3s 6d Hutchinson]

" 'Suppose Mussolini had been killed on the first day of the Abyssinian War! He very nearly was.' Thus begins the tale of how a secret service man saved Il Duce from the League of International Amity which had decided to execute anybody starting a war." Books

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 My 7 '39 100w

"Although the incidents narrated are wildly improbable, the author has succeeded in creating an illusion of reality. There is very little mystery in the story, but there are thrills in abundance. It would have been more in accordance with good taste, however, if the fictional character of the book had been emphasized by using the name of an imaginary dictator of a country not found on the map." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 30 '39 200w

"Completely unbelievable plot dished up with dexterous verisimilitude—except for incredible American. Thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:30 Ap 29 '39 30w

NEWMARCH, MRS ROSA HARRIET (JEAFFRESON). A short story of a long friendship: Jean Sibelius. 131p il $1.75 Birchard
B or 92 Sibelius, Jean Julius Christian
39-17711

Personal reminiscences of the Finnish composer by an English musical critic who has known Sibelius since 1905, when she met him in London. Since that time the author has visited the composer's home in Finland and has maintained a correspondence with his family for many years. Contains descriptive notes of Sibelius' seven published symphonies.

"Mrs. Newmarch's volume, slight though it is, can boast three claims to value. In the first place, it concerns Sibelius, about whom surprisingly little has appeared in book form, in spite of the great vogue now enjoyed by his music in both this country and England. In the second place, there is the author herself, long an authority on Russian music and literature, as well as the learned and engrossing annotator of the Queen's Hall Concerts. . . Finally, there is a worthwhile foreword by that distinguished English composer and conductor, Sir Granville Bantock." Peter Bowdoin
+ Books p12 Ag 27 '39 700w
Christian Science Monitor p12 S 23 '39 550w

NEWSTETTER, WILBER IRVIN; FELDSTEIN, MARC J., and NEWCOMB, THEODORE MEAD. Group adjustment; a study in experimental sociology. 154p $2 Western Reserve univ. School of applied social sciences, 2117 Adelbert rd, Cleveland

301.15 Sociology. Social psychology 39-13308

"This is a complete report on the Wawokiye Camp Research Project regarding which several preliminary reports have previously appeared in periodical literature. The attraction and repulsion patterns of a boys' camp were studied over a period of seven years (1926-33). The present report deals chiefly with the 1930-33 period. In addition there is also material on the result of similar studies on a fraternity and a sorority at two different colleges. Through interviews regarding preferences in companions as well as through observations of actual groupings, data were secured regarding such phenomena as stability of personal-preference patterns, change in group status, influence of age, the relationship of personal preference to actual aggregation, and various degrees of interaction." Am J Soc

"By far the most important part of the book both as regards content and as regards presentation is Mr. Feldstein's contribution in chapters iv-xii inclusive. In these chapters will be found the most original, intensive, and on the whole valid applications of statistical methods to date of this kind that has yet been attempted. Not all the tables are entirely clear, but this part of the book constitutes an important contribution to the literature of interpersonal relations. The rest of the book is for the most part badly presented and confused. . . . But future studies in this field must take cognizance of this report of a pioneering project." G. A. Lundberg

+ — Am J Soc 44:313 S '38 240w

Reviewed by J. L. Moreno

+ Am Soc R 3:910 D '38 320w

"This volume constitutes a significant contribution to professional literature. Obviously, however, it is not a book for the novice either in social work or in the social sciences." C. E. Hendry

+ Survey 74:396 D '38 340w

NEWTON, JOSEPH. Introduction to metallurgy. 537p il $4 Wiley

669 Metallurgy (W) 38-29939

"This university text by the Assistant Professor of Metallurgy in the University of Idaho 'deals with principles rather than practice, and with generalities rather than specific instances.' Part I deals with the structures of metals and alloys, their physical properties, heat treatment, and uses. Part II has to do with the various extractive processes, both chemical and mechanical, sampling, and statistics of production. Numerous practical problems are included. There are bibliographies at the chapter endings." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 35:112 D 1 '38

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

N Y New Tech Bks 23:58 O '38

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. The stuff of life; a book of fortitude and fellowship. 561p $2 Harper

248 Christian life 39-22333

Inspirational readings for daily use, taken from the author's syndicated column in the daily press.

"There is in [the talks] a savor of humanness, mystical insight, illumined commonplaceness, and a high measure of literary finish. Nothing of the kind is better done by contemporary inspirational writers. The volume is a vade mecum with a range of topics that covers about all that we think and say and do—and long for."

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 16 '39 90w

"This is inspirational literature of a high type."

+ Christian Century 56:1140 S 20 '39 30w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. We here highly resolve; three tributes to Abraham Lincoln. 61p $1.25 Harper

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 39-2777

The three tributes gathered in this little book are a sermon delivered at Gettysburg on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle; an address recalling Dr Newton's personal experiences as a Lincoln student; and a study of Lincoln's spiritual life.

Christian Century 56:219 F 15 '39 60w

"Each address is not only a stirring and moving tribute, but shows Lincoln in a different aspect. The President who is leading the nation through its bitter struggle is seen as he spoke immortally in two almost unnoticed minutes at Gettysburg. The young man is watched in study and work and growth. And Lincoln is understood as the 'man of God,' who without the acceptance of any formal church creed 'served righteousness righteously' in the noblest interpretation of the spirit of Christianity."

+ N Y Times p12 F 5 '39 300w

NICE, MRS MARGARET (MORSE). The watcher at the nest [il. in black and white by Roger T. Peterson]. 159p $2 Macmillan

598.81 Sparrows. Birds 39-9160

Records the author's observations of birds, especially of song sparrows. By means of banding various members of the sparrow families in her garden, she was able to trace their behavior over a period of eight years. Studies of other varieties are included: ovenbirds, warblers, vireos, mourning doves, herons, and bobwhites among them. Lists scientific names of birds mentioned in the text.

Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

"Here are innumerable facts about bird territory, unified by focus on a certain species—a minutely detailed yet eminently readable study of one of America's best known birds. Long will it be loved for its quiet humor, and long remembered for its author's patience and thoroughness. But the truly great quality it possesses is its power to inspire other students. Readers of 'The Watcher at the Nest' will, we predict, be undertaking similar studies the continent over." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p2 Jl 2 '39 550w

"The keen enjoyment of the author as a nature lover breathes through the pages of this interesting and attractive volume." A.F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '39 270w

"Her charming and appealing accounts of bird watching are authentic and scientifically accurate." Anita Moffet

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 16 '39 500w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 20 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

NICHOLL, LOUISE TOWNSEND. Water and light. ltd autog ed 112p $2 Dutton

811 39-19496

Quiet poems with a touch of mysticism. "These are a musician's poems. They are informed by an ear to geometrical progression in musical composition; harmony, counterpoint, recapitulation of theme excellently serve Miss Nicholl's lyric forms." (Books)

NICHOLL, L. T.—Continued

"Praise for the sensitive texture of her writing in 'The Blossom Print,' a novel, Louise Townsend Nicholl, in this collection of her poems, should win high commendation from discerning readers. 'Water and Light' is a book of exceptional lyric merits. Every poem is formed with scrupulous workmanship, the intention and motivation clear and exact. Miss Nicholl's work shows what Marianne Moore has called 'the poetry in unconscious fastidiousness,' teamed with that logical imagination notable in the writing of Wallace Stevens and David McCord." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p4 Jl 9 '39 350w

"This is not a book of technical experiment. Miss Nicholl relies on familiar forms, makes an effective alternation of tetrameter with trimeter in several of the lyrics and gives free metrical treatment to a number of verses. The poems reveal a sensitive and introspective mind and a certain dexterity of expression, but their emotional and intellectual substance is slight." Dorothy Ulrich

+ N Y Times p2 O 1 '39 350w

"Poems filled with absolutely genuine mysticism, quietly done."

+ New Yorker 15:68 Ag 5 '39 10w

"Louise Nicholl writes of quiet things for the most part. . . She also is not an experimentalist, but simply a good craftsman whose choice of phrase is better than the average. She will repay reading." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 5 '39 100w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Green grows the city. 275p il $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape, J.]

716 Gardening 39-31505

Step by step Mr Nichols relates how he built a thing of beauty out of a particularly ugly, triangular back yard in a London suburb.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p20 N 19 '39 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Clark

Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 230w

"There is no doubt about the enthusiasm and the garden wisdom of Mr. Nichols, but first and last he is a man of letters with a gift for vivid and racy expression. One suspects that, if he had to choose between brilliance and literal fact, he would choose to be brilliant." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 11 '39 900w

"Altogether, this is the very best sort of Escape Literature, against which even the dictators cannot prevail. Best of all, it is well substantiated by real photographs of 'before' and 'after.' It isn't all 'my eye and Betty Martin.' Don't you understand that? Read Beverley Nichols' newest contribution to garden history which is at the same time the happiest amusement, and give thanks." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 153:17 N 1 '39 160w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 31:54 N 3 '39 130w

"The account of Flora's entry upon the scene and of the uses made of various American and French ideas adds sober interest to the book for gardeners, while cat-lovers will be pleased to meet Rose and Cavalier. Nor need one be specially concerned with gardens or cats in order to enjoy a commentary that, if skimming the surface of things, rambles breezily enough from delphiniums to dictators and satirises human no less than feline foibles." G. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 O 13 '39 220w

"Beverley Nichols's latest 'garden book' is an entertaining personal chronicle which promises pleasant, and even stimulating, reading to other devoted gardeners. It is not, O city-bound householder, a book of practical suggestions for you; only by somewhat vague and remote inference does it offer you the pleasures of hope. For one thing, Mr. Beverley Nichols's garden was not really in the city at all. For another thing, his problems and his terrain, his design and at least one of his neighbors, were alike peculiar."

N Y Times p28 N 19 '39 290w

Spec 163:602 O 27 '39 100w

Springf'd Republican p12 O 26 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p615 O 21 '39 360w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Revue; drawings by Hans Aufseeser. 302p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Cape, J]

39-14792

Robin Frost, an unknown young composer from Australia, has spent ten lonely, disheartening months in London before he is "discovered" at a party one night by two rival musical comedy stars. In the resulting melee Robin finally arrives at a successful opening night but the star of the occasion is neither of the two ladies who did battle for him.

"A lively, satirical, behind-the-scenes history. . . Some of the characters in 'Revue' are drawn with a zest and venom which suggest that the author has taken them from life. Their performances, however, do not depend upon recognition of possible sources for enjoyment." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 My 21 '39 330w

"The Yugo-Slavian male star, who learns the English 'to speak him like the Oxford' is funny, and even the chorus girl who makes good on Wordsworth is credible. The plot, which moves along on hitches, is great fun; and there is an ironic twist at the end that tosses all suggestion of banality into the wings. Incisive wit, crisp style, and plenty of warm humanity behind his studied sneers make Mr. Nichols's 'Revue' emphatically 'something to sing about'—and to laugh about, too." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 27 '39 350w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p12 F 25 '39 50w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 31 '39 380w

New Repub 99:112 My 31 '39 50w

"Mr. Nichols knows even more about the world of revue than he does about the world of opera, and when he allows himself to be malicious the result is exceedingly amusing. But when he allows himself to be tender—well, you all know what Young Love and Spring Blossoms do to Mr. Nichols's style." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:136 Ja 28 '39 150w

Reviewed by Drake De Kay

N Y Times p7 My 21 '39 500w

Pratt p29 autumn '39

"Revue is like many revues: amusing in patches, sentimental in patches, a light entertainment for the tired business man, a safe pis aller for the stalls and gallery. The more discriminating pit will hardly stomach it." Celia Johnson

— + Spec 162:102 Ja 20 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 21 '39 320w

NICHOLS, BOB. Skeet and how to shoot it. 177p il $3.50 Greenberg

799.31 Trap shooting 39-8901

"Detailed directions and advice on the game of shooting clay pigeons, with discussions of the basic principles, by the skeet and shooting editor of Field and Stream. So far as we know, a cheaper book is not available on this subject. Photographs. Partial contents: Field lay-out; Apparel; The gun; Form and stance; The 'Minimove' method; A round of skeet." Booklist

---

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 30 '39 550w

NICHOLS, EGBERT RAY; NICHOLS, MARIAN MURRAY, and NICHOLS, EGBERT RAY, jr., comps. The state sales tax. (Reference shelf) 397p maps $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

336.2 Sales tax (W) 39-27048

Reprints of articles, speeches and radio addresses of the last four years on the subject of the state sales tax, collected for the debater. Bibliography.

Management R 28:252 Jl '39 60w
Pratt p8 autumn '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:47 Mr '39

NICHOLS, EGBERT RAY, and ROSKAM, WILLIAM E., eds. Pump-priming theory of government spending. (Reference shelf) 482p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Finance—U.S. 39-27154

"This volume in the lengthening 'Reference Shelf' series contains nearly 500 pages of data and argument on all sides of the questions of spending for recovery, budget balancing, relief, inflation and allied topics, with opinions by government officials, economists, business men and the press, and extensive bibliographies." Christian Century

Booklist 35:234 Mr 15 '39
Christian Century 56:218 F 15 '39 50w
Pratt p8 summer '39
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 170w

NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK), and NICHOLS, ROY FRANKLIN. The growth of American democracy; social: economic: political. 819p il maps $5; students ed $4 (16s) Appleton-Century

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Politics and government 39-11283

A history of the United States from colonial times to the present. Bibliography. Index.

"For reading or for study, this is one of the most satisfactory of the recent one-volume histories of the United States. Its authors are a former professor of history at Wesleyan College and a present professor of history in the University of Pennsylvania. The political, social and economic factors receive well balanced attention. There is increasing fullness of detail as the present time is approached."
+ Christian Century 56:1276 O 18 '39 100w

"This is a book to be warmly recommended to all who wish to study the American social and economic background, and to understand American politics and American foreign policy to-day. Although it is 750 pages long, well-documented and scholarly, it has hardly a dull page."
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:194 Jl 29 '39 240w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Social Studies 31:47 Ja '40 400w

"No side of American life is neglected and the authors have not been content with bald and dully objective narrative or enumeration; they have opinions and they do not hide them, either in the text or in a lively bibliography. The book is lavishly illustrated and has admirable diagrammatic charts. Altogether this is a well-planned book and a well-executed plan."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Jl 8 '39 80w

NICOL, HUGH. Plant growth-substances; their chemistry and applications, with special reference to synthetics. 109p il $2 Chemical pub. co. [pa 3s 6d Hill, Leonard]

581.13414 Growth (plants). Hormones (plants) [38-30582]

"The author of this volume has made an honest attempt to present a brief review of 'plant growth substances' for laymen, students, and chemists who have not specialized in this particular field. . . The book is based on published articles from various parts of the world. They have been evaluated largely from the chemist's standpoint. Each chapter is supplemented with pertinent references. The author states that he has not used abstracts but has gone to the original publications for his information. There are eight well-reproduced figures and many graphic chemical formulas." Chem & Met Eng

"For people with only a passing interest, this book will give in short reading time (approximately one and one half hours for the average reader) a fair picture of the field." P. W. Zimmerman + Chem & Met Eng 46:142 F '39 200w

Reviewed by P. W. Zimmerman
Ind & Eng Chem 17:142 F 20 '39 240w

"Though full of information of value to the research worker, Dr. Nicol's book will prove of even greater value to the professional horticulturist. . . Dr. Nicol is to be congratulated on a very useful book which his publishers have issued at a reasonable price. It can be strongly recommended to students of, and research workers in, plant physiology, and to the horticulturist who is alive to the opportunities which scientific research is offering him to his advantage."
+ Nature 143:356 Mr 4 '39 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:27 Ap '39

NICOLAY, HELEN. Wizard of the wires. 326p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

B or 92 Morse, Samuel Finley Breese—Juvenile literature (W) 38-31592

Biography of Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, written for junior and senior high schools. It is "the story of a man who believed in the worth of his idea and persisted in developing it, in the face of discouragement and actual want." Index.

"This richly vivid biography is the first life of Morse offered to young readers. . . As a writer of historical fiction, Miss Nicolay has spared no pains to get her facts and transfuse them with feeling." E. M. Mack
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 26 '38 420w
Wis Lib Bul 35:67 Ap '39

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE. Diplomacy. 264p $2 Harcourt [5s Butterworth, T]

327 Diplomacy. International law and relations 39-21540

This guide to foreign affairs contains a history of diplomacy, an account of the change that has taken place in methods and procedures since 1918, and information as to the functions and status of ambassadors and other diplomats today. The body of the book is written from the British point of view, but an appendix to the American edition, lists the requirements for entrance into the American diplomatic service. Index.

Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

"One may read Mr. Nicolson's book now as only a fragrant memory of the way things were done before the machine guns began to type the dispatches. But once read, one had better tuck it away in a safe nook. We will need it again some day—when the guns have stopped." Walter Millis
Books p4 S 10 '39 800w

"Anyone who can write amusingly and informatively on such a subject deserves high praise as a literary craftsman, and Mr Nicolson has done just that. . . The only misgivings one feels is that such wit and charm are being wasted, especially now that European diplomacy has failed to prevent the appalling tragedy of war." G. K. Smart
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 7 '39 550w
Christian Century 56:1025 Ag 23 '39 80w

NICOLSON, H. G.—Continued

Churchman 153:35 N 15 '39 40w

"The style of the writer is excellent. There is a clarity and finish about his English, an urbanity and restrained wit in his judgments that make the reading of his book a distinct pleasure. . . A brilliant book which is at the same time sincere, wise, and well-informed." Mother Mary Lawrence

+ Commonweal 30:442 S 1 '39 340w

Foreign Affairs 18:371 Ja '40 30w

"Mr. Harold Nicolson, the son of a distinguished diplomatist, was himself twenty years in the Diplomatic Service, this period covering the war, the Peace Conference (at which he was probably the most prominent among the junior Foreign Office representatives), and two years at Berlin. A littérateur of distinction, he combines a thorough technical knowledge of diplomacy with the gift of presenting it to the public, which makes him the most expert and most brilliant writer on diplomacy in this country." L. B. Namier

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ap 6 '39 490w

"This textbook is once more evidence of the truth that no such thing as dull science exists. It makes delightful reading. There are only a few scholars who are bores." Rustem Vambery

+ Nation 149:584 N 25 '39 750w

"A wise, witty, comprehensive and enlightening book." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:218 F 11 '39 650w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p2 Ag 20 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:66 Ag 19 '39 30w

"Mr. Nicolson's style is always simple, pregnant with meaning, and eminently persuasive; and in this volume he shows firm grasp of his great subject, unity of argument, reflective originality, and, above all, the philosophic temper." Alwyn Parker

+ Spec 162:228 F 10 '39 900w

"Whether or not Mr Nicolson's reliance on highly professionalized diplomacy is justified in all circumstances, his volume sets forth a program for honesty in international negotiations which if followed, even in part, represents a desirable aim. The book is written in a vigorous style which, in combination with the historical and practical materials it contains, makes this a first-class introduction to an important subject."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 20 '39 1100w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 28:633 O '39 100w

Time 34:64 Ag 28 '39 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 11 '39 490w

NIEDERL, JOSEPH BERTHOLD, and NIEDERL, VICTOR. Micromethods of quantitative organic elementary analysis. 271p il $3 Wiley [15s Chapman]

545 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative. Microchemistry. Chemistry, Organic. Pregl, Fritz 38-6664

"This work, a simplification of the methods used in Pregl's more advanced treatise, is adapted to ordinary laboratory conditions and is intended for students possessing only an average undergraduate knowledge of chemistry. There are up-to-date bibliographies at the chapter endings. The authors are associated with New York University." N Y New Tech Bks

Nature 143:414 Mr 11 '39 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:21 Ap '38

NIGGLI, JOSEPHINA. Mexican folk plays. (Carolina playmakers ser, v 1) 223p il $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press [11s 6d Oxford]

812 38-29026

"Of the five plays, written in English by a Mexican woman, two are historical and three are comedies of contemporary village life. Simple stage settings and few characters are required for the comedies. All the plays have been produced by the Carolina playmakers at Chapel Hill. Notes on Mexican costume and on Spanish pronunciation are appended." Booklist

Booklist 35:202 F 15 '39

"Her plays are full of authentic color, and when she wishes, of broad humor, but they sprawl, they lean too heavily on color and folk humor and too little on tight dramatic structure." W. P. Eaton

— + Books p11 D 18 '38 150w

NILES, BLAIR (RICE) (MRS ROBERT NILES, jr). The James; il. by Edward Shenton. (Rivers of America) 359p map $2.50 Farrar

917.55 James river, Virginia. Virginia—History (W) 39-27044

The story of Tidewater Virginia is told discursively from John Smith to the restoration of Williamsburg in a series of disconnected chapters rather than a continuous history. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:203 F 15 '39

"Mrs. Niles's book is both history and folklore; it is discursive, leisurely, intentionally fragmentary and heavily sentimental, but with a candor in its sentimentality that disarms the critic. . . 'The James' leaves one with a little, nagging suspicion. In spite of its undeniable charm, in spite of its poetic English, in spite of the obvious honesty and sincerity that went into its making, there is a touch of the chill of a mausoleum in the book." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p5 F 5 '39 650w

"Mrs. Niles's book is weak in the interpretation of both people and event. . . And she fails to give an adequate description of tidewater Virginia today in its relation to its past." R. M. H.

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 18 '39 460w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:210 Jl '39 70w

"Out of what interests her in the James River and its story Blair Niles has written a sentimental book, anecdotal in style, its parts not too well integrated and proportioned. . . The result is popular history which will hardly satisfy either those who have given the subject any thought or those who demand from such a book more than readable story and anecdote. The previous volumes in this series have established a standard to which 'The James' does not measure up." Horace Reynolds

— N Y Times p6 F 5 '39 1050w

"Written with sometimes rather fulsome local pride. Not one of the best of the Rivers of America, but the standard of the series is extremely high."

New Yorker 14:83 F 11 '39 40w

"There will be questionings as to the validity of some of her inclusions. . . When the author says that in her mind 'there gradually came to be no question which people and which events should be included,' one would like to interpose a few major demurrers. Why, for example, should a volume entitled 'The James' concern itself with many details of Washington's life at Mount Vernon, or with Matthew F. Maury's scientific discoveries in remote oceans, or with Lee at Appomattox and Lexington, while virtually ignoring certain other figures who were genuinely significant, and at the same time more closely identified with the James River?" Virginius Dabney

— + Sat R of Lit 19:10 F 11 '39 600w

Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

NIXON, LARRY. See Nixon, L. A.

NIXON, LAURENCE ALLEN. American vacations. 380p il $2.25 Little

917.3 Travel. U.S.—Description and travel (W) 40-518

Advice on clothing and equipment, costs, objectives and rewards, of the several kinds of vacations available to Americans in their own country. One chapter is devoted to hiking and hiking clubs and trails, another to the youth hostel circuits, another to water ways, etc. Bibliography.

"In this book Larry Nixon has done as much for those who want to get a maximum of enjoyment out of a vacation in the United States as he did a year ago, in 'Vagabond Voyaging,' for those who wanted advice on low-cost high seas travel in freight ships. Like its companion, 'American Vacations' was written especially for vacationists of moderate means. It is a delightfully informal presentation of America as a vast playground, every corner of which—including the territorial waters—is accessible at reasonable cost." R. G. Doyle

\+ Books p8 Ja 28 '40 290w

"Good fun to read." E. W. M.

\+ Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 70w

"Larry Nixon does not merely suggest or promise or lure: he informs. He tells you what you need to know in planning your holiday. The lists and figures and tabulated facts that find no room in the main body of the text overflow into ten appendices. America, he says, has everything, 'at a price you can afford to pay.' Here's what, and where, and how."

\+ N Y Times p28 D 10 '39 280w

NIXON, LAURENCE ALLEN, ed. What will happen and what to do when war comes, by Elmer C. Walzer [and others]. 290p $2.25 Greystone

355.20973 War. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 39-22865

Symposium in which the five contributors and the editor are all newspaper men. Elmer Walzer, United Press financial expert, discusses Your Property in the next war, if and when it comes; C. Norman Stabler, New York Herald-Tribune editor, deals with Your Business, and Your Job; Jack Foster, of the New York World-Telegram, takes up Your Living Requirements; W. W. Chaplin, of International News Service, deals with Your Person; and Malcolm Logan, of the New York Post, sums up The Bill—Win or Lose. Index.

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Atlantic Ja '40 70w

Booklist 36:104 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Allen Raymond

Books p10 O 1 '39 800w

"It is well that this book has been published at this particular time. When war breaks out, there is little doubt that we will be drawn into it. No citizen or his resources will be spared. It is best for all to know just what to expect beforehand." H. E. Rossell, Jr.

\+ Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '39

"Those who are spoiling for a fight ought to read 'When War Comes.' " Joseph Calderon

Commonweal 30:481 S 15 '39 420w

Foreign Affairs 18:374 Ja '40 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:v O '39 40w

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 50w

New Yorker 15:63 S 2 '39 30w

"Written with a new slant and threaded with gloom is this timely symposium. . . The authors have made a sincere—although not always successful—effort to handle their subjects in objective, dispassioned style. . . The sober citizen should welcome the opportunity to know what all the grim business of war may mean to him, because—if war does come—he is going to be an active partner." R. E. Dupuy

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 S 16 '39 310w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 12 '39 750w

NOCK, ALBERT JAY. Henry George; an essay. 224p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 George, Henry (W) 39-27751

Critical essay on the life and work of Henry George, the one hundredth anniversary of whose birth occurred on September 2d. The author claims that his purpose is neither biographical nor philosophical, but is devoted to "the humbler one of trying to answer certain questions concerning George and his career, which have never been satisfactorily answered."

Reviewed by E. A. J. Johnson

Ann Am Acad 207:234 Ja '40 850w

Booklist 36:43 O 1 '39

"Having set out to solve a problem which does not exist, Mr. Nock is equally unconvincing in his solution. . . Nevertheless, the world of abstractions is a pleasant world if its rules of logic are not taken too rigorously. . . In his intellectual chess game, where human beings are the pieces, [the author] does not really strive for a mate; his individual moves are extraordinarily brilliant, and that is enough. Since the game of abstractions is inherently endless, why strive to win it? Looked at from this point of view, Mr. Nock's word play is delightful. His 'Henry George' should be read, not for edification, but for sheer verbal pleasure." E. S. Bates

— \+ Books p5 Ag 27 '39 1200w

"The essay is a just and sympathetic portrait. . . The few who care for good writing and the serious discussion of great figures will want to read 'Henry George.' " H. M. J.

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 380w

Reviewed by B. I. Bell

Living Church 101:9 O 25 '39 500w

Reviewed by P. M. Sweezy

Nation 149:471 O 28 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 101:268 D 20 '39 550w

"This centenary essay on Henry George holds its sure value for all times and places, especially for here and now." Katherine Woods

\+ N Y Times p4 Ag 27 '39 1250w

"Compact, finely written essay."

\+ New Yorker 15:63 S 2 '39 20w

"Mr. Nock has the reputation of being too urbane to bother with criticism of himself. But, for our own enlightenment, we wish he would come off his very handsome high horse for once. We wish he would look into those countries—chiefly to be found in Scandinavia—where State Power has been used correctly, to increase Social Power. Then we might have something really worthwhile from a writer whose succinct and elegant English style ought not to be wasted on the desert air." John Chamberlain

Sat R of Lit 20:8 S 23 '39 1500w

Reviewed by Lawson Purdy

Survey G 28:768 D '39 280w

NOCK, ARTHUR DARBY. St Paul. 256p $2 Harper [2s 6d Butterworth, T]

225.92 Paul, Saint [38-25306]

Short biography of St Paul, which also takes into account the numerous critical problems involved in any discussion of his life. Two chapters are devoted to St Paul's environment and conversion, two to his life story based on the Acts of the Apostles, and five to his correspondence, excluding Ephesians and the Pastorals. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Nock is a cautious explorer. He travels well-beaten paths seeking new finds by the wayside; he does not risk his reputation for solid scholarship by venturesome excursions into unchartered territory. This procedure makes his book an excellent epitome of the moderately conservative results of critical studies upon the Book of Acts and the Pauline epistles." S. J. Case

Books p8 Je 18 '39 360w

NOCK, ARTHUR D.—Continued

"The subjects are presented with a wealth of scholarly detail, most rich in the discussion of environment. First century magic and philosophy, for example, are presented in lucid summary, and the author gives the life story of Athens, Corinth and other important centers of Pauline activity. As a result, the book is crammed with facts which will make it a useful text for the educated layman, who will find its brief but well chosen bibliography a helpful guide to further study." E. C. Colwell

+ Christian Century 56:282 Mr 1 '39 500w

Reviewed by B. S. Easton
Churchman 153:16 Mr 15 '39 160w

Reviewed by Humphry House
New Statesman & Nation 15:922 My 28 '38 260w

"The present time is a good one to attempt a new survey of the life and work of the great Apostle and Professor Nock has given us a study which deserves the epithet 'masterly,' for it combines excellent scholarship, impartiality, and sympathy with a lucid presentation of an astonishing mass of material in a comparatively small compass. This is a book worthy to stand beside Dr. Edwyn Bevan's Christianity in the same series." Dean of St Paul's

+ Spec 160:434 Mr 11 '38 950w

"Professor Nock has succeeded in giving a clear and scholarly interpretation, even if at times we are compelled to dissent rather sharply from some of the conclusions reached."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p196 Mr 26 '38 550w

NOICE, HAROLD H. Back of beyond [phot. by the author]. 248p map $3.50 Putnam

918.1 Brazil—Description and travel. Indians of South America—Brazil 40-1949

Account of the author's expedition into the South American jungles, in order to photograph the Indians of the Upper Amazon.

Books p14 N 26 '39 200w
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 60w

"The adventure side of the book makes good reading—there is a particularly graphic description of a jungle hurricane—but the descriptions of the Indian life and the reactions of a white man to their customs are set down with an interest that is sustained throughout the book." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p8 N 19 '39 500w

"His account of the expedition and the savages he visited, though it ostensibly deals with true experiences, is in the debased tradition of penny adventure-fiction. All the old props and clichés are included: tom-toms, spiritual somethings, demonism, battle of wild animals in the jungle, the bleached bones of the white man. . . Mixed in with all this is a great deal of straightforward and convincing material that, like good apples packed among bad, is spoiled by its context." L. J. Halle, Jr.

— + Sat R of Lit 20:13 O 7 '39 150w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Hobnailed boots; il. by Charles Hargens. 187p $2 Winston

(W) 39-21780

When Dan Ballard traded the furs from his first trapping expedition for a pair of boots, he did not know into what trouble those boots would take him. On his way home he and an older boy were forced to join the Clark expedition, and the two took part in the capture of Fort Kaskaskia. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 36:75 O 15 '39

"The cruelty of the British and the doctrine of dread and hatred of the colonists they preached to the Indians is, perhaps, unduly emphasized." Miriam Snow

Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 140w

NOLEN, BARBARA, ed. Children of America; foreword by Lucy Sprague Mitchell. 194p il $1.50 Winston

39-27394

Sixteen short stories of modern children in various sections of the United States. Partial contents: Lewis Don: sheep boy, by C. J. Finger; Mother makes Christmas, by Cornelia Meigs; Coronado's ghost, by R. M. Hyatt; Conies in the rock, by Laura Benét; The alligator's tail, by Idella Purnell; Corn-belt Billy, by M. L. Hunt; A surprise for Araminta, by E. K. Evans; High water in Arkansas, by C. J. Finger; East River adventure, by L. R. Davis; Christmas in the Piney Woods, by C. M. Simon.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 40w

Reviewed by Alice Monroe
Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 210w

New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 30w

"This collection conveys better than any geography text could the variety of life and scene in the immense reaches of these United States. . . The diversity of setting is emphasized by the illustrations, for a distinguished list of artists has contributed, each in his own style, drawings which are in close harmony with the particular region and mood portrayed." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 7 '39 360w

NOMAD, MAX (MAX PODOLSKY). Apostles of revolution. 467p $3.50 Little

923 Radicals and radicalism. Revolutions. 7 anals (W) 39-14472

"The volume consists of brief biographies of seven exceptional characters, each of whom represents a school of thought or temperament in the world of progressive action and counteraction: August Blanqui, the martyr; Karl Marx, the teacher; Michael Bakunin, the heretic; Sergey Nachayev, the fanatic; Johann Most, the preacher; Nestor Makhno, the warrior; Joseph Stalin, the hierarch. . . In the introduction, the author states that his chief object was 'to explain the ever-recurring tragic failures of all revolutionary mass movements, which invariably fall short of achieving their originally professed aims.'" Nation

Reviewed by Avrahm Yarmolinsky
Am Hist R 45:192 O '39 250w

Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p16 Mr 12 '39 1000w

Reviewed by A. B. Wolfe
Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 450w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '39 360w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 29:641 Mr 31 '39 250w

Foreign Affairs 17:806 Jl '39 30w

" 'Apostles of Revolution' is a distinct contribution to the literature of revolutionary self-criticism. It expresses the growing desire to see the 'naked truth.' I hope every reader of this book, and I wish it may have many, will be able to penetrate its discouraging surface; he will then experience the kind of 'pessimism' on which 'optimism' grows." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 148:270 Mr 4 '39 700w

"Mr. Nomad's approach is a mixture of sophistication and simplicity, worldly wisdom and idealism. His iconoclasm clears away much wishful thinking and rationalization. His mistrust of the altruism of leadership is scarcely without historical foundation. It is well to be reminded that the proclamation of socialism is not tantamount to the establishment of heaven upon earth. But the total picture that Mr. Nomad gives is distinctly one-sided." S. F. Bloom

+ — New Repub 98:255 Ap 5 '39 800w

Reviewed by M. T. Florinsky
N Y Times p16 Mr 19 '39 1050w
New Yorker 15:84 F 18 '39 40w
Pratt p28 summer '39

"An excellent book, and one which should be on the reading list of all interested in contemporary politics. The author, though disillusioned, is not stirred up to the emotional excitement that makes so much of the work of such enemies of revolution as Mr. E. D. Martin or Mr. Sorokin mere muddied anger. The book is clear and readable. Unfamiliar names and allusions are explained, not just paraded, and the windings of socialist theory, both orthodox and heretical, clearly charted—though not, one suspects, in a way acceptable to very many actual Marxists. The essay on Stalin will infuriate adherents of the present regime in Russia, but that is probably what the author wished to do." Crane Brinton
+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 18 '39 600w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p487 Ag 19 '39 700w

NORBERG, MRS. INGA. Good food from Sweden. 192p $1.75 Barrows

641.5 Cookery, Swedish 39-14427

Collection of three hundred recipes for Swedish dishes, including the smörgåsbord. Index.

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

"Mrs. Norberg has done a real service to her country by not overemphasizing that tiresome and much publicized smorgasbord, which foreigners are apt to think is all there is to Swedish cooking. The smorgasbord dishes are there all right, as they should be, but so are quantities of recipes for homely, old-fashioned specialties, as well as for the more elaborate cooking for which the Swedes are famous." Sheila Hibben
+ Books p8 Jl 16 '39 140w
J Home Econ 31:482 S '39 70w

NORCROSS, CARL. Getting a job in aviation. 374p il $2.50 McGraw 629.13 Aeronautics. Occupations

(W) 38-24919

Gives practical advice to aspirants for jobs in the various aviation fields, private, commercial and government. There are two chapters on aeronautical engineering, three on training, and an appendix giving government ratings for pilots, mechanics, parachute riggers, control tower operators, dispatchers, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:77 N 1 '38
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 N '38
N Y New Tech Bks 23:51 O '38
Pratt p33 summer '39

NORRIS, DOROTHY MAY. A history of cataloguing and cataloguing methods, 1100-1850: with an introductory survey of ancient times; with a foreword by H. M. Cashmore. 246p 10s 6d Grafton & co. [English publication]

025.3 Cataloging—History

In her preface the author states: "this is not a history, but a survey of the methods used for compiling lists of books. In some instances these methods are very similar, and in some at great variance; my method has been to work through each century giving examples and descriptions of representative catalogues. . . The catalogues fall naturally into four groups:—1 Ancient catalogues, to A.D. 1100. . . 2 Mediaeval monastic catalogues, 1100-1400. . . 3 Collegiate catalogues, 1400-1700. 4 Catalogues from 1700 onwards." Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"The title of this work is somewhat misleading. The book is not, as one would infer, a general history of the subject. It deals almost exclusively with English catalogs and cataloging methods. . . The work will be of value chiefly to those who desire information concerning early English catalogs, particularly the catalogs of the monastic and school libraries. It presents in a clear and convenient form descriptions, examples, and illustrations with historical data from a great many early catalogs which the student could consult only by referring to many sources and at much expenditure of time and labor." J. C. M. Hanson
+ — Library Q 10:115 Ja '40 450w

"Miss Norris has brought together extracts from a considerable number of early library catalogues, and so far has performed a useful task; but her comments on these extracts are rather superficial and devoid of any systematically comparative treatment. Nor does Miss Norris appear to have carried her researches very far."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p460 Jl 29 '39 200w

NORRIS, HERBERT. Costume and fashion; 6v; v 3, The Tudors [1485-1603] il. in colour and black and white by the author. 2bks 377;383-832p $16 Dutton [63s Dent]

391 Fashion. Costume

Volume one of this work (Book Review Digest, 1925) covered the evolution of European dress thru the earlier ages; volume two (Book Review Digest, 1927) from 1066 to 1485; volume six, published out of turn in 1933, (Book Review Digest, 1934) covered the nineteenth century. The present volume, in two parts, covers the Tudor period, 1485 to 1603. Indexes at end of book two.

"These books are, in the main, worthy of the glittering, tumultuous epoch they represent, the more so as it would appear that virtually every detail of interest is described and illustrated. . . Much of the interest of these two books is due to the historical notes." F. S.-S.
Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 20 '39 330w

"[Mr Norris'] book is a mine of information upon chopines, aiglettes, and the fantastic elaborate fashions favoured by Queen Elizabeth and the hardly less queenly Henri III. The illustrations, taken from contemporary sources, are more informative than elegant. . . The book is littered with fascinating facts about the human passion for self-adornment."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:1066 D 17 '38 220w
New Yorker 14:59 Ja 28 '39 40w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:232 Mr '39 550w

"Few costume books can have been more eagerly awaited than Mr. Norris's volume on the Tudor period; but even so it exceeds expectation. . . It is a book for the enthusiast, not for those who are in a hurry to assimilate an irreducible minimum of fact. It abounds, even as the age with which it deals; there are 802 pages of text and black-and-white illustrations, and 46 plates in colour and half-tone. It is a great advantage to the student of limited opportunities to have so much of the famous and of the less well-known portraiture of the age either carefully re-drawn or actually reproduced."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p13 Ja 7 '39 550w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Lost sunrise. 339p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-30540

Story of two sisters whose lives and marriages were closely intertwined. The scene is laid partly in California, partly in Washington, D.C.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 O 15 '39 360w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN—Continued

"Mrs. Norris's characters are not dazzling heroic types. They are just the quiet, ordinary kind of folks that live next door to the reader. They are people that are meeting the same sort of problems with which he is faced. That is why he likes to read about them."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 130w

Cath World 150:369 D '39 210w

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 3 '40 370w

" 'Lost Sunrise' is good woman's magazine romance rather tinged with melodrama. For the reader who is unable to see eye to eye with Gwen and Mrs. Norris on questions relating to marriage and divorce it necessarily loses some of its cogency." M. W.

N Y Times p29 O 15 '39 500w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). The runaway. 344p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Murray, J]

39-11256

Instead of marrying the home town man she was expected to, Rebecca went to San Francisco and married a comparative stranger, who turned out to be a shiftless husband. The story is of Rebecca's fight to avoid divorce, even when a better man appeared.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 Ap 9 '39 270w

"Armies of Norris fans will find little to disappoint them in this exceptionally intense and emotional story."

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 60w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 6 '39 550w

"As fine a melodramatic plot solution as even Mrs. Norris has accomplished in a long while . . . but probably very few of Mrs. Norris's readers will want their money back on this account." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 9 '39 550w

"The artificial outlines of the story do not prevent the warmth of Mrs. Norris's feeling for people, her uncanny rightness with domestic detail, and her appetite for life in general, from making the novel bright with the momentary actuality which has given her work popularity with the very types of whom she writes." G. G.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p301 My 20 '39 80w

NORTH, CHARLES. Beware of the dog! 278p $2 Morrow

39-30371

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 O 22 '39 130w

Boston Transcript p2 O 28 '39 60w

"There is not much mystery in this story, and what there is has to do with minor details rather than with the main plot, but there is carnage galore, and there are thrills on every page." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 O 29 '39 160w

New Yorker 15:104 O 14 '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 50w

NORTH, ERIC MCCOY, ed. The book of a thousand tongues; pub. for the Am. Bible society. 386p il $2.50 Harper

220.5 Bible. Whole—Versions. Printing—Specimens 39-27093

"Being some account of the translation and publication of all or part of the Holy Scriptures into more than a thousand languages and dialects with over 1100 examples from the text." (Subtitle) The languages are arranged alphabetically with a sample translation showing how the Bible looks in that particular tongue. Indexes.

Booklist 35:217 Mr 1 '39

"The magnitude of the work done by the Bible societies is impressively exhibited in this truly magnificent volume, edited by the general secretary of the American Bible Society. It is, in fact, an encyclopedia of biblical translations."

+ Christian Century 56:123 Ja 25 '39 100w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 1 '39 180w

"This is a truly remarkable and important book for the student of the history of the Bible." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr 1 '39 130w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat

Crozer Q 16:157 Ap '39 60w

"Although scholarly in its thoroughness, the book contains human interest features that relieve the aridity usually associated with bibliography in the lay mind. . . 'The Book of a Thousand Tongues' stands out as the most comprehensive bibliography of translations of the Bible as well as a rarely interesting history of them." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p25 F 5 '39 1050w

NORTH, STERLING. Seven against the years. 326p $2.50 Macmillan

39-25702

This novel, partly autobiographical, follows the careers of seven members of the class of 1929 at the University of Chicago, during the ten years that followed their graduation day.

"The tale's a little too collegiate in spirit. The boys just don't seem to grow any older under Mr. North's touch. They continue to talk as though they were happily enjoying the bull sessions of bright college years—through all sorts of action in the fell clutch of circumstance." F. T. Marsh

Books p11 O 22 '39 550w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

Boston Transcript p13 O 20 '39 750w

Reviewed by Johanna Doniat

Commonweal 31:168 D 8 '39 280w

Nation 149:474 O 28 '39 90w

"Sterling North's novel . . . is an uneven book. When it is good it's very good and when it is bad it is only a little less good. The entire work is leavened with good humor and acid paradoxes. The university alumni may also get a nostalgic afterglow from the author's accurate memory of the ivied gothic and the faces. Distinctly, this is Sterling North's best production." Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p7 O 22 '39 700w

"Sterling North has had the courage and the craftsmanship to master admirably, in his new novel, a theme which must have tempted and intimidated the imagination of many a writer. . . He has explored chaos in Chicago with an intimate knowledge of its details, with a sense of drama, and with engaging wit." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 21:13 N 11 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

NORTHRIDGE, WILLIAM LOVELL. Health for mind and spirit [Eng title: Psychology and pastoral practice]. 200p $2 Abingdon [5s Epworth]

258 Psychology, Religious. Psychology, Pathological. Pastoral work 39-9779

A book for Protestant ministers explaining the fundamentals of mental disturbances and psychoanalysis and pointing out ways in which the minister can help those who come to him in distress.

"Plainly, here is a sensible and good man who ought to have a constant clinic as an adjunct of a large church. What uses he makes of familiar religious ideas are legitimate, and any minister or teacher will get straight instruction for application in all sorts of cases. Religion is sanely set out as an 'integrating ideal' and a 'dynamic for life,' and these words of the author are signs of the change in religious language and belief." A. C. Dieffenbach

\+ Books p16 Mr 5 '39 170w

"One might reasonably have expected a useful discussion of the manner in which religion functions in aiding the individual to achieve 'health of mind and spirit' in a book written by a clergyman-psychologist for ministers, but such a discussion is almost totally lacking. The book is mainly psychology of the Freudian type and the usefulness of religion is merely asserted."

Christian Century 56:290 Mr 1 '39 150w

"Dr. Northridge's admirably written manual aims to increase intelligent cooperation between the Christian ministry and the medical profession. As a very clear statement of and description of the major psychoses and various psychoneurotic conditions met with in pastoral and medical practice, it will prove a splendid handbook for divinity students and parish priests. We regret that its limited compass does not admit of the freer use of specific examples and illustrative case histories." W. H. Jefferys, M.D.

\+ — Churchman 153:18 My 1 '39 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 17 '38 70w

NORTHROP, JOHN HOWARD. Crystalline enzymes; the chemistry of pepsin, trypsin, and bacteriophage. 176p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

612.0151 Enzymes. Pepsin. Trypsin. Bacteriophage 39-12782

"The present monograph is based on the Jesup Lectures given at Columbia University in the spring of 1938. It contains the results of a series of investigations on the isolation and chemistry of bacteriophage and the proteolytic enzymes carried out in the writer's laboratory. Bacteriophage has not been crystallized and may not be an enzyme, but the results of the experiments with bacteriophage are essentially similar to those obtained with the enzymes and are, therefore, included in the present volume." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Hans Zinsser

Am Chem Soc J 61:2571 S '39 1350w

Chem & Met Eng 46:492 Ag '39 100w

Reviewed by A. K. Balls

Ind & Eng Chem 17:690 N 10 '39 300w

NORTHROP, MILDRED BENEDICT. Control policies of the Reichsbank, 1924-1933. 405p $4 Columbia univ. press [18s King]

332.11 Germany. Reichsbank, Berlin. Banks and banking—Germany. Germany—Economic conditions 38-22998

Study of the policies of the Reichsbank during the decade from its reconstitution under the Dawes plan to its change under National Socialism. Part one "deals with the background of central bank control in Germany from 1924 to 1933. . . Part two is a critical analysis of the control techniques of the Reichsbank." Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Northrop has written the history of this epoch not only with a broad knowledge of the peculiarities of German banking technique, but also with a full understanding of the rôle played by the Reichsbank in the economic history of the country. . . This is a very sober volume, but skilled craftsmanship is evident throughout." H. S. Ellis

\+ Am Econ R 29:405 Je '39 500w

"Not only are the results of Miss Northrop's investigation interesting and well presented, but they constitute a valuable addition to the literature relating to central banks." R. A. Young

\+ Ann Am Acad 205:189 S '39 320w

Foreign Affairs 17:636 Ap '39

"Since the book is unique in its field, it is unfortunate that it is not authoritative. Its lack of authority may be illustrated by analysis and by comparison with the documents which are cited. . . The value of the book lies in its suggestions to those who are familiar with the documentary materials." K. R. Bopp

— + J Pol Econ 47:587 Ag '39 500w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Ordeal. [Eng title: What happened to the Corbetts]. 280p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Heinemann]

(W) 39-2932

Unexpected and unseen planes drop bombs on several large English cities on cloudy nights. Peter Corbett and his wife Joan are among those whose lives are completely changed, due to the outrage. Driven out of their home in Southampton they take refuge on their houseboat, but even here they are not safe. With Joan and the children placed on a ship sailing for Canada, Peter goes to offer himself to the State.

Booklist 35:252 Ap 1 '39

"It is not hysterical, feverish or high-keyed. It is not an argument, or a wild beacon of alarm. It is a novel: a story, told with straightforwardness, moderation, and above all complete probability, of human beings who are as like as two peas to you and me, and who do not live in the remote horrors of China and Spain, the forsaken and helpless surrender of Czechoslovakia and Austria, but in the proud isolation of England's green and pleasant land." John Patton

Books p7 Mr 26 '39 750w

Cath World 149:381 Je '39 70w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 20 '39 480w

"The story reads well, it is exciting, it is plausible and, if it seems to leave off in the middle, that is also a compliment to Mr. Shute's skill in imaginative veracity." Norah Hoult

\+ New Repub 98:386 My 3 '39 360w

"There are no hysterical histrionics anywhere in the writing of the novel, though Corbett's anguish to decide whether his duty is first to the family or to the State could be more dramatically shown, and the children, perhaps, could scream a little louder without spoiling Mr. Shute's fine detachment from the scene; his story is told, you would say, through clenched teeth to keep his emotions in." Hassoldt Davis

N Y Times p4 Mr 26 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:86 Mr 25 '39 40w

"Granted his subject, it would have been easy for Mr. Shute to write a highly exciting and affecting story. He has chosen instead to write one that is simply credible and absorbing. He has held his imagination on a short rein and eschewed dramatic effects no less than horror. While avoiding sensationalism, he has also avoided many sensations that would seem proper to his narrative. He has never raised his voice above the level of the calm, factual reporter. . . In 'Ordeal,' Mr. Shute has written the story of all Joans and Peters; written it with complete success, according to the pattern of his intention. Readers who ask for more power and more passion, for the shrill scream of horror and the ache of tragedy, will be asking for something he did not mean to give." B. R. Redman

\+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Mr 25 '39 1100w

Time 33:73 Mr 27 '39 420w

"The first half of the book is the more interesting. Mr. Shute not only possesses a very clear idea of what may be the things to come, but a style of first-class competence to convey his ideas to us. He writes quite objectively about the occurrences and the behaviour of his characters, and there is throughout a resemblance to Mr. Wells's earlier scientific novels. . . This novel is both exciting and provocative."

NORWAY, N. S.—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 18 '39 260w

NOYES, ALFRED. Orchard's bay. 322p $2.50 (8s 6d) Sheed
824 Gardens. Nature in literature 39-31161
Essays and poems on a variety of subjects, but all with the author's garden on the Isle of Wight as the point of departure.

"This is an unusual and most delightful book. . . It contains the largest group of lyrics he has published since 1924, though nominally a book of essays. The poems are even more pleasant than the essays, and reveal a versatility of form and manner that is not found in his earlier poetry." Mason Wade
+ Books p2 N 19 '39 400w

"This book would make good reading at any time, but at this time, with the world apparently tumbling about our ears, it provides reading of surpassing excellence. . . If the worst befall and our civilization perish, a single copy of Orchard's Bay would preserve an authentic image of imperishable things that might well constitute a revelation to the new barbarians." B. M. K.
+ Cath World 150:500 Ja '40 850w

"It has the full body of a unique wine; you take a chapter of it and luxuriate and, paradoxically, you find the next chapter equally rare and yet mysteriously quite different. It is definitely a book for the wine cellar and the connoisseur. In other words, no library of an educated American should be without it. For others—well, it is 'caviare to the general.'" W. J. Grace
+ Commonweal 31:170 D 8 '39 360w

"Here . . . is a book in which a genial, beauty-loving, well-stored, well-ordered mind has relaxed and expanded, and it should bring comfort and release to many." B. S.
+ Manchester Guardian sup xvi D 1 '39 250w

"In prose and poetry, this is a rich little book."
+ N Y Times p22 N 26 '39 480w

Reviewed by Graham Greene
— Spec 163:754 N 24 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p588 O 14 '39 850w

NUSSBAUM, ARTHUR. Money in the law. 534p $7.50 Foundation press
332.4 Money 39-10222
"As the title of the volume indicates, Professor Nussbaum approaches the problem from the legal point of view. The work embodies the results of fifteen years' study, which have appeared from time to time in legal journals and books both here and abroad. The first third of the volume considers usual topics such as the conception of money, the kinds of money and the monetary system. The remaining two-thirds of the work deals with the status of debts under fluctuating currencies and exchange control, as well as the efforts of creditors to protect themselves against loss." Am Econ R

Reviewed by W. H. Steiner
Am Econ R 29:618 S '39 500w

"Professor Nussbaum has accomplished a very difficult task in an efficient scholarly, and readable manner. The history of the legal concepts involved in money transactions and the discussion of the various monetary systems are exceptionally well handled. But the development of the American monetary system calls for special comment; for in this section, Professor Nussbaum gives both a comprehensive and clear explanation of the legal development of the monetary structure of the United States." E. P. Allen
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:730 Ag '39 350w

"Mr. Nussbaum's book exhibits an unusual erudition and it is extraordinarily stimulating. Any legal scholar or practicing lawyer who has to deal with the many legal problems relating to money will find Mr. Nussbaum's book indispensable and of invaluable assistance." Friedrich Kessler
+ Columbia Law R 40:175 Ja '40 2550w

"Money in the Law is not for use as a primer or hornbook. As to many of the author's conclusions, the reader will rightly reserve judgment. But no one interested in the functioning of the judicial process in fields of economic and national policy and no one called upon to advise clients caught in the cross currents of monetary realignment can afford not to avail himself of this excellent product of Professor Nussbaum's long research and thoughtful analysis." J. G. Laylin
+ — Harvard Law R 53:515 Ja '40 1050w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1939; sel. and ed. by Harry Hansen. 288p $2.50 Doubleday (21-9372)
Contents: Barn burning, by William Faulkner; Bat flight, by James Still; Calves, by D. C. DeJong; Keeley street blues, by Dorothy Baker; Anschluss, by Kay Boyle; The pump, by Millen Brand; The fawn, by Struthers Burt; The people vs. Abe Lathan, colored, by Erskine Caldwell; Nothing can change it, by Charles Cooke; Gideon, by J. O'K. Foster; Frankie and Thomas and Bud Asbury, by Caroline Gordon; A knocking at the gate, by Ellis St Joseph; God on Friday night, by Irwin Shaw; Silver virgin, by Benedict Thielen; Petrified man, by Eudora Welty.

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39
Reviewed by Muriel Chatain
Books p22 D 10 '39 750w

"This is an uncommonly fine collection. . . Of 15 stories, eight are nearly splendid, and most of the remaining seven only slightly less than that. Surely this is a high rate of excellence for any collection." Mark Schorer
+ Boston Transcript p1 D 2 '39 370w
New Repub 101:149 N 22 '39 30w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p7 N 19 '39 650w
New Yorker 15:117 D 2 '39 50w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 5 '39 450w

OAKESHOTT, MICHAEL JOSEPH, ed. The social and political doctrines of contemporary Europe; with a foreword by Ernest Barker. 224p $3.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]
320.1 Political science. Sociology [39-18300]
This volume contains a collection of documents and excerpts from longer writings which explain the main tenets of the political and social creeds existing in Europe today: Representative democracy, Catholicism, Communism, Fascism, and National socialism.

Reviewed by Walter Sandelius
Am Pol Sci R 33:932 O '39 350w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Am Soc R 4:737 O '39 200w

"Strange to say, the main value of the work is not in the selections offered. . . We are really more appreciative of the author's excellent Introduction to his volume, which is a splendid survey of the operation of political philosophies and a good evaluation of their contents. . . Hence we can also accept the rest of the study, although it ought to be noted also that the book lists at the end of each chapter are simply atrocious." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 204:187 Jl '39 700w

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin
Commonweal 30:191 Je 9 '39 300w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:5 Ap '39 230w

Foreign Affairs 18:159 O '39 10w

"The weakest part is the first, and no doubt it was the most difficult to bring into the plan of his book. Mr. Oakeshott would have done well to make more use of L. T. Hobhouse's 'Liberalism' which still stands as the classical exposition of the development of the later Liberalism from its earlier and narrower outlook. But in general the book serves his purpose, which is to let the founders and teachers of these different schools speak for themselves, and his own comments are instructive and illuminating." J. L. Hammond

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 25 '39 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 149:299 S 16 '39 300w

New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Ap 1 '39 160w

OBERING, WILLIAM F. The philosophy of law of James Wilson, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme court, 1789-1798; a study in comparative jurisprudence. 276p pa $1.50 Am. Catholic philosophical assn, C. A. Hart, sec, Catholic univ. of Am, box 176, Washington, D.C.

340.1 Wilson, James. Law—Philosophy

"This volume is not an exposition of Justice Wilson's philosophy in its immediate historical setting (except the two chapters on Wilson's defense of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution) and it ignores almost completely the Platonism of the Edinburgh school of jurisprudence from which he came. The work has two aims: first, to distinguish the true from the false in Wilson's philosophy by comparison with the teachings of Thomas Aquinas and the Jesuit classics; secondly, to lay the foundations of an American philosophy of law." J Philos

"Dr. Obering's book is a summary of Catholic doctrine in the form of commentary on and occasional criticism of Wilson's lectures and other writing on law. The similarities are emphasized and occasional differences noted. To the non-Catholic, the occasional attacks on those not in the great tradition have a familiar sound. For the most part, however, the treatment is thoughtful and helpful." Malcolm Sharp

+ — Ethics 29:223 Ja '39 750w

Reviewed by B. F. Wright, Jr.
Harvard Law R 52:709 F '39 500w

J Philos 35:531 S 15 '38 110w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON, ed. The best British short stories, 1939, and the Yearbook of the British and Irish short story. 296p $2.50 Houghton

(22-23919)

Contents: The necessity of invention, by A. J. Alan; Allow me to suggest, by Martin Armstrong; The ox, by H. E. Bates; In the midst of death we live, by Ralph Bates; Poaching isn't theft, by T. O. Beachcroft; Number 16, by Elizabeth Bowen; The man in the mackintosh, by Gerald Bullett; Sleeping beauty, by John Collier; Resurrection, by Rhys Davies; The guardian, by Walter De La Mare; The lost land, by Geraint Goodwin; A summer night, by G. F. Green; An impossible child, by Leslie Halward; Beyond the horizon, by James Hanley; Mountain madness, by H. T. Hopkinson; An Irishman and a Jew, by Geoffrey Household; Children, by Daniel Kalicstein; 'Getcheta,' by A. W. H. Macdonald; Seven miles to Godwhim, by H. A. Manhood; Wrong turning, by Campbell Nairne; Mac's masterpiece, by Frank O'Connor; Galway bay, by Liam O'Flaherty; Pocock passes, by V. S. Pritchett; Bare feet, by John Raynor; Deus ex machina, by Stephen Spender; At the barber's, by L. A. G. Strong; She wanted a piano, by T. Thompson; The murderer, by Robert Westerby; Time for chapel, by Malachi Whitaker; Gala night, by Winifred Williams.

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Theodore English
Books p8 O 1 '39 450w

"No doubt Mr. O'Brien has chosen the best stories he could find. The trouble seems to be that British prose fiction is in a slump. Strong, original voices are lacking. And perhaps there is something significant in the fact that two of the best stories in the volume—Ralph Bates's 'In the Midst of Death We Live' and Geoffrey Household's 'An Irishman and a Jew'—appeared in American magazines." De Lancey Ferguson

Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 180w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 28 '39 600w

Reviewed by Thomas Moult
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 12 '40 330w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis
New Repub 100:316 O 18 '39 350w

Reviewed by T. C. Worsley
New Statesman & Nation 18:762 N 25 '39 70w

"Because there are a number of sketches, anecdotes, yarns in this latest collection of 'Best Short Stories' that may be read with enjoyment, this is one of Mr. O'Brien's more successful offerings." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 O 8 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:102 O 14 '39 50w

"Mr O'Brien has obviously done his usual exhaustive job of winnowing and selection. I do not agree with all of Mr. O'Brien's judgments but he has always been, if anything, even over-anxious to bring new writers of promise before the public. With the possible exception of Winifred Williams, whose 'Gala Night' shows certain abilities, he does not seem to have succeeded in doing so, in this collection. Perhaps they just weren't to be found." S. V. Benét

Sat R of Lit 20:24 O 14 '39 700w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 12 '39 600w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON, ed. The best short stories, 1939, and the Yearbook of the American short story. 464p $2.75 Houghton

(16-11387)

Contents: The blue sash, by Warren Beck; Vision in the sea, by Ronald Caldwell; It had to be done, by Morley Callaghan; Frère Jacques, by John Cheever; Indian on the road, by Gean Clark; Passing through, by R. M. Coates; Black troubadour, by D. L. Cohn; Corporal Hardy, by R. E. Danielson; The rat is a mouse, by Hal Ellson; Prelude, by Albert Halper; To the mountains, by Paul Horgan; True believer, by Madge Jenison; What is a miracle? by Manuel Komroff; Salutation to spring, by Meridel LeSueur; An arm upraised, by Alan MacDonald; The happiest man on earth, by Albert Maltz; Leviathan, by Ellis St Joseph; Piano, by William Saroyan; The girl from the river barge, by Walter Schoenstedt; Berkshire comedy, by Allan Seager; Bad boy from Brooklyn, by Michael Seide; Eustacia, by Jesse Stuart; The crazy guy, by Harry Sylvester; The thunderstorm, by Benedict Thielen; How Willie Proudfit came home, by R. P. Warren; A curtain of green, by Eudora Welty; Black Tobias and the empire, by Heinz Werner; The way the luck runs, by Ira Wolfert; The white camel, by Eugene Wright. Indexes.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39

O'BRIEN, E. J. H., ed.—Continued
Reviewed by J. H. Friend
Books p6 Je 11 '39 600w
Christian Science Monitor p18 My 31 '39 650w
New Repub 99:344 Jl 26 '39 60w
Reviewed by T. C. Worsley
New Statesman & Nation 18:762 N 25 '39 70w

"The collection as a whole, if somber, has a good deal of juice and life in it. As usual, it is indispensable for those who are interested in the short story." E. A. Walton
+ N Y Times p6 Je 4 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:87 Je 3 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 18 '39 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p683 N 25 '39 900w
Wis Lib Bul 35:146 Jl '39

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON, ed. 50 best American short stories, 1915-1939. 868p $3 Houghton

(W) 39-27590

Contents: The yellow cat, by W. D. Steele; The lost Phoebe, by Theodore Dreiser; The Menorah, by Benjamin Rosenblatt; Onnie, by Thomas Beer; Boys will be boys, by I. S. Cobb; The Meeker ritual, by Joseph Hergesheimer; Turkey red, by F. G. Wood; Fanutza, by Konrad Bercovici; My old man, by Ernest Hemingway; Four generations, by Ruth Suckow; The return, by Sherwood Anderson; An army with banners, by K. F. Gerould; Haircut, by R. W. Lardner; The half-pint flask, by DuBose Heyward; North is black, by Oliver La Farge; Good morning, Major, by J. P. Marquand; A telephone call, by Dorothy Parker; Double birthday, by Willa Cather; Death of Red Peril, by W. D. Edmonds; The faithful wife, by Morley Callaghan; The little wife, by William March; Rest cure, by Kay Boyle; That evening sun, by William Faulkner; Babylon revisited, by F. S. Fitzgerald; One with Shakespeare, by Martha Foley; A pretty cute little stunt, by George Milburn; Sherrel, by Whit Burnett; Napoleon's hat under glass, by Manuel Komroff; The shepherd of the Lord, by Peter Neagoe; Fame takes the J car, by George Albee; Helen, I love you, by J. T. Farrell; Ike and us Moons, by Naomi Shumway; Horse thief, by Erskine Caldwell; Winter, by Dorothy M'Cleary; Death and transfiguration, by Alan Marshall; Outside Yuma, by Benjamin Appel; The overcoat, by Sally Benson; Resurrection of a life, by William Saroyan; This town and Salamanca, by Allan Seager; Man on a road, by Albert Maltz; A life in the day of a writer, by Tess Slesinger; American nocturne, by Robert Whitehand; Only the dead know Brooklyn, by Thomas Wolfe; Marching orders, by I. V. Morris; Hair, by Jesse Stuart; The iron city, by Lovell Thompson; Christ in concrete, by Pietro di Donato; The chrysanthemums, by John Steinbeck; Corporal Hardy, by R. E. Danielson; Bright and morning star, by Richard Wright.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39

"The volume is not only a much-needed aid to orientation, but also contains excellent reading." K. W. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 15 '39 600w

"For those who can agree with Mr. O'Brien that Hemingway and Anderson brought the American short story far along the road to maturity and that the foundation of Story Magazine resulted in our short stories 'coming of age,' the second half of this anthology may be satisfactory. But those who reject Mr. O'Brien's conception of the importance of Story will find it difficult to accept this anthology as made of the fifty 'best' American stories of twenty-five years." Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p2 Jl 9 '39 1000w
New Yorker 15:67 Jl 1 '39 40w
Pratt p29 autumn '39

"It is not the fifty best American short stories—for you cannot pick one story by each of fifty different authors and make them all equal. But it does present a cross section of the rich and varied field of the American short story during the past quarter century. And, looking it over, we have every reason to be proud of the achievement." S. V. Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 Jl 8 '39 800w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 2 '39 550w
Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY, ed. Catholics and scholarship; a symposium on the development of scholars; with a pref. by John T. McNicholas, and an introd. by Hugh C. Boyle. 256p $2.50 Our Sunday visitor, Huntington, Ind.

377.82 Roman Catholic church—Education. Learning and scholarship 39-13452

This "symposium on the development of scholars" contains twenty articles by various hands grouped under the headings: The present situation: an open forum; The development of natural scientists: research workers speak; Eminence in the social sciences: social scientists speak; Constructive measures for scholarship: educators speak; The prospect for Catholic literature: literateurs speak. Index.

Reviewed by Henry Watts
America 60:550 Mr 11 '39 180w
Cath World 150:253 N '39 170w

O'CASEY, SEAN. I knock at the door; swift glances back at things that made me. 269p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-18601

In the third person the author of Juno and the Paycock tells the story of his own early life in the slums of North Dublin.

Booklist 36:7 S '39

"If 'The Silver Tassie' is the greatest play so far written in this country, as I believe it is, the autobiography which begins with 'I Knock at the Door' will surely be one of the great modern works of its class. The writing, in which Hibernicisms are freely employed, is, except for one blank verse passage and one among the several Joycean passages, tremendous; the writing of a man who has the racy Irish version of English firmly under bit and snaffle. A book to be read by every student of the drama, every student of Irish affairs, every student of social phenomena, every savorer of great literature." Shaemas O'Sheel
+ Books p5 Jl 23 '39 1200w

"The weakness of the autobiography lies in two limitations—that the book is too reportorial, with little or no evaluation of the experience it involves; and that, as the story, always interesting and sometimes moving, progresses, one gets little sense of an accumulating personality, of character in the process of growth." Ruth Page
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 320w
Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey
Canadian Forum 19:127 Jl '39 230w
Cath World 150:114 O '39 330w
Christian Century 56:880 Jl 12 '39 20w

"This book lives close to the sights and accents of the poor streets of North Dublin—it was Dr. Gogarty, I think, who called the whole of Dublin a smoking Georgian slum by the sea—and this is the book's enormous merit and originality. The street is a place of public argument and procession, and I don't know a book which comes down closer to a child's sensations of these things." V. S. Pritchett
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 15 '39 350w

"To that sad gallery of letters which holds the world's portraiture of pain there is now added the canvas of a master. Call it, if you like, 'The Boy with Sore Eyes, Self-Portrait.'

It is superb in its vision of tortured frustration. But it must not be thought that this is a book of lamentation and whining over illluck. It is humorous, valiant, sardonic, freespoken. Above all, it is a magnificent tribute to a mother." Ivor Brown

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '39 550w

New Repub 100:56 Ag 16 '39 40w

"Verbal finery, in the shabbiest of surroundings, is typical of the book, and indeed of Ireland as a whole. If Mr. O'Casey had been content to let his characters speak, instead of giving tongue himself, too, to a stream of consciousness rich with brogue, I believe his book would have been better. Facts and authentic voices count for a lot in autobiography; in no other kind of writing is it more dangerous for the author to 'shape' in a literary way. I Knock at the Door is remarkable enough to survive its defects. It seems to me far the best thing Mr. O'Casey has done for years." G. W. Stonier

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:396 Mr 11 '39 600w

"Too much of the writing is bathed in an almost frivolous mood of cynical satire. He is much too fond of the flowers of rhetoric. All through the book runs an unfortunate note of self-pity which self-criticism should have expunged. This self-pity, however, is corrected by an accompanying objectivity. O'Casey has divided himself in attitude. Johnny is very sorry for himself. O'Casey is detached. But how easily we forget these faults in the glow, warmth and rich savor of the writing! This book proves again what a greatly gifted dramatist O'Casey is. . . In this story of Johnny, O'Casey has done what so far as I know no Irish writer has done before him. He has given us a full and passionately felt picture of Irish Protestantism, revealed just how and to what degree it can mark the mind of the young." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 23 '39 1100w

"It is all very simple, and once in a while it is dull. But in it, O'Casey has caught a child's peculiar quickwittedness and acumen, his mysterious humor and inscrutable melancholy, his prescience that a world offered to him by grown-ups as square is really round. All this would be less rewarding than it is had not O'Casey the Irishman's charm of style, that ability—without being flatulent or fancy—to infuse something into his prose that gives it willowiness and odor and light." Louis Kronenberger

New Yorker 15:73 Jl 22 '39 700w

Pratt p22 winter '40

"If the first twelve years had been covered in a few chapters and the autobiography had been brought up to the time of the Easter Insurrection, that would have made a stronger first volume of a work which, as it is, promises to be one of the richest of its kind." Ernest Boyd

Sat R of Lit 20:6 Jl 29 '39 700w

"Some of the passages in this book in which he describes how—against such odds—blindness was combated are almost too painful to read. There are as well several objective passages—one, in particular, describing a fight between schoolboys, another about a Jewish windowmender—which are perfect in their kind. A minority of pages, composed in a rhapsodical mixture of prose and verse, is merely embarrassing. The effect of the book as a whole is despite them, highly impressive." D. H. V.

+ Spec 162:362 Mr 3 '39 150w

"Mr. O'Casey has written a brave and tender story of mother love and of the shaping of his own youth." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 30 '39 1200w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts Mo 23:611 Ag '39 600w

Time 34:64 Jl 24 '39 60w

"Despite its underlying seriousness and moods of self-pity, Mr. O'Casey's myriorama of Victorian Dublin moves with a gusto and exuberance which bring us back to his first plays. Borrowing the method which Joyce and others have made popular, he plunges into the double stream of consciousness and Rabelaisian vernacular. But there is a lyric race in his rhythms which is entirely his own."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p131 Mr 4 '39 700w

"This is an experiment in autobiography, and, it seems to me, an interesting and successful experiment." Padraic Colum

+ Yale R n s 29:182 autumn '39 750w

O'CONNOR, FRANK, tr. The fountain of magic [poems]. 85p $1.50 (4s 6d) Macmillan

891.62 Irish poetry—Translations into English [39-21897]

Translations from Irish poems, ranging from the earliest "nature" poems to folk songs of Connaught. All of the poems were selected by W. B. Yeats.

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

Books p7 Ag 6 '39 200w

"Mr. O'Connor's translations are superb. More literal than those of Mangan and James Stephens, for instance, they combine respect for the original with poetic feeling. . . Mr. O'Connor measures his powers against the finest of the translations and adaptations from the Irish, and comes off creditably." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 17 '39 450w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 14 '39 210w

New Yorker 15:100 My 27 '39 30w

"As one reads through the Fountain of Magic one is at first likely to feel somewhat of an outsider; it is all so personal, local, traditional, allusive, unannotatable. But very soon the door opens a little, and by the end one is sitting by the hearth, and a warmth, not of the fire, is entering the blood. Here is a whole culture summed up in some fifty translations as near perfect as we are ever likely to get." Seán O'Faoláin

Spec 162:416 Mr 10 '39 240w

"Mr. O'Connor lacks a sense of rhythm and this becomes apparent in his versions of simple folk song. But in the satires and proverbial folk pieces, whose direct and plain speech are telling, he succeeds best, and many of the gnomic quatrains are excellent."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 18 '39 160w

ODEGARD, PETER H., and HELMS, ELVA ALLEN. American politics; a study in political dynamics. 882p il maps $3.50 Harper

329 Politics, Practical. U.S.—Politics and government. Political parties (W) 38-25896

This study in "political dynamics" is a realistic analysis of party politics as practised in America. Parties, pressure groups, bosses and machines are shown in action, and party organization, conventions and primaries, elections and election laws as they actually function. Index.

"The style in which this book is written is as dynamic as its title. After the dry-as-dust textual manner, the vocabulary here seems all the more aggressive. In spite of an unvaried sentence pattern, there is a flair for figures of speech and irresistible quotations. . . If there is no new thing under the sun, there are new combinations and interpretations which the imaginative scholar can make." A. W. Bromage

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:108 F '39 650w

"One of the best expositions of the political process now extant among textbooks. . . The book should contribute much toward making the student and general reader aware of the all-pervading manipulative character of politics." Harvey Pinney

+ Am Soc R 4:124 F '39 380w

ODEGARD, P. H., and HELMS, E. A.—Cont.
Reviewed by J. J. George
Ann Am Acad 203:222 My '39 270w
Booklist 35:127 D 15 '38

"Written with vigor and freshness, this book contains a vast treasure of valuable contemporary political data which will appeal to both scholar and layman. Though designed to serve as a textbook for college students, it will provide the secondary school teacher with an invaluable reference." J. W. Miller
+ Social Educ 3:284 Ap '39 550w

ODELL, GEORGE CLINTON DENSMORE. Annals of the New York stage; v 11 [1879-1882]. 758p il $8.75 Columbia univ. press [45s Oxford]
792 Theater—New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Social life and customs (27-5965)

Volume eleven of this history of the New York stage covers the years 1879 to 1882. Index. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1927, 1929, 1931, 1936, 1937, 1938.

"His text shows no weariness. He infuses the endless catalogue of productions with the same sparkle, the same enthusiasm, the same delightful bubbles of personal comment as in the other volumes. Indeed, the personal note is even more apparent, because he is moving into the era when he himself was young and a playgoer, and his record is filled with the names of plays and players which spark his memory." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p6 D 24 '39 850w
Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 150:53 Ja 13 '40 450w

"Invaluable to any student of the American theatre."
+ New Yorker 15:63 Ja 6 '40 20w

ODELL, RUTH. Helen Hunt Jackson (H. H.). 326p il $3 Appleton-Century
B or 92 Jackson, Mrs. Helen Maria (Fiske) Hunt (W) 39-27395

Full-length biography of the author of Ramona, describing her ancestry, education, travels at home and abroad, her work with the Indians, and her writings. The author, who is assistant professor of English in Nebraska university, bases her work on much original research. Among other traditions which she has refuted is the contention that H. H.'s first husband, Major Edward Bissell Hunt, was the hero of Emily Dickinson's love lyrics. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Bertha-Monica Stearns
Am Hist R 45:479 Ja '40 230w
Booklist 35:306 My 15 '39

"One cannot be other than grateful to Miss Odell for the orderly compilation of biographical fact and the sifting of legend and rumor that have gone into these painstaking pages. She has given us a scrupulously documented narrative of every phase of her subject's life, she has settled with apparent finality a number of annoyingly uncertain issues, she has faithfully performed innumerable chores that needed to be done, she has obeyed all the rules. Hers is a pioneer book, and as far as diligent research can go, it is beyond reproach. Historians of later nineteenth century American letters will bless her name. But, in sorrow be it said, this is not the kind of biography that Helen Hunt Jackson deserves. It is a flat-footed, unimaginative source-book, and nothing more." G. F. Whicher
+ — Books p6 My 28 '39 800w
Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 1100w

"As befits a first full-length biography, the emphasis is on fullness. Miss Odell has worked at her task for a long time, consulting members of the Jackson, Hunt, and Fiske families and survivors among Mrs Jackson's friends and literary associates, until, with notes and bibliography, the book becomes an impressive piece of documentation, though it does not run to an immoderate length. . . . Fortunately Miss Odell's style is easy enough and her tone light enough to keep the product of her research from being dull." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 21 '39 550w
New Repub 99:84 My 24 '39 30w

"A careful, painstaking and well-documented biography." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p2 My 7 '39 1000w

"The first full-length account of 'H. H.' to be written . . . is painstaking, earnest, and scholarly. As a reference volume, complete with bibliography and index, it is unquestionably useful and valuable. Unhappily it is also very dull reading indeed." J. H. Jackson
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Je 10 '39 320w

"A scholarly, competent and objective account of this literary star and colorful personality." E. G. Eastman
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 22 '39 1200w
Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

ODETS, CLIFFORD. Rocket to the moon; a romance in three acts. 245p $2 Random house
812 (W) 39-27045

The chief characters in this three act play are a dentist, not very successful; his wife, a nagger; and the young girl who acts as the dentist's secretary and assistant.

Booklist 35:202 F 15 '39
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p20 Ap 16 '39 120w

"It is tenderness that chiefly distinguishes the play. Odets has matured and broadened since he wrote 'Waiting for Lefty,' but the theater craft which he then demonstrated has not waned, and he shows even more his uncanny insight into people." T. H. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39
Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 97:173 D 14 '38 750w

"Mr. Odets has been better when he was getting tough about it: the good things of 'Rocket to the Moon' mainly are in the mouths of minor characters. As always, he has drawn them excellently." Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p18 F 26 '39 160w

" 'Rocket to the Moon' after a very brilliant first act lapses into some pretty freshman stuff. It has, of course, the unmistakable distinction of Odets's dialogue; it has some carefully observed characters, but it hasn't anything very much to say." John Anderson
— + Sat R of Lit 20:15 Ap 29 '39 110w
Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:309 Ap '39 30w

ODETS, CLIFFORD. Six plays; with a pref. by the author [and three introds. to individual plays by Harold Clurman]. 433p $2.50 Random house; 95c Modern lib.
812 (W) 39-27752

Contents: Waiting for Lefty; Awake and Sing! Till the Day I Die; Paradise Lost; Golden Boy; Rocket to the Moon.

Booklist 36:40 O 1 '39

"Most readers, I think, will find 'Waiting for Lefty' more exciting, 'Golden Boy' more entertaining, and 'Awake and Sing' both more touching and generally interesting than the 'Paradise' or the 'Rocket.' Mr. Odets seems to me best in handling characters whom he is willing to treat as definitely individual. When he tries to make them typical, he has a way of making them look like composite photographs, a little blurred, not quite real."

+ Books p21 S 17 '39 280w

Reviewed by L. S. Wellstone
Boston Transcript p3 O 14 '39 800w

ODLUM, MRS HORTENSE (MCQUARRIE). A woman's place. 286p $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 (W) 39-27876

Against a briefly sketched in background of her early life and marriage, Mrs Odlum tells the story of how and why she became president of a New York specialty store for women, and what she has accomplished in her years there. The book closes with chapters of advice to other women—on clothes, business, health, etc.

Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39

"Mrs. Odlum writes with ease and informality and with an engaging camaraderie. 'A Woman's Place' undoubtedly is a success story, but it is amazingly free of the faults of concentration on the ego usually found in this type of book. Its philosophy is one of optimism—she herself admits it verges on the Pollyanna school and succeeds thereby in disarming her critics—but evaluating what she has done, it has profound justification." Rose Feld
+ Books p2 O 8 '39 900w

"I am pretty hard-boiled about stores because I know something about two very big ones which employed me for a number of years, and though I do not in the least swallow the large shell of hokum around the very sound little kernel of sense in this book, I shopped in her store recently and can testify that it is the first time in several years that I have bought clothes without exasperation. Of course I am now waiting to see whether it's going to make my home life over." Ann Springer
Boston Transcript p13 O 27 '39 550w

"Mrs. Odlum has an inspiring and interesting story to tell; and her easy way of telling it makes one think it may be as attractive to women as is her Fifth Avenue emporium." M. H.
*+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 1 '39 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

Reviewed by Muriel Maurer
New Repub 101:120 N 15 '39 550w

"It is a readable and in its way a suggestive book. Mrs. Odlum not only traces the general outlines of her success but brings together a number of illuminating anecdotes from her store experience. And along with some pleasant generalizations on the importance of consideration and cooperation and friendly sympathy in storekeeping and living, she offers some particular advice about clothes which is smart in both senses of that word. This is an unusual kind of success story and should be really informative."
+ N Y Times p32 O 22 '39 420w

"Nicely written and full of what publishers call the feminine-reader angle."
+ New Yorker 15:103 O 14 '39 40w

"This book is rather stiffly written and dull in spots, but taken in relation to Miss Hamburger's book, and to the problem of a woman's place in life, it proves quite fascinating." Elizabeth Hawes
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:14 D 30 '39 450w

" 'A Woman's Place' would be more engaging if it were not so repetitive and the space thus saved were given to expanded information concerning the workings of a big store of this kind. Mrs Odlum's philosophies, radiating from the same theme, are interesting but are allowed to run too freely throughout the text. An autobiography of this type is delicate work, and Mrs Odlum has undoubtedly been handicapped by the desire to tell her story and yet not have the inevitable 'I' condemn her as a braggart. She should not have been handicapped."
Springf'd Republican p10 N 2 '39 500w
Wis Lib Bul 36:16 Ja '40

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON. American social problems; an introduction to the study of the people and their dilemmas. 549p il maps $4; text ed $3 Holt

309.173 U.S.—Social conditions. Social problems (W) 39-14072

The first four parts of this work, constituting Book I, The American Picture, review the social problems in modern life under the headings: Natural and cultural heritage; The people; The institutions of the people; Testing grounds for the people. Book II, The Study and Teaching of Social Problems, is devoted to a "search for the answers" to the problems set forth in the preceding pages. The book is addressed to the general reader as well as to the student. Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Neprash
Am Soc R 4:865 D '39 150w

"The physical job of publication has been made most attractive, but some more careful proof reading would have prevented numerous errors. . . These are faults which might be easily corrected and excused in a book which promised to be a splendid help to teaching social problems. On that point your reviewer is skeptical. There is some reason to fear that students will regard the practice of treating one aspect of a topic and then dropping it until the next section of the book is reached as mere fragmentation. If viewed in these terms, the text is repetitious and not very coherent." W. W. Weaver
+ — Ann Am Acad 206:212 N '39 450w

" 'American Social Problems' is no volume to be undertaken light-heartedly. Each chapter is packed with facts, and raises a host of questions as to present and future methods of working out an equitable and just solution to its problem. However the volume will repay the careful reader, or will offer those interested in particular problems an authentic source-book. A number of excellent pictures and graphs add interest to the text." Robert Rutherford
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 2 '39 230w

"Dr. Odum's . . . present book forms the culmination of years devoted to the study of what makes people stick together and what brings them peace in the dark waste and middle of the night. It merits the widest possible reading public, for in its field it easily takes first place." Charles Angoff
+ Living Age 357:195 O '39 500w

Pratt p6 winter '40

Reviewed by R. V. Bowers
Sat R of Lit 21:17 D 23 '39 1100w

"The book suffers in two respects. Its arrangement divides the presentation of a problem and the inquiry into its solution into two parts, widely separated. . . At times the reader is overwhelmed by the amount of data even while rejoicing over the wealth of material available. These two faults, however, do not mar a genuinely original volume which should appeal particularly to college instructors as a textbook well worth considering for use, and to high school teachers as a ready reference particularly for problems courses or the problems approach to the teaching of social studies." L. S. Kenworthy
+ — Social Educ 4:64 Ja '40 500w

"Although personal opinion at times colors Prof Odum's deductions, there is a weight of thoughtful analysis in the book, as well as a clarity of expression, that distinguishes it from many general treatises."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 35:183 N '39

OELLRICHS, INEZ. The Kettel mill mystery. 271p $2 Doubleday 39-29480

Detective story.

Booklist 36:178 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p24 N 19 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 50w

"Matt, who eventually solves the sequence of crimes, is an engaging, home-spun chap, endowed with a fund of native shrewdness and a healthy curiosity about what makes people act as they do." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 N 19 '39 200w

"An honest effort and a good plot, but pretty drab."
— + New Yorker 15:108 N 18 '39 30w

"Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 25 '39 40w

OELLRICHS, INEZ. The man who didn't answer. 278p $2 Doubleday 39-27461

Detective story.

Booklist 35:333 Je 1 '39

"This should please customers who like lovable and illiterate amateur detectives and lots of small-town atmosphere." Will Cuppy
Books p13 Ap 9 '39 170w

"We found that after a while the milkman, Matt Winters, became annoyingly 'cute' with his dropped 'g's' and his ungrammatical speech. But his sleuthing is good, even if it does involve a large per cent of bluff. The solution is well concealed, although there are plenty of pointed clues." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 90w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:96 Jl 15 '39 90w

New Yorker 15:108 Ap 15 '39 40w

"Forthrightly told tale of small town people, good, bad and indifferent. Homespun detective outsmarts police in friendly and convincing fashion. Good grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 40w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake
Spec 162:1102 Je 23 '39 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Je 10 '39 170w

OFFORD, LENORE GLEN. Cloth of silver. 269p $2 Macrae Smith co.
39-5007

Dalcy Neill believed that men were to be won by femininity and a fragile dependency. She won her man that way, but after marriage she learned courage and independence were needed, too, and these she found in the example of her sister-in-law.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p19 Mr 5 '39 110w

"Both the story and its manner of telling are light and charming, and the characters and their talk are nice to remember." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p29 Mr 5 '39 180w
Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

OGDEN, ROBERT MORRIS. The psychology of art. 291p il $2.50 Scribner 701 Art—Psychology. Esthetics
(W) 38-30957

"An inside view of the arts. In the beginning [the author] devotes a section to the mechanisms of human behavior which determine to what extent and in what ways the organism uses esthetic elements in the process of adjustment to the environment. He gives the major part of his attention, however, to the basic structures, techniques, and rhythms in art; for example, the nature of scales and harmony in music, rhyme schemes and literary forms in poetry, color and geometric design in the visual arts, and the relation of education to dancing in eurythmics." (Sat R of Lit) The author is dean of the college of arts and sciences at Cornell university. Index.

"The Psychology of Art is a valuable book. It contains much evidence of the erudition, sensitive esthetic appreciation and versatility of the author. Owing to the originality of style and the nature of the subject matter, the book is not easy reading and therefore probably not well-suited for the beginning student of esthetics or art. It will, however, undoubtedly prove helpful to the specialists in the various fields which are included in the book." H. S. Langfeld
+ Am J Psychol 52:642 O '39 1350w

Booklist 35:129 D 15 '38

"This thoughtful and gracefully written book is not quite accurately named. It should really have been called The Philosophy of the Psychology of Art. It uses, with discreet lack of dogmatism, the results of recent psychological inquiry to 'show the relationship of music, poetry and the visual arts to the psychology of human behavior.' But there is a central theme and a controlling conception: the principle of rhythm." I. E.
+ — J Philos 36:639 N 9 '39 400w

New Repub 97:352 Ja 25 '39 10w

"As a treatment of these technical aspects of art the book fulfills the requirements of a competent text." R. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:22 Mr 18 '39 140w

OGLESBY, CATHARINE. Modern primitive arts of Mexico, Guatemala and the Southwest. (Whittlesey house publication) 226p il $3 McGraw 970.67 Indians of North America—Art. Indians of Mexico—Art. Indians of Central America—Art 39-10253

"[This] is the first attempt to give the layman a broad general view of the arts and crafts practised by the Mexican, Guatemalan, and Southwestern Indians today. Miss Oglesby tells how the Indians developed their skill . . . what their unique designs mean; how their primitive religion expresses itself in the things they make for sale and use. She also explains how to distinguish what is genuine and good from what is false and shoddy. . . Important features of the book are the photographs of outstanding Indian work and the collection of more than seventy authentic designs copied from zerapes, blankets, sashes, and huipils; from pottery and silver work; from lacquer bowls and chests." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:327 Je 1 '39

"A popular, enthusiastic account. . . The prospective traveler will welcome the calendar of church ceremonies and fiestas and the bibliography found in the last pages."
+ J Home Econ 31:587 O '39 70w

New Repub 99:287 Jl 12 '39 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:19 Ap '39

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell
N Y Times p16 O 15 '39 200w

Pratt p17 autumn '39

O'HANLON, JAMES D. Murder at Coney Island. 255p $2 Phoenix 39-12732

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 90w

" 'Murder at Coney Island' has the merit of swift action and plenty of it." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '39 160w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 27 '39 30w

O'HARA, ELIOT. Art teacher's primer. (Minton, Balch bk) 180p il $2.50 Putnam

751 Art—Study and teaching 39-22599

"Forty-four assignments to art classes, with eighteen blackboard diagrams and a frontispiece in color." (Subtitle) "These lessons are intended to supplement the major courses of art schools. They are planned to teach landscape and still-life painting in water color, but are adaptable in most cases to oil and other media. The system is that used in the school of water-color painting at Goose Rocks Beach, Maine." (Booklist)

Booklist 36:64 O 15 '39
Boston Transcript p1 S 16 '39 60w
School Arts 39:3a N 4 '39 100w

O'HARA, FRANK; O'LEARY, JOSEPH M., and HEWES, EDWIN B. Economics, principles and problems. 672p il map $3.50 Van Nostrand

330.1 Economics 39-14222

Textbook on economics for Catholic colleges, written "in accordance with the teachings of Christianity." (Pref) Questions and problems, and bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

"The book on the whole is a good introduction to economics. Keeping constantly in mind its objectives it ought to serve Catholic youth well. It has, however, an evaluating rather than a strictly scientific point of view." C. H. Morrow

+ Am Econ R 29:803 D '39 550w

"The O'Hara volume while not badly written, indicates little of the erudition and understanding found in the Knight work [Economic principles in practice]. It is factual and methodical and for the most part uninspirational, in spite of its explicit purpose." E. P. Schmidt

Ann Am Acad 205:191 S '39 300w

"The book represents the successful effort of laics writing as competent economists and thoroughgoing Christians. . . It is an analytical and at the same time an easily teachable textbook, but what is of more significance is the fact that these authors have their feet on solid philosophical ground. There is no attempt to make facts fit a theory with which they can never be consonant." J. H. F.

+ Cath World 150:244 N '39 210w

"Though it follows the traditional division of subject matter, the book is particularly noteworthy for the painstaking completeness of its treatment. The chapter on population, including as it does sound recommendations as to the significance and solution for a dwindling population, is outstanding. . . However the occasional resumés of official Catholic opinion as expressed by the Holy Father are not always fortunate, as for instance the closing paragraph in the chapter on business cycles, where the application of the encyclicals is peculiarly strained." Austin Murphy

+ — Commonweal 30:322 Jl 21 '39 120w

O'HARA, JOHN. Files on parade. 277p $2.50 Harcourt

39-23749

Thirty-five short stories, most of which have previously appeared in the New Yorker. They are, in the main, stories of Hollywood and of the country-club and hotel-bar crowd.

"O'Hara has been around the cafés and night clubs, behind the tinsel scenes in Hollywood and down among the country clubs; he has watched with a sharp eye and listened with a merciless ear; he is as knowing as any old newspaper man; and for method and style he has borrowed wisely if too well from several of his distinguished contemporaries. The result is a group of sketches that has certain limitations of effect and scope but lays open with deadly assurance and ruthless revelatory detail the personalities of several kinds of peculiarly American Americans." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p2 S 24 '39 900w

"O'Hara does not always write so truthfully; sometimes his plots falsify his point, and sometimes, with his curious gift (Fitzgerald had it too) for lending glamor to persons who are actually without it, it is simply his style that does it. Even then, he is as entertaining a writer as we have. . . His is a slick and smart-aleck art, but, at its best and within its limitations, it is also superb." Mark Schorer

+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 700w

"These short stories . . . are keen-edged, clever, always realistic but never commonplace. Generally frivolous in tone too, but some of them touch very sensitive cords of human sympathy and touch them so delicately and accurately that one feels that the frivolity is a technique and that the substance is something real and substantial."

+ Christian Century 56:1345 N 1 '39 90w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 700w

"O'Hara—as earlier reviewers have said of him—can 'write like a streak.' . . Only difficulty is that, like Dorothy Parker and F. Scott Fitzgerald before him, he is rich in style but starving for subjects that can hold his own interest through a sustained piece of hard work. A born writer, his native abilities are caged by his disbeliefs." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p6 S 24 '39 900w

New Yorker 15:77 S 23 '39 30w

"No one, with the possible exception of Ring Lardner and Ernest Hemingway, has so well succeeded in summing up a lifetime in an instant, within the narrow frame of the classical unities." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 S 23 '39 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 350w

Time 34:67 S 25 '39 350w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 29:xii winter '40 80w

OKILL, JOHN. Autographic indicators for internal combustion engines. 88p il $1.80 Longmans [5s Arnold, E. & co]

621.1977 Indicators for gas and oil engines [39-14815]

"In 1907 the author, who is in charge of the mechanical engineering laboratories of the University of Liverpool, invented the well-known Okill maximum pressure indicator for use on internal combustion engines. The intervening years of experience qualify him to write authoritatively on the subject. His small well-diagrammed volume deals only with the combined piston, spring and pencil lever type, limiting his remarks on indicator diagrams to internal combustion engines which do not exceed approximately 500 revolutions per minute." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book should be a most useful guide to the many engineers who depend on the indicator for periodical information as to how their engines are operating."

+ Nature 143:423 Mr 11 '39 190w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:9 Ja '39

OLCOTT, VIRGINIA. Olaf and Ane. 162p il $1.50 Vanguard; school ed 168p 96c Silver

Children in Norway (W) 38-35989

Story of present-day Norway for young readers. It shows children at their games, on holiday celebrations, at the saeter in summer, and skiing to school in winter.

"The illustrations both in color and black and white by Constance Whittemore, are lively and illustrate the text very satisfactorily. A little book which should make the reading classes of boys and girls from eight to 10 interesting and delightful." Elsie Mack

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 150w

"A well-rounded picture of the country and its resources." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 30 '39 120w

Wis Lib Bul 35:68 Ap '39

OLDFIELD, CLAUDE HOUGHTON (CLAUDE HOUGHTON, pseud). Hudson rejoins the herd. 320p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins]

39-25701

As he lay in the nursing home, where he had been for months at the verge of death, Stephen Hudson decided to write all that he could recall of his life as it impinged upon the lives of Joanna Held and Otto Steele. The three had met once at a children's party, and never again until the night when Stephen entered Joanna's apartment and was shot by Steele. His account ends on the day he left the nursing home, doomed to a life of invalidism, and went to Joanna.

"Mr. Houghton uses the stream-of-consciousness technique. The telling is fluent, there is an interesting—though occasionally forced—philosophic strain, and if the characterizations are some times incomplete, it is excusable because Stephen Hudson would not be as real if he had perfect insight into all the people he knew." D. B. Shapiro

\+ Books p10 O 22 '39 650w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 60w

Cath World 150:370 D '39 100w

Christian Century 56:1547 D 13 '39 70w

"Mr. Houghton's psychological speculations are lucidly expressed. Virtually this is a three-character novel, and I believe in only one of those three, but Mr. Houghton's game of hunt the reason held my absorbed attention." Harold Brighouse

\+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 29 '39 250w

"A subtle, sensitive book in which the reader gets everything at second hand. Mr. Houghton has an engrossing story, but holds it so long that it slips from his grasp."

\+ — New Repub 100:350 O 25 '39 40w

"As good as 'Sparkenbroke,' perhaps it is safe to go further still, to say that this book challenges comparison with 'The Fountain.' " Anthony West

\+ New Statesman & Nation 18:405 S 16 '39 150w

"It is a book with a high, worthwhile aim; a book which many people will read a second time and be amply repaid." J. S. Southron

\+ N Y Times p7 O 22 '39 800w

New Yorker 15:82 O 28 '39 40w

"Neither honest psychology nor good deductive mystery, Mr. Houghton's story seems to have outsmarted itself." N. L. R.

— Sat R of Lit 20:19 O 21 '39 150w

"Mr. Houghton is, as everybody knows, an accomplished and successful novelist whose work always has beginning, middle and end. But somehow . . . this box of puppets . . . seemed to me this time more boring than even they need be. In any case, when an author has decided upon the first person singular method of narration, he must be very, very careful not to get too fond of his chosen 'I'; above all, he must peep as little as possible, I think, round 'I's' nursery screen, and forbear, if he can, from bending above the little far-away cot. . . However, here certainly is a story which many will find easy to read; and it has the merit of producing a good surprise on the last page." Kate O'Brien

— \+ Spec 163:336 S 1 '39 250w

Time 34:88 O 23 '39 20w

"This is an artificial tale. Not that it is unexciting; the reader is always curious to know what happens next, and that must be counted as Mr. Houghton's triumph. But his constant straining for profundity is a bore. It suffers, too, from the stream of descriptive phrases that have been begged or borrowed from books. . . And Mr. Houghton is as devoted to the italicized word in fiction as was Queen Victoria in her letters."

— \+ Times [London] Lit Sup p513 S 2 '39 550w

OLRIK, AXEL, ed. A book of Danish ballads; selected and with an introduction; tr. by E. M. Smith-Dampier. 337p $3 Am.-Scandinavian foundation; Princeton univ. press [14s Oxford]

839.811 Ballads, Danish. Danish poetry—Translations into English 39-29404

Following a seventy-page critical study on the ballad in Denmark, is a collection of the ballads themselves. They are arranged under the headings: warrior ballads and ballads of magic; historical ballads; ballads of chivalry; ballads of satire; and miscellaneous ballads. Only a few of them, published in two volumes in Denmark thirty years ago, have appeared before in English.

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"Here is that welcome spectacle—a scholar freeing himself from critical paraphernalia to speak simply in a way that refreshes the student and interprets for the laymen. He discusses origin and fate, theme and style, cultural and literary implications. One misses only a comment on ballad music." E. K. Wells

\+ Books p7 Ja 21 '40 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 6 '40 430w

OLSEN, DOLORES BIRK. The cat saw murder. 277p $2 Doubleday

39-17652

Detective story.

"A readable yarn slightly on the quaint side—which is all right with us. For those who do not quite catch where the various characters were at the time, there is a diagram of Surf House and its tenants." Will Cuppy

\+ Books p11 My 28 '39 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 My 27 '39 100w

"The cat which figures so prominently in this story is the property of Miss Rachel Murdock, as delightful a spinster as we ever hope to meet. . . You will never regret having made the acquaintance of Miss Rachel Murdock." Isaac Anderson

\+ N Y Times p17 My 21 '39 190w

New Yorker 15:96 My 20 '39 60w

"Well handled example of spinster-amateur plus professional-sleuth theme with finish that stands hair on end. Very good."

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 20 '39 40w

Time 33:88 Je 5 '39 20w

OLSEN, DOLORES BIRK. Death cuts a silhouette. 276p $2 Doubleday

39-27930

Detective story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 N 5 '39 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 90w

"There is plenty of room for guessing, and while the astute reader may spot the murderer he will have more difficulty in finding the motive. The author of 'The Cat Saw Murder' has again demonstrated [an] ability to put together a good crime puzzle." Isaac Anderson

\+ N Y Times p26 O 22 '39 230w

"Cluttered family relationships, but nice reading."

\+ New Yorker 15:96 O 21 '39 40w

"Physical and pathological oddities of Ericksen family give yarn some rather queasy moments; moves steadily, however, and sleuthing is able. Grim—but good."

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 21 '39 40w

OLSEN, UDIA G. Preparing the manuscript. 72p $1 Writer

029.6 Authorship (W) 39-27094

The purpose of this book is "to give logical, step-by-step instructions for the technical preparation of a manuscript and its submission to a publisher. A certain amount of general information on the subjects of author's rights, copyrights, and permissions has been included." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 35:217 Mr 1 '39
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 20w

OMAN, SIR CHARLES WILLIAM CHADWICK. On the writing of history. 307p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Methuen]

907 History—Historiography

The author, for thirty years a professor of history at Oxford, sets forth his views on the art, the philosophy, and the methods of the historian. "If," he says in his preface, "I have any messages to deliver which are not mere glimpses of the obvious, they may be summed up in two phrases. The first is that the writing of history is a matter for individuals, and that joint-stock history is a mistake—despite of Lord Acton's eloquent pleading in its favour. The second is that in my conception history is a series of interesting happenings, often illogical and cataclysmic, not a logical and orderly development from causes to inevitable results." Index.

"A book which in its sturdy common sense, the gracefulness of its learning, and the polish of its style, conforms to the best British mode. It is a series of essays rather than a comprehensive treatise, but the various papers fall into a unified pattern." Allan Nevins
+ Books p4 D 31 '39 1750w

New Statesman & Nation 18:690 N 11 '39 200w

" 'On the Writing of History' is a complete treatise in fifteen chapters and not an elongated essay, as are so many similar books. It is informal in method, chatty rather than pedagogic, and it lacks entirely the harshness and the dogmatism which distinguish the works of so many other historians who have set out to tell would-be neophytes how to be 'scientific' and 'professional' rather than human and subject to occasional error." L. W. Eshleman
+ N Y Times p5 O 29 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p621 O 28 '39 900w

OMMANNEY, KATHARINE ANNE. The stage and the school; pictures by Ben Kutcher. rev ed 504p $1.60 Harper

792 Drama in education. College and school drama. Amateur theatricals. Shakespeare, William 39-22359

This revised edition of a book first entered in Book Review Digest in 1932 "includes new material, particularly on the techniques and history of motion pictures, radio, and television, and on the federal theater." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:71 O 15 '39

"It has excellent illustrations, exercises, a useful appendix of plays and an elaborate bibliography which add to the practical value of the volume."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:839 N '39 90w

ONCKEN, CLARA. Hickory Sam; il. by Stanley Wood. 276p $2 Holt

39-24444

Story of pioneer life in Illinois in the 1830s. The hero of the book is Sam Graham, a young woodsman, whose life to some degree resembles that of the young Abraham Lincoln.

Churchman 153:39 D 15 '39

"As convincingly drawn as any we have yet had. . . There are many sharply delineated incidents against this rough, homespun background, and a very colorful chapter on Sam's one trip to the world outside—a flat-boat journey down the river to New Orleans. Altogether an outstanding book of the season for older boys. The illustrations by Stanley Wood fit the story perfectly." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 64:1001 D 15 '39 150w

O'NEIL, KERRY, pseud. Mooney moves around. 263p $2 Reynal

39-24725

Detective story.

"The plot . . . is original and interesting enough. But the story's chief contribution to delight is the conversation of its characters." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p20 S 24 '39 200w

"Much milling around, slugging, and such stuff, but, outside sleuth and his girl assistant, characters are colorless and plot lacks conviction. Trivial."
— Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 30 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 200w

OPDYCKE, JOHN BAKER. Don't say it. 850p $5 (21s) Funk

428.3 English language—Errors—Use of words. English language—Pronunciation (W) 39-11804

"A cyclopedia of English use and abuse." (Subtitle) In dictionary arrangement lists about 20,000 words which offer possibilities of misuse or mispronunciation. Some proper names are included.

New Repub 99:316 Jl 19 '39 70w

"The terms are taken from newspapers and magazines, radio and platform talks, class rooms and examination papers, and also from the author's accumulation of 'troublesome cases' during thirty-five years of experience in teaching English. And the book is alive and comprehensive, as it is also clear and practical."
+ N Y Times p8 My 14 '39 350w

"Among the popular books on word usage appearing in recent years, Mr. Opdycke's cyclopedia deserves a place of merit. It is practical and up to date."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 23 '39 360w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Exit a dictator. 315p $2 Little

39-20163

Tale of international intrigue. A mysterious Mr Alexander, a Russian of noble birth, whose headquarters are in London, attempts to overthrow the Russian government. A beautiful Russian dancer plays a prominent part in the story.

"Very tall Oppenheim, but Oppenheim, just the same." Will Cuppy
Books p9 Ag 20 '39 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '39 230w

"Fantastic."
Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 2 '39 40w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. A pulpit in the grill room. 265p $2 Little [4s Hodder]

39-11255

Short stories of crime, with a crippled maitre d'hotel in a London grill room and his friend Captain Lyson to solve the mysteries.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 Mr 5 '39 170w

OPPENHEIM, E. P.—Continued

"Tied down by the limits of his present medium, Mr. Oppenheim is forced to make his intrigues less complicated, and as a result more convincing. The total of adventures is a bit overwhelming, but each one is, in itself, good. And most people do not have to read short story collections from cover to cover at one sitting." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 11 '39 100w

"All of the little mysteries are smoothly written and neatly finished." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 5 '39 140w

"Tenuous tales of pale people, with not much plot or point to any of them. Gossamer."

— Sat R of Lit 19:24 Mr 4 '39 30w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Sir Adam disappeared. 333p $2 Little

(W) 39-11402

Detective story.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p12 My 14 '39 300w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 140w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '39 130w

"This seems to us to be the best of Mr. Oppenheim's recent books, and not many of his earlier ones have surpassed it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 My 14 '39 230w

"In other than Oppenheim's hands, tale would be tripe but Old Master waves wand and good time is had by all. Diverting."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 20 '39 30w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. The strangers' gate. 328p $2 Little

39-31050

A tale of international intrigue in a Graustarkian kingdom in the Balkans.

"If you have always craved Oppenheim, don't miss this one. The author has laid himself out to produce a super-Oppenheim, packed and jammed with intrigue, love and the other things that have made him a household word—and this includes some mighty slick writing." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 N 5 '39 190w

"A typical Oppenheim thriller." Drake De Kay

N Y Times p27 N 19 '39 350w

Sat R of Lit 21:19 N 4 '39 40w

O'RAHILLY, ALFRED. Electromagnetics; a discussion of fundamentals; with a foreword by A. W. Conway. 884p $12.50 (42s) Longmans

538.3 Electromagnetism 39-6650

" 'Much of this book is historical. The author claims that in it the history of electromagnetic theory is rewritten and we find in the titles of many of the chapters such names as Poisson, Maxwell, Ampère, Neumann, Liénard, Poynting, Voigt, Weber, Ritz and others. He professes to disagree with most of what is commonly accepted to-day about electromagnetic theory.' " N Y New Tech Bks

"The author is apparently well qualified for this part of his task. The range of his reading must have been immense, judging by the impressive bibliography. He paints a most interesting and vivid picture of the various currents in the historical development. . . It was something of a shock to read that the author believes that relativity theory demands that a wave expanding spherically with the velocity of sound should remain spherical under a Lorentz transformation, or rather under the transformation of Voigt, as the author prefers to call it in the interests of strict historical accuracy. This vital misconception seems to color a good deal of his unfavorable attitude toward relativity. . . Nevertheless, in spite of this, the book is well worth studying even if merely for the sake of awakening consciousness of the many doubtful and unsettled places still remaining in the structure of electrodynamics." P. W. Bridgman

+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:218 Ja '39 850w

"Although probably every reader of this volume will find himself alternating between hearty agreement and strong disagreement with Prof. O'Rahilly's various criticisms and conclusions, his wide outlook and critical survey of the various theories entitle his views to respectful consideration. Whether they are justified or not must be left for the future to decide, but we can heartily endorse Prof. Conway's concluding remark in the foreword, that the volume 'is more than a review of existing knowledge, it is a courageous attempt at reconstruction; and if we do not always agree with the writer, he certainly makes us reflect. I recommend this book to every serious student of Electromagnetics.' " C. V. Drysdale

+ — Nature 144:91 Jl 15 '39 1250w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:22 Ap '39

ORBIS; encyclopaedia of extra-European countries. £2 2s, or $10.50 per annum; charge for the binder and guide cards 15s or $3.75 c1938 Europa publications, 6 Duke st, Adelphi, WC 2

305 Yearbooks (39-11122)

"As the subtitle indicates, Orbis is intended as 'a survey and directory of political, industrial, financial, cultural and scientific organizations in the countries of Africa, America, Asia and Australasia.' It is similar in format to Europa, reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1932 [Book Review Digest, 1934], and contains for the countries of other continents the same sort of information which Europa gives for those of Europe. . . The countries on which material has been issued to date are the Argentine republic, Dominican republic, Guatemala, India, Iraq, Japan, Peru and the United States. The information includes, in most cases, a concise outline of the government, with names of the chief officials, and lists of the most important political parties, newspapers, publishers, financial and commercial institutions and organizations, universities, libraries, museums, learned soceties, religious organizations and radio broadcasting stations. Names of the chief personnel of these agencies, such as editors of newspapers or presidents of societies, and addresses are usually indicated. Economic and other statistics are also given." Subscription Bks Bul

"This information is well arranged and reliable. It is reasonably up to date, though not always the most recent available. . . The material in Orbis, particularly that of a directory nature, represents a useful selection of information to be found otherwise only in the yearbooks of the individual countries or in such works as the Minerva Jahrbuch. Orbis is recommended for the larger college and public libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:9 Ja '39 410w

ORMESSON, WLADIMIR, comte d'. France; tr. by J. Lewis May; with a prefatory letter from the French ambassador in London [Ch. Corbin]. (Ambassadors at large ser) 228p $2 (6s) Longmans

327.44 France—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics. France—Politics and government 39-30783

A discussion of French participation in international affairs from 1918 to the spring of 1939, written by the foreign editor of Figaro. The volume is the first in a series in which the aim is "to give an opportunity for qualified spokesmen of the principal nations to describe, for the benefit of the English reader, the policy and outlook of their respective countries in relation to the rest of the world. The series has no official character. The introductions, which official representatives of the countries concerned have been good enough to contribute to some of the volumes, betoken interest in, and approval of, the general purpose of the series, but not endorsement of the author's views on any aspect of policy." (Pref. to the series)

Reviewed by G. H. Stuart
Am Pol Sci R 33:1130 D '39 280w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '39 40w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears, Jr.
Churchman 153:20 D 1 '39 180w

"The foreign policy of France since the first World War surveyed superficially and none too candidly by a French political commentator, who always professes surprise when the inevitable occurs."
— Foreign Affairs 18:375 Ja '40 30w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 21 '39 300w

"A useful little survey. . . Much of the book seems to have been written hastily, and from an imperfect memory. M. d'Ormesson attributes the death of Alexander of Jugoslavia to a 'Macedonian' assassin. The assassin was, of course, a Croat. Nor did M. Barthou die 'a few seconds,' but an hour, after the outrage. The German vote in the Saar plebiscite was not 98 per cent, but 90 per cent; and it is absurd to say that in this plebiscite 'the voting was perfectly fair, perfectly in order,' when, in reality, Nazi terrorism was exercised on a large scale." A. W.
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:498 O 7 '39 280w

O'ROURKE, LAWRENCE JAMES. You and your community. 714p il $1.84 Heath

300 Citizenship. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Economic conditions 38-31034

A textbook in civics, based on materials developed in the course of a study carried out by the author during the past five years thru the Civics Research Institute. The book is divided into six parts: Your community and what it does for you; Organization and functions of governments; Getting and spending government money; The economic life of modern communities; Some problems of our economic life; The world's workers and their work. Index.

"An exceptionally fine, useful book." D. S. Brainard + School R 47:314 Ap '39 700w

"Out of a background of university teaching experience followed by a period of research in government, the author has brought to his subject a splendid sense of what type of preparation will best equip secondary school pupils to assume the full mantle of adult citizenship." E. W. Mason
+ Social Educ 3:144 F '39 550w

"Highly commended." Irwin Eckhauser
+ Social Studies 30:188 Ap '39 280w

ORTLOFF, HENRY STUART, and RAYMORE, HENRY BOND. Garden planning and building. (Whittlesey house garden ser) 244p il $3 (12s 6d) McGraw

712 Landscape gardening. Gardens
(W) 39-9806

This book on landscape gardening for the moderate sized country or suburban place includes chapters on basic landscape design; grading and lawn making; designing the flower garden; walls, steps, and fences; garden houses and other dependencies; water features in landscape design; woodland and wild gardens; rock gardening; the fertility of garden soil; the landscape architect and the client. Index.

Booklist 35:327 Je 1 '39

" 'Garden Planning and Building' is distinctly a 'how to do it' volume of the best type, with an abundance of constructional detail to support the broader aspects of the many matters discussed. It is written and illustrated primarily for the owner of a moderate-sized property who wishes to plan and plant sanely and with a view to permanent satisfaction. If that is the sort of person you are, then here is exactly the kind of guidance you can use." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p13 My 14 '39 140w

Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 180w

ORTON, HELEN (FULLER) (MRS J. F. ORTON). Knights of the snowstorm; il. by Margaret Ayer. 116p $1.50 Stokes 39-22580

Ruth lived in New York city, and was quite sure she would never meet a knight. Then she went to visit some country cousins and was caught in a snowstorm. The way her young cousins and their father managed to deliver milk during the storm changed Ruth's idea of knights in armor; she dubbed the farm boys "knights of the snowstorm."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:191 N '39

ORTON, VREST. Goudy; master of letters; with an introd. by Frederic W. Goudy. ltd ed 106p il $4.50 Black Cat

B or 92 Goudy, Frederic William 39-20764

Biographical study of this American craftsman, the designer of many type faces. "There are many details about the early stages of Goudy's career, his gradual concentration upon letter design and printing, about how he learned the tricks of his trade, how he assembled his early equipment, his first pantograph and lathe, the astonishing effect of some of his early advertising designs, and much else that is new and freshly told—ending with the tragic note of that dreadful second fire." (Publishers' Weekly)

"This true American success tale is told briskly and informally and is meant for the general public, not a restricted professional group. Human values are emphasized rather than technical aspects." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 7 '40 70w

"Vrest Orton has done Fred Goudy a real favor, I believe, by not using superlatives and by avoiding the kind of blind devotion which it must be difficult to accept graciously. . . The really important thing about Orton's writing of this book is that he did not let it matter too much what he happened to think or feel about Goudy; but that he set to work to get facts and that he got facts. He managed to extract from his doubtless reluctant hero an astonishing amount of information that might otherwise never have become known or communicated in print to Goudy's admirers." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt + Publishers' Weekly 136:390 Ag 5 '39 380w

ORWIN, CHARLES STEWART, and ORWIN, MRS CHRISTABEL SUSAN (LOWRY). Open fields. 332p il maps $7 (21s) Oxford

333.5 Land tenure—Great Britain. Laxton, Nottinghamshire, England [39-325]

"Most people nowadays, when learning English history, get introduced to the idea that the country was once cultivated in common fields, in each of which the inhabitants of the manor had shares. . . [Today] the one perfect example of the open-field farming is that provided by the manor of Laxton, in Nottinghamshire. . . In their book Mr. and Mrs. Orwin not only give us a description of Laxton, but reproduce in sections the delightful estate map made in 1635, and print the accompanying 'terrier' or survey, which sets out in detail the holdings of all the freeholders and tenants of the manor. . . While the greater part of the book is thus occupied with the description and history of Laxton, in the earlier sections Mr. and Mrs. Orwin deal with the more general questions raised by open-field farming." Times [London] Lit Sup

ORWIN, C. S. and C. S.—Continued

Reviewed by N. Neilson
Am Hist R 44:870 Jl '39 700w

"I wish the Orwins could be widely read. For just as the original documents, properly edited, of the discovery of America are far more vivid and readable than all the popularizations of the subject, so a book like this tells one more about England, from the story of a few fields, than the discursive and romantic guide for the general reader." V. S. Pritchett
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 21 '38 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Clapham
Eng Hist R 54:301 Ap '39 2000w

"Mr. and Mrs. Orwin have written a valuable book, the best account in English of the actual operation of the open-field system." A. P. W.
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 12 '38 800w

Reviewed by E. J. Russell
Nature 142:646 O 8 '38 750w

"What gives the book its outstanding importance as a contribution to economic history is that it treats an agricultural subject from an agricultural standpoint. Enough has now perhaps been said to show that this book has something to give to everyone who cares about the life of the people on the land. There is something masterly about the way in which it combines so much rich detail and intricate description with a range over the whole record of English agriculture from the first clearing of the scrub to to-day's mechanised farming. Many years of thought about and care for the agricultural population and its problems have gone to its construction, and its argument, never obtruded but all the more irresistible for that, is that what agriculture once did it could do again." Kenneth Bell
+ New Statesman & Nation 16:190 Jl 30 '38 1900w

"This is not only a valuable piece of research into agricultural method, but also a document of importance in its social implications." Adrian Bell
+ Spec 161:111 Jl 15 '38 650w

"The Orwins' book must command the serious attention of scholars; at the same time it should not be ignored by anyone who has any feeling for the manner in which the English countryside carries the record of the changes through which it has passed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p494 Jl 23 '38 1000w

OSBORN, LORAINE. Your voice personality. 176p il $2 Putnam

808.5 Voice. Speech. Personality
(W) 38-25659

This work is intended to help adults who wish to learn to speak effectively both in public and in private conversation. Part one is concerned with the development of a pleasing voice, stressing the role played by posture, self-control, and exercise. Parts two and three are devoted to showing how voice culture can be employed in making lives more successful and happy.

Booklist 35:81 N 1 '38
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 130w

OSBORNE, HARRY WILDER. Profits out of Wall Street. 52p $1.29 Knopf

332.64 Speculation. Stock exchange 39-3267

"An eminently practical book for the investor —not the average man whose ear is open for the latest tip, but for the man with some stock market experience who wants to guide his own affairs with common sense. Mr. Osborne offers no foolproof system for selling at the top and buying at the bottom; instead, he presents Dow's Law of the Price Trend and tells us how to detect its operation by consulting the averages and constructing our own charts." Management R

Am Econ R 29:157 Mr '39 10w

"The whole is couched in simple and direct language."
Management R 28:71 F '39 90w

OSBURN, BURL NEFF, and WILBER, GORDON OWEN. Pewter, spun, wrought, and cast. 151p il $2.50 Int. textbook

739 Pewter (W) 38-36719

"Copiously illustrated with half-tones and dimensioned drawings, this attractive quarto volume traces the history of pewter, tells of its properties and the principles of design, and describes in detail the various operations for producing artistic pieces. There are a bibliography, a list of museums with extensive pewter collections, and a directory of concerns supplying materials." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 35:155 Ja 1 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:26 Ap '39

OSTROVSKII, NIKOLAI ALEKSEEVICH. Born of the storm; tr. from the Russian by Louise Luke Hiler. 252p $1.50 Critics group press

"The author of 'The Making of a Hero' [Book Review Digest, 1937] might have called this story—not quite completed at the time of his death—'The Making of a Revolution.' Based on actual history, it is a violent chronicle of western Ukraine, with Polish industrialists, German militarists, starving peasants and scheming priests variously involved in a struggle for power." Books

Books p9 Jl 9 '39 150w

"On the whole, the extreme nervous tension of these dramatic days is rendered quite well; at places, the novel does not lack power. Moreover, the author had a narrative gift. . . The chief shortcoming of the novel lies in that Ostrovsky's characters are, as a rule, individualized but superficially." Alexander Nazaroff
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 11 '39 750w
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 17 '39 270w

OULIE, MARTHE. Charcot of the Antarctic; with a pref. by Sir William Goodenough. 235p il maps $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Murray, J]

B or 92 Charcot, Jean Baptiste Auguste Etienne. Antarctic regions. Arctic regions [39-15365]

Jean Charcot, son of a famous French doctor, became famous in his own right as an explorer. This biography traces lightly the course of his career: his two polar expeditions to the Antarctic; his service as commander of two patrol ships during the World war; his participation in the search for Amundsen and Guilbaud; his sixteen years of convoying scientists to Greenland and Iceland from Saint Malo; and his death in 1936 when his ship was wrecked off the coast of Iceland.

"A thoroughly decent book. But, like all orthodox, worshipful biographies, it tends to make up with naivete what it lacks in humor. . . The book is worthwhile because some account of Jean Charcot is needed in the popular recording of contemporary exploration-history. But it defeats its own ends by being too nice. Rather than exalt a fine man, it doesn't do him or the gusto with which he lived justice." E. P. Hanson
+ — Books p21 Mr 26 '39 600w

"The book is slight and omits much that might well have been recorded, but it recalls vividly an outstanding personality in the history of polar endeavour, a man of great charm, animated by high ideals and strong purposes and imbued with a love of polar seas. Char-cot's end, by shipwreck on the coast of Iceland, so fitting for this adventurous sailor, is told with dignity and restraint. The book is a fine tribute to a great man." R. N. R. Brown

+ Manchester Guardian p5 S 23 '38 250w

"An interesting and well-rounded biography. . . Charcot's whole career was one of great interest and his many voyages were varied as well as daring and arduous. This excellent biography tells a story and paints a portrait, and it is a rewarding book on both counts."

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 12 '39 500w

"The author of this biography of the great French explorer is his god-daughter—writer, sailor and archæologist. Written in the most admirable English, it is as penetrating a study, as authentic a document and as beautiful a tribute as ever comes to hand. One might say, indeed, that it bears the stamp of French detail, reality and idealism."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Mr '39 480w

"Mlle. Oulié is herself a traveller and an adventurer by sea—one of Charcot's 'children' whom he delighted to advise and inspire in his old age—and these qualifications serve her well, but her memoir is too slight and too romantically conceived to establish her complex reading of his character."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p585 S 10 '38 750w

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud). The Creeps. 306p $2 Farrar 39-32377

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p36 N 12 '39 250w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 80w

"The atmosphere of suspense, with a suggestion of the supernatural, is well sustained, but the solution is hurried and a little farfetched." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 N 19 '39 250w

"Nice reading, and plenty of gruesome details."

+ New Yorker 15:120 D 2 '39 50w

"Despite rather flimsy construction story fully lives up to name, including some specially spooky seances."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:29 N 18 '39 30w

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud). Mystery book. See Mystery book

OVERMYER, GRACE. Government and the arts. 338p $3 Norton

709 Art and state. State encouragement of science, literature and art 39-27204

"Prefaced by a brief historical sketch of art patronage, this book consists in the main of facts concerning the history, plan of organization, financing and present operation of systems used in various countries for the official encouragement and support of the fine arts. More than fifty foreign countries and the United States of America are included in the study." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Her book not only constitutes an interesting contribution to the literature of government, but also furnishes a valuable background for future American legislative activity in the field of the fine arts." M. M. Ball

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:934 O '39 200w
Booklist 35:248 Ap 1 '39

"It is very important that the matter be given publicity and that facts be available. For this reason Miss Overmyer's book with a mass of what seems to be accurate data and thoughtful deductions is particularly welcome." Harley Perkins

+ Boston Transcript Mr 24 '39 550w

"Miss Overmyer's book is not special pleading. It is a well-documented, simply presented summary of facts. The cogency of its material lies in the inescapableness of its data rather than in the eloquence with which it pleads. Indeed, others will have to do the pleading. Implemented with the arguments contained in 'Government and the Arts,' they can make an extremely good case for the preservation and continuance of this part of the American tradition." Elizabeth McCausland

+ Nation 149:48 Jl 8 '39 550w

"Miss Overmyer's well-considered and even-tempered book will help the public to clearer thinking."

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 2 '39 600w

"This is not a government book, nor a WPA project, but the government, in an interesting way, assisted in the compilation of material. The department of state allowed the author to use the services of United States consular officers. . . Miss Overmyer does not desire her book to be regarded as a plea for a permanent bureau of fine arts, which would perpetuate the assistance to artists that has been afforded as a measure of unemployment relief. She seems clearly to sympathize with this object, however." E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican Ap 29 '39 1250w

Reviewed by Warren Cheney
Survey G 28:345 My '39 330w

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN. Let me think. (Peoples lib) 106p il 60c Macmillan

150.13 Psychology, Applied (W) 39-27268

Discourse on mental efficiency, and the management of the mind, with suggestions on how to keep mentally and emotionally alive.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p3 Je 11 '39 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

Reviewed by A. E. Greanoff
Living Church 101:12 S 20 '39 150w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson
New Repub 100:276 O 11 '39 120w
Pratt p7 summer '39

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 27 '39 650w
(Review of series)

"Though Dr Overstreet writes in a light, popular vein and avoids all reference to psychologists, his book shows that he is in touch with psychological roots at the growing tips of contemporary research. Numerous investigators in the last two or three years have made studies of attitudes and prejudices. Dr. Overstreet does not directly refer to any of them, but he puts their most significant findings into such simple language that no adult reader could fail to understand." M. F. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:98 My '39

OVERTON, MRS GRACE SLOAN. Love, marriage and parenthood. 276p $2 Harper

173 Marriage. Love. Family 39-15033

Study of family life intended to assist in the achieving of a "full view of the whole of married existence." The group which the author wished particularly to reach is composed of the "older young people and young adults, married or looking forward to marriage." Partial contents: Making romantic marriage socially sound; Looking ahead to being parents; Needed: new attitudes toward the body; Managing our new personality nearness.

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 1 '39 120w

"It would be difficult to find a book that handles the delicate and even the controversial aspects of this theme with greater competence and good taste and at the same time with complete frankness."

+ Christian Century 56:773 Je 14 '39 70w

OWEN, ETHEL. Some one shall love me. 256p $2 Furman 39-31791

Contrasts the romances of two modern business women: Phyllis, who was young and gay; and Mona, her aunt, who was forty-odd, and true to the love of her youth.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p20 O 29 '39 70w

"Diverting from first to last, this simple little tale should charm those readers who look for a pleasant time-killer. . . The dialogue, of which the book is mainly composed, is crisp, the pace is consistently swift and the print is large."
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 60w

"Business and romance are here mixed very successfully. The process is pretty obvious, the plot quite simple, and the gayer conversation artless rather than sparkling. But no one need complain about the happiness of the ending." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p24 O 8 '39 200w

OWEN, RUTH (BRYAN) (MRS BORGE ROHDE). The castle in the silver wood, and other Scandinavian fairy tales retold; il. by Marc Simont. 181p $2 Dodd 398.2 Fairy tales (W) 39-9935

Fairy stories directly translated from the Danish, and retold and edited by the former United States minister to Denmark.

Booklist 35:336 Je 1 '39

"Their charm is unmistakable; whatever they were in Danish, the English has turns of phrase children associate with Andersen, and the familiar complications of magic." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 28 '39 350w

"The stories, for the most part, are new to American children. They have been translated directly from the Danish and Ruth Bryan Owen has retold them in a charming and spirited manner. This will be a fine family book, good for summer holidays, or stay-at-home reading." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 29 '39 120w

Horn Bk M 15:222 Jl '39 100w

"Altogether a fine addition to our fairy tale collections, and what is more important, a popular one which children will enjoy. Recommended for all collections needing new fairy tale material." A. L. Shea
+ Library J 64:517 Je 15 '39 130w

"There is a wholesome humor in the book. Mrs. Rohde has clearly delighted in her task and her retellings have a fluency and directness that will make 'The Castle in the Silver Wood' invaluable to story tellers. The drawings are very pleasing, with the same humor and vigor as the tales. A book children will promptly take to their hearts and one that school and public libraries will want to add to their shelves." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 Je 11 '39 280w

OWEN, RUTH (BRYAN) (MRS BORGE ROHDE), ed. Picture tales from Scandinavia: selected and retold; il. by Emma Brock. 109p $1.25 Stokes
Tales, Scandinavian (W) 39-27753

Retellings of nineteen humorous Scandinavian tales. Eight of the stories are about the dull-witted people of Mols.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"A few well-known stories have not gained by retelling, but unfamiliar ones will be a welcome addition. . . Mrs. Owen is wise in the selection of her illustrators. This time Emma Brock has cleverly portrayed the feeling of the stories in black and white illustrations." Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 64:761 O 1 '39 100w
Wis Lib Bul 35:192 N '39

OZENFANT, AMEDEE. Journey through life; experiences, doubts, certainties, conclusions; tr. by Helen Beauclerk and Violet Macdonald. 398p il $3.75 Macmillan [16s Gollancz]
B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [39-30313]

The author, a French painter, is one of the founders of the Purist school of painting. In 1931 when he began work on the painting "Life" he also started the composition of this book in semi-diary form recording his travels, his experiences, his contacts with his fellows, his observations on political events. The years thus covered are 1931 thru 1934.

"It is a book to which in all soberness we may apply the adjective 'remarkable'; and that not only because it is the honest diary of an artist in the travail of a long and arduous achievement, but because of the springing super-abundant vitality of the man's mind, and his quick, firm grasp upon the events of his world."
+ N Y Times p20 N 26 '39 650w

"It is probable that Journey Through Life is not everyone's meat. M. Ozenfant is by turns dogmatic in his political and aesthetic judgements; wildly speculative in his scientific and religious reflections; petulant in his economics; and Rabelaisian in his asides. One follows the windings of a keen intellect and strongly emotional personality, which has undergone certain rigorous mental disciplines and escaped others; the experience must be of interest whether one's own intellect and emotions are in sympathy or not, but the degree of sympathy powerfully determines the final impression."
Spec 163:710 N 17 '39 850w

"M. Ozenfant being of sensitive temperament and quick intellect, finds that everything leads by association to everything else. He is thus rather a Red Queen among writers and the reader must work hard so as not to be left behind between one sentence and the next. But there are some vivid touches, notably the description of Paris during the riots of February 1934."
Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Ag 26 '39 180w

P

PACH, WALTER. Ingres; il. with reproductions of paintings and drawings by the artist. 290p $6 Harper
B or 92 Ingres, Jean Auguste Dominique 39-32477

This biography and critical study of the paintings of Ingres is divided into three sections: The life and work of Ingres; The ideas of Ingres; his recorded words, his notes, his letters; The art of Ingres; revolutionary, classical, realistic, European. With the use of anecdote and translations from the artist's own letters, notebooks and other papers, the author has made a detailed study of Ingres' long life: 1780-1867. Index.

Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

"Mr. Pach's text is enhanced with a chapter given over to excerpts from Ingres's notes and letters and with nearly seventy half-tone reproductions, among them two self-portraits, Ingres's one etching, a number of studies, and, of course, the more important large works. One may not fully share Mr. Pach's enthusiasm for some of these, and in spite of his understanding of Ingres's shortcomings, his praise of a few canvases leans toward the extravagant, but one must value this biography for the insight it gives into the work of a painter who, perceiving 'the pastness of the past,' and its presence in the painting of his own time, yet remains a contemporary." Babette Deutsch
+ — Books p6 N 26 '39 1600w

"A clearly articulated biography, intertwined with a systematic analysis of paintings at different periods, is followed by a lucidly arranged section made up of Ingres' own sayings concerning his aims, beliefs and methods. . . Mr. Pach makes no bones about his admiration for Ingres. But his enthusiasm is infectious, and is better far than a dreary pseudo-impartiality; while he is not in the least blind to his subject's limitations." W. G. Constable

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 550w

"Mr. Pach's book hardly evokes, as it should, the effect and meaning of Ingres's work—the complex and often repellent grandeur of his allegorical tableaux and subject pieces . . . the miraculous delicacy and penetration which make his drawings among the most beautiful things ever put on paper. . . Such devices define his range, his enrichment of studio and salon by evoking state and society, his mastery of a vast freight of pictorial properties by the most passionate research into line, form, and design. Of that whole achievement Ingres's teachings and maxims are a constant illumination, and Mr. Pach has laid open an invaluable apparatus. To anyone who goes from his book to the canvases, the documents, and the research stores of Paris and Montauban, he supplies a guide. If he has not pursued his motives into the necessary exact account of Ingres's devices, discoveries, and lineage, he makes that pursuit inescapable to anyone who takes from his book the twin examples of Ingres's consummate workmanship and the moral rigor of his aesthetic." M. D. Zabel

+ — Nation 150:21 Ja 6 '40 1400w

Reviewed by J. J. Sweeney

New Repub 102:156 Ja 29 '40 400w

"Mr. Pach tells us that the pithiest, most authoritative and deepest things said on art are found in the speech of artists. I think he is right and I feel the real value of this book lies in its very many quotations from the words of Ingres himself. . . I wish Mr. Pach had written less and translated more, even though about one-third of the book is now translation. I am sure there is more interesting material to be found in the writings of Amaury-Duval, Boyer d'Agen, Delaborde and Delècluz. There is a quaintness and vividness about these books by French artists that is fascinating and a stunning directness in Ingres's own statements that make Pach's writing uninteresting by comparison." Margery Ryerson

N Y Times p4 Ja 7 '40 1000w

"In every material and factual way this book is so acceptable that a reviewer raises with reluctance those contentious issues which any appreciation of Ingres inevitably evokes. Mr. Pach is quietly but relentlessly eulogistic. From his pages emerges a hero devoted to the highest principles of art, hence necessarily intolerant of difference,—a great draughtsman consumed with a zeal for perfection and example for all the future. All this is maintained without ever raising the voice, in a manner so sweetly reasonable that it almost has to be believed." F. J. Mather, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 D 23 '39 550w

PACKARD, LEONARD OSCAR; SINNOTT, CHARLES PETER, and OVERTON, BRUCE. The nations today; a physical, industrial and commercial geography. 727p il $2 (10s) Macmillan

330.9 Geography, Commercial (W) 39-5595

"'A physical, industrial, and commercial geography' based on the conception that national or regional differences are due mainly to the reactions of individual men and women to different kinds of environment. The greater part of the book is devoted to the United States, but there are several hundred pages about the other parts of America and the other continents." J Home Econ

J Home Econ 31:402 Je '39 70w

"This textbook is not free from some of the defects common to geography textbooks for secondary schools. It is written for no particular grade level. This fault may be laid not to the textbook-writers but to the confusion in curriculum construction, to the lack of agreement on where geography should be taught. . . However, the reviewer believes that teachers will find the book valuable as a general textbook or as a supplementary reference in classes in history and modern problems. The book is interesting, attractive, scholarly, and up to date." W. F. English

+ — School R 47:714 N '39 650w

Social Studies 30:240 My '39

PACKER, CLARENCE EDWARD. Automotive body and fender repairs. 326p il $3 Goodheart-Willcox

629.26 Automobiles—Repairing 39-19162

"Practical information for the service man, including welding, the servicing of locks and doors, and refinishing, also the business end." Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 36:146 D 15 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

PADELFORD, NORMAN JUDSON. International law and diplomacy in the Spanish civil strife [pub. under the auspices of the Bur. of int. research of Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college]. 710p map $6 Macmillan

341.3 International law and relations. Diplomacy. Neutrality. Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 39-15412

"A study of the diplomacy which has surrounded the Spanish Civil War, and of the legal problems which have arisen from it. Among the issues treated are the negotiations, administration and devolution of the entire Non-Intervention system; the question of recognition of belligerency; interference with foreign shipping by surface, submarine and aerial craft; the Nyon Arrangements; the League of Nations and the conflict; problems of the conduct of diplomatic relations; the policy of the United States." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Should stand as the definitive work on the law and diplomacy of the Spanish civil strife." F. O. Wilcox

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:903 O '39 600w

"The volume is invaluable for the historian as well as for the international lawyer who is interested in the problems of contemporary international law and diplomacy." R. R. Hill

+ Ann Am Acad 205:184 S '39 500w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 550w

"Professor Padelford's book will aid informed opinion in evaluating many of the developments in Spain's civil war in less emotional terms than are usually employed, and will help students of international affairs to give the phrases which they read daily in their newspapers an accurate content." C. W. M.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 19 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:167 O '39 120w

PADOVER, SAUL KUSSIEL. The life and death of Louis XVI. 373p il map $3.75 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Louis XVI, king of France 39-10108

This full-length biography of Louis XVI is based on the thesis that its subject "is the life of a little man, who during his lifetime was overshadowed by a vivid wife and after his death calumniated by a victorious Revolutionary tradition and ignored by generations of historians. The Revolutionary tradition libeled his memory . . . and the historians neglected him because they lacked imagination to see that the figure of Louis XVI was at the core of the French Revolution. He lost his head and throne precisely because he was the sort of man he was, and had he been something else, the course of the French Revolution (if there had been a revolution at all, which is doubtful) and the direction of Europe might have been measurably altered." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

PADOVER, S. K.—Continued

"This first full-length biography of Louis XVI in any language makes up, in the brilliance of its crackling style, the richness of its scholarship and of its illustrations, and the penetrating sympathy of its treatment, for a century and a half of neglect." Geoffrey Bruun
+ Books p2 Ap 30 '39 700w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy
Boston Transcript p2 Je 3 '39 320w

"This is an extraordinarily good piece of historical revaluation—and remarkably effective writing as well." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 101:iv Je '39 300w

"The life of Louis XVI is, perhaps, one of the most dispiriting subjects for biography in all the long annals of royal personages and that is possibly one reason why no really comprehensive book has ever been written about him. . . Mr. Saul K. Padover, a former Research Associate in History at the University of California and author of a life of Marie Antoinette's brother, Joseph II of Austria, has stepped nobly into the breach and written a full-length biography of the unfortunate Louis that possesses an added value from the fact that it is almost entirely based on archive materials." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p5 My 7 '39 1650w

"A solid, fair study."
+ New Yorker 15:78 Ap 22 '39 40w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 20:11 My 27 '39 600w
Time 33:89 My 1 '39 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 210w

PADOVER, SAUL KUSSIEL, ed. See Jefferson, T. Democracy

PAGE, ELIZABETH. The tree of liberty. 985p $3 Farrar

Jefferson, Thomas—Fiction (W) [39-27095]

A long historical novel which follows the lives and adventures of Matthew Howard, his wife Jane, and their children, from 1754 to 1806, and from the eastern seaboard to the western plains frontier. Many historical figures appear in the story, chief among them Thomas Jefferson who was Matthew's friend and for many years his political hero. Bibliography.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:568 Ap '39

"Elizabeth Page, in her nearly thousand-page novel, has been unable to disentangle her main characters from the type-patterns of their time and section. . . In the face of the truly magnificent research out of which the author has built this book, it might seem unfair to carp first at the relatively stock characters. As it happens, they carry the researched material through their lives, and the mighty events seldom rise above them. The events are further muffled by the screen of dialogue. . . This is unfortunate in a book which so soundly depicts the growth of the colonies into a country and portraitures many of the great men who were part of the growing." Clifford Dowdey
— + Atlantic My '39 600w
Booklist 35:223 Mr 1 '39

" 'The Tree of Liberty' would be a rewarding novel if one read it only as a story of adventure and love. It is the more exciting and convincing in its depiction of men and women whose names are bywords, chief among them the lovable figure of Thomas Jefferson. Both the scope of the book, however, and Miss Page's thoughtful and penetrating use of her material give it the gift of a perspective whereby through the past and through the lives of others one gains illumination on much that is near at hand." Mary Ross
+ Books p1 F 26 '39 1500w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 6 '39 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"What sets this book apart from the flood of historical novels is the author's keen understanding of history. . . But the story itself reads like an after-thought. Miss Page's analysis of the motives and actions of historical figures is both thoughtful and mature, but when they appear as characters in her novel they conduct themselves like so many grade children acting in a Washington's Birthday pageant. It would seem that one of the tragedies of the current craze for historical fiction is that it lures writers, unpractised in the novel, to bury sound research and hard thinking under the debris of an almost fatuous 'story.' " J. H. Preston
+ — New Repub 98:171 Mr 15 '39 550w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 19:77 Ja 20 '40 380w

"It is all very old-fashioned, and a little unreal, closer to Mary Johnston and Winston Churchill than to the modern practitioners of the craft; there is not a line in the thousand pages which will bring a blush to the maiden's cheek or cause the most zealous member of the D. A. R. to pale. Yet this is not to disparage either the historical authenticity or the sincerity of Miss Page's performance. An immense amount of research is skillfully concealed in the narrative and it cannot be said that the book does injustice to any of the important characters or episodes of our history. And the story itself—clear, straight-forward, skillfully contrived and gracefully told, has a vitality that sustains it to the end." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Times p1 F 26 '39 1000w

"If you like your American history all mixed up with family quarrels, bits of melodrama, love affairs, and the imaginary conversation of the Founding Fathers, 'The Tree of Liberty' is the book for you, as doubtless it will be for many. I'd rather read a good dull history of the period together with the Federalist Papers. It takes less time and somehow everything seems clearer that way." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 15:74 Mr 4 '39 350w
Pratt p30 summer '39

"Readers whose study of American history stopped in the secondary schools, or in some conventional college course, will find Miss Page's book a revelation, and its value to them will be independent of its value as a novel. If they read this careful and truthful record of our past with an eye to the present; if they test the quality of their own political prejudices and passions, deeply felt but darkly realized, by the light that Miss Page has shed so clearly upon past prejudices and passions, they will draw from 'The Tree of Liberty' the best that it has to give. To other readers, who must take the history for granted, who must savor and judge 'The Tree of Liberty' solely as a novel, it cannot give so much." B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:5 F 25 '39 1250w

"In this reader's opinion, while the author has done a splendid job in both characterization and dialogue, the book is much too factual to become a popular novel. It is doubtful whether the average high school student would have the patience to wade through it." M. B. Lissfelt
— + Social Studies 30:283 O '39 180w
Time 33:79 F 27 '39 220w
Wis Lib Bul 35:66 Ap '39

PAGE, KIRBY. Religious resources for personal living and social action; an exploration with an anthology of verse and prose. 600p $2 Farrar

248 Sociology, Christian. Christian life. Religious literature—Collections 39-27005

"In a day of personal insecurity and frustration, social conflict and disintegration, how can I experience the deeper satisfactions of life, and render maximum service to society?" (Subtitle) Includes daily readings in prose and poetry for fourteen weeks. A final section has religious services for special occasions. For individual or group use. Index.

Booklist 35:184 F 1 '39

"What we have here is a kind of contemporary bible of psalm and prophecy. Study outlines, services of worship for special occasions and an excellent index complete the volume." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p11 My 14 '39 350w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 1 '39 90w

"Dr. Page's wide contacts with life and literature have made it a volume of rich usefulness for many purposes." James van Zant

+ Churchman 153:18 Je 15 '39 120w

PAGET, MRS ELMA KATIE (HOARE). Henry Luke Paget: portrait and frame. 278p il $3 (8s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Paget, Henry Luke, bp. 39-18651

A biography of the much-loved Bishop of Chester (earlier of Stepney), written by his wife.

Christian Century 56:387 Mr 22 '39 50w

"In this charming account of the life of this great man, his wife, Elma K. Paget, has written a splendid memorial. The Church of England has a great capacity for producing saints (though it lacks the formal machinery to canonize them) and Henry Luke Paget was certainly one of this glorious company. The book is inspiring reading." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 153:16 Jl '39 330w

"A good biography requires, on the one hand, a worthy subject; and on the other, a well-sketched background, a gift of narrative, and the power of characterization. These two requirements are fulfilled in the person of Bishop Luke Paget and in the work of Elma, his wife and biographer." Mother Mary Maude

+ Living Church 101:12 O 11 '39 140w

Manchester Guardian p8 F 28 '39 170w

"To some extent, no doubt, Mrs. Paget has been helped by [Paget's] own sketch of his memoirs, of which she makes skilful use; but the work is admirably done and gives the impression that she has successfully seen the frame of the portrait through her husband's eyes. It is the kind of book that should interest those who knew nothing of the bishop, and might even attract those who normally find little interest in ecclesiastical affairs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p68 F 4 '39 750w

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY. Family album. 340p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Chatto]

(W) 39-27707

A family chronicle of upper middle class life in England from the 1880s to the present. The chief character of much of the story is Johnnie Bartlett, old Mrs Brunswick's favorite grandchild. Johnnie is shown at home and at school, in the Navy, and in his two loves, the first ecstatic marriage and the second calmer, middle-aged affair which brings the book to a happy conclusion.

Booklist 36:9 S '39

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

Books p5 Ag 13 '39 1050w

"The title of the book is perfect, for 'Family Album' is bound together not by a single theme or a single character but by the simple fact that all the characters are members of one family and all the incidents deal with this family. It is so cleverly done that you can almost, by a reverse process, turn the words into daguerreotypes and see the pressed flowers pasted carefully onto each page." Peggy Lamson

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 23 '39 340w

Christian Century 56:1306 O 25 '39 100w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 16 '39 450w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 26 '39 650w

New Repub 100:140 S 6 '39 30w

"This is a major book. Major in every way; in the rapier-like sharpness of its wit that never softens into humor; in its Englishness, for it is English in the best and hardest tradition, the tradition that gave a Thackeray and gives a Low; in its superb picture of a country halting on a mental frontier toward which it has been instinctively and almost unknowingly moving for a quarter of a century. It is major, too, in its characterization and in its style, which is as integral a part of the book as the subject-matter." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 60w

Pratt p24 winter '40

"The book has a fresh early morning quality. There is tragedy, to be sure, yet it leaves only a light footprint in the dew. I recommend 'Family Album' to all Pakington fans—may their number increase in the land. And I continue to think that this author's work, with its naval heroes, its pert pretty heroines, its foolish peers, comes very close to musical comedy; except, of course, that there isn't any music." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ag 19 '39 550w

"The tone and people are agreeable, and Mr. Pakington can be amusing, though the humour is more in evidence in the earlier chapters when the children have not yet grown up. I thought these chapters, which include several school scenes, the best. . . . The love scenes are more ordinary. But they are treated with tact, discretion, and good taste." Forrest Reid

+ — Spec 162:1010 Je 9 '39 190w

"Mr Pakington has written a pleasant tale, in which the interest is more in the incidents than in the backgrounds. It belongs to the better grade of summer reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 260w

"Mr. Pakington writes with a touch which is both light and sure and at the same time a little sentimental and nostalgic. In the earlier scenes he is at pains to give period sketches which are both true and humorous, and the situations are always entertaining. The author has a keen sense of fun which is never laboured except, perhaps, in connexion with Johnnie's two maiden country aunts, Daisy and Dora."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 27 '39 300w

PALMER, ALBERT WENTWORTH. The art of conducting public worship. 211p $2.50 Macmillan

264 Public worship 39-7283

A book of advice and helpful suggestions for improving public worship in "the nonliturgical church of the puritan background and tradition . . . Congregational, Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, or Disciple. . . . It seeks to be a book not primarily of academic research and technical detail but of broad outlines, working principles and practical illustration, equally interesting to the thoughtful layman, the choirmaster and the pastor." (p 3) Index.

PALMER, A. W. Continued

Booklist 35:283 My 1 '39

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p21 O 1 '39 280w

"President Palmer has written a timely, practical book, incisive in analysis and discerning in interpretation." R. K. Morton
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 21 '39 450w

Christian Century 56:453 Ap 5 '39 60w

Reviewed by H. J. Simpson
Churchman 153:18 Je 15 '39 230w

"[The book] is well written, and covers the field of worship in the churches with new and fresh emphasis." W. R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 16:232 Jl '39 310w

"Dr. Palmer . . . writes not as an academic, whose interest in the subject is prevailingly theoretical, but as one who feels quite keenly the inadequate procedures of so many churches and has himself been rewarded by attempts to correct them. His book, is, therefore, exceedingly practical, not only in its treatment of the theme but also by the inclusion of some orders of service which the author has used to good effect." H. C. Phillips
+ J Religion 20:107 Ja '40 200w

"The style of Dr. Palmer's book is clear, simple and pleasing. The spirit is irenic. Thus the book voices the genial charm of the writer. He seems to be speaking face to face with a group of his young friends. The book will appeal to the busy pastor, the leader of music, and the thoughtful layman, especially in a large city church, with adequate resources in the way of leadership and money." A. W. Blackwood
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 16 '39 480w

PALMER, BENJAMIN WHIPPLE. Marshall and Taney; statesmen of the law. 281p il $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

B or 92 Marshall, John. Taney, Roger Brooke. U.S. Supreme court 39-30985

This study of the role of the Supreme Court in American history centers in a review of the careers of two great judges, Marshall and Taney. "The study is not intended merely as a reappraisal of [these] two in the light of modern knowledge. It is designed also as a contribution to a better understanding of the judiciary as a great department of government, vitally affecting, for weal or woe, the future of America." (Pref) Index.

"The volume is one of pretended scholarship which in fact is nothing but the result of an industrious use of scissors and paste." M. De W. Howe
— Books p30 N 26 '39 250w

"In a final chapter of comparisons the book reaches its highest point. Refuting the crude characterization of Taney as a state-rights dogmatist the author recalls his participation in numerous decisions working toward federal supremacy. Between Marshall and Taney there were differences of emphasis rather than contradictions. The former was mightily vindicated by the triumph of nationalism secured by the Civil War. But with expanding views of police power and the acceptance of new social objectives Taney is coming into his own." Charles Fairman
Harvard Law R 53:349 D '39 600w

PALMER, MRS ELIZABETH. Give me a river; il. by Richard Holberg. 152p $1.75 (6s) Scribner

(W) 39-27820

"Like Nightingale House [Book Review Digest, 1937] this story is set in Minnesota in the latter part of the nineteenth century. . . Margy, her brothers and her friend, Katy Lou, are the chief characters in the story. Their everyday adventures (centering about the Saint Croix River) are climaxed by the news that Jenny Lind is to sing in their town. When the boat strikes a sandbar, and cannot come up to the town, several of the townspeople row down to the boat, where the concert is given." Library J

Booklist 36:75 O 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p15 N 12 '39 300w

Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 140w

"It was somewhat disappointing to find that so much of the same material had been used: Jenny Lind figures more prominently here than in the first book. However, this is a good story in its own right, and the songs all the way through give it flavor. . . Richard Holberg's illustrations are just right for the story, which girls of nine to twelve will enjoy. They may want to try the recipe for Swedish cookies on the back flap of the jacket, too. It's said to be a good one." Josephine Smith
+ — Library J 64:806 O 15 '39 170w

"This is less a story than a series of chapters, lacking a connected plot to hold the undivided attention of younger readers, yet the incident and the high spirits are of the kind common to country children of any generation in America, which take on a special flavor according to the community. They are recounted in a sprightly style, and, judging by the improvement over the author's earlier book, 'The Nightingale House,' with a touch which promises even better things to come." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 27 '39 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:220 D '39

PALMER, HAROLD. Investment salvage in railroad reorganizations. 136p $2 Harper

385 Railroads—U.S. Railroads—Finance. Investments 38-32814

The author has had long experience in the field of railroad organization. It is his thesis that investors can protect themselves from losses sustained by the various programs for the redistribution of wealth by purchasing first mortgage bonds of bankrupt railroads. He includes chapters on the law and procedure of modern railroad organization, on bankrupt railroad bonds and the market, and general chapters on the railroad industry. Index.

Reviewed by Stuart Daggett
Am Econ R 29:144 Mr '39 170w

"Valuable contribution to investment literature. . . Many readers will find considerable enlightenment in regard to the workings of Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, and many of them will be surprised at the high tribute and almost complete lack of criticism given to the Interstate Commerce Commission." Brayton Wilson
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 15 '38 750w

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE. The man in the purple gown. 258p $2 Dodd

39-14948

Detective story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"This Grade A item is modestly and correctly described on the jacket as 'a detective story,' a fact noticed by this department after frenzied searching in the higher criticism for some nobler, loftier term to indicate its quality as a superior mystery, an honest-to-goodness novel, or a combination of the two. . . 'The Man in the Purple Gown' may well go down the years as a classic in its field—it's certainly among the best performances of 1939." Will Cuppy
+ Books p15 Je 25 '39 300w

"In spite of the fact that we realized this was a psychological mystery, we found it awfully hard to believe in a detective who made long speeches—even if he did come from Scotland Yard."

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 1 '39 100w

"As a study in morbid psychology this book has its points, but a little of that sort of thing goes a long way with most readers of detective fiction." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 25 '39 100w

"Grand story, with a mass of undercurrents for those not satisfied with surface things."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 24 '39 40w

"No great task to guess killer's identity, but Gothic somberness of tale and fear-neither-god-nor-devil people accelerate action. Spooky."

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 24 '39 40w

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE, and SAUNDERS, H. A. St G. See Beeding, F., pseud.

PALMER, ROBERT ROSWELL. Catholics and unbelievers in eighteenth century France. 236p $4 Princeton univ. press

230.0944 Religious thought. Christianity—Evidences. Roman Catholic church in France. Philosophy, French 39-32369

"The purpose of this book is to examine the ideas of the opponents of the philosophes. Most intellectual opposition came from the church. Our study is therefore a study of the ideas of French Catholics from about 1740 to the Revolution. It deals largely, but not exclusively, with the conflict between the orthodox and the persons whom we shall call, as they were then called, philosophers, unbelievers, or infidels. To show that not all the ideas of Catholics were dictated by the interest of the Catholic Church, we shall consider also, from time to time, the opinions of French Protestants and of a few thinkers who were neither religious nor yet in agreement with the philosophers." (p. 4) Index.

"With sparse use of adjectives denoting value Mr. Palmer presents in clear and well turned sentences a telling analysis of the best orthodox thought in eighteenth century France, only incidentally correcting the philosophe legend. Nevertheless, because he has analyzed the lesser current of orthodoxy while keeping the main historical stream of heterodoxy vividly before his readers, his story gains in interest and achieves a quality that is little short of brilliance." Louis Gottschalk

+ Christian Century 56:1342 N 1 '39 850w

"Professor Palmer's excellently documented volume is a genuine contribution to modern intellectual history." A. P. Levack

+ Commonweal 31:101 N 17 '39 600w

"This is a truly scholarly work. . . The heroes in this book are the Catholic apologists, little known to most of us. The author shows a fine blending of philosophical appreciation with historical skill. It is a book which both philosophers and historians will read with benefit. Apologists of the church will learn lessons from historical apologetics. It is one of the best books this reviewer has had in hand in recent years." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 50:242 Ja '40 230w

J Philos 37:23 Ja 4 '40 850w

PALTENGHI, MADELENA. Rumpus rabbit; with pictures by C. W. Anderson. 27p $1.50 Harper

39-24224

Picture-story book for the very young. It is all about the rabbit who proved himself a boon to his race by teaching rabbits to jump backwards, making tracks which fooled the hunters.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 5 '39 200w

"Though this is not of great importance, it is entertaining and the pictures by C. W. Anderson supply quite a bit of the fun." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 64:903 N 15 '39 70w

PAN, STEPHEN CHAO YING. American diplomacy concerning Manchuria. 385p $4 Humphries

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. Manchurian question. Eastern question (Far East) [38-32986]

"Covers not only American diplomacy dealing with Manchuria, but also what the Germans call the Geopolitik of the region which once constituted China's 'Three Eastern Provinces,' something of the effect on the foreign trade of Western powers in those parts of China which have come under the dominance of Japan, and the historical backgrounds of the open door and nonrecognition policies." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography, list of principal persons mentioned, index.

Reviewed by H. L. Kingman

Ann Am Acad 204:184 Jl '39 500w

"Painstakingly recorded and analyzed."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:811 Jl '39 10w

PAPANIN, IVAN DMITRIEVICH. Life on an ice floe; diary; tr. from the Russian. 300p il map $2.50 Messner

919.8 Arctic regions 39-27558

Day by day record of the adventures of the Russian expedition which lived all one winter on a drifting ice floe in the Arctic. The author and his three companions settled on the ice twelve miles from the North Pole in May, 1937. In February, 1938, after having drifted more than a thousand miles, they were rescued from the remnant of their ice floe east of Greenland.

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

"There is a lesson in this book for the reader who contemplates an Arctic journey to get away from the world. It is: do not take a Soviet citizen along. They carry politics even to the North Pole. Some of the diary entries under this heading are rather suspect." J. B. Phillips

Books p4 Jl 9 '39 700w

Reviewed by A. B. Lewis

Boston Transcript p2 Je 3 '39 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"A frostbitten, sober, dramatic record—with no literary flourishes and no need for any."

New Repub 99:168 Je 14 '39 40w

"Papanin confesses that he is not a writer. It is just as well that he is not for his diary has a naive simplicity which at first perplexes the Western reader and then becomes enthralling for any one who likes to read of high adventure. But Papanin learned to write before he got through, for there is excitement in nearly every page of the last half of his book. Its tempo increases as the speed of the drift increased, and as disaster came closer to them before rescue." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p4 My 28 '39 1250w

New Yorker 15:101 My 13 '39 60w

"To one reader at least, it must be said that the book was tedious. The daily necessary routine of a scientific depot, the soundings, the observations, the radio reports, described in detail over and over and over again, become wearying and monotonous. . . There is little doubt that to the comparatively small group of readers interested in everything pertaining to the Arctic, and to scientists in general, the book will appeal." M. A. Peary

Sat R of Lit 20:17 Je 24 '39 460w

" 'Life on an Ice Floe' is an intensely human document as well as one of scientific value, and offers an interesting combination of naïveté and learning. . . Perhaps the book epitomizes a new nation, young, eager, acquisitive, with the gravity and acumen of an intelligent child and with the same headlong joy, blind enthusiasm and precocious attainment so characteristic of youth."

PAPANIN, I. D.—Continued
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Jl '39 250w

PARES, SIR BERNARD. The fall of the Russian monarchy; a study of the evidence. 510p il map $5 Knopf [18s Cape, J]
947.08 Russia—History. Russia—Politics and government [39-19181]

"While Trotsky [in his History of the Russian Revolution] traced the growth of the revolutionary movement from below, and described, as only an active participator could describe it, the triumph of the Bolsheviks, Professor Pares, who also lived in Russia throughout the period, shows the gradual disintegration of the ruling class, the short-lived triumph of its Liberal critics and the final collapse. . . Convinced that things might easily have gone quite differently even as late as 1915, he sees the story as a personal tragedy of three people, the Emperor, the Empress, and Rasputin; and his attention is so closely concentrated on these three that the other figures in the story, with the exception of Anna Vyrnbova, and the young Kerensky, are little more than names, difficult for the inexpert reader to keep distinct in his head." (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

Reviewed by Avrahm Yarmolinsky
Books p16 O 1 '39 1150w

"For those interested in Russian history the publication of Sir Bernard Pares's book is an event of no small importance. . . To the performance of his latest task he has brought an intimate knowledge of the country, a sympathetic insight into the psychology of its people, and a thorough acquaintance with available historical material. The result is a book which I am inclined to rate as his best work, and one of the few really valuable contributions to modern Russian history." Michael Karpovich
+ Boston Transcript p13 S 15 '39 600w

"The story of the decline is admirably told. Sir Bernard made frequent visits to Russia in the years before the war and also saw much of the fighting during the war as an unofficial observer with the Russian Army. His book happily combines two important elements in historical narrative: a thorough mastery of the historical literature relating to the subject and personal acquaintance with many of the actors in the drama." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 21 '39 600w
Economist 135:716 Je 24 '39 800w
Foreign Affairs 18:373 Ja '40 70w

"There are several criticisms that may be made of different sections of the book, such as the responsibility for the German victory of Tannenberg, or the statement that the present Russian frontier follows the line on which the Russian Army halted after the great retreat. But these are slight details in the full, lucid, and authoritative account of the involved events of the great age of which the author has given us his masterly record. It will remain our chief source for the period." A. B. Boswell
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 27 '39 400w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 149:384 O 7 '39 700w
New Repub 100:377 N 1 '39 50w

"In this book Professor Pares has given us the indispensable complement to The History of the Russian Revolution. . . While Trotsky's history is inspired by the view of a glorious future, the Fall of the Russian Monarchy is, as its title indicates, the careful study of a vanished and half-regretted past." R. H. S. Crossman
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:994 Je 24 '39 1400w

Reviewed by M. T. Florinsky
N Y Times p31 N 5 '39 1300w

Reviewed by Manya Gordon
Sat R of Lit 20:13 S 9 '39 850w

"Sir Bernard Pares has added an invaluable book to the rich literature of the Russian Revolution; he tells a story which is as fascinating for the general reader as for the professional historian." Goronwy Rees
+ Spec 162:970 Je 2 '39 800w

"Sir Bernard Pares's new book is by far the best account of the causes and outbreak of the Russian Revolution of 1917 which has yet appeared. It has not lacked predecessors, but most of these have suffered from their authors' being either too closely involved in the events they describe. . . or too ignorant of Russian conditions prior to the Bolshevists' assumption of power. . . Sir Bernard Pares, on the other hand, had long been familiar with Russia and her political figures; he was himself in Russia during most of the events he describes, and, in addition, he has had the advantage of conferring with many of the men who played important roles in that dramatic period."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p291 My 20 '39 750w

"The task which the author set himself he has accomplished superlatively, yet the reader may well put the book down with a certain feeling of dissatisfaction. Could such a sincere, patriotic, and intelligent liberalism have had no roots in the country? . . Only rarely does a hint of revolutionary undercurrents crop out, as when Trubetskoy urged Nicholas to join hands with the liberals to forestall a blind attack on 'all the masters' (p. 81). The reviewer is, of course, not prepared to maintain the contrary assumption, that Russia could not have progressed by peaceful stages to effect vital and overdue reforms, but in making no place on his crowded stage for the revolutionary forces of Russia the author has weakened his thesis of the near-triumph of Russian liberalism by a certain artificiality of construction." P. E. Mosely
+ — Yale R n s 29:383 winter '40 850w

PARES, RICHARD. Colonial blockade and neutral rights, 1739-1763. 324p map $7 (21s) Oxford 341.3 Prizes (international law). War, Maritime (international law). Neutrality. Privateering. Continuous voyages (international law) [38-35011]

"Mr. Pares's theme is the development of prize law, culminating in the Rule of War of 1756 and the doctrine of continuous voyage. The consequences for Britain's international relations are narrated in a chapter on 'The Diplomacy of Neutral Rights', disclosing the genesis of the movement for armed neutrality." Am Hist R

"The author handles an impressive mass of admiralty decisions and diplomatic manuscripts with scrupulous care, a discriminating sense of the significant, maturity of judgment, and clarity of style. This volume and his War and Trade in the West Indies [Book Review Digest, 1937] prove Mr. Pares a reliable authority on international relations in the eighteenth century." F. W. Pitman
+ Am Hist R 45:132 O '39 600w

Reviewed by D. J. L. Davies
Eng Hist R 54:333 Ap '39 1400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 24 '38 750w

PARGETER, EDITH. The city lies four-square. 296p $2 Reynal
(W) 39-27065

In this modern ghost story two pairs of lovers, the one pair living, the other a century dead, find their way to each other in Providence Cottage, and to the city that "lieth four-square."

Booklist 35:205 F 15 '39

" 'The City Lies Four-Square' has the charm of a ballad in the skillful simplicity of its telling and the emotional authenticity of its allegory. To ask for credibility other than that would be to ignore the author's unabashed intentions. Obviously this is not everybody's book, but for those who are willing to grant the old town its day it is a discriminating and delightful story." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 F 19 '39 600w

" 'The City Lies Four-Square' has the beauty and the sensitivity of youth. It is a novel that leaves a lingering fragrance in its wake. If its 24-year-old English author can preserve these qualities unblunted when maturity and experience widen and deepen the bed of her talent, she may be assured of an enthusiastic welcome for her future work." Regina Madden

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '39 360w

Cath World 149:380 Je '39 40w

"Call this escape literature if you will—whatever escape literature may be; it is literature, and the escape it brings is to truth and beauty."

+ Christian Century 56:290 Mr 1 '39 160w

Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 30w

New Repub 98:175 Mr 15 '39 50w

Reviewed by John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 17:506 Ap 1 '39 280w

"The novel has its faults; there are times when Patrick, ghost as he is, shows such physical limitations as could properly belong only to flesh and blood. . . The best of the book, in so far as its characters are concerned, is to be found in the portrait of the beautiful Damaris. . . Providence Cottage itself, and its surroundings, are pictured in soft, luminous tints which, while unmistakably of this earth, yet have at times that suggestion of otherworldliness we have all been conscious of in shimmering mist and the radiance of the sky at sunset." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p7 F 12 '39 700w

Pratt p30 summer '39

"In that extremely complex document, the British Order of Precedence, one finds the statement that Knights of the Star of India rank 'with but after' Knights of the Bath. One may borrow this useful anomaly and say that 'The City Lies Four-Square' ranks with but after 'Berkeley Square' and 'Peter Ibbetson'; it is not nearly so good as the latter, but it has the same sort of haunting charm." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 11 '39 280w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 162:462 Mr 17 '39 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 600w

"This might have been something even more than a book to remember and reread (it is certainly that) if the interwoven love story of Margaret and her young doctor, Julian—who gave all that he had of mind and spirit to deliver Patrick from his century's exile—had been of the same order as the other. But in her treatment of plain reality Miss Pargeter sinks to mediocrity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 11 '39 470w

Wis Lib Bul 35:66 Ap '39

PARK, DOROTHEA. Pets are fun; il. by Marguerite Davis. (Community life ser) 91p $1; school ed 68c Houghton

39-14339

"A primer which has its emphasis on the good care of pets and the pleasure in having them, all woven into a story in which Billy, Sally and Jerry share. The colored illustrations are lively and informing. Grades 1-3." Wis Lib Bul

---

"Educationally it is informative and affords excellent practice in learning to read." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 40w

Wis Lib Bul 35:189 N '39

PARK, WILLARD Z. Shamanism in western North America; a study in cultural relationships. 166p $2.25 Northwestern univ.

970.62 Shamanism. Indians of North America—Religion and mythology. Paiute Indians 38-14755

"The author's problem and conclusions will be of interest chiefly to specialists in American Indian ethnology. His goal is to ascertain interrelationships of tribal cultures reflected in the geographical distribution of elements in the shamanism of the Paviotso, or Northern Paiute of western Nevada. After describing Paviotso shamanism in considerable detail, he traces the distribution of similar beliefs and practices among neighboring tribes of the Great Basin, the Plateau, California, etc." Am J Psychol

---

Reviewed by Philip Drucker

Am Anthropol 41:137 Ja '39 650w

Reviewed by M. F. Martin

Am J Psychol 52:153 Ja '39 130w

"The social scientists interested in development in ethnology may well look into this little volume by Willard Park, both for its methodology and for its presentation of original materials on the religious practices of the Paviotso of western Nevada. Here is a model study of the distributional type with the aims and limitations clearly set forth, the shamanistic patterns of the Paviotso presented in theory and actuality, and the distributional data both extensive and well interpreted." Fred Eggan

+ Am J Soc 45:628 Ja '40 150w

Reviewed by A. I. Hallowell

Am Soc R 4:882 D '39 130w

"This book is an excellent example of the strength and the weakness of contemporary American anthropological research. Into it has gone the efforts of one of the most capable of the younger generation of American workers in the field, an immense literature has been thoroughly sifted, and every surviving reservation Indian who may know something of shamanism in Pre-Columbian times has been interrogated. The result is an authoritative book. But since it developed out of a doctoral dissertation at Yale, it had to be written within the traditional framework of all American anthropology. And because within that framework Dr. Park has done an excellent job, the deficiencies of the framework stand out more noticeably than they do in many inferior studies of the same sort." C. W. M. Hart

+ — Canadian Forum 18:321 Ja '39 550w

PARKER, CHARLES W. The lawn; how to make it, and how to maintain it. (Mass. horticultural soc. Gardener's lib) 118p il $1 Hale

635.964 Lawns 39-27372

Considers the first steps in the making of a lawn, including preparation of the soil, selection of seed for different conditions, and a list of formulae for lawn mixtures. The latter part of the work is given over to the care of the lawn—rebuilding, weed control, pest control, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:309 My 15 '39

"Mr. Parker's 'The Lawn' provides in concise form the essential information to enable one to establish and maintain a first-class turf. Any one who really follows his directions can hardly fail to succeed." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p11 Je 18 '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 11 '39 120w

PARKER, DOROTHY (ROTHSCHILD) (MRS ALAN CAMPBELL). Here lies. 362p $3 Viking

(W) 39-27396

"This volume contains all of Dorothy Parker's short stories excepting a few which she did not wish to retain among her collected prose." There are two stories: Soldiers of the Republic, and Clothe the Naked which have not before appeared in book form; and one entirely new tale, The Custard Heart.

PARKER, DOROTHY Continued

Booklist 35:307 My 15 '39

"Dorothy Parker, with all her unusual gifts and with a technique ready to hand capable of meeting vastly greater demands than she has thus far put upon it, remains for the present an immensely clever and tantalizing writer. It is far too early yet for the symbolism suggested in the title 'Here Lies.' Dorothy Parker ought to write more!" F. H. Britten

Books p3 My 7 '39 900w

Reviewed by Ann Springer
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 850w

Canadian Forum 19:97 Je '39 420w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 17 '39 170w

Reviewed by Thomas Moult
Manchester Guardian p3 D 15 '39 300w

Reviewed by Mina Curtiss
Nation 149:76 Jl 15 '39 900w

Reviewed by John Mair
New Statesman & Nation 18:584 O 21 '39 230w

"If there is a criticism of this excellent book, it is that Dorothy Parker too often uses the same themes and the same situations. . . However, in the opinion of this reviewer, this volume shows more clearly than ever before that Dorothy Parker is not only a scintillating epigrammatist but the creator of sketches which will be remembered long after many more pretentious writings have been forgotten." Norma McCarty

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '39 600w

"I don't know just why Dorothy Parker has chosen to collect her best short stories, two dozen of them, under the gloomy rubric 'Here Lies,' but I do know that the stories themselves are as good as they ever were, and they were always good. Anybody who knows something more brilliant to say about them at this late date may come forward and say it." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:121 Ap 29 '39 200w

"Under a single cover, now, is the best prose work of one of the important writers of the period. The only major fault I can find, after reading the collected stories, is their number. Most writers, even the very good ones, overwork themselves. But Mrs. Parker should be locked in her study and fed bread and water until she produces twice again as many stories as she has in her new volume." Ruth McKenney

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Ap 29 '39 600w

"High up on any list of notable exports from the United States should be recorded the wisecracks of Dorothy Parker. . . Miss Parker's talent is such that she keeps us convinced and entertained. We may smile wryly, but we smile. Our smile is not a sunny one; it is provoked by such remarks as that 'it's always darkest before the deluge.' The stories are technically skilful and full of clever observation and telling touches. The scenes and the people are brought before our eyes; the social levels and backgrounds are very nicely adjusted; and the dialogue gives away secrets, as dialogue should, with the utmost economy of means. In some of the stories secrets are given away in soliloquies, and the heart snatched from the breast is certainly a peculiar-looking object." William Plomer

+ Spec 163:708 N 17 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p687 N 25 '39 130w

Wis Lib Bul 35:114 Je '39

PARKER, ERIC, ed. See Bible. Whole. Selections

PARKES, HENRY BAMFORD. Marxism: an autopsy. 300p $3 Houghton

335.4 Communism. Marx, Karl 39-27994

An analysis of the philosophy of Marxism, of its progress and achievements in Soviet Russia, and of the possibilities of a program in America which might retain the good features of Marxism while preventing the growth of dictatorship either by one party or by one man. Index.

Booklist 36:126 D 1 '39

"Despite its unevenness, Professor Parkes has written an interesting and distinctive book. And in a field so encumbered by dogma and cliche that new ideas hardly have a chance to grow, this is no mean accomplishment." Sidney Hook

+ — Books p5 D 31 '39 1050w

Reviewed by John Lydenberg
Boston Transcript p4 N 11 '39 350w

No Am 248:414 winter '40 80w

"As an instrument of persuasion, this book is by no means as awkward and ill-adapted as most of the work of well-meaning American progressive intellectuals. But Mr. Parkes has too lively a mind to be very conciliatory. His book will infuriate the convinced Marxist; and of course the ordinary conservative needed no proof that Marx was wrong. Yet the recent alliance between Stalin and Hitler has undoubtedly jolted many American progressives into some distrust of Marxist ideas, and among such people Mr. Parkes should be read carefully and pondered long." Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 21:11 D 9 '39 850w

Springf'd Republican p12 N 10 '39 600w

"As an effort at disinterested, civilized social blue printing, Marxism: An Autopsy is head & shoulders above any documents of the right, left or centre for a long time back. If its program is, as Parkes calls it, tentative, it is certainly seminal, certainly consistent with one thoroughly proved thesis: that, to progressive politics Marxism is more a liability than an asset."

+ — Time 34:82 O 23 '39 1350w

PARKHURST, WINTHROP, and DE BEKKER, LEANDER JAN. The encyclopedia of music and musicians. 662p il $2.75 c1937 Crown

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians 38-227

For descriptive note see Annual for 1937.

"Illustrations, of which there is no list, consist of eight plates containing well-reproduced photographs of famous composers and a diagram of the arrangement of an orchestra. The absence of a list of these is regrettable. The articles are usually brief but concisely expressed in a readable style. Information is mainly of a factual rather than critical nature and generally dependable though some errors were noted. . . The Encyclopedia of Music contains much information of a popular sort which makes it especially interesting in the home library, and it is recommended as well for supplementary use in the public library."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:19 Ap '39 650w

PARKINS, ALMON ERNEST, and WHITAKER, JOE RUSSELL, eds. Our natural resources and their conservation; contributors: Wallace W. Atwood [and others]. 2d rev ed 647p il maps $5; school ed $4 Wiley [25s Chapman]

333 Conservation of resources. U.S.—Industries and resources 39-13187

"Some rewriting, editing to remove duplication, and the addition of a chapter on the conservation of commercial fish constitute the chief revisions in this book." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:383 Jl 15 '39

Reviewed by R. E. Janssen
J Geol 47:852 N '39 270w

PARKS, EDD WINFIELD. Segments of Southern thought. 392p $3 Univ. of Ga.

810.9 American literature—South. South—Civilization 39-1293

A volume of essays on Southern life and literature. Partial contents: The background of Southern thought; Southern poetic theory; Southern poetry; Urban influences on antebellum writers; Southern towns and cities; Mark Twain as Southerner; Walter Hines Page and the South; Eugene O'Neill's symbolism. Index.

Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Doughty
Commonweal 29:498 F 24 '39 420w

"The chief virtue of these carefully pondered, candidly regional essays is that they point out the value and interest of the Southern pre-Civil War literary tradition."
New Yorker 14:83 F 11 '39 20w

Reviewed by Charles Angoff
— No Am 247:180 spring '39 650w

PARMENTER, CHRISTINE (WHITING) (MRS K. R. PARMENTER). Stories of courage and devotion. 276p $2 Messner

39-30324

Collection of nine short stories, all of them imbued with the quality of courage and devotion. Some of the stories have Christmas settings. Contents: Out of fear; The little king; For value received; Roses in December; "Nor all thy tears. . .."; Lynette—the plain one; Out of the air; Mr Piper of Hamlin; Old Andy turns the tide.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p22 N 19 '39 90w

"Sweetness and light is the theme throughout, but so simply and sincerely presented as to be appealing rather than cloying." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 D 3 '39 320w

PARMER, CHARLES B. For gold and glory; the story of thoroughbred racing in America. 352p il $3.50 Carrick

798.4 Horse racing 39-30807

Story of thoroughbred horse racing in America, showing how present-day racing has developed from its early beginnings in Virginia. Incidental information on jockeys, trainers, judges, racing commissions, problems of money and the owning of stables, and the legal aspects of betting, are contained in the book. There are tabulated historical charts of nine outstanding races in the turf world. Index.

"The facts in this book appear to have been very carefully checked by the author, who is a racing authority in his own right. A hard-boiled professional handicapper to whom this reviewer gave 'For Gold and Glory' reports: 'Most books about racing are full of errors. This one's a good job.' That is a pretty fair recommendation for any book of this kind." R. P. Harriss
+ Books p9 D 24 '39 500w

"Mr. Parmer looks with a lively and sympathetic eye on the racing industry as a whole, and was smart enough to devote considerable space to the important place which women have taken not only as owners but as active trainers. The book is attractively made and is well-illustrated with good photographs." T. S.
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 120w

"The author is an authority on the subject of the thoroughbred, but in preparation for this book he spent months digging into old records. These have produced detailed and vivid descriptions of races from the early days in this country and also some of the more famous English and French races. . . The book is profusely illustrated with modern action photographs and old Currier & Ives prints."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 N 23 '39 300w

PARRISH, DILLWYN, and PARRISH, MRS MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY). See Berne, Victoria, pseud.

PARRISH, MAUD. Nine pounds of luggage [decorations by Robert S. Robison]. 400p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Voyages and travels. Adventure and adventurers (W) 39-23495

Born in 1878 in San Francisco, the author spent her first sixteen years being "properly brought up." Then she rebelled, sought freedom first in marriage, then, when that failed, in flight to Alaska and a life as a dancer in the gold towns there. After that start Maud was ready for adventure in all parts of the globe from South America to Paris, from Peking to Moscow. This book, based largely on letters to friends, contains the record of her life and travels in a happy-go-lucky style without regard for dates or formal coherency.

"Maud Parrish seems to be, frankly, quite a remarkable person. Certainly she seems to be quite remarkably frank. . . Her book rattles on entertainingly through the light-hearted, unexacting, unconventional and really courageous jauntings of nearly half a century, and it is unusual and more than a little enjoyable."
+ Books p12 S 24 '39 300w

Reviewed by Regina Madden
Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 300w

"It will not be surprising if this personal story is widely read. It is completely naive and unpretentious, and it shows its own sort of resourcefulness, daring and enterprise. Maud Parrish makes us think of a sprightly mountain goat, kicking up its heels and leaping from point to point, untethered, unreflective, and entirely contented so long as its freedom is sure."
+ N Y Times p11 S 17 '39 380w
Wis Lib Bul 35:215 D '39

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). Life is for the living. 239p $2 Dodd

39-21180

Vivid story of the love of a spoiled American heiress and a White Russian baron, an exile in America. The course of their two lives is traced by means of back flashes over the time from the sinking of the Lusitania to the present.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 S 3 '39 100w

"The author's sympathetic portrayal of the gallant white Russian, plus an odd twist to the ending of her story lift 'Life Is for the Living' somewhat above the usual simple summer romances." M. P. Johnson
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 190w

"The book is ambitious rather than impressive. The love story is entertaining without being convincing. Dmitri's progress from war in Russia to a fight for existence in a New York garage makes the most romantically interesting reading." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p16 S 3 '39 260w

"Although one suspects that the author has used the tabloids and the more lurid Sunday supplements for a part of her source material,

PARROTT, K. U.– Continued
'Life is for the Living' has sufficient plausibility and a brisk pace to keep the reader interested. The White Russians, honorable and charming, are probably idealized; certainly they bear little resemblance to the corrupt and childlike aristocrats in Chekhov's plays. The absence of humor is regrettable, but the absence of authorial comment is welcome: the story tells itself." R. A. C.
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 9 '39 250w

"This novel written in a romantic style, provides a light but entertaining story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 300w

PARRY, ALBERT. Whistler's father. 368p il $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Whistler, George Washington
39-29405

Biography of the father of James McNeill Whistler. Major George Washington Whistler was an engineer who built the first Russian railroad, extending from St Petersburg to Moscow. The major part of the book is devoted to the Russian years: 1843 to 1849. Index.

Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

"Mr. Parry has studied his man and is clear and accurate about the smallest detail. He gives a brilliant interpretation of the Russian episode which was such an important part in George Whistler's life." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p5 N 5 '39 500w

"A very readable book, enriched with well chosen illustrations."
+ New Repub 101:241 D 13 '39 70w

"Mr. Parry writes with more violence than skill. His prejudices are extravagant, his words and sentences are crude and grandiose, his indignation is ungoverned, his metaphors are mixed. But his Russian material is picturesque and highly colorful, his illustrations from old prints and drawings are charming, and his story of Whistler's father is dramatically interesting, even though its subject never really comes alive." Katherine Woods
— N Y Times p4 N 5 '39 800w

"Currier & Ives picture of an American engineer's family in the Russia of Nicholas I. . . Lots of fresh material gently paced."
+ New Yorker 15:90 N 11 '39 60w

"In this book about Whistler's father, it is Whistler's mother who emerges as much the more vital figure. . . . Major Whistler's wife, despite her very positive qualities, is not the guide that an enlightened American would have engaged for a trip to the capital of Czar Nicholas I. . . . Mr. Parry has harnessed his very agile pen to Whistler's father and dashed with him through St. Petersburg, but on the way picked up Whistler's wife and children and a great many strangers. The result is a fragmentary and rather breathless view of the Russian capital and people. Neither the American railroad builder nor his wife is a fully developed portrait." Manya Gordon
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:12 N 25 '39 650w

"It is to be regretted that Mr. Parry, with his access to Whistler material did not attempt a real biography of Maj. Whistler. He must have been one of the world's most admirable men—sensitive, generous, modest, companionable, warm in friendship and earnest in duties. But he was also, as Mr. Sinclair declared, an engineer who contributed something to the science of railroad building and operation."
Springf'd Republican p7e N 19 '39 900w
Time 34:88 N 13 '39 380w

PARSONS, MRS ELSIE WORTHINGTON (CLEWS). Pueblo Indian religion. 2v 549;551-1275p il maps $7 Univ. of Chicago press [35s Cambridge]

970.6 Pueblo Indians. Indians of North America—Religion and mythology 39-19032

"Dr. Parsons, who has been one of the recognized workers in the field of southwestern anthropology for many years, has drawn to a considerable extent upon her own previously published writings and upon the writings of others in producing this very comprehensive work. In a 100-page introductory chapter she defines the field and paints a clear picture of the social structure, customs, systems of land tenure, courtship and marriage practices, popular beliefs and methods of thought. Passing then to the field of religion she discusses successively the ceremonial organizations, spirits, cosmic notions, ritual, and the calendar." (Christian Century) Bibliographical notes and index at end of volume two.

Reviewed by A. I. Hallowell
Am Soc R 4:881 D '39 300w

"Many insights into Indian life will reward the reader who scans the pages of this book. To the student of Indian life a wealth of detail is presented and here and there new interpretations are suggested." Clark Wissler
+ Books p2 Jl 9 '39 1200w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:824 Je 28 '39 650w

"Dr. Parsons brings to her work years of personal contact with the Pueblo people from Hopi to Taos, and extensive experience in neighboring fields. The book is not only a convenience for all present students, but by placing in order what has been gathered to date, clarifies the present status of research, thus serving as a guide to field workers." Oliver La Farge
+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 19 '39 650w

PARSONS, ERNEST WILLIAM. The religion of the New Testament. 278p $2.50 Harper

225.6 Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 39-11393

"Professor Parsons' chief aim in this volume is to present the various phases of Christian outlook in the New Testament in such a way that their differences as well as their similarities will appear." (Christian Century) The author is on the staff of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. Indexes of subjects and of scripture passages.

Boston Transcript p7 My 27 '39 30w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder
Christian Century 56:771 Je 14 '39 650w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 16:311 O '39 300w

"The book is intended for Christian ministers and laymen, not for research scholars. Yet it renders a scholarly service of the first rank to the church, for it succeeds (where so many fail) in presenting accurately and adequately the positions of contemporary New Testament scholarship. Dr. Parsons does this in superior fashion—not by tedious and undigested quotations from a large company of scholars, but by interpreting the New Testament in the light of that scholarly study which he has thoroughly assimilated and in which he himself excels." E. C. Colwell
+ J Religion 19:235 Jl '39 360w

"To write a 'New Testament theology'—by whatever name it may be called—is a task that demands entire mastery of the material and great familiarity with the work of one's predecessors. Both these qualities are lacking in this present volume. . . None the less Dr. Parsons writes with deep warmth and a hearty endeavor to understand even when he does not sympathize." B. S. Easton
— + Living Church 101:12 D 27 '39 340w

PARSONS, JULIA STODDARD. Scattered memories. 169p il $2.75 Humphries

B or 92

Julia Parsons was the daughter of Richard C. Parsons, owner of the Cleveland Herald. As a schoolgirl she went to Germany with several other young girls and a chaperon for a year of study. The early memories refer to this visit. Later ones are centered in official Washington where she spent some brilliant seasons, and in diplomatic circles in Rome.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 10w

"Her book is an enjoyable one of its kind, but its most enjoyable reading is found in the earlier chapters, as the young girl looked at the world about her."

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 29 '39 210w

PARSONS, VIVIAN. Lucien. 383p $2.50 Dodd 39-2711

"The story of a French-Canadian girl forced into an unhappy marriage and cherishing the memory of an earlier love. Done with feeling and a nice rendering of the Quebec countryside reminiscent of 'Maria Chapdelaine.'" New Yorker

---

Booklist 35:223 Mr 1 '39

"Miss Parsons's narrative ability—unlike many young novelists, she can tell a story—and her delineation of simple, intimate emotions could perhaps have been better introduced in similarly simple but somewhat fresher themes. We may be captious, however, for certainly those who approve of her choice of subject cannot disapprove of her treatment, which is careful and honest." J. G. Linn

+ Books p8 F 12 '39 550w

"Far from being one of the birth-and-death farm sagas which the first pages seem to promise, the book has a sharp, closely knit unity. Minutely factual detail builds up a surprisingly clear picture of life on the two farms near Trois Rivieres—surprising because there is so little use of description. The style is spare and vivid, with short, muscular sentences." M. Q. Innis

+ Canadian Forum 19:28 Ap '39 500w

Cath World 149:380 Je '39 100w

"Though I am somewhat dissatisfied with the dénouement, which seems a little glib and conventional, 'Lucien' is, on the whole, a sound and pleasing tale. It is by no means easy to take a group of simple people from a flagrantly picturesque background and make them seem as human and complex as the people one knows in daily life. This Miss Parsons succeeds in doing." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 F 19 '39 700w

New Yorker 14:82 F 11 '39 40w

Pratt p30 summer '39 ..

" 'Lucien' ushers in a literary career evidently destined to be long and fruitful. By it Miss Vivian Parsons is revealed to be a writer endowed with most of the classic narrative talents: an easy, flexible prose style that leaves none of its traces upon the story, an understanding of the basic human emotions and the power to express them, a feel for the variety and differentiation of character, with the facility for illuminating this in the turn of a phrase, and above all the strong and dominating talent which can only be described as narrative facility. . . Few first novels of recent years have offered such a thorough demonstration of distinctive ability." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 18 '39 380w

"In some respects the story recalls Emily Bronte's 'Wuthering Heights,' for there is something of the same impact of one character upon another, something of the same surging of emotion which is ready to break to the surface any moment in a tragedy. Miss Parsons finds clear-cut characters in this handful of people. Not one is a type; each is a human being, and each acts his part consistently to the end. And the reader feels constantly the atmosphere of this small French village, with its people whispering among themselves, gossiping, criticizing, condemning. Miss Parsons's handling of her material, her setting, her characters and her situation shows high accomplishment."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 650w

PARSONS, WILFRID, comp. Early Catholic Americana. 282p $10 Macmillan

013.282 Roman Catholic literature—Bibliography 39-6755

"A list of books and other works by Catholic authors in the United States, 1729-1830." (Subtitle) The collection of Catholic Americana in the Riggs Memorial library at Georgetown University served as a starting point, and some thirty other libraries submitted data, corrections, and additional titles. The arrangement is chronological. Index.

"Catholic libraries alone should suffice to gobble up this limited edition. So what about the university, institutional and public libraries, who will need this most competently compiled bibliography, which in its class stands unique and is a thing of joy to librarians, bibliographers and such like!" Henry Watts

America 61:117 My 13 '39 600w

Reviewed by Sister Mary Augustina (Ray)

Am Hist R 45:476 Ja '40 80w

"The conclusion upon these reflections seems to be that though 'Early Catholic Americana' is an indispensable book to the student and historian of ideas there still remains to be done a good deal of intensive examination of library shelves and catalogues before the full weight of Catholic writing in the United States can be appreciated." L. C. Wroth

+ — Books p14 Je 18 '39 950w

"Every library in the country should possess this invaluable and exhaustive work." B. L. C.

+ Cath World 149:502 Jl '39 250w

"Father Parsons has performed an excellent service for American historical scholarships." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 30:136 My 26 '39 300w

PARSONS, WILFRID. Which way, democracy? 295p $2 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy. Political science 39-30999

"This series of essays—embodying ideas which Father Parsons has consistently expressed in editorial writings, scattered articles and radio addresses—has for its main thesis the affirmation that democracy cannot survive unless it retains belief in man's dignity as a creature of God, in man's destiny to eternal happiness, in the supreme value of man's personality and in man's right to protection from exploitation by authority or by wealth." Cath World

---

"As a commentator on public events Father Parsons possesses a rare combination of desirable qualities—solid learning, sound moral principles, clear sightedness, a synthetic mind, a bold, honest style." J. McS.

+ Cath World 150:364 D '39 380w

"There is a great amount of wisdom, truth and true humanitarianism in the chapters on industrial, racial and international justice. But reliable guidance for the future course of democracy is not to be sought from an author who starts with 'the decline of Christianity' (since the Middle Ages) and 'the downfall of liberalism,' and finds the title deeds of democracy and 'the Christian concept of the state' in the writings of Thomas Aquinas, Suarez and Bellarmine."

+ — Christian Century 56:1379 N 8 '39 80w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 154:21 Ja 1 '40 100w

"Father Parsons uses an easy style in which to convey to his readers thoughts which are fundamental to the issues and problems of our day; and that is probably a task which cannot too often be undertaken. . . His book is non-technical in expression, worthy of many readers." H. L. B.

+ Commonweal 31:330 F 2 '40 150w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone

Nation 150:49 Ja 13 '40 550w

PARTINGTON, WILFRED GEORGE. Forging ahead; the true story of the upward progress of Thomas James Wise, prince of book collectors, bibliographer extraordinary and otherwise. 315p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Wise, Thomas James. Literary forgeries and mystifications. Book collecting 39-27877

"Thomas James Wise, famous English bibliographer and book-collector, died in 1937 at the age of seventy-seven. Here is told the true story of his astounding life. Specializing in nineteenth-century pamphlets, Wise was one of the greatest forgers of literary documents the world has ever known. During a period of fifty years, he kept on 'discovering' rarities now known to be fakes." (New Yorker) Bibliography of the bibliographer. Index.

Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
Boston Transcript p2 O 28 '39 600w

"Partington's is a rambling, disjointed and often turgid account. Although it offers some new evidence and a useful Wise bibliography, it leaves much still to be said, by Carter and Pollard in a probable sequel to the 'Enquiry,' and by Miss Fanny Ratchford of the Wrenn Library, who has been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship to complete her study. The general as well as the bookish public, however, will find this an intriguing story of one of the mighty fallen." F. B. Adams, Jr.
— + N Y Times p10 O 29 '39 1300w

"An almost incredible and fascinating account, particularly if you have any interest in book-collecting."
+ New Yorker 15:78 O 7 '39 80w

"As one may surmise from the title of the book no punches are pulled, no holds barred. . . Mr. Partington's contribution has been leg-work, performed on the run. He is gossipy rather than scholarly; he is guilty of some omissions and inaccuracies. He writes choppily, discursively; he is forced into repeated and annoying anticipations, takes refuge in occasional and inevitable conjectures. But for one who has the slightest acquaintance with the subject, he tells a fascinating story." J. T. Winterich
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 30 '39 350w

PARTON, ETHEL. Runaway prentice; drawings by Margaret Platt. 280p $2 Viking

(W) 39-29716

Newburyport in the year 1800 is the scene of this story for boys and girls. Jeff, an orphan, runs away from the cruel man to whom he is apprenticed, and joins some relatives. There he meets three other youngsters who join forces with him in his attempt to gain help for an older brother, who has been captured by Barbary pirates.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 N 5 '39 250w

"The story unfolds a series of stirring events, a happy friendship and a real picture of people and the times when Barbary pirates were attacking American shipping. There is history, fun and a romance in this fine piece of Americana." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '39 250w

"Miss Parton has written a book which will appeal to boys as well as to girls, and I wish Edmund Pearson was in this world to give it the welcome and appreciation it deserves." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 15:295 S '39 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:391 N '39 90w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:843 N 1 '39 40w

"Almost too much deception is practiced on their elders; although it is largely justified by the children's own attitude: 'It's what they'd want us to do if they knew.' Will interest both girls and boys, ten to fourteen." Mrs Maude Adams
Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 90w

"The fictitious boys and girls of the story seem as real as the children of present-day Newburyport to whom the book is dedicated. It is one of Miss Parton's best books."
+ Living Church 101:7 D 13 '39 100w
New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 30w
New Yorker 15:89 N 25 '39 60w

"Good story plus."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w

PARTON, MARY FIELD. Metropolis; a study of New York. 191p il $2 Longmans

917.471 New York (city)—Description 39-22994

Guidebook to New York city, intended for those of high school age, but useful for adults also. The information is under three headings: government; markets and centers; and industries and managements, with subdivisions and short chapters under them. Index.

"Miss Parton's lively and informative expositions of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the New York Times' plant, Macy's department store, the S. S. Queen Mary, the Long Distance Telephone Building, and the Old Merchant's House on East Fourth Street, stir one up immediately to go take a thorough look. Excellent photographs accompany the text." Sarah Chokla
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 230w

"Every reader loving the city will be constantly aware of omissions but, within the compass of 191 pages including an index, a good piece of work has been done." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 120w

"To put a city like New York between the covers of a book for young people needs selective ability of a high degree. Mrs. Parton has performed this task with skill and charm. 'Metropolis' is readable throughout; it presents a well-rounded picture of the city, and the treatment is neither sketchy nor over-full of detail." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 N 5 '39 400w
Social Studies 30:335 N '39

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. Country lawyer [the story of my father] il. by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Whittlesey house publication) 317p $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Partridge, Samuel Selden

(W) 39-27684

"After Samuel Selden Partridge passed his bar examinations in central New York in the late sixties, he turned to the little town of Phelps in the Finger Lakes section as the place to settle down and try his luck. . . Starting from scratch, he lived there for more than half a century, married, reared eight children, owned a huge house and farm, acquired a competence, and, by integrity, shrewdness, and warm human sympathies, achieved the status of a 'leading citizen' along with the local clergymen and doctor, dying serenely with the era that produced him." (Sat R of Lit) The story of his life is written by his son, who at one time shared his father's law practice.

"While Country Lawyer is not a remarkable or important book, it is a valuable factual record of a life that has now practically vanished, set down with salty humor and flashes of genuine sentiment." Arthur Train
+ Atlantic O '39

Booklist 36:7 S '39

"An amusing and wholly absorbing book." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p1 Ag 20 '39 1300w

"It is a delightful book, perhaps more particularly to lawyers, but to the laymen also it should be highly entertaining and illuminating." J. C. Bassett
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 26 '39 600w

"If a sympathetic and understanding reader were to offer any adverse criticism of Mr. Partridge's book it would be that he, in the apparent desire to present a complete word picture, has dwelt at too great length upon inconsequential happenings to assure the continuing interest of lay readers. One who has first-hand knowledge of the scene, the neighbor of the people whose intimate affairs are discussed, reads all he has written, and reads with interest." F. L. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 S 9 '39 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 30:403 Ag 18 '39 350w

"An unusual and altogether charming book." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:iv O '39 400w

Reviewed by F. T. P. Plimpton
Harvard Law R 53:344 D '39 750w

"[The author] has achieved a spirited three-dimensional portrait of American village life from Appomattox to Armageddon—a portrait utterly lacking in meretricious antiquarian flavor, and datable only by externals. Under his deft delineation Phelps takes on something of the universality of Thoreau's Concord. . . 'Country Lawyer' is grand reading and grand human documentation. Here are Main Street and the cross streets and the furtive alleys and the little lanes that slide out into the country. Here are both sides of the tracks." J. T. Winterich
+ N Y Times p1 Ag 20 '39 1300w

"What distinguishes the book is its flavor of an early and now vanished America, a flavor Bellamy Partridge preserves for us apparently without even trying, for he writes with perfect artlessness. An agreeable book which will appeal perhaps most strongly to those with long memories." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:58 S 2 '39 150w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

"A work of atmospheric color, a Currier and Ives series, rich, humorous, and of historic verity." Melville Cane
+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Ag 26 '39 500w

"The author possesses a genuine comic sense, and has the knack of reproducing in broad strokes, the speech and atmosphere of an upstate small town, which will be found to differ but little from the typical eastern small town with which older Americans are mostly familiar, at least in humorous literature."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 17 '39 450w

Time 34:57 Ag 21 '39 310w

Wis Lib Bul 35:166 O '39

PARTRIDGE, ERIC. The world of words; an introduction to language in general and to English and American in particular. 354p $3 Scribner [7s 6d Routledge]

420 English language. Americanisms. Language and languages (W) 39-21256

"Mr. Partridge's book is a comprehensive introduction to the whole [subject of word history]. He deals with the pedigrees of languages as well as words, of the inter-relations of the great linguistic groups and their bearing, or lack of bearing, on ethnology, with phonetics and its physiological implications, with the English and American languages in particular, with grammar and with style. The master he acknowledges is Dr. Otto Jespersen, and one of his most interesting chapters is that which outlines that great scholar's theory of the origin of language." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Booklist 35:285 My 1 '39

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 50w

"Mr. Partridge has much that is entertaining, but yet entertainment is not his primary aim, but an attempt to survey the whole field of language, and it is for the courage of that exploit that he deserves most commendation."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 S 13 '38 230w

"Like the easy and effective formation of verbs from nouns and vice versa, this introduction to language is specifically English and extremely valuable; and on the whole it is easy and effective reading as well."
+ N Y Times p16 D 17 '39 600w

"Mr. Eric Partridge carries his learning with an exceptional lightness, and in small compass can open up a surprising number of ideas."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p108 F 18 '39 320w

PARTRIDGE, ERNEST DE ALTON. Social psychology of adolescence. 361p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

136.7354 Adolescence. Social psychology 39-4107

"Intended presumably for educators, particularly those who serve as counselors, [this book] is an effort to draw from socio-psychological sources all the findings which bear upon adolescent adjustment in modern society." Am Soc R

"The book is addressed 'to those who are working with young people.' To those who have done considerable reading or have had wide experience in this field much of the material may appear elementary in nature. To all, however, the book will bring a freshness and vitality which make the reading of it a pleasure, and a positive, constructive approach which should be an inspiration to even the most experienced worker." F. W. Brown
+ — Am J Pub Health 29:1266 N '39 400w

"The book should prove valuable to the student as well as to the field worker, for whom it is particularly intended." J. R. Runner
+ Am J Soc 45:132 Jl '39 220w

"Partridge's treatment is sketchy; he hastens by the subject of adolescent maladjustments with eyes averted and cheeks flushed, and there is something Victorian in his repeated reference to adolescent girls as 'young ladies.' In general, his presentation is such that it suggests he is writing for, rather than about, the immature." R. T. La Piere
— Am Soc R 3:904 D '38 90w

Reviewed by Alexander Breinan
Social Educ 3:435 S '39 500w

"A well-developed, interestingly presented text. It is well adapted for use in classes studying the problems, the characteristics, and the social influences and organizations that influence youth." E. R. Groves
+ Social Forces 17:563 My '39 30w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.
Survey 75:29 Ja '39 90w

PARTRIDGE, RUTH LOUISE. Adventures with a lamp; the story of a nurse. 351p $2.50 Dutton

39-6268

The heroine is a gentle, sensitive girl, forced to earn her own living before she is thoroly equipped for her chosen career of music. She decides to become a nurse, and the story is a detailed account of her years in training.

"Although this novel naturally suffers from the bitterness of its emphasis, and although it is less a coherent story than a series of incidents it has remarkable vitality and carries the reader along from one episode to another through its often repellent but energetic and swift-moving course." John Patton
+ — Books p11 Mr 19 '39 410w

New Yorker 15:87 Mr 25 '39 50w

PARTRIDGE, R. L.—Continued

"The author tellingly pictures the drama, suspense and pathos of many situations, possible in a recital of life and death, and a high tempo is sustained to the end."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 280w

PASCOE, JOHN DOBREE. Unclimbed New Zealand; Alpine travel in the Canterbury and Westland ranges, Southern Alps. 238p il maps $5.50 Macmillan [16s Allen, G]

919.31 New Zealand—Description and travel. Mountaineering [39-27397]

Account of mountaineering in New Zealand by a young New Zealander who has covered much hitherto unexplored country in the Southern Alps, particularly in the Canterbury and Westland ranges and in the Mt Cook region. The book contains many illustrations and several maps. One chapter is devoted to Samuel Butler and his career as a mountaineer in the Canterbury ranges. Bibliography.

Booklist 35:303 My 15 '39

"The 80-odd photographs are of high quality and are well chosen to acquaint one with the nature of the country. I know hardly another book on the mountains in which the illustrations are so satisfactory. There are maps that enable the narrative to be followed in detail and a good bibliography, but no index." H. S. Hall, Jr.

+ Geog R 30:176 Ja '40 180w

"This is in several ways a tantalising book; because it draws such an attractive picture of a region which few of us can ever visit and because the picture omits so much that, in default of a visit, one would like to know. Mr. Pascoe can write with first-hand knowledge of important exploration work on the borders between Canterbury and Westland. But his lively pen lacks clarity. . . The photographs are numerous and often admirable, though there are many of more personal than general interest." P. J. M.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '39 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p268 My 6 '39 390w

PASTON, GEORGE, pseud. See Symonds, E. M.

PATCHEN, KENNETH. First will and testament. 181p $2.50 New directions

811 40-1114

"Described by the author as 'the legacy of a poet who speaks for a generation which was born in one war and seems destined to perish in another.' Heavily rhetorical, with long passages derived from the more disjointed Joyce, Mr. Patchen's writing hymns the pure revolution in the standard gloomy fashion." New Yorker

"Many readers may like best the quiet, tender, simply written love poems, such as 'Fall of the Evening Star,' 'Religion is That I Love You,' 'In Memory of Kathleen,' '23d Street Runs Into Heaven.' Patchen is curiously successful in combining brilliant wit with a deliberate physical brutality that hits between the eyes, as in the satiric 'I Don't Want To Startle You.' And he can build melodramatically out of almost nothing an effect of sheer horror: 'Career for a Child of Five,' 'I Suddenly Became Conscious That This Thing Was Looking at Me Intently.' " Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p5 D 24 '39 1050w

"Kenneth Patchen's second book, First Will & Testament, is the event of the season and an event in any season. There is no transcribing in a mere review the power and impact of the lines, the impassioned drive, the adoration of life, the forthright nudity of body and spirit, the furious hatred of war and destruction. Here is no average pacifist reasoning his way to a softer world. Patchen deals out hammer-blows, takes to the sword of satire, the steel of Goya, the human scalpel of Daumier, the torrents of Melville—and all in the American language."

+ Living Age 357:597 F '40 300w

"His poetic speech is contemporary and close to the streets; but he has held to nothing he has heard in the streets unless it has its own vigor to recommend it. The form his poems most often take is that of hallucination. They are made up as dreadful dreams are from the remembered happenings of commonplace days. But if the details are realistic and clear, they are arranged by some obscure necessity that is not logic. . . His affinities are not with Rimbaud, the first master of the literary hallucination, nor with the surrealists who derive from Rimbaud. He is closer to Cummings. For Patchen presents a deliberate derangement, not of the senses, but of the mind. 'It is the midnight of sense . . . mind's desolate cave.' " J. P. Bishop

Nation 149:620 D 2 '39 650w

"Mr. Patchen's second book represents a substantial achievement—something over one hundred poems, including three remarkable verse dramas and the beginning of a projected seven-volume poem, 'The Hunted City.' In contrast with his first volume, 'Before the Brave', in which the combination of revolutionary ardor and experimental techniques did not preclude monotony, this volume reveals Mr. Patchen as an eclectic but intensely interesting young poet and a master craftsman." Deane Mowrer

+ New Repub 101:294 D 27 '39 450w

"What is most wrong with Mr. Patchen's poetry is that he has not any clear picture of his world or of his own awarenesses. He seems to love confusions in impressions for their own sake. If he would simplify his work, turn from trying to shock and impress to stating economically his own range of feelings, he might indicate what scheme of values, other than the enjoyment of mere sensations, he has." E. L. Walton

— + N Y Times p17 Ja 21 '40 500w

New Yorker 15:108 N 18 '39 50w

"Mr. Patchen has the high scorn of a certain type of young man, and the determination to use certain words that poetry has eschewed. This does not make his poetry any better. Neither does certain snarling and scrambled invective. But you have to give the man his head, because he can write desperately and movingly at times, and his era is responsible for him. Mr. Patchen is trying to talk as the tough-minded talk in the street and at the same time write poetry. It is not an easy assignment." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 21:16 N 25 '39 240w

PATERSON, ANNE. Take these hands. 402p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

(W) 39-6478

John Leyton was born on Christmas day and his crabbed old grandfather dedicated him to the service of the Lord in consequence. But John's mother desired spiritual independence for her son and with her help he defied his grandfather and eventually became a doctor. This long biographical novel tells the story of his education, his love affairs, and his early experiences as a doctor.

"Anne Paterson's 'Take These Hands' has much in its favor. It doesn't seek to be sensational, or to treat those in the medical profession as though they belonged to a race apart. It may be recommended for the thoroughness with which it penetrates hospital procedure and abdominal walls, and for a serious approach in general." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Mr 26 '39 500w

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"'Take These Hands' is a first novel of talent. Miss Paterson is at home not only in her hospital scenes but she does an excellent job of background and character portrayal when she deals with rural and sea-girt Maine. There are uneven places in the book with respect to introduction of new characters and pace of narrative and occasionally she indulges in words like 'voluptuosity' and 'duility' but these are faults in workmanship which a second novel should conquer." R. C. Feld

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 26 '39 600w

PATMORE, DEREK. Invitation to Roumania. 157p $3 il (10s 6d) Macmillan

914.98 Rumania—Description and travel [39-21575]

Account of a visit of several months duration in the summer of 1938. The author went to Rumania on the invitation of an aristocratic friend and spent his time in the city and country homes of the nobility, but he also was interested in the lives and manners and customs of the peasants, whom he calls the backbone of the country. The illustrations are from photographs by Herbert List.

Books p26 D 3 '39 170w

"A book which by its continual and unconscious snobbery, its superficiality and naive admiration of such things as the 'glamour' of military uniforms on a Bucharest street may bring a smile to the reader's lips." Sarah Chokla

— Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 130w

"It is a pleasant and picturesque book, not devoid of reference to matters of timely or lasting interest. . . [However] it is in the pictures that this book has its real distinction."

+ — N Y Times p20 O 15 '39 500w

"The style is bald and unpretentious, except for certain purely descriptive passages. Those who want to read a book about Roumania will find this one satisfying." M. J.

Sat R of Lit 21:22 Ja 13 '40 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p367 Je 24 '39 350w

PATON, WILLIAM. World community. 192p $1.50 Macmillan [5s Student]

261 Sociology, Christian. Church 39-2316

"This book, written by the secretary to the International Missionary Council, is a compact summary of what is taking place, around and within the church, all over the world today." (Churchman) Index.

Books p15 Ap 9 '39 170w

Reviewed by N. F. S. Ferre

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 15 '39 140w

"Its convenient arrangement into titled paragraphs makes this volume particularly useful to students." E. J. C.

+ Churchman 153:34 F 15 '39 100w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat

Crozer Q 16:148 Ap '39 220w

Reviewed by A. G. Baker

J Religion 19:305 Jl '39 40w

Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger

Living Church 100:286 Mr 8 '39 270w

Reviewed by H. G. Wood

Spec 161:456 S 16 '38 370w

"He admits that the book is handicapped by his omission of the part played by the Roman Church in all this activity, but it must be said that the reasons that he gives for the omission seem far from satisfactory. The omission is a defect which cannot quite be covered by an apology. Rome may be isolationist, but Mr. Paton has scarcely protected himself from a similar charge. But within its limits the book is well thought out and full of interest, and because it presents so encouraging a picture of the Christian forces that are at work in the world it deserves to be very widely read."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 22 '38 210w

PATON, WILLIAM ANDREW. Essentials of accounting. 830p il $5 Macmillan

657 Accounting 38-19961

"The primary purpose of this book is to furnish material for an intensive course in the principles of accounting at the undergraduate college level. It is believed that the treatment of the subject will be found sufficiently thoroughgoing to provide a satisfactory foundation for advanced and specialized courses, and at the same time sufficiently comprehensive to meet the needs of those for whom accounting is an ancillary field. The general approach adopted is that which regards accounting as an essential element in the available means of grappling with the complex conditions and problems of the economic structure, in the hope of achieving understanding and securing effective control." (Pref) The author is professor of accounting at the University of Michigan. Index.

"Although the book is long, it is explicit, reads easily, and is generally well arranged. Leading titles are provocative of interest and thought. . . Of an adverse character is the reviewer's feeling that certain topics might have been ignored by the author in favor of further treatment of certain of those remaining. This shift in emphasis would be in the interest of harmonizing the various parts of the accounting offering with the relative intellectual, as well as practical, importance of the various possible subject matters. . . But this does not mean that what Professor Paton has written is seriously inadequate. He has done so much more than is customary in facing the big questions of accounting that we hardly feel like complaining." R. G. Walker

+ — Am Econ R 29:147 Mr '39 850w

"The text contains many complete accounting problems, carefully worked out and explained."

+ Management R 27:393 N '38 40w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS DESEMEA [NEWMAN] WILSON). So many hours. 254p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

39-11745

Story of a Yorkshire millhand who rose to great wealth, retired at fifty to the Cotswold country to spend the remainder of his life, and found the lives of his wife and three children were a little more difficult to manage than he had imagined.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 My 7 '39 220w

"This is a gentle tale of good English stock, from that West Riding with which we have recently become familiar. All Miss Patrick's admirers will enjoy it. They will be glad they are not millionaires—unless they are, in which case they will count their wives' cocktails."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 190w

"This story, built along [Miss Patrick's] usual lines, is livelier than her last one. The wife has more character and the children are more interesting. . . There is nothing more improbable than many things that happen in real life, but the whole thing seems more romantic than likely." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p17 My 7 '39 130w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS DESEMEA [NEWMAN] WILSON). World within these walls. 304p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

39-15953

The story of two rarely companionable sisters —Dessa, the older, who was the leader, and Laura, who was gentle, and followed Dessa's suggestions. But when it was a question of her love for Brian, Laura made her first decision. The resulting period of strain was eventually cleared up. The scene is England; the time from the Victorian era to the beginning of the World war.

PATRICK, DIANA Continued

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p19 N 5 '39 250w

"It is a charming, leisurely world within the walls of two delightful English houses which engages the reader's attention for a long evening. . . There is not much excitement, but rather a quiet and persistent interest in the development of the children." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p14 D 17 '39 220w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 180w

PATRICK, Q., pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

PATTERSON, ARTHUR WILLIS. Redcoats at Castine; with il. by Paul Quinn. 203p map $2 Daye
(W) 38-33568

"The author is Judge of Probate in Hancock County, Maine, with his home in Castine. Out of his interest in Castine's history when it was held by the British from the summer of 1779 until August 1784, he has written a story of the part played by two boys whose home was on the Castine peninsula or Pentagoet, as it was then called. . . It is a story of several dangerous special missions, of imprisonment and escape, and of a difficult and foolhardy storming of Dyce Head cliffs in an attack which failed." Horn Bk M

Booklist 35:192 F 1 '39

"An exciting and pleasing tale for junior readers. . . Parents will want to share with their young folk the interest and pleasure to be derived from this plausible and vigorously written story. Paul Quinn's illustrations are very good." O. O.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 14 '39 290w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p8 F 23 '39 210w
Horn Bk M 15:41 Ja '39 140w

"There is, except for the groundwork of the opening chapters, very little attempt to convey the troubled passions, the issues of the period, nor is there the special feeling for setting and characterization which distinguishes our best historical romances, yet as a story of straight adventure, crisply written, it should appeal to boys who have not outgrown their love of derring-do for its own sake." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 F 12 '39 350w

PATTERSON, ERNEST MINOR. The economic bases of peace. (Whittlesey house publication) 264p $2.50 McGraw

330.9 Economic policy. Economic conditions. World politics. Peace 39-30080

A survey of economic conditions thruout the world as they existed in the summer of 1939, and an attempt to evolve some suggestions for easing the economic strains which cause wars. The author is professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania.

Reviewed by Russ Nixon
Boston Transcript p7 Ja 6 '40 600w

"This book will do much toward clarifying the issues, and even the terminology, in the present world crisis." Charles Gerlinger
+ Christian Century 56:1339 N 1 '39 550w

"The whole book is a challenge to the honest, thoughtful reader to recognize the fact that the economic world has changed in recent years and to adjust his thinking accordingly. The economic bases of peace demand this calm appraisal of existing conditions and a wise adjustment between the old political and economic procedures on the one hand and the newer approaches which may break with some of our cherished beliefs." Elizabeth Morrissy
+ Commonweal 31:50 N 3 '39 550w

"Professor Patterson's book has all the informality of a course of lectures, even to the use of some of the same data to illustrate different points as they emerge in the discussion. But the book is none the less interesting on that account. 'The Economic Bases of Peace' is, in fact, an easily read introduction to the problems implied by the title; and if there is more about the problems than about possible solutions, that is to be expected in view of the lack of generally accepted objectives." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p6 N 26 '39 600w

PATTERSON, GILES JARED. Free speech and a free press; with a foreword by James G. Stahlman. 261p $3.50 Little

323.443 Liberty of speech. Liberty of the press 39-23218

"Depicts man's fight through the ages for the establishment of the right of free speech and a free press, and the continued struggle for the preservation of both." Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 36:126 D 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"This is an important book for college libraries and offices of journalists, but even more important for judges and legislators. They should read and study the lessons of history as portrayed by Mr. Patterson. They would learn what freedom of speech and press means. They might be inpressed by the heroic and patient struggle which was necessary to obtain rights which many fearful Americans would casually whittle away." A. G. Hays
+ Harvard Law R 53:352 D '39 950w

PATTERSON, HELEN MARGUERITE. Writing and selling special feature articles; with an introd. by Grant Milnor Hyde. 578p il $3.65; to schools $2.75 Prentice-Hall

029.6 Authorship. Journalism 39-21252

"This book has been prepared for those who have the urge to write and who desire remuneration for their efforts. A salesmanship approach to the technique of writing feature articles for newspapers and magazines has been made in order to aid beginners in attaining success. . . It is not the purpose of this book to teach writing for writing's sake, but to aid the beginner in methods of seeing ideas, gathering material, interviewing tactfully, slanting accurately, planning and outlining painstakingly, writing enthusiastically, and selling satisfactorily." (Pref) The author is assistant professor of journalism at the University of Wisconsin. Index.

Booklist 36:81 N 1 '39
Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 20:15 Ag 19 '39 900w
Wis Lib Bul 36:11 Ja '40

PATTERSON, MRS PAULINE S. See Penny, P.

PATTERSON, VERNON. Wise as a goose. 366p il $2.50 Lymanhouse, 6544 W. Olympic blvd, Los Angeles 39-31273

"Young Dan Ashton, the hero, has been knocking about more or less aimlessly since he came back from France after the armistice. It's only by chance he lands a job in a California lumber town, but that decides his future.

He stays on and is pushed ahead, learning the business from the ground up and different branches of it; he gets married there, and twice when he plans to break away something pulls him back; the men he likes and the men he doesn't are there. Eventually it becomes home and the woods are his life work." N Y Times

"Patterson is still an unfinished novelist. But more important than finish, he can limn a first-rate picture, write about real people and tell a story. And the study of Julia and Dan in their camp home reveals a depth he is just beginning to plumb." F. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '39 800w

"The author of 'Wise as a Goose' knows a great deal about the country of which he writes. He takes a sympathetic and intelligent view of its people and sets down their talk with racy accuracy. He is a good story-teller, too. But his book, despite its disarming pleasantness of tone, is disappointing because a reader feels that it should have been much better." J. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 8 '39 300w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD. All the brave. See Quintanilla, L., il.

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD. The mysterious Mickey Finn; or, Murder at the Café du Dôme. 243p map pa 50c Modern age

39-22929

Farce mystery-detective story in which the author also takes a few passing shots at modern art.

"As for the fun, Mr. Paul offers almost more than you can swallow at one sitting, including a fairly sly and quiet kind, much satire (mostly about art) of sharper tendencies and still more of a violent sort derived from the banana-peel, or Aristotelian school—all most amusing and a sure escape into the limbo of painless murders and high jinks generally. . . This is gay diversion at reasonable rates. Yes, he's the same man who wrote 'The Life and Death of a Spanish Town' and those things." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 O 1 '39 250w

"This week has been a bright one. With it came Elliot Paul's new book—his first mystery—not only one of the funniest but also one of the most breath-taking I have yet read." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 160w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson

New Repub 101:267 D 20 '39 420w

"This is sparkling and highly articulate fooling from the Montparnasse of the Nineteen Twenties. It offers also its plenteous quota of excitement and every sort of unexpectedness." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p22 O 8 '39 260w

"This story of crime and goings on among the artists of the Left Bank slows down halfway through. The antics of expatriates of the prohibition era may seem a bit old-fashioned, even though they are still good for some hearty laughs. The book follows no formula."

+ — New Yorker 15:96 O 21 '39 40w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD. The stars and stripes forever. 393p $2.50 Random house

39-27332

The author of The Life and Death of a Spanish Town (Book Review Digest, 1937), here tells a story of an American town in another kind of struggle. The scene is a small town in New England, dependent for its prosperity on one manufacturing plant. Under the Wagner Act the employees organize, call a strike, but are finally defeated by the superior forces of the owner. The narrator is the owner's young brother-in-law, who is in sympathy with the strikers.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

"The evidence unearthed by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee under Senator LaFollette's direction undoubtedly offers sufficient confirmation of the facts in Mr. Paul's story to warrant describing it as documentary. But this novel . . . cannot be described as true. For Mr. Paul has chosen to portray his people and his drama in a series of pitch blacks and pure whites. The factory owner is as thorough a villain and cad as has seen the light of publication since the days of the mustached seducer of farmers' daughters. The workers are heroic in a way that only a sentimental writer who yearns for a proletarian background can make them. And the Wagner act attains virtues and a certain religious exaltation in this story which even its most ardent champions would not grant it." William Soskin

Books p10 Ap 16 '39 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 99:166 Je 14 '39 600w

"The peculiar distinction of 'The Stars and Stripes Forever,' apart from excellence of technique and restraint of treatment, lies in its portrayal of the effect of the warfare on the fiber of the town, on combatants and non-combatants alike. Slowly, in spite of defeat . . . the town begins to take shape as a unit supporting an American principle of freedom and fair play. The doctor, the minister, the lawyer, the merchant, the Mayor, faced with the methods employed by the victor, take their stand with the defeated and in the economic disintegration of the town discover a personal rejuvenation of faith. For this and for its brilliant characterization of the men engaged in the struggle this book deserves high praise." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '39 1000w

"A straightforward, well-organized story, with the fundamental dramatic conflict sharply defined and sympathetically stated."

+ New Yorker 15:105 Ap 15 '39 70w

"Mr. Paul has written an unequivocal tract for the times, but he has not written a good novel, and his tract would be more powerful if his novel were more substantial. Profound feeling went into the writing of this book, no doubt, but the writer has failed to communicate his emotion, because emotion can be communicated only by creative or recreative art, and such art is here lacking. His narrative is as interesting as a rousing left-wing newspaper story or a vigorous article in a liberal magazine, and only in the same way that they are interesting. It does not give us what good novels give, for it has no life of its own." B. R. Redman

— + Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 15 '39 800w

Time 33:90 Ap 17 '39 180w

PAULING, LINUS CARL. The nature of the chemical bond and the structure of molecules and crystals; an introduction to modern structural chemistry. 429p il $4.50 Cornell univ. press [21s Oxford]

541.39 Valence (theoretical chemistry). Quantum theory. Molecules. Crystallography

39-17773

"[This technical treatise is] based chiefly on quantum mechanics, with special emphasis on resonance phenomena, and develops the new concept of the resonance of molecules among several electronic structures with an accompanying increase in stability. Its observational data include the diffraction of electrons by gases and of X-rays by crystals, the determination of electric and magnetic moments, and various kinds of thermal measurements. The early chapters present the theoretical basis for the modern concept of resonance and chemical bonds. The new developments are described without the use of advanced mathematics. Later chapters deal with the structure of molecules and of crystals, special attention being given to the hydrocarbon compounds and the ionic crystals. The final chapter summarizes the discussion of resonance and considers its significance for chemistry." Scientific Bk Club R

PAULING, L. C.—Continued

N Y New Tech Bks 24:53 O '39

Reviewed by J. E. Mayer
R of Scientific Instruments 10:290 O '39 100w

"Although this highly technical treatise is in no sense intended for popular consumption, it is nevertheless of such unusual importance for chemists and mineralogists that it seems wise to call it to the attention of the Scientific Book Club. Dr. Pauling, professor of chemistry in the California Institute of Technology, is America's leading expert in the field of structural chemistry, and the publication of this book is literally epoch-making."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Ag '39 200w

PAULL, GRACE. Peanut Butter's slide; pictures by [the author]. unp $1 Viking

39-27936

Two small boys and their goat named Peanut Butter indulge their passion for sliding once too often and are in disgrace until they acquire a fine new slide.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"The drawings are all over the page, their colors chiefly blue and red; the type is large, the spirit friendly to little boys who wouldn't damage things if they could play without doing so." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 15 '39 200w

"So pleasant that it would be worth any mischief which it might suggest." Ruth Page
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 30w

"This story, and the amusing illustrations . . . have the freshness, vigor and fun of the country in them. Highly recommended."
+ New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 40w

"Nice, natural humor."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w

PAULSEN, FRIEDRICH. Friedrich Paulsen; an autobiography; tr. and ed. by Theodor Lorenz; with a foreword by Nicholas Murray Butler. 514p il $3.75 Columbia univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 38-38641

Autobiography of the German educator and philosopher, born a poor peasant boy in 1846, who worked his way up to a professorship in philosophy and education in the University of Berlin. He died in 1908. "He was considered a 'dangerous radical,' and if alive today he would probably align himself with liberal and independent thinkers such as Albert Einstein and Thomas Mann." (Crozer Q) Index.

Reviewed by K. S. Pinson
Am Hist R 45:396 Ja '40 650w
Christian Century 56:743 Je 7 '39 240w
Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 16:151 Ap '39 200w

"It is a fine achievement for a troublous life of sixty years, and the story of that life constitutes an absorbing record. Its interest is as great for the student of affairs as for the philosopher, and the sidelights it throws on such questions as the foreign policy of Germany and the problem of anti-Semitism are remarkable for their unrehearsed power of revelation and illumination."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Je 24 '39 1100w

PAUSTIAN, PAUL WILLIAM, and OPPENHEIMER, JULIUS JOHN. Problems of modern society; an introduction to the social sciences. 571p $3 (18s) McGraw

300 Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions
38-29609

"The purpose of this book is to provide an introduction to the study of contemporary society for college students. The method employed is the balanced discussion of controversial interpretations of problems that have been persistently before the American public over a period of years. . . All sides of controversial questions arising from these issues are presented so that the student may reach a considered solution based upon all the pertinent arguments." (Pref) The book is divided into five parts: Problems of wealth and social organization; Problems of population and race; Problems of social control; International problems; The student and the future. Index.

Reviewed by Broadus Mitchell
Am Econ R 29:636 S '39 350w

"This large volume has the advantages and the disadvantages inherent in the purpose for which it was compiled. The unity of the book consists in the method of dealing with contemporary controversial subject matter, not in any proposed solutions advocated by the author. It is designed as an introduction to the problems discussed and also to the opinions which students of these problems hold. While not a source book, in the usual sense of the term, it weaves into each chapter a large number of excellent quotations. The presentation of the material and the questions for discussion and bibliography that follow each chapter make the volume unusually well adapted for groups desiring to know all sides of current issues and to arrive through discussion at their own conclusions." J. S. Burgess
+ Christian Century 56:289 Mr 1 '39 900w

Reviewed by H. R. Anderson
School R 47:475 Je '39 430w

"The use and value of a book such as this in an introductory course in social science is a matter of the particular situation. Problems of Modern Society would serve as a framework for such a course. Most aptly it might be used as a convenient source book of materials concerning social problems." H. R. Bottrell
+ — Social Educ 3:364 My '39 600w
+ Social Studies 30:94 F '39 130w

"The book is an intelligent effort to supply a much needed type of introductory text."
+ Survey 75:232 Jl '39 70w

PAXSON, FREDERIC LOGAN. American democracy and the World war [v 2] America at war, 1917-1918. 465p maps $3.75 Houghton

973.913 U.S.—History—1913-. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. (W) (36-21132)

Volume two of the author's history of the part the United States played in the World war, covers the period from April 1917 to the Armistice. The greater part of the work is devoted to an analysis of political and economic conditions in the United States during this time. For volume one see Book Review Digest, 1936. Index.

Booklist 35:304 My 15 '39
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 230w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 29 '39 650w

"For its fairness, its accurate and imaginative reconstruction of this proud and bitter chapter of our history, this book is unsurpassed." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 29:668 Ap 7 '39 430w
Foreign Affairs 17:809 Jl '39 30w
Living Age 356:298 My '39 150w
Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 100:111 Ag 30 '39 650w

"Men who believe that a democracy can act effectively, rapidly and without grave dissension in time of crisis—that if properly aroused and led it can perform greater feats than autocracy—may point to our World War years as convincing evidence. If Dr. Paxson's highly objective and factual book has any thesis, it is this. He is singularly sparing of comment and still more economical of interpretation in this detailed history of the eighteen months beginning with April, 1917." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 26 '39 1650w
New Yorker 15:87 Mr 18 '39 30w

"Here is a book which should be read for pleasure and enlightenment by every American interested in the past or the future of his country." R. J. Sontag

+ Sat R of Lit 19:13 Mr 25 '39 490w

"A well-studied, impartial and clearly written account of what happened in the United States and overseas in 1917 and 1918." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 8 '39 360w
Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

PAYNE, MRS ELISABETH STANCY. The steadfast light. 282p $2 Dodd

39-24443

Young Christopher Thorne is blinded by an accident just as he is about to perfect an invention. The story concerns chiefly the parts played by two women in his gradual recovery of a place in the world.

"Mrs. Payne's story is one of her best." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 O 15 '39 200w
Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 140w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 120w

PAYNE, ROGER. Why work? or, The coming age of leisure and plenty. 404p $2.50 Meador

330.1 Work. Leisure. U.S.—Economic conditions 39-24215

The author's theme is the question, "Why work six days a week, when you can make your living by working one?" In this book he discusses first how the individual by reducing his wants and increasing his productivity can earn a decent standard of living in a comparatively few working days per year. In the second part he tries to show how machinery can be increasingly employed in various industries to increase the leisure and provide plenty for all.

"Although none of his ideas are particularly original, some of them show considerable insight and common sense. The problem of the frustration of the benefits of technology is one of the basic questions of our era. It is always worth fresh discussion and investigation. The author has thrown new light on the problem for this reader at least." W. E. Greening
Canadian Forum 19:297 D '39 360w

"[The author] accepts the basic assumptions of socialism; he speaks eloquently—and intelligently—in defense of civil liberties; and he cites impressive factual evidence in support of his contention that theoretically at least we could have adequate food, clothing, shelter and culture on one day's work per week. This may be going too far for the average believer; but there is more to this peripatetic author than the queer title of his book or the strange habits of his life would suggest."
Christian Century 57:185 F 7 '40 170w
New Repub 102:158 Ja 29 '40 40w

PEACH, ARTHUR WALLACE. The country rod and gun book; drawings and diagrams by Francis Tolman. (Country ser) 224p $2 Countryman; Farrar

799 Hunting. Fishing (W) 38-36489

A book of simple instructions and experience-proven methods for the country fisherman or hunter who finds his sport near home.

Reviewed by Topliffe Sawyer
Boston Transcript p4 D 3 '38 180w

"One of the better and more practical volumes in the Country Series."

+ New Repub 98:27 F 8 '39 70w

PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT. You can win. 176p $1 Abingdon

248 Christian life 39-6

Inspirational essays on true success in living and how it may be won. The most important factor, the author implies, is a vital personal relationship with God. Dr Peale is minister of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York city.

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

"Dr Peale's words are religious without being didactic, and full of soundly based hope, without being Pollyanna-like. Anyone who has suffered illness, loss or misfortune, or has had a serious trial, will find these essays heartening and free from mere fatuous advice or thick moralizings."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 17 '39 200w

PEARCE, CHARLES ALBERT. N R A trade practice programs. 225p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [14s Oxford]

338.0973 National industrial recovery act, 1933. Competition, Unfair. Prices 39-13637

"In this book a former NRA economist classifies and analyzes the trade practice provisions of its codes. . . Mr. Pearce does not evaluate results, but evidently supports the usual view of students that code rules were seldom successful. Nor does he make suggestions, save possibly in a last-page hint (through a double negative) that public agencies should restrict competition. What he does give is a careful, well reasoned account of the origins, aims and interrelations of the restrictive powers desired by business-men for their trade associations." (Am Econ R) Index.

Reviewed by S. N. Whitney
Am Econ R 29:594 S '39 300w

Reviewed by H. M. Teaf, Jr.
Ann Am Acad 206:197 N '39 600w
J Home Econ 31:587 O '39 50w

PEARL, RAYMOND. The natural history of population. 416p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

312 Population. Fecundity. Birth control 39-4890

This book, containing the Heath Clark lectures, 1937, delivered at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, "includes what appear to be some of the more significant results of the studies of human fertility in relation to the problems of population, which have been a major object of [the author's] interest and effort for a good many years." (Pref) Contents: Biological background; The biology of fertility; Human and animal reproductive patterns; The extent of contraceptive efforts in the American population; The effects upon natural fertility of contraceptive efforts; World population—past, present, and future. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Shryock, Jr.
Am Soc R 4:890 D '39 450w

"The book makes a real contribution to what is one of the most vitally important of all possible scientific studies." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p14 Mr 12 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Donnan
Boston Transcript p1 My 20 '39 500w

"Here, between one set of covers, you have material that both layman and specialist can savor. The pages do have that slightly formidable look of careful, detailed research; but there is also plenty of cream to skim off in the lucidly presented conclusions." M. L. Elting

PEARL, RAYMOND Continued
+ Forum 101:vi Ap '39 250w
Nature 144:55 Jl 8 '39 750w
Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 98:286 Ap 12 '39 280w

"A cultivated and erudite man enamored of his special field of study, Pearl cannot fail to touch a responsive chord in every layman who reads this book." Frederick Osborn
+ Pol Sci Q 54:306 Je '39 430w

"This is the most important publication in the field of population trends which has appeared in many years. . . As in certain of his earlier books dealing with genetics and eugenics, Professor Pearl has written with sympathetic kindness in his heart toward the general reader. Although his sentences are occasionally weighted by rather uncommon terms, necessarily used to insure precision of statement, his pages are intensely interesting. Occasional flashes of humor and innumerable bits of wisdom make pleasant even the task of digesting cold statistics." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 F '39 1000w
Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:315 N '39
Reviewed by L. I. Dublin
Survey G 28:402 Je '39 1000w

PEARSON, EGON SHARPE. Karl Pearson; an appreciation of some aspects of his life and work. 170p il $3.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Pearson, Karl. Biometry [39-17195]

Karl Pearson (1857-1936) was an English mathematician, statistician and eugenist. This volume prepared by his son contains two articles first published in Biometrika and several appendices giving résumés of Karl Pearson's lectures at University college, London.

"The author asks 'that wider audience' to which the memoir is now made available to bear in mind that it is 'in no sense a Life' of his father. That seems to be going a little too far. In so far as a man's labours are his life—and for Karl Pearson they were that to a greater extent than for most men—this is an admirable Life: brief certainly, with plenty of room for filling in details, but well-ordered, and very readable at all events by the statistician, to whom it is mainly addressed, much being inevitably more or less technical. But there is more in it than this. Portraits, letters, lighter sketches of life on vacation or in the laboratory, and friendships, serve to fill in the human side of the picture." G. U. Yule
+ Nature 143:220 F 11 '39 1200w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:35 Jl '39

"A volume that cannot take the place of a full-length biography but is a graphic and succinct account of the main features of Pearson's life and work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p797 D 17 '38 330w

PEASE, HOWARD. Long wharf; a story of young San Francisco [il. by Manning de V. Lee]. 219p map $2 Dodd

(W) 39-9934

Danny Mason, who went as cabin boy on his father's barkentine, the Atlantic, when it sailed for San Francisco in '49, is the hero of this book for older boys. The story is of Danny's experiences with marauders and others when his father left him in charge while he went to the gold fields.

Booklist 35:336 Je 1 '39

"A story of real vivacity and authenticity. As to the latter, there are records to prove it. . . I will not defame so exciting a yarn by saying it has a moral, but I must murmur in the ear of people with boys in charge, that this is a moral book. Anything that makes a boy realize, by seeing it work out under his eyes, that a man takes the law into his own hands at his own risk and to his own detriment, strikes me as a good book to give a boy about now." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 7 '39 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"A good yarn for young adventurers and one in which there may well be particular interest in this year when many will visit for the first time the City of the Golden Gate."
+ Horn Bk M 15:227 Jl '39 200w
Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 64:470 Je 1 '39 140w

"The story's first and worthy claim to consideration is as a three-dimensional picture of the lusty youth of one of America's most fascinating cities; but, unlike too many historical stories, it also boasts an engaging young hero, so convincing and likable with his inner misgivings, his pluck and his Yankee ingenuity that any of his 10 to 14 year old followers will be glad that he threw in his lot with a city which grew up almost as fast as did he." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 30 '39 440w

"First rate material marred by a style that leaves much to be desired. 'Tarnation!' the hero exclaims every few pages."
+ — New Yorker 15:107 My 13 '39 50w

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. Flowering earth; wood engravings by Paul Landacre. 260p $2.50 Putnam

580 Botany (W) 39-29407

"The story of plant life is here. Marshaled from geologic ages, but so interwoven with sensitive appreciation for beauty and an awareness of the intangible meanings of growth that it becomes a pæan. . . There is autobiography here, translated into botanical accomplishment—the young Peattie in the Carolinas, at Harvard, in Washington, roaming the earth and loving all the experiences which taught him more of the living world—the oneness of life. There is the story of chlorophyll, of protoplasm, of the 'seeds of life,' of the first algæ and of seaweeds, of primordial ferns and diatoms, of conifers and cycads. Interspersed with all these and with the tale of the rise of the modern floras, of the luck of discovering a botanical garden at Quien Sabe? in California, of the methods of pollinization and the impregnation of seeds, of plant hormones, of fungi and lichens, are the delicate, staccato descriptions of the flowering world which bring a nostalgia to the reader to experience the same sights." (Scientific Bk Club R) An informal bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:146 D 15 '39

" 'Flowering Earth' is not for one instant pedantic or verbose. It is scholarly. It does not spare big words, and it uses big words repeatedly. But there is no circumlocution; no parading of words for themselves alone. This is because Peattie is writing for the intelligent, the eager, the mentally hungry of the world; for people who are refreshed by any sort of emancipation from the trivial; who like to view past ages, the present, and the future impersonally, objectively, but with an understanding eye." G. M. Sutton
+ Books p3 N 12 '39 900w

" 'Flowering Earth' should be Mr. Peattie's finest work because it deals with his love of vegetation and his love of words, the two grand passions of his life. But for one reader at least, there is something strangely unreal about this book. The author approaches the plant world with the wide-eyed wonder of a boy who has just experienced the first thrill of collecting and identifying specimens. . . We hasten to add that some truly fine writing is scattered through the fine writing of this book." J. H. Bradley
— + Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 270w

PEATTIE (peet'ĭ)

"If any one learns botany from this book,' says Mr Peattie, 'it will be by the way.' The reader will learn a great deal; but what is stressed throughout is the living plant, life itself. Beyond the external facts his thoughts and imagination reach, and carry the reader's with them, to the living process, the forces behind the facts. His prose, perhaps at times studied, always distinguished, is pervaded by a continuous sense of beauty and illuminative insight." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p4 N 19 '39 700w

"A fresh and lovely book, with wood engravings by Paul Landacre."

+ New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 20w

"Professional botanists will rightly be thrown into something like impotent fury by this book. Not because it is full of errors,—actually it is singularly free of them—but because it says what needs saying so much better than they have ever said it. Hardly anyone else in America, and perhaps only Bower in England, could possibly have written it so well. . . This is not just lush writing. It is literally and precisely true, but put as no botanist has ever put it, and with something very close to genius." Norman Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 11 '39 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 N '39 250w

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS, ed. A gathering of birds. 379p il $3 Dodd

598.2 Birds. Birds in literature

(W) 39-27333

Anthology of prose about birds, selected from the writings of famous authors: Hudson, Muir, Gilbert White, Jefferies, Alfred Russel Wallace, Thoreau, Audubon, and others. Each selection is prefaced by a biographical sketch. Index.

Booklist 35:286 My 1 '39

"By all odds the finest collection of bird literature this reviewer has seen." R. T. Peterson

+ Books p6 Ap 30 '39 800w

Reviewed by W. M. Tyler

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 350w

"Every one of the 19 authors is represented by some outstanding contribution. Combined, these make a volume that the nature lover will possess with keen delight. The unique illustrations by Edward Shenton add charm to the volume." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '39 360w

"It's a delightful 'gathering' that Mr. Peattie has presented and his own contributions to the book make it something new and valuable in this field." John Kieran

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 9 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 40w

Pratt p13 summer '39

"This anthology is so good that it inevitably gives rise to the question: Why didn't someone think of doing it before?. . Mr. Peattie, as host and toastmaster at this distinguished gathering, introduces each writer in turn with a commentary that is, in every case, a model of style and aptness. The format of the volume is impeccable, and Edward Shenton's illustrations seem to transcend the limitations of pen-and-ink to give the effect of paintings." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:13 Ap 22 '39 280w

Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Je '39 160w

"For each author Mr Peattie supplies a brief sketch of the man and his specialty. These short essays, which are always interesting and informative, are frequently charming as well. As a final attraction each of the 19 chapters is set off by a full-page pen-and-ink sketch of one of the birds described, the work of Edward Shenton, who has also supplied appropriate tail-pieces for most sections."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 3 '39 360w

Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

PEATTIE, LOUISE (REDFIELD) (MRS DONALD CULROSS PEATTIE). Star at noon. 277p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-9058

Present-day California is the scene of this story of complicated relations. Leo Walden, an eminent biologist, happily married for the second time, lives with his wife and stepson in southern California. When Leo's daughter by his first marriage comes to visit and falls in love with Leo's stepson, and the girl's beautiful mother arrives too, Leo's heart is torn two ways. It is the daughter whose wisdom saves the day.

"'Star at Noon' is fluent and crisply dramatic stuff. The early chapters have the glow and sun-drenched richness which distinguishes Mrs. Peattie's stories of southern France. She gives the brown hills of the Pacific a Riviera rinse, and to her characters a deeper pigmentation." Lisle Bell

+ Books p10 Ap 9 '39 500w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 110w

"The story might have been made turgid with strife and tragedy. Mrs. Peattie has not dealt with it that way. Instead, she has told it lightly, as is natural for one who appreciates the little comedies of daily living; natural for one who is wide enough in her sympathies to present not only Emma's case but that of the lovely Bliss and of the distracted Leo."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '39 440w

"Mrs. Peattie has produced another beautifully written reflection of human relationships, this time close, complex and observed under a high-powered lens." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 26 '39 450w

"Unfortunately, though the difficulties of this situation are clearly stated, and the principal actors shown to be agreeable people, none of them quite claims the reader's sympathy. . . Spun out to book length, the thinness of its characters and ideas are as apparent as the neatness and competence of its spinning." K. S.

— + Sat R of Lit 19:18 Ap 15 '39 170w

PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. René and Patou; pictures by [the author]. 64p $1.50 Whitman, A.

38-32857

Account of a French boy, René, who lived in a picturesque fishing village in southern France. René wanted to help his father earn enough to buy a motor for their fishing boat, and he in turn was helped in his ambition by Patou, a little fluffy white dog.

Booklist 35:160 Ja 1 '39

"This is a picture book designed for second and third grade children. It is gaily colored, and is full of the atmosphere of a small French fishing village. Above all, it gives the reader a feeling of being familiar with the people and their way of life; and that is an achievement for any book." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 64:197 Mr 1 '39 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 18 '38 60w

Wis Lib Bul 34:206 D '38

PECORA, FERDINAND. Wall Street under oath; the story of our modern money changers. 313p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

332 Wall Street, New York city. Capitalists and financiers 39-11802

Summarizes the story of the Wall Street investigation which lasted from January, 1933 to July, 1934. It tells the inside story of American high finance during an important period of recent history. Index.

Reviewed by R. L. Weissman

Am Econ R 29:858 D '39 200w

PECORA, FERDINAND—Continued

"Wall Street Under Oath, though written by an Italian by birth, is remarkable as a vivid echo of the century-old hostility in the United States against finance. . . Despite its animosity, the book is entertainingly and sometimes wittily written." F. D. Bond

Atlantic Jl '39 450w

Booklist 35:343 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by Allen Raymond

Books p9 My 14 '39 900w

"Whatever one may think of Judge Pecora's subsequent career, or of the methods used in his investigation, or of the ethics of publishing a book of this character while on the bench, no one can deny that he performed an important public service. His book is an extremely interesting one, if read with due allowance for the author's partisanship, and should have the careful perusal of every person interested in the welfare of this country." Philip Nichols

+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 13 '39 550w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '39 100w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone

Nation 149:22 Jl 1 '39 800w

New Repub 99:27 My 10 '39 30w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski

New Statesman & Nation 18:616 O 28 '39 700w

"The story is an absorbing one, and since Judge Pecora speaks from the record the reader can easily decide how well drawn the conclusions are." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p2 My 14 '39 1350w

New Yorker 15:101 My 13 '39 60w

Reviewed by Honor Croome

Spec 163:698 N 17 '39 500w

"Mr. Pecora writes with his accustomed suavity and dialectical skill, but his comment is often flavored with irony and throughout the book is direct or implied criticism of new-era banking practices and some general aspects of financial power. Many will ask whether his book has a political purpose. It is addressed to the general public and has a moderately polemic tone, but the text yields no clear evidence that it has any purpose other than that which the author avows—of defending the new deal's banking reforms. This defense, however, is confined to a review of the conditions that they were designed to correct."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 850w

Time [London] Lit Sup p647 N 4 '39 200w

PEERY, JAMES ROBERT. Stark summer. 313p $2.50 Harper

39-22579

Story of a southern family: Gramp, apparently senile but really so wise; Catherine, his daughter, and her three grown children—Walter, who had been in the Great war; Charlie, pinch hitting on a second rate newspaper when he wants to be teaching; Pat who works for the W.P.A. In addition there are the two women who are Catherine's daughters-in-law, and friends, acquaintances, and servants.

"It is Walter who is the most convincingly portrayed character in 'Stark Summer,' a book whose strongest point is character development . . . Strangely and perhaps significantly, Charlie, Pat and the others, who are normal and quite healthy, kicking over the traces with zest and courage, are not convincing figures. . . But I think the book's chief weakness lies in its style, which bristles with clichés, feebleness and flimsy purple patches." W. J. Gold

+ — Books p8 S 10 '39 600w

Reviewed by Ann Springer

Boston Transcript p13 S 28 '39 400w

"As a novel of Southern life, 'Stark Summer' falls between two schools of writing and comes out a well-written, forceful story. It hadn't the fragrance of 'So Red the Rose' nor the stench of some of the Caldwell and Faulkner books. For that reason it seems a rounder, sounder work." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 S 10 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:78 S 9 '39 30w

Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 30 '39 150w

PEET, CREIGHTON. Dude ranch; the story of a modern cowboy [phot. by the author]. [96p] $2 Whitman, A.

39-17801

The everyday life on a Montana ranch is told in simple prose for young readers. Each page has a photograph of the children or animals involved.

"The routine is real enough, from roping to rodeo. The little boys love it. Other little boys will eat it up, or little boys have changed since the last cowboy book came out. All they demand is plenty of ranch pictures, but they prefer one in which a small boy is shown in the act of doing what they long to do." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 9 '39 190w

"The pictures are the chief attraction of the book, one has the feeling that the story is only a device to give the pictures continuity. Might be useful for retarded readers, but will be especially enjoyed by fourth to sixth grade boys." Marian Herr

Library J 64:563 Jl '39 70w

PEGIS, ANTON CHARLES. Saint Thomas and the Greeks. (Aquinas lecture) 107p $1 Marquette univ. press

189.4 Thomas Aquinas, Saint. Philosophy, Medieval. Philosophy, Ancient 39-23515

"The Aristotelian Society of Marquette University presents in the present volume the third of its annual Aquinas Lectures. Professor Pegis, the lecturer for 1939, is a member of the faculty of Fordham University Graduate School and a fellow of the Toronto Institute of Mediaeval Studies. He has selected the problem of creation as the focal point of his discussion of the philosophy of Saint Thomas Aquinas in its relations to the thought of the Greeks." Commonweal

---

"The work is readable, informative and contributes greatly to the clarification of a most profound problem." V. J. Bourke

+ Commonweal 30:543 O 6 '39 300w

J Philos 36:716 D 21 '39 230w

PEKIN, L. B., pseud. See Snell, R.

PEMBERTON, WILLIAM BARING. Lord North. 445p il $6 (21s) Longmans

B or 92 North, Frederick, 2d earl of Guilford. Great Britain—Politics and government 39-12961

The biography is an attempt to revaluate the character and career of Lord North under whose premiership England lost the American colonies. Index.

"Mr. Pemberton's biography is serious and sincere and, even though his sympathies are avowedly with a man whom he regards as misunderstood and wronged, he never strains or emotionalizes. But so much having been said, I am bound to confess that a biography of North still strikes me as a pretty thankless proposition. His life was not spectacular and his personality was far from impressive." W. L. Langer

Books p5 Ja 29 '39 1500w

"We seem to be getting back to the Victorian tradition. The contemporary biographer, instead of saying that there is nothing like mud, says that there is nothing like whitewash. The figures of our great men are all being taken out of their cupboards again and all the spots are whitewashed over until they are as speckless as the Victorian saints. There is no end to the beatification and canonization of great men. But they don't stop at that. The greatest triumph is to find some second-rate politician, an imbecile king, or a tenth-grade general famous for his defeats, and then to canonize him, to prove that the judgment of history has been wrong, and that really at the worst he was a great man manqué. Lord North is an admirable candidate for canonization and Mr. Pemberton has done his best for him." Leonard Woolf

New Statesman & Nation 16:1014 D 10 '38 700w

"The biography is, on the whole, well worked out. It is written with candor yet with sympathy, and as an Englishman's estimate of an Englishman, it tells a story that, for multitudes of people, despite all libraries, has still to be told." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 22 '39 1050w

"Anyone interested in the great game of politics will enjoy reading this description of the sport as it was played under eighteenth century rules. Mr. Pemberton has condensed a considerable body of material into a witty and well-written biography. . . Mr. Pemberton, either through sympathy or political conviction, tends to see everything through North's eyes. Since those eyes were never more than half open, some curious judgments result." J. R. Strayer

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:15 Ja 28 '39 450w

Reviewed by J. L. Hammond
Spec 161:1129 D 30 '38 650w

"It must be said at once that even in the friendly hands of Mr. Pemberton Lord North is hardly a subject to which the general reader would turn with relish. The author was, therefore, wise to aim at producing a book which, well documented and soberly written, should appeal rather to the historian and specialist than to a wider public."

Times [London] Lit Sup p795 D 17 '38 900w

PENCE, OWEN EARLE. The Y.M.C.A. and social need; a study of institutional adaptation; foreword by William E. Speers. 360p $2.75 Assn. press

267.3 Young men's Christian associations. Young men 39-27501

"This volume is not a comprehensive history. It does not attempt to include the whole of a continuous account of the life and activity of the American Young Men's Christian Association. It is rather an examination of certain internal and external factors that have made for continuity and for change in the organization under study. In brief, it is a study of institutional adaptation on the part of the American Y.M.C.A. It seeks to contribute to better understanding of the essential elements making for continuity and change, and to suggest ways by which it may be possible for the present-day Young Men's Christian Association to make such further timely changes as may be needed in keeping with its historic character, its chosen mission, and its opportunities." (General introd) Selected reference list. Index.

Reviewed by T. F. Neblett
Ann Am Acad 206:218 N '39 600w
Booklist 35:342 Je 15 '39
Christian Century 56:582 My 3 '39 80w

PENNY, PRUDENCE, pseud. Cookbook [with a foreword by Leo Carillo; il. by Charles Knight]. 385p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

641.5 Cookery. Menus (W)

A cook book by the home economics editor of the Los Angeles Examiner. Besides hundreds of recipes for simple and elaborate dishes, the book contains general information on buying, preparing and cooking foods, measurements, a section of menus for brunches, midnight snacks, etc., with time tables for preparation, and some favorite recipes of movie stars. Index.

J Home Econ 31:333 My '39 80w
Special Libraries 30:138 Ap '39

PENNYPACKER, MORTON. General Washington's spies on Long Island and in New York. 315p il map $3.50 Long Island hist. soc, 130 Pierrepont st, Brooklyn, N.Y.

973.385 Spies. U.S.—History—Revolution—Secret service 39-15703

"General Washington's secret service in New York guarded some of its most important secrets for 150 years. It is less than a decade since Morton Pennypacker revealed in his book 'The Two Spies' [Book Review Digest, 1931] the identity of the two principal workers in Washington's Bureau of Military Intelligence. In this present volume he presents further material, hitherto unpublished, about the espionage activities which centered in New York during the Revolution. . . The man selected to manage the spy system within the City of New York was Robert Townsend of Oyster Bay, and his principal fellow-worker on Long Island was Abraham Woodhull of Setauket." N Y Times

"It is seldom that a local historical society publishes a volume so well conceived, well written, and well printed as this one; a work in which Long Islanders may well take pride." Allan Nevins

+ Books p4 Jl 2 '39 850w
N Y Times p5 My 7 '39 440w

PENTECOST, HUGH. Cancelled in red. 266p $2 Dodd

(W) 39-13884

Detective story.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 Je 4 '39 270w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 140w
Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:568 O 21 '39 40w

"You will like this story even if you do think that all stamp collectors are crazy." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 Je 11 '39 180w
New Yorker 15:96 Je 10 '39 40w

"Among the best."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 3 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 2 '39 180w
Time 34:56 Jl 3 '39 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p658 N 11 '39 130w

PERDIX, ELIZABETH. Wine for the vintager. 256p $2.50 L. Raley, 505 5th av, N.Y.

39-16517

A psychological story which follows the experiences of one Sam Caandler, a writer, during the course of a brief week-end. The tale begins as Sam leaves a psychiatrist's office, plagued with the notion that he has lost his ability to write. His foster sister, Una, persuades him to go on a visit to a Virginia country house; he breaks his glasses, falls in love, and finally sees tragedy at close hand.

"Miss Perdix is spoken of by her publishers as a psychiatrist. Certainly, in addition to that, she is an artist of some virtuosity. But for all its structural felicity, the labored beauty of its rhythms and its very considerable wit and intellectual insight, I find 'Wine for the Vintager' far more disturbing than satisfying." F. H. Britten

+ — Books p8 My 14 '39 600w

PERDIX, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Elizabeth Perdix brings to writing fiction a psychiatric technique for the handling of character which produces people who live on the page. It is too bad that she did not bring a story, too. . . If the book is meant to indict the wealthy self-important people who are lost in the intricacy of their own psyches, the job has been done better by Hemingway. If its real subject is the exploration of the darker marches of the mind, it is less successful than the work of Julian Green. But these are important names. That 'Wine for the Vintager' should evoke them is meant as a mild tribute. If the author had been able to hang her intricate treatment of personality on a clearer story and if there were more (at least two) relatively normal people included for purposes of reference, her intention would have been plainer and the comparison even less unfavorable." W. M. Frohock

+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 27 '39 550w

" 'Wine for the Vintager' could be dismissed in one paragraph were it not for the fact that Miss Perdix shows evidence of ability. Amid all its pretentious nonsense and flummery, there are passages in her book which are shrewd and piercing. If she could have told her story more simply and unaffectedly, if she had omitted to dwell fatiguingly on Una's 'vitrescent' charm and Sam's 'undulant' bulk, Miss Perdix might have had something—even if something pretty morbid. As it is, her mannerisms obscure whatever is of value in her novel." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p7 My 7 '39 550w

"Not easy going, but worth the trouble it takes."

New Yorker 15:100 My 13 '39 90w

PERKINS, ALICE J. G., and WOLFSON, THERESA. Frances Wright: free enquirer; the study of a temperament. 393p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Wright, Frances 39-23217

Biography of an early nineteenth-century blue stocking and social reformer. Born in Scotland, an heiress carefully brought up, Frances Wright broke away from home ties as soon as she reached her majority. She visited America frequently, was a lecturer and writer, founder of a community which attempted the emancipation of slaves. As a young woman she was a protégé of Lafayette; later she married a Frenchman interested in similar reform movements. Bibliography. Index.

"If one were obliged to select a single specimen or case history to exemplify what happened to liberalism in the nineteenth century, how the name was appropriated and exploited by strictly authoritarian reformers, the life and works of Frances Wright might stand for all the tribe. . . Her biographers explain that 'this book is a belated attempt to pay some measure of the debt we owe her.' They do not mean to be satirical." Isabel Paterson

Books p5 S 10 '39 1600w

" 'Frances Wright: Free Enquirer' is a scholarly biography, perhaps too meticulously drawn, but always eminently fair to its subject."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '39 700w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone

Nation 149:418 O 14 '39 850w

"A. J. G. Perkins and Theresa Wolfson have spared themselves no efforts to assemble the many-hued, tangled threads of this unique woman's life, and their presentation, scholarly though it is, possesses the excitement and drama usually associated with works of fiction." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p4 S 17 '39 1450w

New Yorker 15:79 S 9 '39 40w

"The whole tale of Frances Wright, 'Free Enquirer,' is here, and although the writing of the book leaves a good deal to be desired and occasionally the chronology is obscure, it is well worth reading." Gladys Graham

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:16 S 9 '39 600w

Reviewed by M. R. Beard

Survey G 28:766 D '39 420w

Wis Lib Bul 35:215 D '39

PERKINS, GRACE (MRS FULTON OURSLER) (DORA MACY, pseud). Twilight cheats. 273p $2 Farrar

39-25867

A triangle story, in which a modern business man tries to prove that he can love two women at the same time. The women—his wife, who is determined not to give up her husband, and the glamorous blond with the modern viewpoint—are not so sure.

"Grace Perkins is an expert delineator of surface emotions, but she doesn't go very deep. The plot is ingeniously managed, but the characters have more flesh than blood." Lisle Bell

— + Books p17 O 1 '39 350w

"A fast moving, contemporary story embellished with Schiaparelli perfumé, penthouses and so on." M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 100w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p23 O 1 '39 180w

PERKINS, MARY. At your ease in the Catholic church. 203p $2 (5s) Sheed

264.02 Roman Catholic church—Liturgy and ritual 39-4266

This little guidebook for the Catholic layman explains the administration of the Sacraments, the ceremonies of the Mass, the seasons of the liturgy, the rules of religious orders, and the origin and meaning of the various vestments. It also answers such practical questions as how to address a letter to a bishop, where to go to make a retreat, etc. Index.

"Miss Perkins scores on every count, and should be superlatively congratulated. She has achieved something worthwhile, something which fills a large hiatus. . . For all the informality of treatment, under every statement is the solid bedrock of Faith and dogma and good form, expanded with sense and intelligence." Paula Kurth

+ America 60:429 F 4 '39 480w

"This is a book to be especially treasured by recent converts. True to its title it literally 'sets one at ease,' reducing mountains to molehills, solving many a problem and stilling frequent fears in the heart of the trembling neophyte. . . Here and there careful editing would make a sentence more exact or more intelligible."

+ Cath World 148:761 Mr '39 130w

"This intelligent little book manages to squeeze a wealth of information about the Church into less than two hundred pages. The presentation is so informal and so sprightly that it makes enjoyable reading." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 29:390 Ja 27 '39 210w

PEROWNE, BARRY. I'm no murderer. 287p $2 Hillman-Curl [7s 6d Cassell]

[38-29790]

Detective story.

"The plot is pretty involved, but it straightens out to a satisfactory conclusion for all the surviving participants. The-not-too-critical reader will probably enjoy it." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 23 '39 160w

"Slightly confusing yarn of killings that stemmed from black deeds in Portuguese East Africa. Numerous flash-backs are irritating. Passable."

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 22 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 Ag 20 '38 120w

PERRY, CHARLES MILTON. Toward a dimensional realism. 180p $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

110 Metaphysics 39-11737

"The general claim, from the point of view of which Professor Perry considers many problems in turn, is that reality is much more complex than any analysis can alone indicate, that various and even contradictory analyses may alike be justified from their respective lines of attack, and that the erroneous element in most philosophical systems is the supposition that the system defines the only or the basic approach which all must then continue to follow. This general claim is applied in a series of chapters to many fields, from space-time to society." J Philos

Reviewed by R. D. Miller
Crozer Q 17:73 Ja '40 380w

Reviewed by W. H. Werkmeister
Ethics 50:105 O '39 2500w

"To allow a metaphor to become the controlling feature of a book is not always clarifying. But Professor Perry makes many suggestive comments upon recent and contemporary philosophy. And the metaphor of dimensionality lends itself excellently to the contention of the final chapter, namely, that society should foster variety of types and interests within its own rich and 'multidimensional' cohesiveness." S. P. L.

+ J Philos 36:356 Je 22 '39 260w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 29 '39 400w

PERRY, CLAIR WILLARD (CLAY PERRY, pseud). Underground New England [phot. by Arthur Palme]. 247p map $2.50 Daye

551.44 Caves. New England—Description and travel 39-7705

This book on the caves of New England contains a popular account of their geology and exploration, but is chiefly concerned with the legends and stories of men who have found refuge in them—regicides, pirates, counterfeiters, and robbers.

Reviewed by S. H. Holbrook
Books p2 S 3 '39 800w
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 27 '39 650w

"Clay Perry's book of New England caves is a mine of stories. Somewhat less strikingly it is a presentation also of geological and physical facts about 'underground New England.' Most of these caves are small, and not all are natural; but many are interesting and some are beautiful. This is the first book to be given over to a collection of New England cave lore, and it makes its subject very entertaining. It also lists the known caves, shows photographs of some of them, and offers advice on 'cave-crawling' and its equipment."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '39 330w

PERRY, CLARENCE ARTHUR. Housing for the machine age. 261p il maps $2.50 Russell Sage

711 City planning. Housing. Regional planning (W) 39-27502

In this discussion of housing problems of today and tomorrow, the author advocates replacing outmoded "zoning" principles with the concept of neighborhood unit planning. Index.

Reviewed by A. R. Hasse
Am Econ R 29:637 S '39 250w

"Housing is very much in the front of public discussion at the present time, and it is very interesting to note that a social research organization, the Russell Sage Foundation, has come forward with a valuable book on the subject." W. F. Ogburn

+ Am J Soc 45:281 S '39 550w

"It is to be expected that Housing for the Machine Age will not remain merely another addition to the valuable literature on housing, but that its plan will be translated into effective legislation and administrative practices in which private enterprise will share with the commonwealth in the task of creating decent housing facilities in neighborhoods worthy of civilized communities." Carol Aronovici

+ Ann Am Acad 205:159 S '39 400w
Booklist 35:359 Jl 1 '39

Reviewed by W. R. Agard
Books p17 Jl 23 '39 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:24 Ap '39

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks
Social Forces 18:294 D '39 450w

"Mr. Perry's book is well worth a careful reading, not only by students of city planning and persons with a general interest in housing, but also by the building and real estate interests." G. A. Boehm

+ Survey 75:356 N '39 350w

PERRY, CLAY, pseud. See Perry, Clair Willard

PERRY, MRS FRANCES. Water gardening; foreword by E. A. Bowles. 353p il $5 Scribner [15s Country life]

635.9674 Water gardens 39-16527

"Frances Perry's book deals with almost every aspect of a very fascinating subject. Starting with the practical construction of outdoor pools, she goes on to tell how to stock them with plants and animal life, so as to maintain a correct 'balance of life' and gives much useful information about bog and moisture loving plants for the margins of pools and streams as well as the plants growing in the water itself, such as water-lilies, floating aquatics and submerged oxygenating plants. The indoor aquarium, both heated and cold, is also dealt with and there are two chapters on the care of fish." Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is an English publication, and consequently many of the plant species and varieties included are not procurable over here—at least, not without long and possibly expensive search. But those sections which deal with construction, planting and maintenance hold much information that will be genuinely useful to American gardeners, and the adequacy of the numerous illustrations is complete." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p13 My 14 '39 80w

"Written in England and printed in Scotland, the book is an ideal work for English gardeners. For American gardeners, it is interesting and informing but often impracticable. With a little re-writing to adapt it to conditions on this side of the Atlantic, the book might have been without a peer."
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 21 '39 250w

"This volume for some time to come, at any rate, will probably be accepted as the standard work on water-gardening, every form of which seems to have been adequately dealt with. . . . The numerous illustrations include some exquisite photographic reproductions of Claude Monet's lovely water garden at Giverney and many others equally fascinating." B. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '38 330w
Times [London] Lit Sup p806 D 17 '38 80w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Walls rise up. 236p $2 Doubleday

39-9209

Tale of three hoboes who light out from California via freight train, and presently reach a convenient spot on the Brazos river in Texas. There they take over the shack of a squatter, who has been killed by their freight train, and proceed to wangle a fairly good living from a nearby farm and other sources and resources.

PERRY, G. S. Continued

"'Walls Rise Up' is not only first-rate entertainment, it is legitimate entertainment; its ingredients are straight out of a world which would seem to offer little material for comedy. To have seen where the material for comedy lies in America today, that is, among those free of responsibility, and to have exploited it so expertly, without effort and without sentimentality, is an achievement to be grateful for." N. W. Richmond, Jr.

+ Books p16 Ap 2 '39 420w

" 'Walls Rise Up' is a picaresque novel which satirizes life through the device of exaggeration. At the same time the prose is amazingly realistic. In the midst of all his exaggerations Mr. Perry never loses his ear for the American language. . . A curious side to [the book] is the physical excess and brutality and its colossal boozing, fighting and inimitably casual love-making. . . Mr. Perry has written a book too brazenly strong, masculine, and American to sell very well." Margaret Clark

— + Boston Transcript p2 Mr 25 '39 550w

New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 40w

"A segment of the odyssey of three lighthearted, heavy-drinking hoboes, this book of footloose and hilarious adventure will be welcomed with open arms by many readers. But don't recommend it to your Boston Aunt if you hope to be remembered in her will. For it strikes the risibilities very close to the ground, and its earthy humor is elementary and unrefined. It is a tremendously funny book." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p13 Jl 23 '39 500w

"There is an inescapable reaction on the part of the reader that the author is being conscientiously hardboiled. Generally speaking, his hoboes are likable characters in the Cain and Steinbeck tradition. But their excursions into ribaldry and immorality fall short of conviction more often than not. They lead a catch-as-catch-can existence made up of equal parts of assault, lechery, and petty larceny. And while your interest is aroused recurringly in their conquests, amorous and economic, you leave them finally without regret, and without any particular memories." R. S.

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 25 '39 120w

PERRY, JOSEPHINE, and SLAUSON, CELESTE. Forestry and lumbering. (America at work) 128p il map $1.50 Longmans

634.9 Forests and forestry—Juvenile literature. Lumbering—Juvenile literature

(W) 39-27754

"Using the Northwest to typify the process of the lumbering industry, the authors present in brief, simple, and direct form the progress of lumbering and the growth of forestry." (Library J) For grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"Libraries will find especially useful the material on fire prevention and control, and the description of the modern methods used in a typical logging and sawmill operation. Index, good print, excellent make-up." Marian Herr

+ Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 50w

" 'Forestry and Lumbering' is admirably illustrated and the main outline is suggestive of numerous classroom projects which may be profitably undertaken in an elementary school conservation course. But one feels that the authors are not completely at home with their subject. The book is probably not intended as a reference work."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 D 4 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

PERRY, RALPH BARTON, and others. The meaning of the humanities. See Greene, T. M., ed.

PERRY, RAYMOND W. Block printing craft. 143p il $3.50 Manual arts

761 Wood engraving. Linoleum block printing (W) 38-30958

Following a short historical survey of block printing, the book describes the technique of wood and linoleum block printing, designing, transferring, cutting, printing, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:95 N 15 '38

"This is a very practical book. . . The author is a master of the craft, whose prints have been shown in some of the leading exhibitions. The book is very clearly written, and illustrated with numerous drawings and prints, including a series to demonstrate the steps in the process of making color prints where several blocks are used."

+ School Arts 38:8a Je '39 100w

PETERS, MARJORIE. Nancy goes places [il. by the author]. [56p] $1.50 Macmillan

39-19700

Five stories about a little girl whose lively imagination added excitement to even the most ordinary of daily affairs.

Reviewed by E. M. Mack

Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 40w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '39 120w

"Each page is illustrated with numerous drawings and details that tend to give the book a cluttered appearance. The book's size and shape is unfortunate for it looks like a picture book but its honest appeal would be to little girls of seven to nine who like to 'pretend' and can read for themselves. Experience will show whether this book can find its right public in the library." E. G. Mullan

Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 70w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. The story book of things we wear; wool, cotton, silk, rayon [il. by the authors]. [128p] $2.50 Winston

677 Textile fabrics—Juvenile literature. Clothing and dress—Juvenile literature

(W) 39-33002

Information, in simple form, about the growth, cultivation, and industrial uses of the clothes we wear. The four sections of the volume are: wool; cotton; silk; and rayon. Also issued as four separate volumes at 75 cents each.

Booklist 36:202 Ja 15 '40

"Excellent picture-information. . . The four little books . . . follow the pattern of their predecessors; if the pictures cannot be so brilliant as those, for example, in the food series where landscapes were so glowing, the information, both in word and picture has often the charm of the unexpected. At least I feel sure many children will find out for the first time how fascinating a background rayon has, from the bits about it given here. 'Silk' is, as might be guessed, the prettiest book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 24 '39 90w

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan

Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 100w

PETERSON, HORACE CORNELIUS. Propaganda for war; the campaign against American neutrality, 1914-1917. 358p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

940.488 Propaganda, British. European war, 1914-1918—Propaganda. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. (W) 39-11769

"It is Mr. Peterson's purpose to study in detail the ways and means by which the British propagandists established their pre-eminence over the competing propagandists of the Central Powers." N Y Times

---

"Despite a few minor errors of orthography, Peterson's book is a fine job. Someday perhaps certain persons in Great Britain and in the United States who were intimately connected with the British propaganda endeavor during the war and who up until now have refrained from revealing what they know will add further important information. Until that shall transpire, Propaganda for War will undoubtedly remain as the definitive work in this field of World War history." J. D. Squires

+ Am Hist R 45:363 Ja '40 300w

Reviewed by R. D. Casey
Am Pol Sci R 33:1103 D '39 550w

Reviewed by H. L. Childs
Ann Am Acad 205:173 S '39 600w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Atlantic Ja '40 50w

Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39

Reviewed by W. L. Langer
Books p12 O 1 '39 1100w

"The book would make the entire nation 'stop, look and listen' if enough Americans could be persuaded to read it during this summer that marks the quarter-centennial of the outbreak of the Great Madness." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 56:879 Jl 12 '39 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 27 '39 600w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 30:589 O 20 '39 360w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:4 D '39 50w

Foreign Affairs 18:161 O '39 60w

"Mr. Peterson's account of the British propaganda that drew America into the World War is or should be an event of significance to Americans who desire to safeguard American interests. If widely read, the book will help vastly to prevent Americans from being swept off their feet by today's fears, hatreds and hysterias." C. R. Miller

+ New Repub 99:50 My 17 '39 1200w

"As in the case with so many books published under academic auspices, the handling of references by Mr. Peterson rather baffles me. He quotes indirectly sources of information all students can freely consult directly; he cites some standard works and completely ignores others; and he fails, in a book which is fairly exhaustive, to refer at all to several articles of the first importance to his subject. But if the vagaries of the academic mind are unfathomable in this respect, there can be no question that Mr. Peterson's book has a clarity and forthrightness which are decidedly not ruling characteristics of academic products." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p13 My 7 '39 900w

Pratt p20 winter '40

Reviewed by R. J. Sontag
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Je 3 '39 550w

Social Studies 30:332 N '39 150w

"There is much valuable information in this volume on the general subject of the United States during the years from 1914 to 1917, and on the events which led to the declaration of war. The student of that period will find it useful as a compilation of facts, with occasional snatches of good writing and some penetrating interpretations. Nonetheless, both the book's reading qualities and its merits as a contribution to history would have profited from a more determined effort on the author's part to digest his abundant materials and to set forth his findings in a more clear-cut and conclusive fashion. The notes and bibliography are full, but the index is inadequate." D. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Je 8 '39 750w

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. A field guide to the birds; giving field marks of all species found east of the Rockies. rev and enl ed 180p il map $2.75 Houghton

598.2 Birds (W) 39-27271

"This is the first completely revised edition of the Field Guide since its publication in 1934. Aside from a number of additional notes on identification, cross-references between text and plates have been added, also sizes of birds in inches, sections on song and range, etc. Besides a few more line cuts throughout the text, four new plates are included: two of shorebirds at rest, one of sea-birds, and one of Rails, Gallinules, etc. The area covered by the guide was extended from the ninetieth to the hundredth or hundred and third meridian, roughly, the eastern edge of the Rockies, a much more practical line of division between the East and the West." (Pref) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Index.

Booklist 35:276 Ap 15 '39

Books p30 Ap 30 '39 20w

"The colored illustrations are excellent, and in the case of the warbler family the distinguishing colors are marked in a manner definitely to facilitate identification. This is especially helpful in a family so numerous and with so many members clad so nearly alike. The size of the volume the bird student will find eminently practical as he sallies forth to make first acquaintances among the birds, or to refresh his knowledge of familiars. . . With this volume at hand identification of our summer visitors is comparatively easy." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '39 270w

Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. The junior book of birds. 92p il $2 Houghton

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature (W) 39-27398

The director of the educational program of the National Association of Audubon societies has written this bird-study guide for young readers. The habits and behavior, identification, nests, of twenty-three common North American birds are considered. There are color plates of each, with many drawings in black and white.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p12 My 7 '39 350w

"A noteworthy effort to put interesting and reliable information about birds and their habits into a form that will attract children of all ages." E. M. Mack

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 30w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 29 '39 130w

Horn Bk M 15:170 My '39 30w

"While the book will fill a need in library and home collections because of the dearth of material on birds that is intelligible to younger children, it is unfortunate that the book lacks an index, is so expensive, and suffers from a chatty, conversational style." Dorotha Dawson

Library J 64:470 Je 1 '39 120w

New Yorker 15:91 N 25 '39 20w

"As good a book as any available."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 30w

Wis Lib Bul 35:194 N '39

PETRIE, SIR WILLIAM MATTHEW FLINDERS. Making of Egypt. 188p 82pl map $3.75 Macmillan [12s 6d British school of archaeology; S.P.C.K]

913.32 Egypt—Antiquities. Egypt—Civilization [39-27399]

"Professor Petrie has collected within this volume the main features of archaeological and

PETRIE, W. M. F. —Continued
anthropological evidence at present available for tracing the various elements of which the Ancient Egyptian civilization was composed. . . The book deals primarily with pre- and proto-dynastic times, but allusion is also made to the later periods. Some eighty plates of line-drawings and photographs serve as illustrations to the text." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 35:304 My 15 '39

"Terse, forceful exposition, characteristic of the doyen of Egyptology, marks the undiminished energy and concentration of this wonderful scholar in his eighty-sixth year." S. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 4 '39 380w

"The layman will find much profit and pleasure in studying the plates, but to read the text requires more detailed knowledge than he could possess. The attempt to squeeze so much into so small a space entails a style which at times becomes almost telegraphic in its compression. It also necessitates allusions which are sufficient for the Egyptologist, but must be meaningless to the public." G. A. Wainwright

Nature 143:957 Je 10 '39 470w

Spec 162:504 Mr 24 '39 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p286 My 13 '39 80w

PETTEE, GEORGE SAWYER. The process of revolution. 167p $2.75 Harper

321.092 Revolutions 39-2956

The author "is concerned chiefly with what he calls the 'great revolutions,' those of France and Russia, though now and then he brings in an instance from Spain, or turns back into older history. Fascism he dismisses as a 'minor revolution,' a mere public coup d'état. Mr. Pettee has a resolutely modern temper: he is not to be shocked by the excesses of revolutionaries, not to be betrayed into accepting myths and slogans from any source, but is courageously determined to help build a political science on which can be built a better world. Revolutionists, he concludes, belong to the saving minority who preserve social values. In a brief but ambitious conclusion he holds—or perhaps only hopes—that as we come to understand revolutions we may come to avoid them." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard

Am Pol Sci R 33:692 Ag '39 1050w

Reviewed by David Riesman, Jr.

Harvard Law R 52:864 Mr '39 850w

"Mr. Pettee has none of the timidity, none of the innocent faith in 'facts,' none of the unwillingness to generalize, that we are told is the curse of the academic social scientists. His study is one of the most interesting and most readable books in an increasing literature on the comparative study of revolutions." C. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 3 '39 440w

PETTIE, GEORGE. A petite pallace of Pettie his pleasure; ed. by Herbert Hartman. 327p $6.50 (25s) Oxford

[38-34088]

George Pettie's Petite Pallace first appeared in 1576, antedating John Lyly's Euphues by several years and closely resembling that work. Pettie's tales of love, courtship and marriage have a classical framework and are ornamented with proverbs and maxims. Notes are added and an index to proverbs and to proper names.

"Scholars today will welcome a new edition of the book, because of the light it sheds on the rhetorical conventions of the time and on the standards of polite learning three and a half centuries ago."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 14 '39 90w

"Students of early Elizabethan literature, and especially of Euphuism, will be glad to know of this handsome and scholarly edition of a book of great importance in the story. Mr. Hartman's introduction shows the results of the most recent research in the study of Pettie and of his book; and the text, not being modernized is more trustworthy than that published by Israel Gollancz in the King's Classics. In his notes Mr. Hartman has been at great pains to trace the origin and history of the many proverbs which are a feature of the style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p62 Ja 28 '39 90w

PFEIFFER, JOHN. Science in your life; il. by Ludwig Mactarian. (Peoples lib) 109p 60c Macmillan

530 Physics (W) 39-29409

A small popularly written book on physical science. "Mr. Pfeiffer attacks such fundamentals as heat, molecules, seeing, hearing, magnetism, sound, and in the process gives enough historical background to let his readers know how we came by our conceptions." (N Y Times)

Booklist 36:152 D 15 '39

Christian Century 56:1512 D 6 '39 30w

"As the science editor of Newsweek, Mr. Pfeiffer knows how to make his readers sit up in class and pay attention. His crisp sentences, his happy analogies, his desire to make his explanations so clear that there is no escaping their meaning all contribute to make 'Science in Your Life' the best kind of elementary introduction to a course in physical science." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p15 Ja 7 '40 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 5 '40 220w

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

PHELPS, CLYDE WILLIAM. Retail credit fundamentals; official textbook of the National retail credit association. 318p il $4 Nat. retail credit assn, 1218 Olive st, St Louis

658.882 Credit. Retail trade. Collecting of accounts 38-31651

"With the aim of treating 'only those basic functions which every employee in the credit department should be expected to know . . . ' this book is one project in the educational program of the National Retail Credit Association. A second volume is planned to cover more advanced problems. The presentation, which includes much descriptive material of optional methods of operation, is logically enough organized into three parts: (1) securing business, (2) controlling the account, and (3) collecting, i.e., it follows through the normal credit cycle." Am Econ R

"Though containing little that is startlingly new, this volume should be useful to the experienced credit sales manager as a review of his own practices and to the less advanced employee as an introduction to the credit problem and its relation to the store as a whole, and a better understanding of the 'why' of activities in which he participates." G. B. Tallman

Am Econ R 29:604 S '39 200w

"An exceptionally useful volume on a particular narrow phase of retail store operation." S. F. Teele

+ Harvard Business R 18:129 autumn '39 160w

PHELPS, EDITH MAY, ed. Book and library plays for elementary and high school use. 222p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

812.08 Children's plays. College and school drama 38-28914

These sixteen short plays are selected from the many offered to the Wilson Bulletin during the past year. The plays, which dramatize books, literary characters, and library practice, are easy to produce and most of them require no royalties.

Booklist 35:114 D 1 '38

"The range of subject matter in the plays is wide—there are plays about printing and printers, John Newberry, books of all varieties, library rules and regulations. Recommended for libraries of any size that have a demand and especially for school libraries." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 64:118 F 1 '39 90w

Wis Lib Bul 35:71 Ap '39

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. Autobiography with letters. 936p il $3.75 (15s) Oxford

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27272

Reminiscences of Yale's much loved professor emeritus of English. "Mr. Phelps's book . . . wanders light-heartedly hither and yon for the length of a thousand pages; it introduces famous and interesting personalities by the dozen; it interlards its narrative with random disquisitions on cats and fresh-air fiends, on the iniquity of after-dinner speaking, on how to read on trains, on the younger generation, and heaven knows what else. One thinks, this book could be cut by one-third and not suffer, and then reflects that it would be like cutting living tissue. For this is the record of a man's abundant living." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by E. V. Stonequist

Am Soc R 4:910 D '39 80w

Reviewed by John Holmes

Atlantic My '39 800w

Booklist 35:268 Ap 15 '39

"This is a Niagara Falls of a book. And, like Niagara Falls, it carries a certain amount of odd and extraneous matter along in its current. On one page you will meet a distinguished literary figure. On the next you are quite as likely to get a recipe for curing hiccoughs. But, as the pages roll on, the wonder grows that any one human being should have been able to do so many different things and get such fun out of all of them. Nor is it ever a self-centered enjoyment. If Mr. Phelps knows of something good, his automatic instinct is to share it with you as quickly as possible. And, if you don't happen to appreciate that particular thing—no matter. There will be a dozen other things. For few men since Samuel Pepys have had such unflagging zest for life." S. V. Benét

+ Books p1 Ap 16 '39 1600w

"Better than anybody like him, Mr. Phelps has known how to strike the greatest common denominator of the literary public. He knows this audience—its hopes, its fears, its refusals, its confused emotions, its limitations, its prejudices—and in 'Autobiography with Letters' he has written precisely the kind of book such readers will enjoy. He has removed every difficulty. He is plain and simple. Except for the unfortunate Mrs. Ward he has liked almost everybody, and he expects his readers to like almost everybody, too." H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 15 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Arthur Barker

Canadian Forum 19:61 My '39 700w

Cath World 149:370 Je '39 440w

Christian Century 56:726 Je 7 '39 1600w

"The first mental reaction, as one picks up this book with the portrait of the famous author on its jacket, is, What a bulky volume! What can a man say about himself that justifies a book of a thousand pages! As one reads it, however, one's query is, 'Why does he stop with only a thousand pages? There must be material for another thousand behind this.'" A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '39 800w

"This is no conventional autobiography. It is man size, life size. In bulk alone it pairs with Gone With The Wind. The whole man is here in all his many-sidedness; whatever else he be, always the optimistic apostle of appreciation of the best in men and movements." L. P. Powell

+ Churchman 153:17 Ap 15 '39 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 50:6 My '39 750w

"One of the gayest and most entertaining personal histories ever written." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:v My '39 100w

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 23 '39 280w

"Reading over the 1,000 pages of memories, anecdotes, homilies, apologies, appreciations, revelations, which describe Professor Phelps's life and friendships, it is impossible for us also not to feel admiration and amazement. . . . Although the pages of the 'Autobiography' are studded with learned quotations in varied languages, their watermark is always U.S.A., and they reveal the immense energy of our society, our hero-worship, tolerance, pragmatic curiosity, sentimentality, and geniality." Maxwell Geismar

+ Nation 148:474 Ap 22 '39 550w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson

New Repub 99:53 My 17 '39 600w

"A book as warmly human as the man himself, brimming with love of life and people." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 16 '39 1500w

New Yorker 15:106 Ap 15 '39 90w

Pratt p28 summer '39

"Professor Phelps has never been a rigorous critic, and nobody will find much reasoned criticism in this book. There are almost no references to the outspoken and controversial writers who have made a new American literature within the past two decades. But within the field of Professor Phelps's enthusiasms and friendships he is too delightful to be strictly measured, and he includes many interesting (as well as some trivial) letters to him from such a variety of friends as few men have ever made." Carl Van Doren

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 22 '39 950w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 162:918 My 26 '39 380w

"This book, though picturing many personalities in the academic world, in the theater and in literature, is mostly 'Billy' Phelps. There are nearly 1000 pages of it and of him—and none too much."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 1150w

Time 33:91 Ap 17 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p424 Jl 15 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

Reviewed by C. M. Fuess

Yale R n s 28:817 summer '39 700w

PHILADELPHIA CLUB OF ADVERTISING WOMEN. Advertising careers for women. See Clair, B., ed.

PHILIPS, MRS GEORGIANA (CUSHMAN). Summer of good hope; with drawings by Margaret Sommerfeld. 277p $2.50 Putnam

39-4386

Nine-year-old Rosalind and her younger brother, Charlie, are agreed that the only thing is for their beloved Mum to marry again and get busy about having more family before it is too late. During a summer in a borrowed cottage in Vermont their hopes are alternately raised and lowered by Mum's vacillation but finally she makes her choice to the children's satisfaction.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p12 Mr 5 '39 360w

PHILIPS, GEORGIANA- Continued

"It is a considerable feat to reflect a smart, mentally active group of handsome New Yorkers summering on a mountain lake and keep it consistently true to a child's point of view. Mrs. Philips pulls it off very well. Rosalind is only nine, but she was either born with an adult mind or acquired a mature outlook at an early age. She combines love for her mother with a tolerance and sensitivity that find expression in an excellent vocabulary. Don't get the idea that she is unreal. If you do not happen to know a little girl something like Rosalind, that is simply your misfortune, for there are some of them about, more than there used to be." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p28 F 26 '39 390w

"A fresh and amusing light novel."

New Yorker 15:67 F 25 '39 30w

"Anyone who likes to read about children, and many who do not, will enjoy Mrs. Philips's spirited story." K. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 4 '39 220w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST. Death delivers a postcard. 304p $2 Washburn

39-23860

Detective story.

"The facts turn out to be tall, astonishing and not without entertainment value." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 O 1 '39 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 60w

"A swift and high-spirited tale. This is not primarily a mystery story, but rather a thriller of a very exciting kind. What is a mystery to John Lawrence and Maxwell Blythe —the identity of the blackmailers—is an open page to the reader almost from the first. And the puzzle which holds its interest through the course of the book is how the criminals are to be defeated and brought to bay." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p22 O 1 '39 180w

"Manhattan dives and Long Island chateaux harbor enough conniving, dare-deviltry, and gun-fire to suit most avid thrill-seeker. T.N.T."

Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 40w

PHILLIPPS, GUS MARCH-. See March-Phillipps, G.

PHILLIPS, CHARLES FRANKLIN. Marketing [under the editorship of Edgar S. Furniss]. 781p maps $3.75 Houghton

658.8 Marketing 38-21104

Textbook on marketing by an assistant professor of economics at Colgate University. "The book is divided into four parts: an introduction of 20-odd pages, and three other parts almost equally divided in the treatment of business goods, consumers' goods, and marketing problems. Two approaches—the commodity approach and the institutional approach—are used in an understanding of the functions of marketing. In Part 2 the commodity approach is employed in the treatment of the marketing of business goods, and in Part 3 the institutional approach is used in discussing the marketing of consumers' goods. Part 2 begins with raw materials and takes them to the manufacturer; Part 3 deals with the goods after the manufacturer has finished them and describes the institutions through which they reach the ultimate consumer." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

"The author presents the technical features of marketing in an orthodox but satisfactory manner, and in dealing with questions of large social significance he displays a thorough grounding in economic principles. Another merit of the text is that it obviates the necessity of revising some other texts that are in the field." J. S. Robinson

+ Am Econ R 29:152 Mr '39 800w

"The general pattern of this new textbook on Marketing is much the same as that of other standard textbooks in this field. . . It is, however, very far from being a mere rehash of the information and viewpoints of other authors. Professor Phillips' work bears the stamp of his own study on every subject. It gives evidence of careful research covering the entire field. . . In general, this textbook is well organized, readable, and teachable. It is well documented throughout, and each chapter is supplemented by review questions and suggestions for further study. It is a book of outstanding merit that will command the respect and the interest of both teachers and business men." P. H. Nystrom

+ Ann Am Acad 200:339 N '38 650w

PHILLIPS, CHARLES FRANKLIN, and GARLAND, JASPER VANDERBILT. Government spending and economic recovery. 404p il $2 Wilson, H.W.

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S. Economic policy. U.S.—Public works

(W) 39-27046

This volume is the first of a series of books to be known as the Contemporary social problems discussion series. It is similar in design to other volumes prepared for debaters, and contains excerpts and reprints of articles, with lists of topics and problems for discussion and suggested readings. The present volume deals with the question: Resolved: That the United States should cease to use public funds for the purpose of stimulating business.

"Both the quality and coverage of the volume are such as to make it a useful book of reference." J. L. Snider

+ Harvard Business R 17:375 spring '39 120w

Wis Lib Bul 35:47 Mr '39

PHILLIPS, HARRY ASHTON; COCKEFAIR, EDGAR AUGUSTUS, and GRAHAM, JAMES WADE. Agriculture and farm life. 496p il maps $1.48 Macmillan

630 Agriculture. Farm life (W) 39-6799

High school textbook on the various phases of farm life. Its purpose is "(1) to show the advantages of the farm as a place to live, (2) to present the elementary principles of farming, and (3) to teach the modern practices essential to successful farm operation." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

"The book presents in a satisfactory manner a general overview of the whole field of agriculture as a vocation. While it does not present a complete treatise on any of the numerous enterprises and would need to be supplemented by much reference material if used above Grade IX, it contains many of the intricate bits of knowledge which make farming both interesting and profitable. It is an excellent textbook for use in the teaching of elementary agriculture." E. W. Rowley

+ School R 47:633 O '39 350w

PHILLIPS, HENRY ALBERT. New designs for old Mexico. 336p il $2.75 McBride

917.2 Mexico (W) 39-27006

"Here is one American traveler's observation and study of [Mexico], of the changing designs, the enduring contrasts and the recurrent pattern. Mr. Phillips's historical survey goes back to the Spaniards comes on to the revolutionary dictators and would-be dictators of the present century, looks at President Cardenas and his regime." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 35:188 F 1 '39

Books p17 F 26 '39 400w

"Mr. Phillips has tried to paint a portrait of Mexico, but the model refused to sit still. Many details of his reporting are excellent, vivid, often brilliant. But he has apparently become confused by the very wealth of material before him. . . He has failed to halt the revolving of the kaleidoscope long enough to see his picture clear. His book, unlike its subject, lacks design." Hannibal Towle

— + Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 380w

Foreign Affairs 17:822 Jl '39 10w

"Mr. Phillips makes a conscientious effort to be unbiased and fair. If his book is not primarily a chronicle of sight-seeing travel he has much to say, nevertheless, to the traveler. . . The value of Mr. Phillips' book does not lie in his personal conclusions but in his reporting, his detailed citation of fact and opinion on both sides. . . His book is not written with any particular distinction, nor does it claim to say the last word on its subject, but in its actual information and its invitation to further study, it is a good book for prospective tourists to read." K. W.

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 15 '39 900w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 330w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Monkshood. 279p $2 Macmillan

39-21660

Psychological mystery story.

"Take it from us that Mr. Phillpotts makes it one of his very best tales, what with stately, unhurried prose, a slow but sure piling up of suspense, a pervasive sense of doom and a sort of antique, classic air that you don't find elsewhere in mystery fiction. . . Dr. Thorne's final explanation is a model of its kind, and so is the whole story. A whale of a mystery, in fact." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 S 10 '39 200w

"For the final explanation little material evidence is given, but it seems psychologically sound and could be reached by any reader who chose to study with equal care Mr. Phillpotts's careful presentation of his characters." E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p3 O 20 '39 150w

"Eden Phillpotts, in years gone by, wrote a number of excellent mystery stories. In several recent novels he has used the theme of crime not as an instrument of suspense or puzzle, but as a means of probing human character and motive. Now he has combined the two interests in a murder novel which has a persistent and intriguing element of mystery, but yet focuses the reader's attention on motivation and reaction even more than on event." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p22 S 10 '39 200w

"Sombre villainy made more horrible because of the author's polite, old-fashioned style."

New Yorker 15:72 S 30 '39 40w

"Sober-sided treatment and some terribly windy passages can't keep down singularly affecting yarn of fury-driven slayer. Impressive."

Sat R of Lit 20:19 O 7 '39 40w

"It is a pity that all the characters speak in flowery or stilted language which makes them appear to be figures of fantasy to whom 'dreadful and melancholy events' were almost bound to occur."

Times [London] Lit Sup p611 O 21 '39 70w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Tabletop. 236p $2 Macmillan

39-30539

The secret of buried Inca treasure is revealed to the heroine by the strange words of a parrot, the gift of her fiancé.

"If you feel that Mr. Phillpotts has overfiddled himself a trifle in the final throes of his pipe-dream, remember that this is escape literature in the grand style, no holds barred." Will Cuppy

+ Books p36 N 12 '39 200w

"Although Mr. Phillpotts continues to pay meticulous attention to even minor details, his story is lively and full of suspense. Treasure hunting in the South Seas is no new subject, but here it takes on a new aspect. There are plenty of fine characters, among whom I am sure you will find a favorite. I'm still vacillating between the hero's mother and the nice old man who raises birds." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 60w

Christian Century 56:1346 N 1 '39 40w

"For lovers of adventure stories who do not mind a nightmarish dose of fantasy, this story is all right." C. D.

+ N Y Times p14 D 17 '39 160w

New Yorker 15:92 N 11 '39 30w

PHIPPS, RAMSAY WESTON. Armies of the first French republic and the rise of the marshals of Napoleon I. 5v v 5; ed. by Elizabeth Sandars 479p maps $7 (21s) Oxford

944.04 France—History—Revolution. France—Army

"The late Colonel Phipps, as readers of the early volumes of his important work will recall, treated the French Republican Armies as schools of the future marshals and also of eminent soldiers such as Kléber, Desaix, Moreau and Joubert, who did not receive the baton, or like Molitor, who received it only after the Restoration. This, the fifth, volume covers the period from the autumn of 1797 to the end of 1799, but so far as operations are concerned it is a record of the latter year, except for the Egyptian Campaign. The other campaigns described are those of the Armies of the Rhine, in Switzerland, Holland and Italy. The volume concludes with Bonaparte's coup d'Etat of Brumaire which overthrew the Directory." (Times [London] Lit Sup) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1927, 1929, 1933, 1936.

"Criticism of the earlier volumes also applies to this, in particular, that it is based entirely on French and English works published before 1917. No attention is paid to the excellent periodical literature. Though curiosity is occasionally expressed as to the contents of original documents, there has been no attempt to examine the archives. While the above limitations should always be kept in mind, the work remains of primary importance for the study of the military history of the period." H. C. Deutsch

+ — Social Studies 30:326 N '39 450w

"This volume is fully up to the standard of its predecessors. Colonel Phipps' occasional grim humour reappears when he draws a picture of Schérer, fired by the memory of Bonaparte's First Italian Campaign, trying to imitate his tactics. As always, the author's reflections and appreciations of character are illuminating and instructive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Jl 1 '39 800w

PHOTOGRAPHIC buyers' handbook [comp. and ed] by A. R. Lambert and Consumers union. 308,321-343p il $2.75 Simon & Schuster

771 Photography—Apparatus and supplies

(W) 39-27598

"This book attempts to give . . . help [to amateurs] by describing available equipment and materials; by pointing out the special features of each brand and their advantages and disadvantages; and, wherever possible, by making direct comparisons, to indicate which brands are outstanding values, which are good buys, and which relatively poor. The ratings of equipment and material are based on expert examination and test, on data gathered PHOTOGRAPHIC buyers' handbk.—Continued from camera repair men, and on the experience of photographers." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 35:376 Jl 15 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:44 Jl '39

PICASSO, PABLO (PABLO RUYS). Picasso: forty years of his art; ed. by Alfred H. Barr, jr; with two statements by the artist [pub] in collaboration with the Art Institute of Chicago. 207p il $2.50 Museum of modern art

759.6 Paintings, Spanish 39-29461

A brief account of the Spanish artist's life and work. About two-thirds of the book is given over to reproductions of his pictures, showing each phase in his development as a painter. Lists Picasso's exhibitions in chronological order.

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40
Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 190w
Pratt p15 winter '40

"The tactful and suggestive comments of Mr. Barr [are] expressed, like the observations of a skillful guide, at strategic moments for the reader, to emphasize continuities in the work of the world's most abundantly talented painter. This book, like the exhibition, should remind even the observer who recoils from the shocking and sinister dehumanizations, the puerile anti-intellectualism, the devastating egocentricity of Picasso, how much there is in the world he has created that brings immediate if scarcely profound satisfaction." Oliver Larkin

+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 D 16 '39 460w

"Mr. Barr has wisely allowed the pictures full chance to tell their story, reproducing them handsomely, with details concerning their media, sizes, and so forth. His commentary, supplementing the caption material, is brief and always relevant, relating the pictures to the general outline of Picasso's development. An exhaustive bibliography, information about the ballets and book illustrations, a list of Picasso's works in America and two statements by the artist help to make this a valuable book."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 24:151 F '40 300w

PICKWELL, GAYLE BENJAMIN. Birds. (Whittlesey house publication) 252p il $3.50 McGraw

598.2 Birds (W) 39-10842

Full-page photographs and informal descriptive text on the nesting habits, food, migrations, feathers, etc., of North American birds. Includes a chapter on cowbirds, and one on how to know birds. Index.

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39

"There can never be too many good books about birds and this one is better than good. As an interest rouser for those who know little about birds, and think they care less, it is a virus guaranteed to get into their blood and do its work." D. C. Peattie

+ Books p7 Jl 2 '39 220w

"Mr. Pickwell is an excellent photographer. His full-page illustrations are in many cases, the result of infinite patience. . . Unfortunately the book itself seems to lack a real purpose. Its contents are as general as its title, and there is a definite need for greater cohesion. Personal experiences and observations are intermingled with legends, factual data, and scientific terms in a bewildering manner."

— + Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 200w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 My '39 180w

PICKWELL, GAYLE BENJAMIN. Deserts [phot. by the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 174p map $3.50 (15s) McGraw

551.58 Deserts. Desert fauna. Desert flora (W) 39-27334

The text describes the nature of deserts, conditions forming them, and the animals and plants that occupy them. It deals chiefly with the deserts of southwestern United States. The outstanding feature of the book is, however, the 64 full-page illustrations reproducing photographs of mountains, sand dunes, dead seas, plants and animals. The author is professor of zoology at San José State College, California. Index.

Booklist 35:286 My 1 '39
Reviewed by D. C. Peattie
Books p7 Jl 2 '39 450w
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 29 '39 30w
Reviewed by J. S. Gardiner
Nature 144:460 S 9 '39 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:21 Ap '39

"Dr. Pickwell's text is well arranged and clearly written, with occasional interesting references to his own desert experiences, and with a factual summary at the end of the book. One has the sense of real acquaintance with the desert, as one lays the volume down."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 2 '39 480w
New Yorker 15:80 Ap 1 '39 30w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 My '39 140w

PICTURED knowledge; the new method of visual instruction applied to child interest, school subjects and character training; editor-in-chief Garry Cleveland Myers, successor to the late Calvin N. Kendall. 8v il maps $49.80 c1937 Marshall Hughes co, Kansas City, Mo.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"Pictured Knowledge is a compilation of miscellaneous information, stories and poems, profusely illustrated, intended to supplement the school work of the elementary grades. The price noted above is that paid by one library. An earlier edition in 10 volumes was briefly reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1930 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. . . The set is divided into two units, a 'Foundation unit,' consisting of the first four volumes and an 'Advanced unit,' consisting of the last four volumes. No difference in style, treatment or vocabulary could be discerned. The two units are separately indexed, both indexes appearing in each of the eight volumes, though the set is continuously paged." Subscription Bks Bul

"Though there is some useful and interesting information in these volumes, such as parts of the biographical material, sound advice on character training, a good list of books for parents, etc., the selection, organization, treatment and revision of the greater proportion of the material renders the set as a whole unsatisfactory for the needs of school children. . . Much of the material is superficially chosen. . . The vocabulary is not simple, but the style is often patronizing and written down. . . Pictured Knowledge shows little likelihood of proving satisfactory for the use of the school child in the home, school, or public library. The set is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 10:10 Ja '39 1650w

PIEHLER, HERMANN AUGUSTINE. Ireland for everyman. 244p maps $1.25 McKay [2s 6d Dent]

914.15 Ireland—Description and travel 39-17323

Guidebook to Ireland. It has twenty pages of maps, taken from Bartholomew's Map of Ireland, a short outline of Irish history, information on where to stay, how to travel, post rates, a calendar of annual Irish events, etc., with a section on tours. Index.

"The style is almost laconically concise, and an immense amount of information is packed into small compass. There are valuable chapters on how to travel, where to stay, sports and games, an Irish calendar, and a bibliography of books about Ireland."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 25 '38 330w
New Statesman & Nation 16:392 S 10 '38 280w

"'Ireland for Everyman' is for its size and extremely low price, a model of what such a guide can be. Without going into the details of hotels and costs which a complete guide-book provides, [the author] is as comprehensive as possible, covering all that is most worth seeing. . . His concisely packed facts are conveyed in a clear and continuous style so that his descriptions are at once informing and appreciative. He keeps a fair balance, so necessary in Ireland, between places of historic and scenic attraction, and his comment is often refreshingly ironical."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 5 '38 160w

PIERCE, WATSON O'DELL. Air war; its psychological, technical and social implications. 224p pa 50c Modern age

623.74 Aeronautics, Military. War
(W) 39-27604

In Part one the author discusses the morale of "the man-on-the-street," who becomes "the man-in-the-bomber" when modern aerial warfare strikes at civilians as well as military forces. Part two gives a brief history of civil and military aviation from their beginnings to 1918. Part three outlines the technical developments since 1918, and part four deals with the problem of civilian morale. This American work includes material from the author's Air War: Its Technical and Social Aspects, published in England in 1937. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:381 Jl 15 '39

"The book is like the confused and pitiful cry of a child wandering in the dark; it arrives at no conclusion, by its very nature can arrive at no conclusion except that man must suffer and die as a result of the technical progress which man has achieved and which man cannot control." H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p22 Ag 20 '39 400w

"This is a thought-compelling book, even though one may be in disagreement with a part or all of it. The chief flaw is trying to cover too much ground in a field that is more than chaotic—air war. The technical part about aircraft, their development and possibilities, seems sound and well handled." J. H. Burns

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 15 '39 290w

PIERCY, JOSEPHINE KETCHAM. Studies in literary types in seventeenth century America (1607-1710). 360p il pa $3.50 Yale univ. press [pa 16s Oxford]

810.9 American literature—History and criticism

The book "is derived from a dissertation originally submitted in 1937 for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. It proposes to be a critical analysis of prose writings to determine what forms of literature were established in America before 1710. And, since American literature of this period must necessarily find its origins in established models, it proposes, also, to trace the background and influences upon these types of our earliest literature." (Pref) The author is an instructor in English at Indiana university. Index.

"Miss Piercy has read widely in colonial literature, and, especially in her sections on historical writing and prefaces, has collected useful raw material for criticism and interpretation. But she leaves it raw material. Her critical comments are usually elementary, and her generalizations too often vague." K. B. Murdock

— + Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 19 '39 410w

Times [London] Lit Sup p518 S 2 '39 300w

PIGNATELLI, CONSTANCE WILCOX. Such ways are dangerous. 273p $2 McBride

39-23189

A quiet young woman from a little town in Vermont inherits a Sutton Place house and enormous wealth. Unused to the ways of the world, she is taken up by a set of worldly New Yorkers, and two impoverished members of the Italian nobility. Then she loses her money and returns thankfully to her quiet Vermont home.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p19 Mr 5 '39 300w

N Y Times p29 Mr 5 '39 170w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 80w

"'Gay' and 'whimsical' are words that describe 'Such Ways Are Dangerous,' and also 'highly improbable.' "

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 240w

PIGORS, PAUL JOHN WILLIAM; MCKENNEY, LEWIS CLAYTON, and ARMSTRONG, T. O. Social problems in labor relations; a case book. 325p $3 (18s) McGraw

658.3 Industrial relations. Social problems. Employment management 39-27205

Study of industrial relations plans and policies made up of case reports of actual problems in typical plants. The authors carried on their investigations in the employment offices, personnel departments, and shops of two large firms over a period of two years before writing the book. Index.

Reviewed by D. V. Brown

Am Econ R 29:396 Je '39 320w

Reviewed by H. A. Marquand

Am Soc R 4:895 D '39 250w

Reviewed by Smith Simpson

Ann Am Acad 205:148 S '39 800w

Booklist 35:246 Ap 1 '39

"The book is one of the most practical and helpful that has appeared on the subject in some time. . . For business executive and student alike this volume should prove illuminating. The reader will frequently find himself attempting in his own mind to devise a solution for each case that is presented. In no other similar work have we seen the trials and problems of the personnel executive so realistically and objectively portrayed."

+ Management R 28:31 Ja '39 480w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 5 '39 240w

PILAT, OLIVER RAMSAY. The mate takes her home. 349p $2.50 Scribner

39-30681

Story of an Atlantic crossing in the great days of the sailing ships. There is a saying that the captain takes the ship out and the mate takes her home. In this case the Swedish mate brought the ship home, and also won the heart of the wife of the Windsor's drunken captain.

"Quite apart from its quality as a sea story this novel is technically important. Mr. Pilat has managed to make an extremely difficult theme authentic and dramatic without modernizing the treatment. As he says, he has worked it out according to the nineteenth century pattern. The triangle of captain, mate and captain's wife is magnificently handled. If the final solution is a shade too smooth, the reader is welcome to suggest a better one." William McFee

+ Books p18 D 10 '39 750w

"While the brutality and inhuman conditions depicted undoubtedly existed aboard some ships during that era the author fails to give a sense of reality to situations and characters." M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 26 '39 120w

New Repub 100:196 S 20 '39 30w

"'The Mate Takes Her Home,' while in no sense of the word a master's job in sea fiction, is, nevertheless, a competent job." P. H.

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '39 500w

PILAT, O. R.—Continued

"An account of the days of the sailing ships is likely to be readable, and this one is no exception, though it is crudely done, with more violence than is needful."

+ — New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 17 '39 240w

PINE, HESTER. Beer for the kitten. 312p $2.50 Farrar

39-4385

Story of college life which follows the experiences of several faculty families during an academic year.

"By artful selection of incidents and skillful assorting of academic types Hester Pine makes college functions much more diverting than one generally imagines them actually to be and lifts petty pedagogic politics into the realm of comedy. At the same time, beneath the surface of satire, there is a genuine understanding of the zeal and sincerity of the born teacher." George Conrad

+ Books p8 F 12 '39 270w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 360w

New Repub 98:112 Mr 1 '39 40w

"A spicy, sparkling brew made up of the various ingredients of college faculty life. It is inspiriting but not intoxicating. . . The author's knowledge of things behind the scenes will bring amusement to those who have gone to college, known faculty families or lived in college towns. And any one looking for pleasant diversion should find it in this illuminating sketch of faculty life, with its fresh quality and lively style that combines academic jargon with collegiate slang." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 F 12 '39 650w

"If their chatter is synthetic, it is synthetic in an attractive way. . . Since the characters aren't sharply drawn, it's a bit hard to keep them all clearly in mind as one goes along. I felt that the amusing, civilized dialogue, more than anything else, carried the book to its fairly satisfying finish." J. R. Parker

— + Sat R of Lit 19:13 F 11 '39 500w

PINKERTON, KATHRENE SUTHERLAND (GEDNEY) (MRS R. E. PINKERTON). Wilderness wife. 327p il $2.75 Carrick

917.1 Frontier and pioneer life—Canada

(W) 39-27096

When Robert Pinkerton was ordered by his doctor to get away from city life, he and his wife, with a capital of $80, set out for the North Woods, hoping to make a home for themselves and develop a talent for fiction writing. In the five years they lived there, they built and equipped a six-room log cabin, learned to get most of their food from the land, trapped and hunted, produced a baby, and eventually won success in writing. This book is the wife's record of their adventures and hardships.

Booklist 35:221 Mr 1 '39

"The record of their wilderness experiences makes as good a story of this kind as any one should want to read." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p14 F 19 '39 450w

"This sprightly account of the author's experiences in homemaking in the Canadian bush contains a wealth of practical advice for any hardy individuals contemplating a similar move. It also contains a measure of disillusionment for the less practical, who may have been merely romantically longing for such a mode of life. The book has undeniable value in either case." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 17 '39 550w

"No campfire-girl outing here, but a steady tussle with nature at its grimmest, recorded with relish and good humor."

+ New Repub 98:176 Mr 15 '39 40w

"An uncommonly good book of first-person pioneer experiences."

+ N Y Times p5 F 19 '39 850w

New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 80w

Pratt p22 autumn '39

"Not since Elizabeth Forrest's 'Daylight Moon' have we had a book of homely adventure quite like this one, without dramatics and yet with the feeling of fiction in its narrative ease and architecture." H. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:21 Mr 4 '39 260w

"Learning to live in an unsettled region by persons unaccustomed to such living is no new subject in books. But the account that is given in 'Wilderness Wife' is one of sustained interest. The narrative has enough panicky moments to provide thrills and the 'human interest' lasts from cover to cover."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 28 '39 450w

Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

PIPER, OTTO. God in history. 189p $2 Macmillan

270 Church history. History—Philosophy

39-10086

"This volume is based substantially upon the course of lectures, given under the auspices of the trustees of the Croall Lectureship at New College, Edinburgh, in April, 1936. The material has been partly rearranged and, among other additions to the original text of the course, Chapters III and VIII are entirely new. . . The aim of this volume is to give a survey of history from the Christian point of view and in the clear light of Biblical revelation." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. J. Case

Books p9 Jl 2 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. K. Morton

Boston Transcript p5 S 23 '39 650w

"If any clerical or lay study-group is looking for a provocative book let it by all means get this one." F. J. Moore

Churchman 153:17 Jl '39 330w

"The risk in such a book as this is that it forces historical interpretation into its own rubrics and has, in doing so, to resort often to fantastic speculative interpretation to accomodate the records. It thus remains an interesting excursion in theology, but unconvincing as an essay in the philosophy of history." E. E. Aubrey

— + Crozer Q 16:230 Jl '39 800w

Reviewed by S. J. Case

J Religion 19:243 Jl '39 550w

"The author of this book was Karl Barth's successor at Münster, but after the Nazi revolution he left the Reich and is now a guest professor at Princeton Presbyterian seminary. He has given us an interesting statement of a modern conservative Protestant view of the place of Christ in history and His significance for the historic process as a whole. Much more satisfactory than Karl Barth's works, because much more balanced and reasoned, Dr. Piper's book will appeal to many, although to Catholic Christians it will seem to lack much in one direction and to say too much in another." W. N. Pittenger

+ — Living Church 100:456 Ap 26 '39 550w

PIRANDELLO, LUIGI. Medals, and other stories [Eng title: Character in distress, and other stories]. 284p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Duckworth]

(W) 39-11997

Contents: A character in distress; The beauty and the beast; The haunted house; An oversight; The husband's revenge; A wronged husband; Sicilian honour; Mother; A widow's dilemma; A mother-in-law; War; Sicilian tangerines; Professor Lamis' vengeance; The medals;

Bitter waters; A cat, a finch and the stars; When a bear went to church; Tortoises . . . for luck; My last journey.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

"Most of the famous stories have been included here, 'A Mother-in-Law;' 'Sicilian Tangerines;' and Pirandello's last poignant essay in autobiography, 'My Last Journey.' It is a useful collection, if not always a judicious one, but the translations are bad." Alfred Kazin

+ — Books p6 My 21 '39 950w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 10 '39 230w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p7 S 20 '38 70w

"Strange and eerie, as is everything written by Luigi Pirandello, fabricator of that compelling drama 'Six Characters in Search of an Author,' and of 'As You Desire Me,' which also was put upon the screen, this new culling from his two hundred short stories is as provocative as all that has gone before. For this winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature is not kin to any other writer of fiction, either in the past or in the present. He belongs to no school; his works, whether short or long, whether plays or stories, cannot be pigeon-holed. Pirandello is neither realist nor romanticist. He defies all labels. He does, however, belong very definitely in a certain category of philosophy, although he writes so disarmingly that the reader is conscious at first only of having been immensely entertained." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 My 14 '39 650w

"Nineteen sketches of Sicilian life, some of them humorous, some of them grim, all touched with the inevitability that is a mark of the accomplished short-story writer. Recommended."

+ New Yorker 15:95 My 20 '39 30w

Pratt p30 summer '39

Reviewed by R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 13 '39 220w

Reviewed by Graham Greene

Spec 161:414 S 9 '38 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 3 '38 330w

PIRENNE, HENRI. A history of Europe from the invasions to the XVI century [tr. by Bernard Miall from the 8th French edition]. 624p $5 Norton [21s Allen, G]

940 Europe—History A39-688

Presents the history of Europe in terms of economic and political evolution from the end of the Roman world in the West to the sixteenth century. The book was written largely during the World war, while the author, a Belgian scholar, was held as hostage in a German prison camp. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Thompson

Ann Am Acad 205:197 S '39 600w

"As a feat of memory the history is an amazing achievement, but it is also a notable interpretation of the forces at work during a thousand years."

+ Books p15 My 14 '39 800w

Christian Century 56:1077 S 6 '39 200w

"Some 35 years of acute, careful research is packed into [this book]. . . The study of the rise of the bourgeoisie and the hegemony of the Popes is especially interesting." S. V. H.

+ Current Hist 50:6 Mr '39 280w

"If [the author] had revised his work he would doubtless have corrected much and changed his opinion here and there, but it is probably as well that he did not revise it, for in addition to the interest which attaches to a book written under the conditions which I have described the book possesses a quality which might easily have been disturbed. It is a model of descriptive and objective commentary, so objective that it seems to be itself a part of history. Pirenne would have desired no higher praise." F. M. Powicke

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 10 '39 550w

"Some of his interpretations may be disputable, but he is always stimulating, especially in the chapters devoted to the rise of feudalism."

+ New Repub 98:175 Mr 15 '39 80w

"Pirenne was a man of genius, an original and stimulating mind such as too rarely devotes itself to the study of history, and when he began to write there lay behind him thirty-five years of research. As his son truly says, this book is 'the synthesis of all he knew, ripened in meditation.' The very absence of notes and references obliged him to keep to the main movements and the great forces and banished in advance the mass of unimportant detail which makes so many outlines unreadable. The perspective of the book is almost faultless and the synthesis of social, economic, cultural and political history is carried out with masterly ease. It is of small moment that there are inevitably sections which he would, had he lived to revise them, have brought more closely into line with recent research. . . It is the balance of the book, its lucidity and its bold and penetrating judgments which cause it to stand out head and shoulders above all other outlines on the same scale known to the reviewer." Eileen Power

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:581 Ap 15 '39 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p220 Ap 15 '39 650w

PIRENNE, HENRI. Mohammed and Charlemagne [ed. by Jacques Pirenne assisted by F. Vercauteren; tr. from the 10th French ed. by Bernard Miall]. 293p $3.50 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G]

940.1 Europe—History. Middle ages—History. Mohammedans in Europe 40-3000

The theme of this historical treatise is the influence of the growth of Islam on the transition of Europe from the type of civilization fostered by the Roman Empire to that of the Middle Ages. The book is in two parts: Western Europe before Islam, and Islam and the Carolingians. When the author died in 1935 the book was found to be in its first draft form only; the work of revision and collation of references has been done in collaboration by the author's son and a former student, F. Vercauteren. Index.

"It is a dull reader indeed who does not recognize the light of genius in the pages of this book, without doubt a landmark in contemporary historiography." G. C. Boyce

+ Ann Am Acad 207:240 Ja '40 750w

"It is impossible here even to state the thesis adequately, much less to discuss it. It is a brilliant, and to some extent revolutionary, study of the gateway to the Middle Ages. The thesis is supported by an ample array of data and by extensive documentation."

+ Christian Century 56:1210 O 4 '39 240w

" 'Mohammed and Charlemagne' is rightly considered to be Henri Pirenne's crowning triumph. The fire of his genius, the boldness of his mind, his profound learning and vivid pen make this volume pleasant reading." Joseph Calderon

+ Commonweal 30:542 O 6 '39 500w

Ethics 50:246 Ja '40 240w

New Repub 102:93 Ja 15 '40 70w

"This is the last work of the illustrious author of 'A History of Europe,' and possibly the most important. . . It is not as he would have left it had he lived. It was his habit to write his books twice over; the first time in rough and abbreviated form, the second with attention to style and finish. This work, therefore, came to his son as a collection of notes, the sentences being sometimes without verbs, and their relations to what followed demanding a certain measure of divining power. . . M. Jacques Pirenne entrusted the task of editing the work to one of his father's most distinguished pupils, Professor Vercauteren of the Colonial University in Antwerp. That task the Professor has most ably and conscientiously performed." E. E. Kellett

PIRENNE, HENRI—Continued
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:584 O 21 '39 900w

"M. Pirenne's use of the words 'Mohammed and Charlemagne' for his title is purely symbolic of those respective forces which broke classical civilization and created a new European one in place of it. His book is in no sense biographical. Neither is it a popular volume. It is a tremendous essay in charting anew the ever shifting channel of the stream of Western history." Lloyd Eshleman
+ N Y Times p9 O 1 '39 1200w

"Had Pirenne lived, he would no doubt have altered this text a good deal, expanded some suggestive passages, removed some repetitions, and qualified some bold assertions in accordance with his own exacting standards, but it is unlikely he would have changed anything essential. As it stands there is a vigor and freshness about this rapid sketch which partially compensates for its lack of finish. . . . In spite of its brief compass and rapid pace, this is an important, a seminal book, worthy to close one of the most distinguished careers in European scholarship." G. M.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 30 '39 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p757 D 30 '39 700w

PIRIE, MRS VALERIE. His Majesty of Corsica; the true story of the adventurous life of Theodore 1st. 400p il $3.50 Appleton-Century [18s Collins]

B or 92 Neuhof, Théodore Antoine, baron de 39-17320

Biography of a German-born, international adventurer, Theodore, Baron von Neuhof, who reached the climax of his career when he was crowned, in 1736, as Corsica's first—and only—king. Index.

"This unbelievable picaresque romance is here told remarkably well. Mrs. Pirie, although she knew little English until she was twenty-one, has style. . . But—I do not know whether it could have been avoided—the whole performance is Hamlet without the Prince. Theodore himself is a blank." Albert Guerard
+ — Books p14 O 22 '39 900w

"There is a topicality in the word 'Corsica' that may attract readers. But it may be doubted whether Corsica's adventurer king, Theodore von Neuhoff, deserves such expensive and expansive biography."
Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '39 330w

"Mrs. Pirie's book is a delightful example of what may be called 'history without tears.' It contrives to range through the complicated ramifications of eighteenth-century international politics without being troublesome to read. . . It has the picaresque charm of being filled with vivid descriptions of countries so far apart as Turkey, Spain, Hungary, North Africa and Germany, while the portraits of such interesting people as Alberoni, Charles XII of Sweden, Monsieur, Law, the Regent, Ripperda, Rakoczi and Bonneval, which figure among the illustrations, although excellent in themselves, appear wooden when they are compared with the lively pen-pictures of their subjects that are drawn by Mrs. Pirie." William King
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:472 Mr 25 '39 420w

"The life story of His Majesty of Corsica is an astounding record, which makes fascinating reading as Valerie Pirie has told it, clearly and dispassionately, here. Yet her book has an equal, or even greater, value as a picture of its time, and as a collection of portraits of that time's outstanding personalities."
+ N Y Times p11 O 15 '39 450w

"Mrs. Pirie has a quick eye for dramatic bits of characterization and local color; her incidental episodes are as good as her main story. It's a long time since this reviewer has read so diverting a yarn." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 O 7 '39 600w

"By a generous use of memoirs, in particular, Mrs. Pirie has given some detailed and entertaining pictures of the European Courts of his time and of the remarkable characters who crossed his path. Theodore himself is more elusive and sometimes almost lost in his background; he seems rather the sketch of a minor adventurer than a man in the round, and one cannot help feeling that he was much more of a rascal than this book suggests. It would have been better if he had been allowed to occupy a relatively larger space in a shorter book." Ralph Colman
+ — Spec 162:188 F 3 '39 420w

"We lay down the book with but one regret—that Mrs. Pirie's animated style and gift of narration should so often be marred by slipshod punctuation and unorthodox views on the use of hyphens and prepositions. But for those indifferent to such matters the book will provide nothing but entertainment."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p83 F 11 '39 440w

PITKIN, WALTER BOUGHTON. Making good before forty. 251p $2 McBride

174 Conduct of life. Success (W) 39-14582

An interpretation of the American dream and how to attain it. The book is addressed to the two million "ablest, best-trained men and women in America, who have left school but have not yet entered middle age. Roughly, they are between twenty and forty-five years old. Each one of them surpasses 95 out of every 100 persons in general intelligence, in training and in energy." (p. 6-7)

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39
Management R 28:285 Ag '39 430w

"Practical suggestions are plentiful, both general and specific. And a stimulating chapter on leisure brings the sound and vigorous book to a close."
+ N Y Times p4 Je 4 '39 700w
Reviewed by Elizabeth Hawes
— Sat R of Lit 20:11 Je 3 '39 650w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 28 '39 300w

PITKIN, WALTER BOUGHTON, and HUGHES, HAROLD F. Seeing our country; drawings by Eleanor O. Eadie and A. Gladys Peck. bks 1-2 il ea $1.60 Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel (39-8156)

"By following the adventures of a half-dozen families as they travel in different parts of the country and by looking at the striking, well-selected illustrations, the child (young or old) who reads [these books] gets a vivid idea of the landscape, historical background, agriculture, industries, and people, with suggestions for further sources of information." J Home Econ

---

+ J Home Econ 31:401 Je '39 60w
J Home Econ 32:42 Ja '40 30w (Review of bk 2)
Reviewed by A. B. Grannis
Social Educ 3:443 S '39 250w
Reviewed by C. P. Sletten
Social Educ 3:663 D '39 280w (Review of bk 2)

PITT, FRANCES. Wild animals in Britain. 120p il $3.50 Scribner [8s 6d Batsford]

599.7 Zoology—Great Britain [39-30049]

" 'Wild Animals in Britain' is a companion volume to Seton Gordon's 'Wild Birds in Britain' which appeared recently [Book Review Digest, 1938]. It is an account of the wild mammals large and small, 'good' and 'bad,' rare and common, found in the British Isles." Books

"The illustrations are excellent; and if the text is a trifle repetitious, it is at least informative. . . 'Wild Animals in Britain' could have been so much more than it is! But it is useful as a reference work, and the photographs supply to some extent the graphic element lacking in the text."
+ — Books p14 Ap 16 '39 230w

"Here, as in all her works, Miss Pitt bases her descriptions chiefly on personal observation, thus making the text not only reliable but also intimate and charming. Anecdote and story mingle with text description in such a way as to give a scientific study which also stimulates friendly feeling towards the lower animals."
+ Nature 143:541 Ap 1 '39 230w

"Frances Pitt is one of the most prolific of living writers on natural history and it is a pity that her wide and accurate knowledge is not accompanied by finesse of style. But what is our loss is perhaps at the same time our gain, for by means of her crowded journalistic method she is enabled to record a multitude of facts which might otherwise have been omitted. Not content with merely studying her animals in the fields and woods she takes them into her house, garden, and backyard, puts them in cages, locks them into scullery and parlour, presumably takes them to bed with her." Herbert Palmer
+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:100 Ja 21 '39 750w

"There are not many books dealing with British Mammals that are of interest to the casual naturalist, and this one though somewhat sketchy, should be useful, as it is written in simple, non-technical language. Unfortunately, the information it imparts is too frequently interrupted by anecdote and digression, which, presumably intended as a sop to the lay reader, serve no purpose except to show that the authoress has kept some queer pets in her time. Miss Pitt writes in a flat, unreal style, with much overworking of the adjectives 'wee' and 'dainty' and the adverb 'ever' (meaning 'always'); but occasionally the interest of her subject causes her to rise above these limitations."
— + Spec 162:30 Ja 6 '39 180w

"Miss Pitt has the initial advantage that her subject is compact enough to be covered fairly adequately in a small book, but to this she adds her own excellent first-hand knowledge and readable style."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p788 D 10 '38 80w

PLAMENATZ, JOHN PETROV. Consent, freedom and political obligation. 164p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

320.1 State, The. Liberty [38-30401]

"This essay on the principles of political obligation moves in the refined atmosphere of pure philosophy. . . The argument of the book consists of an attempt, neither unambitious nor unsuccessful, to disentangle the part played by the 'consent' of the governed within the totality of the obligation to obedience to positive law; and the path followed by Mr. Plamenatz in achieving his object assumes the form of framing definitions of 'consent', or 'right' and (in the political rather than the metaphysical sense) of 'freedom.' " Times [London] Lit Sup

"Within its conscious limitations, this critique of current political ideas is uncommonly searching and dispassionate. Especially good and constructive are his analyses of the meanings of 'natural' rights and of consent in relation to representation." H. W. S.
+ J Philos 36:192 Mr 30 '39 550w

"Mr. Plamenatz shows himself a master of the disimpassioned and somewhat relentless analysis characteristic of recent Oxford philosophy He possesses a quiet and sometimes sardonic vein of humour and a genuine candour which prompts him to go out of his way to defend his antagonist Bosanquet against the unmerited strictures of Hobhouse and to testify to the positive insight underlying Green's superficial inconsistencies; and some of the more subtle critical conclusions at which he arrives, if not necessarily final, are expressed with epigramatic vigour."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p636 O 8 '39 600w

PLANT, MARJORIE. The English book trade; an economic history of the making and sale of books. 500p il $5 Bowker [16s Allen, G]

655 Book industries and trade [40-2171]

Survey of the book industry in England from its beginnings to the present day. The volume is divided into two sections: The age of handprinting; and The application of mechanical power. Index.

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '39 50w

"Well-written volume. . . Though [the author] comes to the subject as an economist, there is no aspect which she ignores, and while she can give statistics when they are necessary she has an eye for the illuminating anecdote. The result is a study which can be used as a work of reference or read straight through for pleasure." B. I. E.
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 4 '39 270w

"A valuable accumulation of information." David Garnett
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:250 Ag 12 '39 1400w

"So long as she is dealing with historical data and economic fact, [the author] is concise, impressive and admirably informed; but whenever she tackles those aspects of her subject which depend on the imponderables of temperament, fashion and commercial interest she is inclined to over-simplify and sometimes to dogmatise." Michael Sadleir
+ — Spec 162:1044 Je 16 '39 1350w

"The real defect of this book is not that this name has been misspelled or that that authority has not been consulted; it is that Miss Plant's knowledge of the book trade is not very profound. She can sweep from process to process with a fine assurance, but it does not really make up for her lack of detailed understanding of cause and effect in the management of bookselling. The book is agreeably written, and the facts are neatly arranged; it is the greater pity that more mature consideration was not given to the problems of such an ambitious and extensive undertaking."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 22 '39 800w

PLANT, RICHARD, and SEIDLIN, OSKAR. S.O.S. Geneva; with 29 drawings by William Pène du Bois. 246p $2 Viking

39-30323

Three Rumanian children from a riverside village, which had been flooded by the Danube, were sent to Switzerland for safety. The idea of appealing directly to the League of nations came to them, so they journeyed to Geneva, where they actually managed to get a hearing.

"The talk is lively, the pace brisk; it is said the book was written to show children that peace can be interesting and exciting. The story does keep up a pleasant excitement, the vision of a commonwealth of children is fresh and bright and if an older person is left with a sense that taking over League matters by them is somehow a trifle pathetic, well, the League itself is a trifle pathetic just now." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 D 17 '39 200w

PLANT, R., and SEIDLIN, O.—Continued
Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 20w

"A thrilling story that will be read with interest by children of the intermediate grades." C. E. Scott
+ Library J 64:1001 D 15 '39 160w

PLAYFAIR, GILES. Kean. 346p il $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Bles]

B or 92 Kean, Edmund 39-24612

The famous English actor, born in the late 1780s, whose most notable roles were Othello, Richard III, and Sir Giles Overreach, is the subject of this biography. Basing his work on some new research, the author has written as Edmund Kean himself would have told the story of his life. Index of names of persons, and one of plays, places, theaters, newspapers, etc.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

"An exceedingly well-written, sound, thoroughly documented, accurate, vivid, and dignified book." A. D.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 20 '39 600w
New Repub 101:27 N 8 '39 40w

"Mr. Playfair's is the most sympathetic recital yet published of Kean's private life as it crossed and destroyed his public career. One regrets only that he does not quote all or enough of those contemporary witnesses whom Kean was lucky in finding to celebrate his satanic powers." Richard Jennings
+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:948 Je 17 '39 600w

"Giles Playfair's 'Kean' is a contribution to the history of the stage, and of a great figure that played a stormy part thereon, which the dyed-in-the-wool theatre-goer will not care to miss." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p5 O 1 '39 1150w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 27 '39 650w
Theatre Arts Mo 23:759 O '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p314 My 27 '39 1300w

PLENN, JAIME HARRYSSON. Mexico marches. 386p $3 Bobbs

972 Mexico—History. Mexico—Politics and government (W) 39-27335

An account of the recent history of Mexico, particularly of the last two or three years. Discusses the expropriation of British and American oil properties, the Cardenas régime, education, and the growth of Nazi and fascist influence in Mexico. Includes a chapter on Mexican statistics, and an index.

Booklist 35:288 My 1 '39

"Only a newspaper man, and a good one, could have written this snappy volume with its nonchalant touches of real poetry, its quick dash from topic to topic, its utilization of the dramatic to drive home the argument, its constant obsession with news flashes, its deep concern with the human interest angle, its wry bitterness—all in sinewy prose. The book is as jerky and jagged as the profiles of the Mexican sierras, and yet it achieves structural harmony and is filled with a quiet passion that holds it to its purpose like a strong balance-wheel." Carleton Beals
+ Books p5 Mr 26 '39 1700w
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:1045 Ag 30 '39 260w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 7 '39 500w
Foreign Affairs 17:822 Jl '39 70w
Reviewed by E. K. James
Living Age 357:197 O '39 100w

"Too much of the book reads as though it had been written on the run. The style is uneven, but in general it reflects the vivid color and uneven tempo of events described. Journalistic terseness is interspersed with journalistic lushness. When Mr. Plenn sticks to the former he is excellent. When he gives in to the latter, one of his best friends ought to tell him." Virginia Mishnun
— + Nation 149:250 S 2 '39 500w

"A very useful book, but still not the book one is waiting for." Ralph Bates
+ — New Repub 99:25 My 10 '39 650w

"The writers on Mexico have, with rare exceptions, sailed joyfully on the surface. Now comes this man Plenn (quite unknown, for he has been puttering around Mexico and writing under other names) with a book which opens up current Mexico in such engaging and informal fashion as to leave breathless gratitude in the hearts of all confirmed enthusiasts for that bewildering land. Not since Ernest Gruening published his 'Mexico and Its Heritage' in 1925 has there been a more satisfying portrait of the land." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 16 '39 1100w
New Yorker 15:88 Ap 8 '39 20w

"This book has many virtues. It is clearly written, betrays a considerable knowledge of its subjects, and on the whole has no bias. Mr. Plenn obviously has a large respect for the Cardenas régime, but that respect he exhibits with good manners toward those who think otherwise. A few maps and other illustrations would have made the volume more useful."
+ No Am 247:398 summer '39 80w

"One feels that Mr. Plenn sincerely subscribes to the cause he pleads. Moreover, he exhibits complete familiarity with the scene and its dramatis personae. His style is a slangy and salty journalese, which effectively transmits his interpretations. In a vigorous believer, overstatement is perhaps to be expected." Ernest Gruening
Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 25 '39 1100w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 100w

PLUMMER, GEORGE WINSLOW. Consciously creating circumstances. 2d ed 109p $1.50 Round table

131.32 New thought 39-11250

A book of advice on how to achieve success and happiness in life by a leader of the Society of Rosicrucians.

"The book is interesting, and because of its illustrations will bring conviction to those who are not too critical of its metaphysics. One would prefer greater emphasis on ethics; it would be a fearful thing if men could realize whatever they desire." F. G. Ensley
+ — Boston Transcript p7 Je 3 '39 140w
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 21 '39 440w

PLUMMER, LEIGH S. Getting along with labor; practical personnel programs; introd. by Daniel Starch. 112p $1.50 Harper

331.10973 Industrial relations. Employment management 39-23545

"This book tells how some of our leading companies have avoided labor difficulties. . . Growing out of a series of articles first published in the Wall Street Journal, it sets forth the findings of a survey of personnel policies followed by a group of manufacturing companies which were almost entirely free from labor trouble during the critical years of 1936-37, such as Richman Brothers, Radio Corporation of America, Eastman Kodak, Procter & Gamble, etc." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Russ Nixon
Boston Transcript p11 O 12 '39 440w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 3 '40 320w

PODOLSKY, MAX. See Nomad, M.

POLIAKOFF, VLADIMIR (AUGUR, pseud). Europe in the fourth dimension. 104p maps $1.25 (5s) Appleton-Century

940.5 Europe—Politics 39-12808

The author says that whereas conditions in Europe are usually discussed from the point of view of geography, politics, or economics, it is his purpose to discuss them from the point of view of the spirit, the Fourth Dimension. Contents: Where is Europe? What is Europe? Democracy; The individual and the state; God and politics; The great aggressor; The past, the present, and the future.

"Throughout the post-war epoch one of the most influential but least known of British journalists has been Vladimir Poliakoff, whose political articles appear in many countries under the pseudonym of Augur. . . For these reasons even a slender volume by Fleet Street's half-mythical Augur is bound to attract attention, for one always wonders what—and how much—he is going to tell; also what may have prompted the telling of it. . . This reader could not discover just where the Augurian dissertation was going or just what it was intended to emphasize, unless it might be the unpredictable oscillations of Chamberlainism in present-day Europe. One must reluctantly regard 'Europe in the Fourth Dimension' as a light contribution from a political observer of the author's advertised weight." Leland Stowe

— + Books p10 My 14 '39 750w

Christian Century 56:771 Je 14 '39 110w

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 23 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:370 Ja '40 20w

"Augur is an emigré who has forgotten none of his hatreds, and has learned nothing but the British art of being complacent." Norbert Guterman

— New Repub 99:138 Je 7 '39 330w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone

N Y Times p9 My 21 '39 850w

"A little book of shrewd political analysis combined with the brilliant crystal-gazing that has given Augur a considerable reputation among otherwise hard-headed people. Augur views the present European mess 'from the angle of the spirit,' no less. There is much confident talk of the 'Higher Conscience of Man,' the 'Dominion of the White Race,' and other tenuous conceptions."

+ — New Yorker 15:95 My 20 '39 70w

"This remarkably superficial, incomplete, and flimsy volume represents a disappointing performance for a reputable London journalist." J. F. G.

— Sat R of Lit 20:19 Je 3 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p347 Je 10 '39 170w

POLLARD, L. BELLE. Adult education in homemaking. 272p $2.50 Wiley

640.714 Home economics. Education of adults 39-4665

"The book is designed for use as a textbook in methods classes and for all other agents for training teachers. The work is written for teachers of adults in homemaking and in other fields, as well, to aid them in publicizing, organizing, teaching, and evaluating educational programs. It is planned to help teachers in inaugurating programs and in strengthening existing ones." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:247 Ap 1 '39

J Home Econ 31:584 O '39 100w

POLLENS, BERTRAM. The sex criminal; foreword by Richard A. McGee. 211p il $2 Macaulay

132.75 Criminal anthropology. Sexual perversion 38-25487

"In this book the author develops the point that inheritance and environment are mutually active and that for the most part the sex criminal is legally sane. He then proceeds to give examples of cases at different levels of emotional maturity on the thesis that the sex criminal is one whose emotional growth has been arrested at some point." (Survey) The author is psychologist at Rikers Island Penitentiary in New York city, and the case histories in the book are based on his own experiences there.

"Although the book contains information of value to some readers, its acceptance by psychologists is limited by the lack of verbal precision. Careless proof-reading and lack of adequate organization are added handicaps to its usefulness. A greater degree of scientific objectivity and impartiality, even in a popular treatise, might be expected from a psychologist. Further revisions prior to publication were in order." A. J. Mitrano

— + Am J Psychol 52:658 O '39 430w

"While this book has nothing new to contribute to those who are familiar with the literature in the field, it will serve a useful purpose for the general reader. It calls attention to the fact that the lay person does not understand this problem at all; therefore they and their legislators react to sexual criminality and criminals on a nonscientific, emotional basis. He also points out that we do not have the proper institutions to which pathologically sexual criminals can be sent for proper treatment. They should be treated neither as insane nor as criminals. Unfortunately, the book has some minor errors and certain dogmatic statements which might well have been eliminated." J. L. Gillin

Am Soc R 4:152 F '39 550w

Reviewed by S. G. Kling

Books p10 S 4 '38 420w

"Books from the worker on the job are of double interest and value. While many people will not share the author's enthusiasm or accept without qualification some of his premises and conclusions, this is a logical presentation of an old problem in a comparatively new setting." R. L. Huff

Survey 76:60 F '39 380w

POLLOCK, CHANNING. The adventures of a happy man. 206p $1.50 Crowell

171.4 Happiness (W) 39-9532

Starting with the assertion: "I must admit that I have never been unhappy a whole hour in my life," the author discusses some of his own reasons for contentment, and how others may achieve it. He is no Pollyanna, and his philosophy is wittily expressed.

Books p16 My 7 '39 150w

"Mr. Pollock avoids platitudes without apparent effort and delivers good counsel about the conduct of life with engaging informality and with wisdom born of wide experience with men and things, including the rough side of things. This would be a grand book to give if it were not (or because it is) such a good one to keep."

+ Christian Century 56:483 Ap 12 '39 180w

"Mr. Pollock admits that he is not writing to the starving or the shelterless but to those who are missing happiness through envy, emptiness, or failure to appreciate the joys around them. Though he does not ride on the highest spiritual level, his book has muscle and grit."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '39 280w

"One is apt to read it rapidly, eager to overtake the happy observations which always lie just ahead, under the author's guidance ever discovering for himself that life's everyday blessings crowned by happy friendships are ours here and now to appropriate. An admirable Christmas gift, this book, for a friend. If he is happy, it will make him happier. If he is unhappy, it may make him happy in spite of himself." L. P. Powell

+ Churchman 153:22 D 15 '39 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

POLLOCK, CHANNING—Continued

"A book which is rather better than many of its kind. It is better because it is personal, because its smiles are really the fruit of amusement and not of smugness, because it faces the pain and sorrow of the world and does not preach impossibilities. The book has the limitations of its kind, of course; but within those limitations it is pleasant and encouraging."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 16 '39 400w

Pratt p7 summer '39

"Mr Pollock's philosophy is not of the Pollyanna school, nor does he indulge in platitudes, as such, nor in 'preaching.' He does not believe in snaring bluebirds. . . Americans can use Mr Pollock's 'brand' of happiness. The philosophy of this happy man is both timely and inspiring." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 27 '39 550w

Wis Lib Bul 35:139 Jl '39

POLLOCK, HORATIO MILO; MALZBERG, BENJAMIN, and FULLER, RAYMOND GARFIELD. Hereditary and environmental factors in the causation of manic-depressive psychoses and dementia praecox. 473p $2.50 State hospitals

616.895 Insanity. Dementia. Heredity of disease 39-28187

"This volume, dealing with hereditary and environmental factors in two of the most important groups of the functional psychoses is one of the series of research studies undertaken jointly in 1928 by the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene and the State Charities Aid Association, with the financial assistance of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial. The method employed in this study was to examine in detail the family and environmental history of two groups of patients with mental disease." Am J Pub Health

---

"Although the study only confirms the views generally held rather than shedding new light in the approach to the problem of preventing the occurrence of mental disease, the authors are to be congratulated on their work in applying statistical methods to such a difficult field in a manner that allows for definite conclusions." Grant Fleming

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1051 S '39 360w

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 45:497 N '39 170w

"It is very much to be hoped that other studies in this series will deal with environmental data more incisively and adequately, and will rely less upon mere statistics and more upon a broad view of the whole problem." J. K. Folsom

Am Soc R 4:878 D '39 320w

POLLOCK, JAMES KERR. The government of greater Germany. (Governments of modern Europe) 213p il maps $1.75; textbook ed $1.25 Van Nostrand

342.43 Germany—Politics and government (W) 38-35236

Study of the mechanics of the present government of Germany, national and local. Bibliographical note. Index.

"The work is provided with various helps which enhance its usefulness as a text and for the general reader. Among these are a map of Germany in colors, facsimiles of ballots, charts, tables, an excellent critical bibliography, and a good index. Taken as a whole, the book is a scholarly and welcome addition to the Van Nostrand series on the governments of Europe." R. H. Wells

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:320 Ap '39 420w

Reviewed by F. M. Marx

Ann Am Acad 203:215 My '39 400w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '39 140w

"A sound, up-to-date work. . . On the whole, the author, who is professor of political science in the University of Michigan, succeeds in avoiding the shoals of partisanship."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 40w

POLNAY, PETER DE. See De Polnay, P.

POLOWE, DAVID. Home book of medicine. 581p il $2.75 Greenberg

616.02 Medicine, Popular 38-33503

"A book that will be of value in the home as a reference to be used until the doctor arrives. . . Its purpose is to give the layman a working idea, in as simple words as possible, of what to do in case of sickness or accident before the doctor gets there, and also how to be of the most help to him after his arrival. The first chapters treat of anatomy, physiology and offer a comprehensive (though short) treatment of the different diseases. . . There are chapters on the practical care of the sick, on bandages and dressings, chapters given over to the medical diseases of adults and chapters on the surgical conditions of adults. There are other chapters on maternal care and on the medical, surgical and psychological care of children." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"The book should be studied as well as used as a reference, if it is to fulfil the mission intended by the author. Dr. Polowe has succeeded in his difficult task of putting the subject matter into easily understandable language. But it would hardly be a good book for a person inclined to hypochondria. For people who do not read themselves into every symptom given, it should prove valuable." Merrill Moore, M.D.

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 24 '38 240w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 110w

POLSKY, THOMAS. Curtains for the editor. 284p $2 Dutton

39-8722

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p23 Ap 2 '39 240w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Ap 2 '39 120w

"The author has introduced a revolutionary character in a reporter named Griddle, who is not made up of one part alcohol and two parts whimsy. Pretty authentic newspaper atmosphere, too."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Ap 8 '39 50w

"About as good a newspaper story as you'll find—in spite of pretty obvious payoff and some over-cute passages. First rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 40w

POLSKY, THOMAS. Curtains for the judge. 309p $2 Dutton

39-33091

Detective story.

"Mr. Polsky's characters are a trying lot, but you've got to give Scoop credit for getting the answer. The author is a whiz at newspaper and police detail. He's a reporter himself." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 D 17 '39 190w

"Exciting, but not brilliant detection." Marian Wiggin

+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 60w

"The struggle between the two scribes is amusing until it begins to grow tiresome and the result is that the story begins much better than it ends." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 D 3 '39 120w

"Mr. Griddle [is] still in first place as best-all-round reporter in fiction."
+ New Yorker 15:123 D 16 '39 50w

"Lively dialogue, plentiful supply of suspects, and swift action lead to solution logical enough but oddly unconvincing. Good enough."
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 9 '39 30w

POMERANTZ, SIDNEY IRVING. New York: an American city, 1783-1803; a study of urban life. 531p map $5 Columbia univ. press

974.71 New York (city)—History 39-1229

A study of the formative period in New York city history and of the influence of the successful outcome of the Revolutionary war upon its development. Opening with an account of the evacuation of the city by the British in 1783, the book covers the political, economic, and social history of New York during the following twenty-year period. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Pomerantz has brought to light much useful information that will be of assistance to students of the rise of American civilization. A summary of his findings might well have concluded the volume. The bibliography is fresh and up to date."
+ Am Hist R 44:929 Jl '39 210w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:708 My 31 '39 280w

"Well-written, factual account of that period when the city of New York was taking on the basic form from which developed the existing metropolitan giantism. . . It is unusually comprehensive and it is detailed to the degree that gives it additional value as a reference work to the student of New York life. This detailing of the book gives every evidence of exhaustive research coupled with a clarity of expression and balancing of factors that arouses respect for its marked detachment from emotion from those pre-determined assumptions that impair many so-called historical studies." Barry Byrne
+ Commonweal 29:415 F 3 '39 350w

"It is definitely a scholarly, comprehensive, and analytical treatment; difficult reading at times because of its detailed and involved nature; but I know of no other volume that treats this period of American life with such completeness and historical accuracy. It is another innovation in the field of historic literature." K. L. Garrison
+ Crozer Q 16:220 Jl '39 230w

"A finely comprehensive review, fully documented and annotated."
+ New Repub 97:295 Ja 11 '39 40w

"The book is intended for the student and the historian rather than the general reader, and the treatment is conventional throughout. Those who are interested in the history of the government of the city will find it a mine of information on such subjects as police and fire protection, patronage, the influence and prestige of the Mayor (which was far greater than his authority) and the age-old disputes over home rule, apportionment, and the suffrage." H. P. S.
+ N Y Times p19 F 19 '39 750w

"Dr. Pomerantz here discusses this early leadership with the utmost thoroughness, and his volume constitutes a real contribution to the study of American urban life. A good appendix and bibliography add to the value of the book."
+ No Am 247:192 spring '39 90w

Reviewed by Erwin Eckhauser
Social Studies 30:138 Mr '39 250w
Special Libraries 30:99 Mr '39

PONT OF PUNCH, pseud. See Laidler, G.

POOL, ARTHUR GEORGE. Wage policy in relation to industrial fluctuations. 305p $3.50 (12s 6d) Macmillan

331.2 Wages. Business cycles [39-7755]

A study of the unemployment situation in Great Britain. The author's purpose is "to examine the effects on employment of the inflexibility of the present wages system, and to consider what wage policies are most likely to minimise the volume of unemployment." (Pref) The author is lecturer in economics in the University of Sheffield. Index.

Reviewed by C. D. Long, Jr.
Am Econ R 28:393 Je '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p698 O 29 '38 140w

POPE, CLIFFORD HILLHOUSE. Turtles of the United States and Canada. 348p il $3.75 Knopf

598.13 Turtles (W) 39-20221

The first chapter of this book is devoted to a popular, general account of turtles, their origin, habits and behavior, enemies, etc. The bulk of the book contains a check list of North American turtles giving for each information on identification, size, young, sexes, eggs, growth, distribution, etc. Many illustrations from photographs. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:3 S '39

"Mr. Pope has assembled in this book almost all that is known about North American turtles; so thorough is he that his book will prove valuable to scientist and layman alike. He is a conscientious student and a skilled observer himself; he keeps himself up to date upon the findings of others, and he knows how to write." R. L. Ditmars
+ Books p3 Ag 13 '39 1050w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39
N Y Times p10 Ag 20 '39 290w
Pratt p9 winter '40

"There has never before been a book dealing with the American turtles as a whole so it is not necessary to state that this is the best book of its kind. However, it is necessary to assert that it is an extremely fine piece of work. The ninety-nine illustrations are exceptionally fine and these, together with the simple keys for the separation of the species, should enable anyone to identify any turtle that might be found, and those who keep turtles as pets will find full instructions." C. H. Curran
+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Ag 19 '39 450w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 140w

PORTER, KATHERINE ANNE (MRS EUGENE PRESSLEY). Pale horse, pale rider; three short novels. 264p $2 Harcourt

(W) 39-27273

Three long short stories or novelettes: Old Mortality; Noon Wine; Pale Horse, Pale Rider. The first is the story of a beautiful Southern belle of some fifty years ago, told in retrospect by members of her adoring family, and supposedly recounted by two little girls of a later generation. The third story is of one of the little girls, now grown up, and her love affair, which is brought to a tragic end in the World war. The middle story is about a taciturn Swedish hired man on a Texas dairy farm.

Booklist 35:271 Ap 15 '39

"In these stories the reader feels the invaluable sense of having shared years of experience and emotional understanding with the author long before she brought herself to setting down the events and the record on paper. Incisively, through her beautifully molded sentences and through the rhythmic

PORTER, K. A.—Continued
sweep of feeling in her stories, she reduces a whole lifetime of observation to the carefully wrought pattern of a single story like 'Old Mortality.'" William Soskin
+ Books p5 Ap 9 '39 1150w
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '39 500w

"With these three novelettes, Katherine Anne Porter establishes herself as a prose stylist of first rank. Clarity, simplicity and delicacy mark her writing, that is peppered with well turned phrases and saucy freshness. Precise, poetic and decidedly feminine, Miss Porter paints her pictures in lovely soft tones and then sharply runs a line of bitter satire through them." P. T. Hartung
+ Commonweal 30:109 My 19 '39 330w

"Miss Porter is to be congratulated on many features of her work, especially the conscientious and consistent writing. She is to be congratulated also on her refusal to succumb to the temptation that besets many writers of the shorter story: to fall so deeply in love with a theme that they set about working it into a full-length novel, thereby risking what often occurs—a full-length failure." Thomas Moult
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 30 '39 330w

"Miss Porter's work so far shows that she has range and versatility as well as polish. Of her depth I am less certain, despite the keenness of her psychological analysis. It would portend better for her future development as a novelist if there were threads of continuity between the stories. Their themes are not only varied but miscellaneous; she neither takes an idea and worries it through successive tales nor returns to pose anew certain recurring human situations. But there is a place, and in this instance it is a distinguished one, for the flawless as well as for the profound." P. B. Rice
+ — Nation 148:442 Ap 15 '39 850w

"It is, perhaps, natural for an Englishman to compare her stories with those of Katherine Mansfield—and not entirely to Miss Porter's disadvantage. Katherine Mansfield had genius, and the failings of genius. She lapses often into sentimentality; her writing is patchy and uneven; many of her effects are shamelessly faked. Miss Porter has no genius but much talent. Her average level is high, and she doesn't let you down. She is more fundamentally serious than Katherine Mansfield, less neurotic, closer to the earth. She is dry-eyed, even in tragedy: when she jokes, she does not smile. You feel you can trust her." Christopher Isherwood
+ — New Repub 98:312 Ap 19 '39 750w
Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 17:832 My 27 '39 350w

"Of the three stories in this book the first and best is 'Old Mortality.' . . 'Noon Wine' is good, it is clever, it is ingenious but somehow it does not quite ring true except as a tour de force. . . It is impossible in a brief review to indicate the ineluctable charm of such a tale as 'Old Mortality.' One can only say, helplessly, that it is flawless—that it is so exactly and exquisitely right, down to every least phrase, that any commentary is an impertinence. So, too, with 'Pale Horse, Pale Rider.' Though it is by no means so good a story as 'Old Mortality,' it has a sensitive, a haunting quality to which no stereotyped outline of its content can possibly do justice. There is, in short, a kind of magic about everything that Miss Porter writes." E. H. Walton
+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 2 '39 850w

"So much contemporary American fiction bears the stamp of improvisation—the writer simply hasn't worked hard enough. Miss Porter calculates her effects, which is not to say that she gives the effect of calculation. She wastes not a word and each word has a purpose. This is simply to state that her stories stand up as small—for she strikes, so far, only the minor note—works of art." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:77 Ap 1 '39 950w

"Miss Porter's new book will solidify her already envious position in contemporary fiction."
+ — No Am 247:399 summer '39 120w
Pratt p30 summer '39

"Katherine Anne Porter moves in the illustrious company headed by Hawthorne, Flaubert, and Henry James. . . Beautifully modeled, petal-like sentences abound in the three novelettes. But unlike those of other conscious stylists, Kay Boyle for example, they never seem to stud the prose and pirouette in the direction of imaginary footlights. They move unobtrusively and precisely. So, too, do the narratives: without breaks and within flexible steadiness and suppleness, easily, almost with sprightliness. Each of the narratives maintains its own tone—in the sense of effects of color and modulations and accents appropriate to the expression of its individual sentiment." Paul Rosenfeld
+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Ap 1 '39 600w
Reviewed by Forrest Reid
Spec 162:1010 Je 9 '39 490w

"Pale Horse, Pale Rider is a collection of three short novels which belong with the best of contemporary U. S. writing in this difficult form. A distinctive book, elusive as quicksilver, it has the subtlety that has marked all Miss Porter's writing, none of the preciousness that has previously marred it."
+ Time 33:75 Ap 10 '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 27 '39 700w
Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

PORTER, KENNETH WIGGINS. High plains; poems. 84p $2 Day 811 39-1908

"The high plains are those of Kansas: Kenneth Porter, of pioneer parentage, was born and grew up in the Kansas wheat belt. . . But not all these poems are regional in the narrow sense. In some of them Mr. Porter's way of seeing and recording more closely resembles that of the New England poets than that of his Middle-Western contemporaries. The group of lyrics with a Massachusetts setting, written probably while he studied at Harvard, are authentically New England in theme and mood." Books

---

"Mr. Porter does one or two things not often done by regional poets. In the first place he has an accurate historical sense, whether he writes of nature or of the social scene. Further, he gives us the essential feeling of time back of these high plains. . . Mr. Porter has not yet found an individual and flexible form that will do justice to what he wants to say. Otherwise, 'The High Plains,' for its sensitive records of scene and valid social insight, is an accomplished first book." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p9 Ja 29 '39 550w
Christian Century 56:1140 S 20 '39 150w

"Acute sensitiveness to beauty and to pain, mortal and universal, reveals itself in all these poems. . . An unconquerable vitality irradiates the whole volume." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 153:17 Ja 15 '39 80w

"The work in the earlier part of the book deals chiefly with the life and soil of Kansas; these poems are sharply visual, colorful impressions and are thus far successful. . . If the poems in the latter pages represent recent work, they show a distinct departure from the earlier style and by no means a happy one. These social protest poems share the fault of many similar, and by no means so generous, attempts to speak in poetry of social wrong; they are shrill rather than indignant and they tend to identify the just and eternal cause of the workingman with trivial, political concerns." J. G. E. Hopkins
+ — Commonweal 29:416 F 3 '39 210w
New Repub 99:288 Jl 12 '39 40w

"Kenneth Porter is a poet of intellectual integrity and individuality, and his humanity is marked. He resorts to none of the religious clichés; yet we venture to call several of his poems religious in the wider sense of the word. Often he is bitter in his irony." P. H.

N Y Times p26 F 19 '39 280w
Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher
Poetry 54:342 S '39 450w

"Mr. Porter commands a variety of meters and knows how to use them; and he does not fumble language, nor does he think it clever to write in a sort of Morse code." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 360w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 150w

PORTER, SYLVIA FIELD. How to make money in government bonds; foreword by Morris S. Tremaine. 238p $3 Harper

332.63 Bonds. Finance—U.S. Debts, Public 39-7277

"The financial columnist of the New York Post explains the primary reasons for the fluctuations of government securities, and explains how the government conducts its market operations and provides a profit for those who buy its bonds. The possibilities of 'free riding' are discussed in detail." (Booklist) Index.

"Written in popular style, this book discusses with a fair degree of completeness an increasingly important segment of our securities market. . . Portions of the book could be used for reference purposes in courses on investments. Its greatest appeal, however, will be to investment counsellors and to individuals charged with handling funds invested partially or wholly in public securities." R. E. Badger
+ Am Econ R 29:605 S '39 300w
Booklist 35:324 Je 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:140 Jl '39

POTEAT, EDWIN MCNEILL. Centurion. 182p il $2 Harper

811 39-8509

This long narrative poem tells a story of Marcus the Centurion who, because of his love for Mary Magdalene, learned to know the Christ and in the end sacrificed all for Him.

"The tale is a powerful one, with greater dramatic possibilities than its narrator has drawn from it. The character of Marcus is essentially that of a hero in the great tradition of tragedy. And, because Mr. Poteat writes best when the action is direct, and when his characters speak, he might well have chosen to cast his story in poetic-drama form, with specific acts or scenes. This would eliminate the rather monotonous continuity of the blank verse narrative and descriptive passages, and enable the writer to do full justice to the dramatic crises of his theme."
+ — Books p9 Jl 30 '39 250w

"Clear and courageous thinking, sensitive feeling and good craftsmanship in verse make this long narrative poem a religious and artistic success in a difficult field."
+ Christian Century 56:581 My 3 '39 390w
Reviewed by R. V. Wells
Crozer Q 16:313 O '39 120w

POTTER, CHARLES FRANCIS. Beyond the senses. 278p $2.50 Doubleday

133.8 Thought transference. Psychical research 39-31932

"The founder of the First Humanist Society in New York has been experimenting with telepathy, clairvoyance and kindred matters for several years. This volume is a summary of his most striking observations and experiences. He believes that both telepathy and clairvoyance have been scientifically proven and thinks that they may lead to a more sound basis for belief in continuity after death." Churchman

---

"The discussion in the book of the relation between the electro-encephalogram or 'brain waves' and telepathy is irrelevant because the author does not give indication of technical knowledge in this new field of electrophysiology. The reviewer feels that he may state with assurance that nothing so far discovered in connection with the electro-encephalogram allows it to be considered as a basis for alleged thought transference. The positive religious implications of telepathy are emphasized in this book. To the reviewer this is unfortunate. . . The reviewer dislikes to present so unfavorable an evaluation of any book as he has been forced to give here, but he is convinced that the basic thesis of the book has not been demonstrated and that the superstructure erected upon its foundation may well be dangerous to passing pedestrians if a warning sign is not posted beside it. One final word may be said, however. Those who already emotionally accept telepathy and kindred concepts will find satisfaction in the book." Leonard Carmichael
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 550w
Christian Century 57:185 F 7 '40 210w
Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 153:20 D 1 '39 150w

POTTER, EDNA. Land from the sea; pictures by [the author]. 63p map $1.50 Longmans

Children in the Netherlands 39-22034

Life on an island in the Zuider Zee is described in this story for children. The building of the huge dyke which is to shut out the great inland sea and turn it into good farm land is featured.

Booklist 36:75 O 15 '39
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p14 N 12 '39 250w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 20w
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:300 S '39 60w

"For children from nine to eleven. Lovely illustrations in half tones by the author." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 90w

"This is a pleasing picture of Dutch life, contrasting the old with the new, and although the narrative element is weak, the description of the reclamation of land in clear, simple terms gives it an up-to-the-minute flavor which will appeal to younger children. The charm of the old life is evident in the illustrations." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p26 N 12 '39 200w
New Yorker 15:88 N 25 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 180w
Wis Lib Bul 35:191 N '39

POULSEN, FRU ELISABETH (BERGSTRAND). The crown; tr. from the Swedish by Eleanor Salberg Williamson. 228p $2.50 Coward-McCann

39-13364

"The crown"—a chandelier of great beauty—was brought from Russia by a Swedish knight and because it was too grand for the manor house was given to the church—on certain conditions. With the passing of years, the conditions were neglected and finally a descendant of the old knight took back the crown. Dismay filled the hearts of the peasant folk and one of their number, a young girl, vowed a thirty year penance to retrieve it. She died before the time was up, but her young daughter brought it to fulfillment.

POULSEN, ELISABETH—Continued

Booklist 35:333 Je 1 '39

"Simplicity, pity and warmth of sympathy Mrs. Bergstrand-Poulsen has in plenty. But it cannot be said that she has been able to go beyond the achievement of a simple tale, quietly told. For those who do not demand the stimulation of fresh insight or subtle thought, this will suffice." David Tilden

Books p7 My 21 '39 600w

Christian Century 56:1306 O 25 '39 80w

Reviewed by Genevieve McCole

Commonweal 30:165 Je 2 '39 300w

"Very few novelists could take a girl of 13 or 14 and make her a compelling lead in a story. But that is just what Mrs. Bergstrand-Poulsen succeeds in doing with Anna Mathilda, the young daughter Serafia has left behind her to take upon small shoulders not only the work of the farm but the uncompleted penance as well. Anna Mathilda is one of the most attractive girl-heroines in fiction. And my own belief is that she is absolutely true to life." Percy Hutchison

\+ N Y Times p7 My 7 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:101 My 13 '39 40w

"Out of this devotional myth Mrs. Bergstrand-Poulsen has built a novel that is remarkable for its sincerity and its directness. It has the solemnity, the simplicity, and the fervor of a medieval saint's legend, but the mysticism is of a dogged Protestant variety that owes its strength to the rigors of the peasant's life. There is nothing mawkish, sentimental, or ethereal about her characters. They are as real and as solid as the soil which provides their living." C. D. A.

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 350w

POUND, ARTHUR. Hawk of Detroit. 361p $2.50 Reynal

Cadillac, Antoine de la Mothe—Fiction
39-27938

Historical novel about the founding of Detroit by the French under Sieur Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac.

Booklist 36:111 N 15 '39

"Historical fiction of a high literary order is not to be found in 'Hawk of Detroit.' It is well worth reading for its sound grasp of neglected historical material and for its competent narration of exciting events, and I am glad to have this novel of Detroit. But I shall keep on looking for a better one. Perhaps Arthur Pound will write it." J. T. Frederick

\+ — Books p8 O 22 '39 550w

"The tale is as historically sound as a novel may be. Its prose is competent and pleasant. It moves from fact to fact with an easy swing. Facts and events make the story; people do not. Characters remain only characters, lacking the complexity, the warmth, the individual differences of real people; and yet for all that they are human enough for an adventure tale, and do not spoil the plot by woodenness." M. E. Smith

\+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 270w

Cath World 150:633 F '40 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

"The chief merit of the novel is in its evocation of the political and social background of French expansion in America—the parts played by church, State and trading companies, their rivalries and conflicts, and the problem of local administrations in achieving a balance between them while at the same time preserving Indian friendship." Drake De Kay

\+ N Y Times p22 O 15 '39 700w

"On the surface 'Hawk of Detroit' is a stirring novel of bold men helping empire to find its westward way. It has all the familiar trappings of such a story, and it would not be more significant than most narratives of that kind if it were not for the half-unintentional symbolism of the birth of the American type. The shavings lying around Mr. Pound's work bench seem to have possibilities that make them even more exciting than his finished article." Arnold Mulder

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:30 O 14 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Culture; the intellectual autobiography of a poet [Eng title: Guide to kulchur]. 360p $2.50 New directions [10s 6d Faber]

028 Books and reading. Literature—History and criticism. Poetics 39-4940

"This new book of Mr. Pound's may be regarded as an elaboration of his previous essays, the 'A B C of Reading' and 'How to Read.' It is written in the same style and is occupied with the same rather limited set of ideas. There are a few more illustrations, a wider field of reference, but its bulk is due to copious repetition." Times [London] Lit Sup

"If Pound's philosophy is questionable and his politics damnable, if, moreover, he has little to offer that part of his chosen audience which cannot afford a university education, what is the value of this book? The value of the personality behind it." Babette Deutsch

\+ — Books p18 F 26 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

Nation 148:504 Ap 29 '39 950w

"I believe it to be one of those essential books. Though in itself it may seem to carry little weight, yet, so long as it is there and needed, a writer will be bound to go right in his writing. There's more good sense for him packed here than you will find in all the colleges of Christendom put end to end until they reach completely around the alphabet." W. C. Williams

\+ New Repub 99:229 Je 28 '39 550w

"For most readers this book will be first-rate trash. Pedants, fanatics, reviewers, etc., and the ordinary reader have no interest in Mr. Pound's carrying-on about money, Mussolini, and Father Coughlin's rough 'very popular' education. For a very few if you're in for a penny you're in for a Pound. For the rest this is actually the only interesting critical book of the year, but you will have to read it to find out why." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p14 F 26 '39 1100w

"Calculated to drive lovers of calm, liquid prose into a frenzy, Pound's ideas on everything from Zeno to Apollinaire are nevertheless fruitful as often as they are silly."

New Yorker 14:136 D 3 '38 30w

Pratt p20 autumn '39

"No one who cares anything about poetry, ancient or modern, can afford to disregard Mr. Pound's contribution to it both as poet and as critic. . . Of his schoiarship, on the other hand, one can be less sure. The evidences are all too fragmentary. . . And his criticism of painting and music, especially of music, is neither more nor less than clever. And these add up to a breathless and stimulating book. But it isn't the book that we have been waiting so long for. If only Mr. Pound could forget that it is not necessary to sustain the proud scolding pitch for ever!" Dudley Fitts

Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 13 '39 440w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 7 '38 600w (Reprinted from Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Mr. Pound has a lively intelligence and there is always some point in what he says. But apart from the manner of saying it, it is a mistake to suppose that, taken altogether, it constitutes a culture. It lacks the first element of a culture, which is inner coherence. Mr. Pound's preferences and prejudices have the interest which comes from a vivid personality; his criticisms, especially when they are directed to an objective evil like usury, have force and eloquence; but it all remains within a personal scale of values, and constitutes not a culture but eclecticism."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Jl 23 '38 650w

POUND, ROSCOE. The formative era of American law [four lectures delivered at the Law school of Tulane univ. on the occasion of the centennial of the death of Edward Livingston]. 188p $2 Little

340 Law—U.S. Law—Addresses, essays, lectures 38-39584

"This volume is made up of four lectures delivered by Dean Pound in 1936 at the Tulane College of Law. . . The era with which Dean Pound is concerned is the period from the Revolution to the Civil War. . . The introductory chapter deals with the uses to which concepts of natural law were put and the purposes which they served during the years in question. . . The other three chapters of the volume estimate the extent to which the extraordinary achievements of the period were due to legislation, judicial decision, and doctrinal writing." Books

Reviewed by W. F. Dodd
Am Pol Sci R 33:921 O '39 350w

"It is unfortunate, I think, that Dean Pound upon occasion oversimplifies arguments which he wishes to destroy. . . It is also regrettable that in discussing the economic interpretation Dean Pound makes no mention of the many constitutional cases in which its force is most clearly apparent. These small criticisms of the book do not, however, touch its larger aspects. By his comprehensive scholarship Dean Pound has opened up vistas of which many lawyers and historians have been unaware." M. De W. Howe

+ — Books p10 Ja 29 '39 900w

Reviewed by J. C. Bassett
Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 600w

"With a most invigorating freshness and encyclopedic yet lightly borne erudition Mr. Roscoe Pound reflects upon the influences that fashioned American law during its formative period, from independence to the Civil War. He discusses the rôle played by natural law theories, legislation, judicial decision and doctrinal writings in the construction of our nation's jurisprudence." Joseph Calderon

+ Commonweal 29:725 Ap 21 '39 350w

"A scholar's life unfolds on the printed page and in the classroom. Words are his sole vehicle, and they hold all the insight and understanding, all the humility and heroism that his mind and spirit have known. When the teacher-scholar's book is Roscoe Pound's, even though the book be short, its suggestiveness is enormously increased by its reference to an exceptionally broad context that has become classic in the legal literature of this century—and a reviewer is hard put to provide an adequate synopsis." Jerome Hall

+ Harvard Law R 52:1191 My '39 1700w

POWDERMAKER, HORTENSE. After freedom; a cultural study in the deep South. 408p $3 Viking

325.26 Negroes—Mississippi. South—Social conditions. Social surveys. U.S.—Race question (W) 39-27097

This study, by an anthropologist, applies the techniques of that science to a southern rural community in Mississippi, along the Yazoo river, disguised under the name of Cottonville. Both Negroes and whites are studied, but the emphasis thruout is on the Negro and the interracial situation. Most of the data was obtained from interviews. Contents: The social scene; Economic considerations; Cohesion and conflicts in the Negro family; Religion and superstition; Education: The Negro's response to the situation. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Park
Am J Soc 45:612 Ja '40 380w

Reviewed by H. M. Bond
Ann Am Acad 205:201 S '39 750w
Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39
Boston Transcript p1 My 6 '39 270w

"As an anthropological work, the book is to be classed as a 'functionalist' study, which is to say that the author's major interest is to understand the interrelation of the various aspects of the culture considered rather than their historical development. It is in the awkwardness with which Miss Powdermaker handles such historical discussion as she includes, therefore, that we find the essential weakness of her book. . . It is to be hoped that Miss Powdermaker will go on with the work she has commenced in this book; but it is also to be hoped that her future studies will take into account the requisite historical background and thus give depth and greater meaning to the present-day modes of life and points of view of the folk treated in this volume." M. J. Herskovits
Nation 149:298 S 16 '39 900w

Reviewed by C. S. Johnson
New Repub 99:195 Je 21 '39 700w

"It is too bad that this book, which is full of rich material for any one who is at all interested in the racial situation in the old South, could not have been wrapped up in a gaudier texture. . . Miss Powdermaker has sacrificed some of the appeal her book might have had for the general reader by being too attentive to the folk ways of her fellow-sociologists." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p4 F 5 '39 1450w

"Beyond a little pretentiousness about the magnitude of her adventure and the new scientific certainty of her discovering, Miss Powdermaker has done an excellent job. She has drawn with a new clarity the patterns of Negro living. And as excellent reporter she has collected a body of anonymous Negro personalities of every class and condition who, out of their own mouths, give point and meaning to all the attitudes and customs of the race." Jonathan Daniels

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:12 F 4 '39 650w

Reviewed by W. E. B. Du Bois
Social Forces 18:137 O '39 1300w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks
Survey G 28:243 Mr '39 330w
Wis Lib Bul 35:61 Ap '39

POWDERMAKER, THERESE. Physical education play activities for girls in junior and senior high schools; il. by Kate Rowland. 369p $3 Barnes, A.S.

371.732 Physical education and training. Games 38-14320

"This book offers to the teacher and coach a complete program of activities for girls in Junior and Senior High Schools. Heretofore, many individual volumes had to be consulted not only for the organization of the program but also for the description of the activities themselves. Here, then, is virtually a one volume library of source materials, methods of teaching, organization and administration, on play activities for girls." (Publisher's note) Index.

"To the teacher grounded in a sound philosophy of education and teaching, this book will be helpful in providing ideas for making the teaching process more effective. For the teacher lacking a sound philosophy, however, the suggestions might result in the making of a better technician but not a better teacher. If some attention could have been given to the importance of understanding the needs of the adolescent girl in program-building and of recognizing the opportunities inherent in the excellent list of activities suggested for meeting these needs, this book would have added value. It is essentially a book of materials and content." M. E. Rugen

+ — School R 47:472 Je '39 500w

"The practical material . . . has been condensed and organized so that it is easily and quickly read. In no way is the work complete, the folk ways of her fellow-sociologists." R. L. terial in the field and has offered it in a very usable way." H. D. Meyer

+ Social Forces 17:559 My '39 110w

POWEL, MRS LYDIA (BOND). The attractive home; a book of good ideas and simple rules for the homemaker; il. by Norman Reeves. (Peoples lib) 122p 60c Macmillan

747 House decoration (W) 39-27403

A chatty, informal discussion of the fundamental principles of house decoration, designed particularly for people of modest means the four principal rooms, living room, bedroom, kitchen, and bath, a chapter on furniture and one on the help to be found in art museums. but good tastes. Has a chapter on each of

Booklist 35:310 My 15 '39

"Quite frankly elementary in its approach, this book is designed to help the inexperienced woman make a pleasant home out of the materials at her command."

\+ Books p7 S 24 '39 80w

"Clear, sensible advice."

\+ J Home Econ 31:480 S '39 80w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson
New Repub 100:276 O 11 '39 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 27 '39 650w (Review of series)

Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

POWELL, HICKMAN. Ninety times guilty. 338p $2.50 Harcourt

343.1 Lucania, Charles (Lucky Luciano). Dewey, Thomas E. Prostitution. New York (city)—Moral conditions 39-12670

"The story of the successful prosecution by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of Charles Luciano, alias Charlie Lucky, one of the most formidable racketeers who ever plagued Manhattan, is told here with a wealth of unsavory anecdote by a former reporter for the New York Herald Tribune, who has been closely associated with Mr. Dewey as publicity man and draftsman of campaign oratory. That prosecution removed Luciano to prison for a minimum of twenty years, unless some political chicanery intervenes to release him, and laid before the public in newspaper outline the story of the gunman's extortion in the field of organized prostitution." Books

Reviewed by Allen Raymond
Books p9 Ap 23 '39 800w

Christian Century 56:581 My 3 '39 120w

New Repub 99:27 My 10 '39 50w

"The lesson which the citizen interested in decent and honest government will learn from this book is obvious. Mr. Powell does not preach and does not need to do so."

\+ N Y Times p19 Je 4 '39 240w

"This seems to be the real, inside story of the Dewey investigation, on the record and off the record, a picture of what went on behind the scenes as well as an analysis of what was made public. The on-the-record story of Lucky was interesting and provocative enough, but I found the off-the-record portraits even more so. . . The book will be conned very carefully by district attorneys and their assistants across the country, and a good many of them will read it with envy." J. F. Dinneen

\+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 Ap 15 '39 650w

"Although the book is sensational, a reading of it should tend to sober public thought."
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 12 '39 180w

POWER, SISTER MARY JAMES. Poets at prayer. 214p $3 Sheed

821.09 Religion in literature. English poetry—History and criticism. American poetry—History and criticism 39-288

Study of the attitude toward God of fourteen contemporary poets: John Hall Wheelock; Edna St Vincent Millay; Elinor Wylie; John Masefield; Robinson Jeffers; Edwin Arlington Robinson; Edwin Markham; Vachel Lindsay; Robert P. T. Coffin; T. S. Eliot; Alfred Noyes; Charles Williams; Anna Hempstead Branch; Thomas S. Jones, Jr.

"[The author] has performed her task with sympathetic insight and often has been able to throw light on minds dark to themselves. As she moves forward in her study she gains more assurance and when she reaches the five poets she calls 'naturally Christian' she is so entirely at home that her prose gains in strength and often in beauty and her studies become more satisfying as the views they present are more coherent." J. J. R.

\+ Cath World 148:756 Mr '39 390w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Commonweal 29:498 F 24 '39 550w

POWERS, JAMES T. Twinkle little star; sparkling memories of seventy years. 379p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-32747

Autobiography of an Irish-American comedian who "made his début on the New York stage in 1878, [was] chief comedian in the Drury Lane pantomime in the early eighties, and during the later eighties, the nineties, and the first two decades of the nineteen hundreds [was] one of the brightest stars in America's theatrical firmament." (Commonweal)

Booklist 36:176 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by L. S. Wellstone
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 230w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 20 '40 480w

"James T. Powers has a story to tell, and he has told it well in 'Twinkle Little Star,' a book rich in anecdote, in humor and in human interest." Grenville Vernon

\+ Commonweal 31:98 N 17 '39 300w

"The success story is lively, amusing and interesting. James T. Powers's progress was eventful, as his career was long and celebrated. And when other famous people appear in his memoirs he really has something to say about them. . . The book's illustrations, which number more than a hundred, show the progress of its hero's career and offer entertaining glimpses of old days in the theatre. This is a gay recreation of those old days."

\+ N Y Times p26 N 19 '39 480w

POWICKE, FREDERICK MAURICE. History, freedom, and religion. 62p $1 (3s); pa 85c (2s 6d) Oxford

901 History—Philosophy [39-18487]

"In these three lectures, delivered under the Riddell Foundation in the University of Durham, a front-rank historian presents discussions of three great themes. These are separately treated, but a certain continuity is maintained throughout. . . A sense of the significance of that history which is unrecorded and to man unknowable; a recognition of the quest of freedom as the key to history through all periods; and the thought of the mind of God as apprehending all that happens in the experience of all men at all times are some of the suggestions which Professor Powicke offers for the reader's consideration." J Religion

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Am Hist R 44:943 Jl '39 150w

Reviewed by C. C. J. Webb
Eng Hist R 54:520 Jl '39 700w

"The lectures are casual in method but they represent the fruit of cogent thinking and contain many quotable sentences; and the author's views are the more attractive because he utters them undogmatically." J. T. McNeill

\+ J Religion 19:306 Jl '39 130w

"Professor Powicke has distilled into these three lectures the essence of forty years' thought on his own subject. The argument is often so compact that it is not altogether easy to follow and no summary can do it justice."
Times [London] Lit Sup p520 Ag 6 '38 340w

PRATT, CARROLL CORNELIUS. The logic of modern psychology. 185p $2 Macmillan

150.1 Psychology 39-7284

"Dr. Pratt is head of the department of psychology at Rutgers University. He is a distinguished representative of the most scholarly school which modern psychology has produced, that which owes its origin to the work of Wundt of Leipzig and Titchener of Oxford, Leipzig and Cornell. Like many other modern psychophysicists who are members of this school, Dr. Pratt has carried this learned or even classical tradition into new and wider fields of psychology. Essentially, the present book describes the adventures of one so trained in a larger world. It thus becomes a sophisticated and often witty essay for the professional reader or layman concerning the current status and foibles of academic psychology." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"It is good that this book has been written. It will puzzle and annoy some readers, but in the long run it will do basic service to the science in which the author is a distinguished investigator. The reviewer hopes that the layman will realize that the book contains a few sentences which have been written for fun to shock certain special pairs of academic ears." Leonard Carmichael

\+ Boston Transcript p11 Je 15 '39 420w

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 56:950 Ag 2 '39 330w

"This book is not the epoch-making novel re-interpretation which the title and publisher's 'blurb' might lead us to expect. Within its modest limits it is a pretty good book, though leaving us to regret the fundamental study which might have been written under this title." H. T. C.

J Philos 36:447 Ag 3 '39 390w

"A book which it was a delight to read and is a pleasure to recommend." Karl Menninger

\+ New Repub 102:58 Ja 8 '40 280w

"In the preface the author lays claim to eight separate and distinct theses whose development is rather difficult to follow and whose integration into one scheme is lacking and thus justifies the criticism that there is no main structure of thesis in the strict sense of the word to bind the subject matter together. . . Some of the author's statements and arguments vaguely growing out of the implicational underbrush of his preface are more interesting." Livingston Welch

N Y Times p27 Ap 9 '39 460w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Road to empire; the life and times of Bonaparte, the general. 346p il maps $3.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French 39-23171

An account of the life and career of Napoléon Bonaparte from 1795, when he was a poor corporal, to 1799, when he became First consul. Index.

" 'Road To Empire' has the lovable faults of youth: it is ill-compacted, with abrupt changes in tone, and with flashes of engaging naiveté; it has also the great virtue of youth, eagerness, and its magic, charm, promise. . . But 'Road to Empire' is more than a brilliant promise. In his own domain Mr. Pratt has achieved the fulness of his power." Albert Guerard

Books p10 Ag 27 '39 1150w

"The story is well told, in vigorous and swiftly moving language. Mr. Fletcher Pratt is a writer of unusual distinction and his 'Road to Empire' is clearly based on established learning, corrected by the interpretations of more recent scholarship." Joseph Calderon

\+ Commonweal 30:422 Ag 25 '39 450w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Living Age 357:198 O '39 320w

"Mr. Pratt is an authority on military and naval tactics and his battle pieces in this history are both spirited and expert. In incredibly small space he manages to give detailed and clear pictures of highly complicated actions. Out of technical facts he builds colorful pictures of Napoleon's triumphs in the field. This book is outstandingly well written, as are all of Mr. Pratt's histories." Robert Van Gelder

\+ N Y Times p3 Ag 6 '39 750w

"While writing the book, Mr. Pratt must have kept sending himself memos on the importance of being lively. Lively he often is, but some of the time he turns downright cute."

New Yorker 15:60 Jl 29 '39 50w

"This is one of the best books in the field in recent years. In fact, if you supplement it with the dull and accurate academic French of the late Raymond Guyot in the series entitled 'Peuples et Civilisations' (unfortunately not available in English), you will have a very satisfactory account of five neglected and important years in French and world history. Mr. Pratt writes well—consciously well, but well." Crane Brinton

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 Jl 29 '39 600w

Time 34:51 Jl 31 '39 320w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Sea power and today's war. 237p $3 Harrison-Hilton

359 Sea power. European war, 1939—Naval operations (W) 39-32206

"[An account of] what every nation has in the way of warships, and why they have the types they have concentrated on. . . The book covers the strategic problems facing Britain and France on one side, and Germany on the other, and their attempts with different classes of warships to get for themselves what each considers security. What faces the neutrals—America, Russia, Italy, the Scandinavian countries . . . forms the major part of 'Sea Power and Today's War.' The fleets of each are analyzed, their difficulties weighed, their hopes and fears unemotionally dissected." Sat R of Lit

---

"It is no defect, surely that this book poses as many questions as it answers, and that many of the answers will eventually prove wrong. It is not history that Mr. Pratt is writing but a forecast. The book is well planned and written with liveliness. The widest variety of naval information is presented, and the analysis is everywhere interesting although not always convincing. An index would have been useful, even though the book is not intended for reference." R. F. Armknecht

\+ — Books p12 N 26 '39 800w

"It is a genuine pleasure to read and review a book by Fletcher Pratt. . . He belongs to that small group of writers who are genuine experts in naval affairs and who can also do a competent job of writing. As dozens of previous volumes and articles testify he is no novice, but a man with an intimate and complete knowledge of his subject gained by years of investigation and research." P. J. Searles

\+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 650w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 51:2 D '39 50w

"Fletcher Pratt has done a thoughtful job. He has gone to all available sources, which, he admits, are frequently unreliable because nations do not care to give away naval secrets, and he has done as good a job on the fighting prowess of the several nations of the world as could be looked for. The ultimate outcome of the sea war now in progress will speak for itself. In the meantime it may be not without profit to con the figures which Mr. Pratt has assembled." Percy Hutchison

\+ N Y Times p6 D 24 '39 900w

New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 30w

"A more timely book cannot be imagined. Americans, following closely the debates in Congress over our neutrality position, cannot afford to miss 'Sea Power and Today's War' if they wish really to understand what lies behind the debates and how the safety of their own lives and the security of our institutions are bound up with the battleships, the cruisers, the submarines, and the ungainly tramp

PRATT, FLETCHER -Continued
freighters that make up sea power. Fletcher Pratt, for long a close and discerning observer of naval matters, has done an excellent job." Edward Ellsberg
+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 O 28 '39 400w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Secret and urgent; the story of codes and ciphers. 282p $3.75 Bobbs
652 Ciphers. Cryptography (W) 39-27274

Story of codes and ciphers from old Egyptian inscriptions down to the present, with chapters on the changes made in history by detection of ciphers or by mistaken deciphering of known codes. Index.

Booklist 35:265 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by W. A. Roberts
Books p9 Je 18 '39 210w

"Astounding and fascinating book. . . The story of codes and ciphers has place, indeed, for a good deal that is amusing, as well as for much more that is thrilling, much that is tragic, and a vast amount of strange balancing in the hands of fate."
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 26 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:87 Mr 25 '39 20w
Pratt p13 autumn '39

"In 'Secret and Urgent,' Mr. Pratt gives us a readable, chatty, and expert account of codes and ciphers through the ages. It is full of good stories, it is clear, it goes from Lysander of Sparta to the wreck of the L-49, and it is likely to start the casual reader writing down strange groups of jumbled letters on his scratch-pad, just to see if, after he's gotten the blame thing enciphered, he'll be able to read it himself." S. V. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 1 '39 550w

PRATT, JAMES BISSETT. Naturalism. 180p $2 Yale univ. press [9s Oxford]
146 Philosophy—Addresses, essays, lectures. Naturalism 39-12947

The substance of four lectures delivered at Indiana university in 1938. They deal with the meaning and history of naturalism, the relation of naturalism to life and evolution, naturalism and mind, and naturalism, morality, and religion. Index.

"The book will be a useful introduction to the philosophy of naturalism." W. A. Marzolf
+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 17 '39 650w

Reviewed by W. H. Werkmeister
Ethics 50:102 O '39 1550w
J Philos 36:635 N 9 '39 400w

Reviewed by Charles Hartshorne
J Religion 19:234 Jl '39 600w

Reviewed by S. C. Pepper
N Y Times p9 Ja 21 '40 400w
Sat R of Lit 20:21 Je 3 '39 190w
Springf'd Republican p10 Je 29 '39 600w

"The amount of ground which Professor Pratt covers in these four short chapters or lectures exhibits him as the possessor of a mastery of formal compression at least as great as the most ardent of his many British admirers could have desired; and the wit 'which gives delight and hurts not,' yet for all its comity is capable of a good straight left on occasion, is not the least engaging of the book's many qualities."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Jl 29 '39 700w

PRATT, THEODORE (TIMOTHY BRACE, pseud). Murder goes to the World's fair. 255p $2 Dutton 39-16853

Detective story.

"Not as much fun as a trip to the Fair, perhaps, but lively enough for most tastes, with several big surprises, a couple of cryptic radiograms, and plenty of local color." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Jl 9 '39 290w

"Somewhere the whole thing misses fire. The murderer wasn't a surprise, the deduction was fairly dull. In fact the only character the least bit interesting was the snake-charmer." Marian Wiggin
— + Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 130w

"It is all very mysterious and all very entertaining." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '39 180w

"When Adams comes down offen his stilts the yarn is good. Exotic snake-dancer gives zip to performance. Average."
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 1 '39 40w

PRATT, WALDO SELDEN. The music of the French psalter of 1562; a historical survey and analysis with the music in modern notation. 213p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [16s 6d Oxford]
783.9 Church music. Bible. Old Testament—Psalms

"Besides giving a brief but sufficient survey of the origins of the French Psalter and its use and influence, Dr. Pratt presents a thorough study of the musical forms used in the first complete edition, that of 1562, and an annotated transcript of all the tunes in modern notation." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 56:516 Ap 19 '39 190w

"Professor Pratt is well qualified for this task, as demonstrated by his earlier articles and books dealing with Protestant hymnody. He has utilized extensively, but with great improvement in detail, older studies of such men as Douen and Zahn, which, in America, at least, are not readily available." M. H. Shepherd, Jr.
+ J Religion 19:307 Jl '39 290w
Times [London] Lit Sup p518 S 2 '39 200w

PRAVDIN, MICHAEL, pseud. See Charol, M.

PRENTICE, EZRA PARMALEE. Hunger and history; the influence of hunger on human history. 269p il $3 Harper
641.09 Food. Agriculture—History. Civilization—History 39-15191

The purpose of this book is to call attention "to the progress of freedom, to the character of the food supply, and to the effect of want and abundance on the human mind." (Pref) In pursuit of this purpose the author has prepared separate chapters on the histories of various food stuffs—meat, vegetables, milk, poultry products—from prehistoric times to the present, and has also devoted several chapters to discussion of the problems of relationship between abundance and the progress of civilization. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. E. R. Boak
Am Econ R 29:832 D '39 130w

Booklist 36:4 S '39

"The book is uniquely valuable and makes highly entertaining reading, quite apart from its political thesis." H. M. Parshley
+ Books p42 N 12 '39 600w

"This fund of information, obviously the product of patient research, should have resulted in a valuable and important book, but its treatment is essentially shallow and the material poorly organized. The author tends to force his facts into a pre-conceived mold of pet theories and prejudices. Axe-grinding is acceptable if the grinder is equipped to do a good job of it. In this instance, it only adds to the confusion, leaving the quotations more instructive than the text." E. C. Nothnagle
— + Boston Transcript p1 Jl 8 '39 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

"The author has set out in his book a serious study of an important subject. A fabulous abundance of interesting material is presented with the clarity and precision of the best scholarship." Saul Jarcho, M.D.
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 9 '39 800w

"Doubts as to the validity of Mr. Prentice's thesis should not obscure the fact that he has written an unusual book, full of materials the orthodox historian has passed over. His learning is rather crabbed, and he repeats himself unduly. He takes his sources too much at their word, always dangerous when you are dealing with men of letters. But he has dug out a lot that has remained in the obscurity of special libraries, and he has stated clearly a problem of major importance: what is the relation between the food supply of the masses and what we loosely call 'civilization?' " Crane Brinton
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 15 '39 700w

"Fascinating volume. With an impressive array of little-known facts from little-known sources the author describes the foods which have been man's chief nourishment from the beginning of human history to the present day." N. D. Palmer
+ Social Studies 30:375 D '39 300w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:502 Ag '39 700w
Time 34:55 Jl 3 '39 310w
Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

PRESNELL, FRANK G. Send another coffin. 278p $2 Morrow 39-12105

Detective story.

"Our snap judgment would be that Mr. Presnell's material in 'Send Another Coffin' is superior to his workmanship." Will Cuppy
— + Books p12 My 14 '39 300w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 120w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:934 D 23 '39 150w

"There are too many bedroom scenes in the book, but otherwise it is a better than average mystery story. . . At the risk of being called prudish we venture to register a protest against Mr. Presnell's overemphasis on elastic virtue, even though he is following the example set by many other modern mystery writers." Isaac Anderson
— + N Y Times p18 My 14 '39 140w

"A1—and saucy."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 40w

PRESTON, JACK, pseud. See Buschlen, J. P.

PRIBICEVIC, STOJAN. World without end; the saga of southeastern Europe. 408p map $3.50 Reynal

949.6 Balkan states. Eastern question (Balkan) (W) 39-29469

A somewhat informal history of the countries of southeastern Europe, followed by a survey of their present economic, social and political conditions. The author is a Jugoslav, son of a leader of the Austro-Hungarian Slavs, later a Minister of the Interior in the new state of Jugoslavia. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:175 Ja 1 '40

"One of the things we have been needing is a really good, readable book about the Balkans. This is the book. Stoyan Pribichevich . . . believes in democracy and freedom, and their ultimate triumph. His always well written book has an earnest beauty at the end. And from the first page to the last it offers a genuine acquaintance with the small countries of southeastern Europe, the importance of which can scarcely be over-estimated for our own understanding of this crucial time." John Patton
+ Books p8 D 3 '39 900w

"Mr. Pribichevich has found one of the best of formulae for popular books on foreign countries. His 'Saga of Southeastern Europe' manages to tell just enough about the polysyllabic lands beside the Danube to be both clear and entertaining. He writes affectionately of them all. . . A thoroughly attractive book, its pace slowed only a little by a school-masterly fondness for repetition of his faith in a democratic future for this quarter of Europe." R. H. Phelps
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 320w

"If the author's purpose was to clear up the Balkan mystery . . . it cannot be said that he fully succeeded. The task was too great, and he does not take it up very systematically. But he does better than that. He writes a book that is as delightful and as picturesque as its subject. He removes many erroneous impressions, gives an intimate and sympathetic view of the people and of their present problems and way of life, and leaves the reader with a friendly feeling toward these who have so long been considered Europe's problem children."
+ Christian Century 56:1511 D 6 '39 140w
Christian Science Monitor p24 D 14 '39 490w

"It is really very unfortunate that Pribichevich tries so hard to establish himself as an exclusive American authority on the Balkans by 'forgetting,' very conveniently, to note other well-known American authorities on this region in his otherwise extensive bibliography of nine pages. . . Yet Pribichevich really does not need to utilize this pretty well worn-out technique, designed to impress the reader that there are no other up-to-date studies of this topic available, because his work is a very useful excursion into the political, economic and social intricacies of Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Roumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece. . . Pribichevich has written a good book. It is, however, also only fair to state that he is capable of writing an immeasurably better one." J. S. Roucek
+ — Commonweal 31:248 Ja 5 '40 370w

"It is a full-bodied, sensitively-written book. It is not the book of a journalist as much as the book of a person who himself was born and brought up in Southeastern Europe and who can write about its folkways, its traditions, its personalities with color and understanding." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 51:4 F '40 550w

" 'World Without End' breathes a healthy optimism in spite of the thoroughness with which it pictures the unsuccessful struggle over thousands of years. The author's . . . style is lucid, exact, and full of suggestive overtones. When he speaks of his homeland he sometimes achieves the poetic intensity of the first hundred pages of Louis Adamic's 'The Native's Return.' " Franz Hoellering
+ Nation 149:713 D 23 '39 950w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
N Y Times p3 D 10 '39 1200w

"The Balkans are not easy to understand. They present a picture of confusion. . . Mr. Pribichevich deserves much credit for clarifying this picture. He has woven the history, legends, politics, and culture of southeastern Europe into a richly varied but somehow unified whole." J. C. de W.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '40 250w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja. 14 '40 1150w

PRICE, ARCHIBALD GRENFELL. White settlers in the tropics; with additional notes by Robert G. Stone. 311p il maps $4 Am. geographical soc.

910 Tropics—Colonization 39-7980

"A detailed investigation into the history of white colonization in tropical regions and an

PRICE, A. G.—Continued
appraisal of the lessons to be learned therefrom. There are numerous illustrations, maps, charts and statistical tables, and each chapter is fully annotated." Foreign Affairs

"The entire vast subject of 'geography' is today undergoing an extremely important revolution. . . Grenfell Price's book is a major event in that revolution. Meticulously developed, it does a thorough job of exposing the numerous weaknesses in our old orthodox beliefs about the debilitating effects of the tropical climate, and so paves the way for new studies, new approaches, new concepts and values." E. P. Hanson

+ Books p13 Ag 13 '39 800w
Foreign Affairs 17:809 Jl '39 40w
Nature 144:172 Jl 29 '39 600w

"A monograph of exceptional value. . . Dr. Price has assembled a vast amount of technical information relevant to one of the great problems of our time—the problem of refugees."

+ New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 60w

Reviewed by M. A. Eaton
Social Forces 18:303 D '39 800w

PRICE, EMERSON. Inn of that journey. 266p $2.50 Caxton printers
39-1207

The scene is a dreary small town, designated as Scatterfield, and situated in pre-War Ohio. The book gives a realistic portrayal of boyhood, as evidenced in the lives of a gang of young Scatterfield ruffians, led by the toughest of them, Soap Dodger Pendleton, the junkman's son.

"This is not a sugar-coated story of boyish pranks, nor yet a tale of boyish depravities; but perhaps because I was never a boy, there is a haunting bleakness to life in Scattergood, O., which the few bright spots of boyhood in that grim little town can not quite efface, and even the author's keen understanding of a boy's thoughts and actions can not make up for." M. P. H.

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 21 '39 290w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey
Canadian Forum 19:64 My '39 300w
New Repub 98:147 Mr 8 '39 60w

"Mr. Price is specific and thorough as to what happens after the first chaw of tobacco. He reports beatings in full detail, and describes some of the shy amours of moonlight coasting. . . Yet this is realism, honestly and sincerely offered, a description of a way of growing up that other novelists have either avoided or prettified. There are boys, plenty of them, who have grown up without any security, and to whom the adventure of thieving is the one form of play that seems to make sense. This picture is highlighted by a country store humor, mixed with the bitterness and outspokenness of a jail yard. It is not pleasant reading nor is it, artistically, particularly effective. But it carries the shock of reality, of bare, stark fact." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 8 '39 480w
Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 18 '39 300w

"Although Inn of That Journey is far more candidly documented than Huckleberry Finn, it lacks something else for which its candor does not compensate: the literary verve of Mark Twain."

— + Time 33:35 Ja 2 '39 360w

PRICE, HARRY. Fifty years of psychical research; a critical survey. 383p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

133 Psychical research

A history of psychical research and a record of the principal experiments which have been carried out in this field. The book is intended to supplement a work published in 1902, Modern Spiritualism by Podmore. Certain of the chapters of this book were delivered as lectures at the University of London in 1939. Bibliography. Index.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '39 250w

"Regarded as a well-documented and popular guide to the less serious side of psychical research during the last fifty years, this work will doubtless fulfil a useful purpose; but it cannot be claimed that it is in any sense a well-balanced, historical or critical account of a period in psychical research when much has been done and foundations laid for a better and more scientific approach to the problems in dispute." E. J. D.

+ — Nature 144:1082 D 30 '39 250w

"This is at once the most comprehensive and the most entertaining book on the subject of psychical research known to me. In the course of his thirty years' career as an investigator, the author has enjoyed a curious assortment of experiences. . . All this is very clearly and entertainingly set forth. Mr. Price tells a good story, is a shrewd observer, and a judicious commentator, and I can confidently recommend the book to those who enjoy a good yarn no less than to those who want to know the past history and present position of psychical research." C. E. M. Joad

+ Spec 163:590 N 27 '39 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p598 O 14 '39 130w

PRICE, WESTON ANDREW. Nutrition and physical degeneration; a comparison of primitive and modern diets and their effects; foreword by Earnest Albert Hooton. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 431p 134il maps $5 Harper

612.39 Nutrition. Diet. Degeneration. Teeth —Diseases. Society, Primitive 39-16648

For a number of years the author has conducted research among both isolated (primitive) and modernized groups in various parts of the world from the Swiss Alps to New Zealand. As a result he concludes that the finer physiques, particularly the better facial formations and the freedom from dental decay, found among the primitive groups are due to the simpler diets used by such groups. Index.

"No one can doubt the accuracy of Dr. Price's observations or the careful study that he has given to them. His interpretations are open to more criticism. . . There are some statements which are inexact." C. F. Elzea

+ — Am J Pub Health 29:1358 D '39 750w

Reviewed by Saul Jarcho
N Y Times p21 Ja 14 '40 750w

"Exceptionally interesting and important book." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 Je '39 600w

PRIESTLEY, HERBERT INGRAM. France overseas; a study of modern imperialism. (Am. hist. assn. Publications) ltd ed 463p maps $5 (21s) Appleton-Century

325.344 France—Colonies 38-36993

An objective study of the development and administration of the French colonial empire and its effects upon national and international policies. The period covered is from the end of the Napoleonic wars to the present. The author is a member of the department of history at the University of California. Index.

"France Overseas represents a decade's herculean labors concentrated to the nth degree for reference purposes. In fact, so completely have the sentences been reduced to bone and sinew that even the most favorably predisposed reader suffers from a congestion of names, places, and concentrated information. The effort exacted by such a rush of facts to every phrase is aggravated by a monotonous use of monosyllabic words with which to open almost every sentence. The critical bibliographical notes are among the most valuable contributions in a very useful work." Virginia Thompson

+ Am Hist R 45:156 O '39 650w

"The subject-matter with which Mr. Priestley must deal ranges far and wide in time and space, and the literature which he has consulted is enormous. An immense amount of historical material and documentation drawn from a variety of sources has been usefully organized, and the book should undoubtedly serve as a helpful work of reference. . . Dealing with the book solely within its own more obvious framework as a 'plain narrative of events,' it is doubtful whether so compact and abbreviated a treatment as that accorded in this volume can convey any real impression of the meaning and significance of the events and institutions which are mentioned. . . But it is precisely in the realm of interpretation that Mr. Priestley most seriously falls short of the mark. . . It is unfortunate also that the book could not, in a swiftly changing world, have been brought more nearly up to date." Rupert Emerson

Am Pol Sci R 33:323 Ap '39 650w

"After ten years of work and the examination, it is said, of more than seven thousand titles, the author has produced an elaborately detailed chronicle of the building of la France d'outremer. The trouble is that he has failed to digest his formidable documentation, and the volume is lacking in perspective and clarity. . . The specialist will not have great use for the book. The layman will scarcely be able to use it, even if he does not mind the uninspired literary style." Grayson Kirk

— Ann Am Acad 205:177 S '39 400w

Christian Century 56:515 Ap 19 '39 190w

Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 50w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Living Age 356:199 Ap '39 140w

"The matter-of-fact attitude helps to keep Mr. Priestley's style pedestrian, and his book suffers from the poor quality of its maps. With this qualification it is a first-class work of reference."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 7 '39 700w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Johnson over Jordan; the play and all about it (an essay). 144p il $2 Harper [7s 6d Heinemann]

822 39-32158

A reading version of Mr Priestley's new play produced in London in the spring of 1939. Tho dialog and action are identical with the stage production, the author has added to this reading version an account of what the audience saw and, at the end, a history of the writing and production of the play and its reception.

Booklist 36:211 F 1 '40

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p24 D 10 '39 700w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '39 290w

"It is not an easy play to read, for its effect, dependent on music, and ballet and lighting, can be fairly judged only in performance, but a leisurely reading of the text confirms the view that there is nothing truly experimental in its language. . . Without doubting the sincerity of Mr. Priestley's attempt to do something new in a theatre choked with dead technical devices many serious playgoers remain as little impressed by his use of masks and loud-speakers and symbolic night clubs as they were by Mr. Eugene O'Neill in the same vein. They are more responsive to heightened speech than to elaborate stagecraft. Others, equally serious, think differently, but these, it would seem, are at present outnumbered."

Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Jl 1 '39 600w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Rain upon Godshill. 308p $3 Harper [8s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 (W) 39-27821

This "further chapter in biography" describes what Mr Priestley has been doing and thinking during the two years since he wrote Midnight on the Desert (Book Review Digest, 1937).

"Even the short time which has elapsed since Rain upon Godshill was completed has served to make the new book more valuable as a document of things past in sociological-philosophic pattern than of present help. Perhaps this enhances its interest. It is the document of a talented man who does not like the path the world is taking, nor the way the world has treated him." Frances Woodward

+ Atlantic N '39 300w

Booklist 36:66 O 15 '39

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

+ Books p4 O 1 '39 1050w

"'Rain Upon Godshill' is a companionable book, purveying a considerable amount of human warmth." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 900w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '39 500w

"Mr. Priestley gives more reflection than narrative and never afflicts us by imagining that it matters enormously to the world whether he drank the white wine or the red at So-and-so's table or by relating the kind of witticism which passes for mental fatness in the warmth of convivial company but looks a sad and withered specimen in the cold light of print. Rather does he discharge, in an easy, lucid, almost conversational prose, a mixture of personal reminiscence, social comment, and metaphysical speculation. . . Those who regarded 'Moonlight on the Desert' as Priestley at his best will receive with even greater pleasure his view of English climate from an English window." Ivor Brown

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 29 '39 600w

"I record my opinion that 'Rain Upon Godshill' is a disappointing book, but eminently readable. It is readable because anything Mr. Priestley writes is readable; it is disappointing because Mr. Priestley could have made it not only readable but worth re-reading, like his English Journey." R. H. S. Crossman

— + New Statesman & Nation 18:347 S 2 '39 1200w

"This is an author who makes bold to say that his hobby is the search for wisdom; and that is a highly individual search, of course. But along with his critical observation he has a deep responsiveness and a warm humanity. This man Priestley is a Good Companion on his Excursions Into Autobiography." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 O 29 '39 1100w

"Mr. Priestley doesn't like reviewers much, so I feel a little cravenhearted in admitting that I can't return the compliment. I think 'Rain Upon Godshill' a most diverting book, with much sound sense in it and just enough eccentricity to give it flavor." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:75 S 23 '39 500w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

Sat R of Lit 20:10 S 23 '39 1000w

"I am obliged to say that I find Rain Upon Godshill acrimonious, loosely built, trivial, selfish and totally charmless. That is not to say that it is devoid of interest." Evelyn Waugh

— + Spec 163:331 S 1 '39 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p511 S 2 '39 600w

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY. Department of economics and social institutions. Industrial relations section. Determination and administration of industrial relations policies, by Helen Baker. 74p pa $1.50 Industrial relations section

658.3 Employment management. Efficiency, Industrial 39-10738

Collection of material on the organizing and directing of industrial relations aspects of a selected group of companies. "The study is based on a special analysis of 90 manufacturing companies of varying size and type of industry, and 10 public utilities whose personnel organization and problems were comparable. The guiding objective of the study has been to show how and by whom policies are determined and administered." (Management R) Selected bibliography.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY—Continued

Reviewed by G. W. Miller
Am Econ R 29:394 Je '39 430w

"While programs and activities have not been described or evaluated except insofar as that was necessary to clarify aspects of their administration, the volume is replete with specific information of a very practical kind."
+ Management R 28:107 Mr '39 500w

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY. Department of economics and social institutions. Industrial relations section. Group purchase of medical care by industrial employees, by Leahmae Brown. 53p pa $1 Industrial relations section
614.2 Medical economics 38-22138

"A brief summary and analysis of a limited number of plans for the group purchase of medical care by industrial workers. The plans presented have been chosen, not as indicating a statistical mode of existing programs, but as being representative of the best. The report also examines the objections of organized medicine toward group purchase plans." Management R

Reviewed by C. A. Kulp
Ann Am Acad 202:208 Mr '39 390w
Management R 28:288 Ag '39 60w

PRINGLE, HENRY FOWLES. The life and times of William Howard Taft. 2v 555;557-1106p il $7.50 Farrar
B or 92 Taft, William Howard (W) 39-27878

A long, full biography of Taft, based on the Taft papers to which the author was allowed unlimited access. In his preface the author describes his work as "authorized but not official." Bibliography and index at end of volume two.

"Good old Taft! Devoted public servant, high in aim, high in achievement. Time it is that justice should be done to a great record. Mr. Pringle has done his work with admirable fidelity, spirit, and skill. He has served Taft well. He has served history better." Ellery Sedgwick
+ Atlantic D '39 600w
Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39

"There are two criticisms which will inevitably be directed against Mr. Pringle's biography, and they are not without foundation. In the first place, Mr. Pringle has drawn too largely for his material from one source—the Taft papers. . . It is probably a consequence of this concentration upon the Taft sources that Mr. Pringle's analysis of some of the more controversial chapters in the Taft period is wanting in critical acumen. . . Yet these inadequacies must not distract us from the virtues of the book. Mr. Pringle's notable achievement is to bring Taft to life, to recreate him as he surely was, and to make him irresistibly attractive. He has given us a full-length biography that is not full dress." H. S. Commager
+ — Books p1 O 29 '39 1700w
Christian Science Monitor p20 N 11 '39 500w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:6 D '39 50w

"Mr. Pringle has written a truly admirable biography of Taft, a more important book, probably than his excellent life of Theodore Roosevelt. Taken together the two works present an extraordinarily effective picture of recent American history." M. DeW. Howe
+ Harvard Law R 53:505 Ja '40 950w

Reviewed by Matthew Josephson
New Repub 101:174 N 29 '39 1250w

"The habit of down-rightness is, in the last analysis, what makes Taft an appealing subject for a biographer. And, since the habit is catching, it makes Mr. Pringle's book one of the best political biographies of recent years." John Chamberlain
+ N Y Times p1 O 29 '39 1500w

"Mr. Pringle's book is not a Stracheyan exposé. It will stand as a many-sided, highly detailed, detached biography, as lively as his subject, who was no fascinator, permits." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:78 O 28 '39 200w

"Mr. Pringle has written a most important book. It is a scholarly job, but his scholarship never goes to seed in mere erudition. In the race for the Pulitzer prize next spring, this book cannot be neglected." W. A. White
+ Sat R of Lit 21:3 O 28 '39 2500w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 19 '39 1900w

Reviewed by W. J. Schieffelin
Survey G 28:766 D '39 300w
Time 34:80 N 6 '39 800w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Yale R n s 29:380 winter '40 1200w

PRITCHARD, VIRGINIA COLE. A Christmas story; il. by Frances B. Hickey. 27p $1 Dutton 39-22035

Story of a German peasant girl who came to America bringing with her an old family shrine. When this was set up in the yard of her new home it was found that the legend of European days came true in America too.

"There is a gentle atmosphere in the story which is somewhat akin to the spirit of St. Francis. This is accentuated by the drawings (particularly those of the animals) which are done by Frances Hickey. This is slight, but very nice." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 50w

PRITCHETT, LULITA CRAWFORD. The shining mountains; il. by Sanford Tousey. 296p $2.50 Whitman, A.
39-23295

The Colorado territory in the 1870s is the scene of this story of Whites and Indians, friends and foes, and a prospector looking for gold and a lost son. For grades five to seven.

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 20w

"Libraries seem well supplied with books on the Westward Movement now, so as this is not particularly well written, its greatest value would be in Colorado libraries." Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 90w

PROGRESS of nations. 11v and index il $79.50; to libraries and schools $57.50 c1930-38 Department of rehabilitation, The disabled American veterans of the World war, 104 S. Michigan av, Chicago 909 History, Universal

"The story of the world and of its peoples from the dawn of history to the present day; chronicled with the assistance of eminent historians from leading universities and colleges and published in the interests of The disabled American veterans of the World war and of a patriotic and intelligent Americanism. . . An earlier edition of this popularized universal history, in 10 volumes, was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1931 [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The arrangement of the latest edition is similar, volumes 1 and 2 covering ancient history; volumes 3 and 4, medieval and modern history of Europe to the French revolution; volume 5, modern history of the world, exclusive of the United States, through the 19th century; volumes 6-8, United States history; and volumes 9 and 10, history of the World war and postwar period through 1929. Volume 11, covering contemporary history, 1930-38, has been added since the set was last reviewed." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Progress of Nations has little significance as a comprehensive world history for the public or school library. It is reportorial rather than evaluative in treatment and shows little regard for the relative importance of events as indicated by the disproportionate amount of space allotted to the United States and to recent history, especially the World war period. In many respects it is not up to date in spite of the new material. This is shown, for instance, by the fact that the volumes on ancient history have not been revised in accordance with recent important archeological discoveries. The set is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 10:61 O '39 550w

PROKOSCH, FREDERIC. Night of the poor. 359p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Chatto]
39-24223

A seventeen-year-old boy, hitch hiking his way from Wisconsin to Texas, is the central character in this episodic novel. On the way, Tom crosses Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana. Some of the time he is alone; sometimes he has for companions homeless, poverty-stricken wretches. He witnesses poverty, lust, murder, and a lynching, all graphically described.

"Prokosch has taken material which he knows intimately, he has explored it with care and given it shape with a rounded, full-bodied style. But beyond that he has endowed his book with something unusual in the work of our younger American novelists—a lining of imagination and reflection behind the coarse texture of reality. It is an endowment capable, I think, of making interesting whatever it touches." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p4 O 8 '39 1050w

"Mr. Prokosch . . . has written a book which falls squarely between the fantastic and the prosaic. This is a curious and unsatisfactory state of affairs." Mark Schorer
Boston Transcript p2 O 28 '39 700w

Reviewed by L. A. MacKay
Canadian Forum 19:293 D '39 210w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 102:262 D '39 500w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson
New Repub 101:21 N 8 '39 420w

"The treatment of the boy's long drift is poetic; he moves not so much from place to place as from image to image. The uprooting of this callow adolescent brings him the visual experience and spiritual enrichment it might bring to a poet of acute sensibility. As a record of something which happens it is utterly false, but the images are sharp and delightful and the patterning of words is skilful. The book is a pass which will give you entry into the security and comfort of the ivory tower for just as long as you will be content to read and feel, but you will be ejected almost at once if you begin to think." Anthony West
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:524 O 14 '39 330w

"If only for [the author's] acuteness of sensation the book would be outstanding. But in the end it is the writing that tells, a quite marvelous kind of creative writing that says everything newly as it sees it newly. . . Mr. Prokosch has always been the best equipped of the younger American writers, and here he demonstrates what we wanted to know: how well can he write about America? The answer is that he can write well about everything but particularly well about America." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p6 O 15 '39 2000w

"Apart from showing that he has more than one string to his bow, the book does not seem to me successful, despite some beautiful and one or two hair-raising passages. . . Nothing Mr. Prokosch writes can avoid having its special beauty and originality, but I feel this book has simply misfired, as young men's books occasionally will, particularly when the young men are ambitious to demonstrate their versatility. 'Night of the Poor' does not alter my conviction that Mr. Prokosch is one of the most important younger novelists of the land." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 15:76 O 7 '39 200w

"The story . . . might be well adapted to a panorama of the under side of America, but in attempting his new field, Mr. Prokosch seems to have lost his feeling for character without attaining any new grasp of social factors. . . The dream-like can be deeply haunting, as no one has shown better than Mr. Prokosch. . . . But here he has deliberately simplified both his characters and his style, and has lost the reality of a nightmare without attaining that of experience." B. D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:21 O 7 '39 300w

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec 163:556 O 20 '39 500w

"The language of Prokosch's Americans is a salty, sometimes melodious mimicry, but it rings false too often in such mixtures as 'One can't be sure of nothin' . . .' He speaks of 'oil wells burning through the moth-hung night' in Texas, when any Texan could tell him that what characteristically burns at night in Texas is gas, not oil. Through the whole book, despite its fluency and literary skill, runs a vitiating imprecision."
— + Time 34:109 O 16 '39 600w

"The novel has individuality of style and moments of swift illumination. But it is not very satisfying as an imaginative whole. Besides the lack of organic unity, the human and emotional content is thin. Tommy is a rather colourless figure and the others are even more generalized studies."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p579 O 7 '39 550w

PROPPER, MILTON MORRIS. Hide the body! 283p $2 Harper 39-29720

Detective story.

Booklist 36:151 D 15 '39

"If you've read other books by Mr. Propper, you know that Tommy is a thoroughly reliable sleuth with moments of real charm." Will Cuppy
+ Books p22 O 29 '39 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 50w

"Rankin's detective work is excellent, and the story should have been a great deal better than it is if the author had only refrained from telling us all of Tommy's thoughts. A detective has to think, of course, but most readers are more interested in what he does. When set forth with too much detail the mental processes by which he arrives at the correct solution of the mystery are likely to become tiresome." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p20 O 29 '39 170w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 O 28 '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

PROUDFIT, MRS ISABEL. The treasure hunter. 206p il $2.50 Messner
B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis
(W) 39-29413

Full-length biography of Robert Louis Stevenson for young readers. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

PROUDFIT, ISABEL—Continued

"Mrs. Proudfit's Stevenson is no chocolate hero: young readers starting with her book will not have to go through the violent debunking through which my own generation had to pass before it could see Stevenson's character in its real strength. They will have been told enough in the beginning to give them a fair picture of a generous, chivalrous nature and of a hard-working career." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 12 '39 270w

Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 60w

"A highly desirable new biography of Robert Louis Stevenson. . . . This full-length work is . . . one that through its fidelity and good production will permanently place Stevenson in the knowledge of young readers." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:845 N 1 '39 60w

"The events of Stevenson's life are rather superficially told, at times the language appears quite written down, but probably that is intentional as the biography is for that ten- or eleven-year-old who shares the adventures of Jim Hawkins on Treasure Island." J. F. Carter

Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 90w

"Miss Proudfit is at her best when writing of Stevenson's adult years. . . The early chapters are less successful. . . Moreover, it is puzzling to decide for what age Miss Proudfit is writing. The account of Stevenson's childhood is 'written-down,' though this quality is less apparent in the description of his adult years." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 D 31 '39 280w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 20w

PROVINES, MARY VIRGINIA. Bright heritage; decorations by Sherman C. Hoeflich. 261p $2 Longmans

(W) 39-27686

Story for young people about a girl who wanted to become a librarian and of her adventures and experiences in a county library where she took the first steps toward her goal.

Booklist 36:19 S '39

"I do not see how any girl who reads at all sensibly could fail to find this story interesting: it has the attraction of 'behind the scenes' in a national institution and a local center—the American public library." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 12 '39 350w

"A bit on the old-fashioned side, the tale is at all points bright and fresh and should prove stimulating stuff to the right young reader."

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 90w

Christian Century 56:1046 Ag 30 '39 10w

"The work of a typical county library in all its departments is well described and the difference in function between trained and unskilled library help is never forgotten. However, the emphasis is on the little world of the library staff itself. . . Bright Heritage is written breezily and will be read by junior and senior high school girls because it is about contemporary young people and not primarily because it gives information about library work." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 170w

PRUNIER, S. B. Madame Prunier's fish cookery book. See Bouzy, M.

PRYOR, WILLIAM CLAYTON, and PRYOR, MRS HELEN SLOMAN. Let's go to the movies. 183p il $2.50 Harcourt

791.4 Moving pictures (W) 39-24338

Chapters on various steps in the making of good motion pictures of different types: newsreel, feature, story, short subjects, and cartoons. The authors consider the story, direction, actors, photography, costumes, sets and editing.

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg

Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 120w

Reviewed by P. T. Hartung

Commonweal 31:164 D 8 '39 200w

"The Pryors have written and illustrated with photographs a 'must' book for any junior or senior high school where movies are studied or talked about at all seriously." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 150w

"Very stimulating book on the movies. And this is as good a place as any to say that while 'Let's Go to the Movies' was written for those in their middle 'teens there seems to be no reason on earth why adults shouldn't read it carefully too and have their attention called to things about the newsreels, the cartoons, short subjects, documentaries and full-length features which they never noticed before." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p9 N 26 '39 500w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 20:18 O 21 '39 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 250w

PRYOR, WILLIAM CLAYTON, and PRYOR, MRS HELEN SLOMAN. Water—wealth or waste. 242p il $2.50 Harcourt

551 Water—Juvenile literature (W) 39-27152

Study of the importance of water in the economic history of a country, and its effect upon the inhabitants. Partial contents: History's highways; How old is fresh water? Water when you want it; Water is power; Wealth in the water; Water in mining; Water at work; Dirty water; Floods; Flood control; Water makes the farm go. Illustrated with photographs. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 35:237 Mr 15 '39

"Almost every other page is a characteristically striking photograph, and there is a lively, imaginative, and intelligent text as well. . . The Pryors have traveled all over America, have discussed water and weather with all kinds of people, and stamp with approval the governmental agricultural experiments. They do contrive to make a vital but commonplace element a thrilling and interesting thing to think about."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 18 '39 140w

Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 70w

"Information included is much the same as that found in Rogers' Fresh and Briny [Book Review Digest, 1937] but is better organized and more extensive. It describes methods of water supply, both ancient and modern, but in less detail than Pigman's Story of Water [Book Review Digest, 1938]." M. S. Wilkinson

Library J 64:244 Mr 15 '39 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:14 Ja '39

"The book will be useful in schools and libraries, though it would be more so if it had an index. It can be read and used by younger children than Augustus Pigman's more complete and scholarly 'A Story of Water.' The books supplement each other, however, for Mr. Pigman's has emphasized the place of water supply in the whole course of history, while the Pryors in 'Water—Wealth or Waste' are concerned chiefly with the present day." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 14 '39 240w

New Yorker 15:107 My 13 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 320w

Wis Lib Bul 35:71 Ap '39

PUCKLER, CARL ERDMANN, graf von. How strong is Britain? tr. from the German by Edward Fitzgerald. 239p $2.50 Veritas press, inc, 250 W. 57th st, N.Y. [7s 6d Routledge]

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Defenses 40-1511

An analysis "of British power and limitations, by a German who for a number of years was a correspondent in London. . . British industry, agriculture, and shipping, the vast ramifications of British banking, her military strength, strength and weakness of Empire links, problems of population—all these are set down at some length. But of the hopes and fears, the aims and ambitions of the little men, the Mr. Britlings, the drapers' clerks, the men in the City, the slow-tongued folk of the shires, never a word. So far as Count Pückler is concerned, England is populated by robots." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Atlantic Ja '40 140w

Reviewed by R. L. Buell
Books p18 N 19 '39 360w

"It is refreshing to come across a German book which presents a fair and an informed statement on the present position of Britain and the Empire." E. W.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 3 '39 420w

"First of all, it is concerned with Britain and Britain alone. Second of all it was written by a German and originally published in Germany, in full sight of anyone who wanted to look, including Herr Goebbels' G-Men. Third of all and somewhat surprising, it is reasonable and fair. . . The spectacle of Hitler under a halo is not exactly convincing, but that, nevertheless, is the direction in which the new party line of the Nazis is supposed to move—or so it might seem from Count Puckler's book." Norman Cousins
+ — Current Hist 51:4 N '39 280w
Foreign Affairs 18:380 Ja '40 20w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Living Age 357:288 N '39 250w

"Count Pückler's data are accurate and ably presented, and as an interpretative study it is a remarkable achievement." W. H. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 4 '39 340w

"When the translation of this book, published in Germany early this year, appeared in England it was hailed by competent critics as well-balanced, accurate, and objective, and these adjectives are not undeserved. . . There are one or two errors in this book worth correcting. The population of New Zealand is one and a half millions, not half a million as stated; the great new steel works at Corby are not in Lincolnshire but much farther inland in Northamptonshire; London's architecturally undistinguished but busy Stock Exchange is not the same thing as the purely ornamental Royal Exchange." Keith Hutchison
+ — Nation 149:445 O 21 '39 850w
New Repub 101:297 D 27 '39 60w

"Here is a book about Britain, by an author who is both a German and a Nazi, written with such objectivity as to make a reviewer gasp with astonishment. . . Objectivity like that of Count Pückler would be remarkable at any time. In view of the fact that he wrote with full knowledge of the circumstances steadily impelling his country and Britain toward war, the calm with which he views and analyzes the land of Germany's most formidable enemies takes on a positively Olympian quality." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p9 D 10 '39 850w

"Well-written, capable analysis. . . There can be no doubt that the author has been at great pains to present an analysis unbiased by national prejudices. He has succeeded remarkably well so far as material factors are concerned, so much so that one feels, on closing the book, a distinct let-down at his failure to analyze the man behind the gun." R. E. Dupuy
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 O 28 '39 550w

" 'The mystic idea that Britain's might is something supernatural is just as baseless as the idea that it is in a chronic state of collapse. . .' It is not necessary to believe that Britain's might is supernatural in order to think that it is very considerable, and this quotation sets the tone of the objective, dispassionate, well-balanced and closely-reasoned inquiry which the author very intelligently pursues." W. T. Wells
+ Spec 162:963 Je 2 '39 2000w

"At a time when ill-natured books are being written about Britain by American and even by English writers, this German journalist's study, even if debatable in parts and not entirely dissociated from German nationalism, is a model for discussion both in method and in temper. The haste of the translation is acknowledged in a note."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 650w

"Count Pückler's appraisement of the strength of Britain is marked by the painstaking marshalling and sifting of relevant material so characteristic of his race. It is not free from 'wishful thinking,' but, on the other hand, there is no rash under-estimating of British economic, financial and military power."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p322 Je 3 '39 450w

PULESTON, DENNIS. Blue water vagabond; six years' adventure at sea. 352p il map $3 Doubleday

910.4 Voyages and travels. Adventure and adventurers (W) 39-27405

At twenty-one the author gave up his job in an English bank, bought the yawl Uldra, and with one companion set out on six years of water-vagabonding. Part of the time he sailed with the Fahnestocks on their yacht, the Director. His trips covered sections of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, sometimes he stayed on land a while to earn money for further adventuring. His chronicle closes with his return to England via China, Russia, and Holland.

Booklist 35:305 My 15 '39

"His book stands sturdily on its own feet as one of the most attractive and enjoyable books of its kind."
+ Books p13 Je 4 '39 250w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 310w

"This is one of the most likable of all the recent boys-at-sea books. It is peopled with modest, genial, gay and sportsmanlike characters, and it offers a particularly capacious collection of diverse scenes and incidents."
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 9 '39 330w

"This is a book to excite the land-locked dreams of all who love far ports and gallant voyages." H. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 8 '39 280w

"Mr. Puleston's narrative is filled with colour and atmosphere, and many sailing folk may be inspired by its pages, and the beckoning names which fill them, to resolve on following his track when cruising is once more a practical proposition."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p580 O 7 '39 700w

PULESTON, WILLIAM DILWORTH. Mahan: the life and work of Captain Alfred Thayer Mahan. 380p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Mahan, Alfred Thayer 39-10963

"The purpose of this biography is to depict Alfred Thayer Mahan, as a boy and a man, as a naval officer and a writer, as the exponent of sea power and the apostle of expansion; to show how heredity and environment combined to shape his talent and to reveal the full extent of his own influence on history. An Englishman, Carlisle Taylor, wrote the first biography of Mahan, to record his appreciation of the service Mahan had rendered to the British people. My book is undertaken in the conviction that there is room for another account of Mahan which will demonstrate that his message was primarily intended for the American people and that his thesis is as vital to the United States today as it was to Great Britain when it was written almost a half century ago." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

PULESTON, W. D.—Continued

Reviewed by J. W. Pratt
Am Hist R 45:422 Ja '40 600w

"Captain Puleston's biography of this famous man is unquestionably a work of great importance both to historians and to political scientists. By long and painstaking research in Mahan's private papers and other unpublished sources, he not only has recreated a living figure, but has added many new details to our knowledge of the politics of American naval development and foreign policy during the critical years at the turn of the century." H. H. Sprout
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:907 O '39 500w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Atlantic Je '39 600w
Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Captain Puleston, a former director of Naval Intelligence, has here laid a painstaking and pious (though not wholly uncritical) wreath upon the memory of the patron saint of modern navalism. I fear that Captain Puleston's prose style, as some one said of Mahan's, 'has neither charm nor seduction.' But it is very far from meriting another comment on the Mahan prose, by the French Admiral Castex, that it would be 'deplorable in any language'; it is based on a solid job of research; and the book will be, I think, of absorbing interest to any one seriously concerned with the role of naval power and navalism in the contemporary world." Walter Millis
+ — Books p3 Ap 30 '39 2000w
Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 410w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 56:951 Ag 2 '39 850w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 21 '39 850w
Foreign Affairs 17:811 Jl '39 60w
Manchester Guardian p5 D 19 '39 280w

Reviewed by Jonathan Griffin
Nation 148:618 My 27 '39 750w

"Since the death of Admiral Mahan we have waited nearly a quarter of a century for an adequate, definitive American biography of this great historian, and now we have it. This is a satisfactory book, doing full justice to its subject, interesting, readable, and well balanced. It is well that the author is a naval officer, familiar with the environment and in sympathy with his hero's points of view." G. W. Allen
+ New Eng Q 12:577 S '39 1000w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard & Alfred Vagts
New Repub 99:221 Je 28 '39 1550w

"Mahan, scholarly, pious, reserved historian; Mahan, apostle of expansion, admirer of Britain; Mahan, interpreter of the past, prophet of the future, lives again in the pages of Captain Puleston's admirable work. The author is well suited for a sympathetic approach to his subject. A student of warfare on land and sea, a writer of experience and former director of the Office of Naval Intelligence, Captain Puleston has lived with the works of Mahan for years and brings to his task not only a warm appreciation of Mahan's writings, but also an understanding of the difficulties of properly interpreting them." H. W. Baldwin
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 30 '39 1300w
New Yorker 15:91 My 6 '39 60w

"It's a good yarn, well spun, of a man whose stature increases as the years go by. Good reading by itself, it is in addition a splendid complement to Harold and Margaret Sprout's recent 'Rise of American Naval Power.'" R. E. Dupuy
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 My 6 '39 800w

Reviewed by H. P. Beers
Social Studies 31:38 Ja '40 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p700 D 2 '39 2150w

Reviewed by E. A. Falk
Yale R n s 29:204 autumn '39 1000w

PUMPHREY, MARGARET BLANCHE. Under three flags; il. by Hilda Preibisius. 293p map $3 Caxton printers

979.498 San Diego, California—Juvenile literature 39-23554

The history of San Diego under three flags—the Spanish, the Mexican, and the American. Written for young readers. Glossary.

"Produced primarily for the juvenile trade, this is nevertheless a book which can inform and interest the average adult."
+ Canadian Forum 19:231 O '39 150w

"One misses the simplicity of her early Pilgrim Stories but this book of California is a far more ambitious undertaking; it has been written for older children and it covers a part of the United States on which little has been written for young people. Discriminating teachers will be reading it aloud and recommending chapters of it for a long time to come." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 64:873 N 1 '39 100w

PURCELL, VICTOR WILLIAM WILLIAMS SAUNDERS. Chinese evergreen. 287p $3 Dutton [10s 6d Joseph, M]

915.1 China—Description and travel [38-17233]

The author has lived in the Far East for many years, knows the Chinese language, and has worked in the educational field teaching the English language to Chinese in Malaya. His book, a volume of informal travel essays, is woven on the thread of a two-thousand mile journey thru China in war time, but while the war is not neglected, the age-old characteristics of the Chinese people, bits of their philosophy and comments on their literature, anecdotes and descriptive passages make up the body of the book.

" 'Chinese Evergreen' is a highly individual and very interesting book, not easy to classify. It is the narrative of a wartime journey, but war itself remains largely in the background. It can be called a 'travel book,' but its really rewarding quality goes far beyond the record of travel. It is written by a friend of the Chinese people and of Chinese culture, but it is not a book of indiscriminate admiration."
+ Books p20 Ap 30 '39 400w

"Mr. Purcell writes well and amusingly, but he also possesses what the Chinese call p'i-ch'i, and one feels all the time that he was finding the interior of China very unlike a British colony. There is in his book an undertone of exasperation, which is a pity and is apt to detract from the value of the comments of an acute observer." E. W. M.
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 30 '38 330w

"Unfortunately the author describes his journey in too much detail, and we grow tired of drifting along with him and his friends through the hot sun. But if we have patience we are left with an impression of the Chinese that is probably all the truer for not being too sharply generalised."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 15:928 My 28 '38 200w

" 'Chinese Evergreen' is an unusual book, suggestive rather than dogmatic, very human, very interesting. The author has his full share of quiet humor." K. W.
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 26 '39 700w

Reviewed by G. E. Hubbard
Spec 161:239 Ag 5 '38 180w

"In a period when the fashion for books on China favours those which are sentimental, 'colourful' or political, it is refreshing to come upon an attempt at the 'illumination of the Chinese ethos' full of the tolerant common sense and balance of an intelligent and well-read man whose observations are backed not only by natural shrewdness but by the daily experiences of the last seventeen years."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p300 Ap 30 '38 750w

PURDON, ERIC. The Valley of the larks; il. by Graham Peck. 134p $1.75 Farrar

Children in Mongolia 39-30538

Inner Mongolia is the scene of this story for young readers, in which a young girl is able to render a service to a high priest of Buddha, who has been captured by brigands.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p30 N 12 '39 300w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 20w

"Eric Purdon has visited unknown reaches of China and his account is very vivid of the tribes assembling with their flocks and camels to set up their yurts for the Summer Festival, where the Dalai Lama from Thibet will give his blessing. . . A good yarn. Good too are the drawings by Graham Peck."
+ Cath World 150:378 D '39 60w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:842 N 1 '39 70w

PUSHEE, RUTH. Music in the religious service. 91p $1 Revell

783 Church music 38-19912

After two preliminary chapters—on Hebrew music and the religious music of ancient Greece and Rome—this small volume traces the history of church music thru the centuries down to the present day. Bibliography.

"This little book is an excellent summary for those who desire to have the entire topic—both the history and the theory of church music—covered briefly but comprehensively. It is commended to the busy clergyman who may wish to give a talk on the topic, though the more thorough student will desire a more comprehensive knowledge than this book could be expected to provide." W. L. C.
+ Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 170w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 24 '38 480w

PUTNAM, BRENDA. The sculptor's way; a guide to modelling and sculpture. 357p il $7.50 Farrar

731 Sculpture. Modeling (W) 39-15823

Textbook for students of sculpture, about one-third of which is devoted to a study of anatomy for artists. Suggestions for the beginner are given first, then the making of reliefs, busts, and statues is described. In the chapter on casting in plaster the author tells just where the inexperienced person is apt to make mistakes. The chapter on ceramics is by Carl Walters; wood carving is by Gleb Derujinsky; casting in bronze, by Anton Basky; and cutting marble and stone by Robert A. Baillie. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Brenda Putnam has been successful in organizing this information in such a way as to make the work at once useful and readable. . . Throughout this course of instruction a clear, well ordered and precise text is illuminated by a sustained enthusiasm. . . The value of this book, which will be real and permanent, may be summed up in an excellent phrase found at the bottom of page four: There is no better way to spread the understanding of an art than by showing the layman how it is done." Joseph Hudnut
+ Books p8 Jl 9 '39 850w

Reviewed by George Swarzenski
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 29 '39 420w

"Books on art by good sculptors are few and this one, written by Brenda Putnam, a member of the National Academy of Design and the National Sculpture Society, is very welcome. . . I feel that the book should have been published in two volumes, for there will be many art students not interested in modeling who will want to study this anatomy section just because it is so good, and there will be sculptors who will want to keep this part constantly with them and not want to carry about so heavy a book as this one." M. A. Ryerson
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 9 '39 480w
Pratt p14 winter '40
Wis Lib Bul 35:184 N '39

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Soaring wings; a biography of Amelia Earhart. 294p il $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Earhart, Amelia (Mrs George Palmer Putnam) (W) 39-27687

The story of Amelia Earhart's life told by her husband. While the emphasis of the book is upon her achievements in aviation, her other interests are also described—her writing, social work, and her talent for friendship.

Booklist 36:7 S '39

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Books p5 Ag 13 '39 950w

"Mr. Putnam has performed a difficult and delicate task of authorship with admirable taste and has given a convincing portrait of a strong and beautiful character."
+ Christian Century 56:1025 Ag 23 '39 260w

"Because she was a public person, her husband believes that the public is entitled to know what sort of person she was at heart and in her private life, and has told her story with affection and much charm." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 15 '39 600w

Reviewed by P. H. Williams
Commonweal 30:462 S 8 '39 420w

"The chief facts of her life are already known; some of the important material used here has already been published in her own words; this biography is informal, and all the better for that. Mr. Putnam's book has the double value of giving his readers the record of her life as a whole and the feeling of her spirit. She lives for us in these pages; gallant, independent, and sensitive, eager, thoughtful and gay. Not even in its ending can this be a sad story. On the contrary, it is full of courage, as it is full of determination." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p1 Ag 13 '39 1350w

"On the whole Mr. Putnam's biography of his wife is dull. For one thing, Mr. Putnam writes dully; for another, Amelia Earhart was so completely extraverted, her desires were so readily translated into action, that she was not an 'interesting' human being."
New Yorker 15:55 Ag 12 '39 50w
Pratt p21 winter '40

" 'Soaring Wings' is happily not a conventional biography. Very simply and unsentimentally Mr. Putnam tells enough of her early life and ancestry to place her for the unusual life that was to be hers." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Ag 12 '39 370w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 19 '39 750w
Time 34:67 Ag 14 '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 35:166 O '39

PUTNAM, HAROLD, ed. Dartmouth book of winter sports. See Dartmouth college. Dartmouth outing club

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. The dragon's teeth. 325p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Gollancz]

39-25144

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 S 24 '39 200w

QUEEN, ELLERY—Continued
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 S 30 '39 60w
Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian sup xiv D 1 '39 100w
Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:728 N 18 '39 150w
Reviewed by Kay Irvin
N Y Times p22 O 1 '39 130w

"Expertly told, and recommended without a qualm."
+ New Yorker 15:72 S 30 '39 40w
Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 30 '39 30w

"Some readers may sigh for a return to the formula of the earlier Queens with their 'challenges' and more orthodox methods of investigation, but, as compensation, Ellery has dropped his more irritating mannerisms."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p611 O 21 '39 150w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. New adventures. 307p $2 Stokes

40-27050

One short novel and eight stories about Ellery Queen. Four of the stories are sports mysteries.

Booklist 36:215 F 1 '40

"The briefer puzzles are mostly on the gay and playful side. The whole thing, we guess, is an Ellery Queen lark." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 D 31 '39 140w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 70w

"As puzzle-makers, the two men who write under the name of Ellery Queen have few equals." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 7 '40 110w

"All as good as they come. Those who missed them when they appeared in the magazines have another chance at them. Two long evenings of excitement, even if you take pride in how fast you read."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 6 '40 50w

"Clever no end."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:24 D 30 '39 40w
Time 35:68 F 5 '40 30w

QUEEN, STUART ALFRED, and THOMAS, LEWIS FRANCIS. The city; a study of urbanism in the United States. 500p maps $4 (24s) McGraw

323.352 Cities and towns—U.S. Sociology
39-4366

"This is an attempt to present methods of studying cities together with some of the findings now available, especially as they pertain to cities of the United States." (Pref) The book is in five parts: The rise of cities and of urbanism; Urban institutions and folkways; Distributive and selective aspects of the city; People in the city; Prediction and control. Index.

"Designed for textbook use, this volume answers its purpose very well. It is clear and well organized, it stresses factual data, and is comprehensive in scope. In style, however, it has too much of the school-room atmosphere—'having considered this . . . we turn now to . . .' It is not exciting reading." M. R. Davie
+ — Ann Am Acad 204:224 Jl '39 310w

"In its delineation of the field, its careful analyses of urban patterns, and its tempered criticism of assumptions and hasty conclusions, the volume makes a distinct contribution to the understanding of urbanism." C. E. Dent
+ Social Forces 18:140 O '39 400w
Reviewed by Carol Aronovici
Survey 75:263 Ag '39 260w

QUENTIN, PATRICK, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

QUIGLEY, HAROLD SCOTT, and BLAKESLEE, GEORGE HUBBARD. The Far East; an international survey. 353p maps $2.50; pa 75c World peace

950 Eastern question (Far East) 38-23716

"In accordance with the World Peace foundation's belief that the best approach to world peace is first of all to dissipate ignorance and prejudice concerning problems which stand in its way, the volume gives a factual summary of the recent background of international affairs in the Far East, stressing the origins of the Sino-Japanese conflict. It is a 'revision and continuation' of an earlier work [Pacific Area] by Prof Blakeslee, written about a decade ago [Book Review Digest, 1930] and now brought down to July, 1937, by Prof Quigley." Springf'd Republican

---

"Professor Quigley has ably collected and digested the enormous mass of materials on the Far East which has appeared in the last eight years. The book has admirably attained the objective which Professor Blakeslee made for it, 'to serve as a reliable guide for those who seek to find their way through the complicated maze of Far Eastern politics.'" William Ballis
+ Am J Soc 44:772 Mr '39 160w

"Within the space at his disposal, Professor Quigley has given an adequate and intelligible sketch of the Manchurian story, with its background and its repercussions upon relations among the several interested powers. . . . A wealth of bibliographical material, in the footnotes, opens almost unlimited vistas for further study in all these fields." G. N. Steiger
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:340 Ap '39 280w
Booklist 35:67 O 15 '38
Churchman 153:19 Ja 1 '39 130w
Foreign Affairs 17:449 Ja '39 10w

"One or two errors of detail may be pointed out. The chapter on autonomy movements is confusing because of wrong dates given for the formation of the East Hopei Anti-Communist Autonomous Government . . . and of the Hopei-Chahar Political Council. . . . The general associated with Chang Hsueh-liang at Sian was Yang Hu-Cheng, not 'Yang Fu-cheng.' And on p. 29 we read that 'Soviet-Japanese relations in Manchuria fluctuated between war and close military alliance.' The latter condition refers obviously only to Tsarist Russia, in regard to the 1907-16 treaties with Japan. These suggested criticisms detract little from the timely value of Professor Quigley's work. His book is at once an interesting and lucid introduction to modern Far Eastern relations, and a handy reference book for Far Eastern studies, especially on account of the admirable selection of 60 pages of source material in the appendices." I. F. G. Milner
+ — Pacific Affairs 12:224 Je '39 750w

"This volume stops short of the current conflict in China. In confining itself to the background of that conflict, however, it gives a thoroughgoing analysis of the questions at issue, with copious references to the negotiations which have taken place, and with emphasis upon the economic conditions which are, after all, at the bottom of Japan's eagerness to control or at least to divide and nullify the power of China. The status not only of the two nations chiefly involved, but also of Russia and of the various European nations which have more or less important interests in the Far East, is clearly set forth."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 18 '39 700w

QUINTANILLA, LUIS, il. All the brave. [91p] pa 95c Modern age

741 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939—Pictorial works 39-27390

Drawings of the Spanish civil war, with preface by Ernest Hemingway and text comment by Jay Allen and Elliot Paul.

Booklist 35:309 My 15 '39

"The drawings are done in a low key, with deep feeling and great technical skill, as though one were stating facts of shattering importance in a clearly articulated whisper. Let there be no mistake about this being an important art book, even if its price is only 95 cents."

+ Christian Century 56:547 Ap 26 '39 130w

Churchman 153:35 S 1 '39 30w

Foreign Affairs 17:816 Jl '39 20w

Reviewed by Ruth Pielkova

Nation 149:224 Ag 26 '39 600w

"'As for the comparison with Goya, it is inevitable,' Jay Allen writes, 'but it is here, in the pictures; it does not have to be made.' And it is the very heart and poignancy of that comparison that as you look at these drawings you are not thinking of Goya. You are not thinking of the Napoleonic invasion. You are not thinking of anything but the pity and terror and desperation that is here, and of the final tragedy. This is not a book where, in text or pictures, a reviewer can point to 'balance and restraint,' or praise 'design and beauty.' Its subject has no balance or restraint or design or beauty. This is what happened to Spain. This is totalitarian war and its triumph." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 30 '39 450w

"No one else since Goya, perhaps, has portrayed the savage destructiveness of warfare with such bitter vividness—and even Goya didn't have the mass bombings of totalitarian war to work with. A memorable book."

+ New Yorker 15:96 My 20 '39 50w

"The drawings are superb, the reproduction adequate. Quintanilla's work, savage, ironic, tender, infinitely delicate, is the pictorial analogue of the war-poems of Villa Moreno and Rafael Alberti. . . They are their own voice of accusation and warning for us all." D. F.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Je 10 '39 120w

R

RADER, MELVIN MILLER. No compromise; the conflict between two worlds. 403p $3.50 Macmillan

335.6 Fascism 39-16617

Roused by Mussolini's statement: "The struggle between two worlds [Democracy and Fascism] can permit no compromise," a professor of philosophy at the University of Washington here gives his answer to that challenge. He discusses Fascism, traces the background of Fascist thought, studies its motives and actual workings, and describes the nature of the future clash between Democracy and Fascism. Index.

Reviewed by F. M. Marx

Ann Am Acad 205:173 S '39 500w

Reviewed by E. S. Bates

Books p22 N 5 '39 600w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 40w

Reviewed by R. M. Schramm

Christian Century 56:1208 O 4 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:v S '39 170w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Living Age 357:495 Ja '40 400w

Reviewed by Christopher Janus

N Y Times p3 Jl 16 '39 1050w

"Those not now hostile to fascism, those who desire to intensify their present hostility, and those who want to know what fascism means both practically and theoretically, cannot afford to miss this brilliant attack. Some readers may write it off as another example of crisis literature, though even they will concede its superiority in philosophic insight and intellectual power." R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 15 '39 350w

Sat R of Lit 20:9 Ag 5 '39 220w (Discussion)

"I know of no other work in which point for point fascist theory is confronted with democratic tenets. This precise juxtaposing of one view against the other gives the reader of Rader's book a profound sense of the truth of Mussolini's statement: there can be 'no compromise' between these two ways of life." E. N. Anderson

+ Social Educ 4:68 Ja '40 350w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 1 '39 700w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 28:633 O '39 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 200w

RADHAKRISHNAN, SIR SARVEPALLI, ed. Mahatma Gandhi; essays and reflections on his life and work: presented to him on his seventieth birthday, Oct. 2, 1939. 382p il $2.75 Macmillan [7s 6d; pa 5s Allen, G]

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand

Among the many contributors to this volume are: C. F. Andrews, Laurence Binyon, Pearl S. Buck, Albert Einstein, John Haynes Holmes, Laurence Housman, C. E. M. Joad, Rufus M. Jones, Yone Noguchi, Romain Rolland, Maude Royden, Sir Francis Younghusband, Arnold Zweig. An appendix contains some extracts from Gandhi's writings and speeches.

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 25 '39 120w

Reviewed by J. T. Gwynn

Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p589 O 14 '39 550w

RADIN, MAX. Manners and morals of business. 270p $2.50 Bobbs

658.09 Business. Business ethics 39-32427

"An anthropologist's view of the root forms of modern business. The second half of the book argues that historically laissez faire was merely an interlude of parole from government regulation and that businessmen had better make up their minds to it." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Kennedy

Nation 149:684 D 16 '39 420w

"An original and readable job."

+ New Yorker 15:118 D 2 '39 40w

"Professor Radin, who has written standard texts on Roman and Greek law and who is widely informed about various phases of ancient and medieval life, has chosen the historical approach to modern business, with results that are not too happy. . . However ineffective Mr. Radin's history may be as a springboard for landing us in the middle of the modern scene, it is interesting in itself and will repay the reader's attention. Some of the comments are highly illuminating and the pervading tone of protest against cruelty, rapacity, and deceit in business life gives the book a peculiar interest." Palmer Harman

— + Sat R of Lit 21:16 F 3 '40 650w

RADIN, MAX. Marcus Brutus. 238p $2.75 Oxford

B or 92 Brutus, Marcus Junius. Rome—History—Republic, B.C. 510-30 39-32964

An attempt to reconstruct the life story of Marcus Junius Brutus, supposed leader of the conspiracy against Julius Caesar. The work is based upon all available evidence, from which the author, an authority on this period of history, has analyzed the character of Brutus.

RADIN, MAX—Continued

"Dr. Radin has produced a lively and interesting study of 'an incurably cleft soul,' of a personality torn by inner contradictions. An index and annotations would have added to the usefulness of the book." H. J. Haskell

+ — Books p3 D 24 '39 900w

"Witty and scholarly."

+ New Repub 102:125 Ja 22 '40 60w

"Mr. Radin gives too much space to the historical events of Brutus's life, and not nearly enough to his character. There is no index, no bibliography, and no explicit discussion of disputed points. Therefore we are reduced to reading Mr. Radin's version of a highly controversial biography with inadequate psychological analysis hidden under superfluous chronological detail. And there is a kind of superficiality about the whole book which is beneath the dignity of its subject." Gilbert Highet

— + N Y Times p12 Ja 21 '40 900w

"The picture of Brutus [is] a fine one, and as near as we can know, a true one." F. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 30 '39 260w

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. The River Bend feud. 259p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder] 39-23191

Western story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"A first-class Western novel, distinctive in setting and characterization and filled with the zip and zest that mark his best work." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p30 O 29 '39 210w

Wis Lib Bul 35:187 N '39

RAISZ, ERWIN JOSEPHUS. General cartography. 370p il maps $4 (24s) McGraw

526.98 Cartography 39-27007

This textbook on cartography for American college students of geography is divided into two main divisions. Part one, General Cartography, contains materials on the history of maps, scales and projections, representation of the earth's surface (i.e. symbols, relief features and contour lines), lettering, composition, and drafting. Part two, Special Maps, is in four sections: Official and professional maps; Diagrams, statistical maps, and cartograms; Science maps and diagrams; Globes, models, field sketching, and cataloguing. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:185 F 1 '39

Eng N 123:58 O 26 '39 140w

Reviewed by W. L. G. Joerg

Geog R 29:699 O '39 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:4 Ja '39

RAMASWAMY, M. The law of the Indian constitution. 450p $8.40 (21s) Longmans

342.54 India. Constitution 39-21283

"A legal and constitutional interpretation of the Government of India Act of 1935." Foreign Affairs

"We possess [here] not merely an adequate discussion of Indian constitutional law, but also suggestive contributions to comparative law. The treatise ought to be read by everyone interested in a momentous constitutional experiment, and we offer our sincerest congratulations to a wise judicial and clear-thinking Indian scholar." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Ann Am Acad 202:218 Mr '39 450w

Foreign Affairs 17:447 Ja '39 10w

"Save for a brief history of English rule in India and a plea for Dominion status, Mr. Ramaswamy confines himself to exegesis of the Government of India Act of 1935, marked by a dry legalism and the examination of cases in Canada, Australia, and the United States arising under similar constitutional provisions. Such comparisons could be suggestive. Unfortunately, Mr. Ramaswamy does not always grasp the foreign situation in adequate detail: American lawyers, for example, will find oversimple his discussion of the government instrumentality doctrine. . . [However] Mr. Ramaswamy's treatise provides a useful history, a carefully cross-referenced summary, and a starting point for interpretation of the Act." D. R.

+ — Harvard Law R 52:348 D '38 260w

RAME, DAVID, pseud. See Divine, A. D.

RAMOS, ARTHUR. The Negro in Brazil; tr. from the Portuguese by Richard Pattee. 203p $2 Associated pubs.

325.26 Negroes in Brazil 39-8099

"Brazil has a larger Negro element than any other country in Latin America. The policy of segregation has not been practiced. The author is regarded as the leading Brazilian authority in this field of social study. The book has not been published in Portuguese but was written to be translated." Christian Century

Christian Century 56:516 Ap 19 '39 60w

"Apart from translator's faults, the book leans heavily toward the merit side. It gives readers an opportunity to compare the South and North American brands of slavery both as an accepted and a waning institution. . . The author's attitude is strictly objective. He does not attempt to 'sell' the Brazilian method of race adjustment. He simply describes it. Apparently, to please the reader who prefers information to propaganda. He hits his mark." Theophilus Lewis

+ Commonweal 30:134 My 26 '39 370w

RAMSAY, JOHN. American potters and pottery. 304p il $3.75 Hale

738 Pottery (W) 39-18186

A book for the collector of pottery. The work is in four parts, the first three containing definitions and technical notes and an historical account of pottery and potteries in America. Part four contains check lists of pottery types, potters and potteries, and a list of pottery marks. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:107 N 15 '39

N Y New Tech Bks 23:45 Jl '39

"Mr. Ramsay's book on American potters and pottery is essentially a book for collectors. Its purpose is not to be readable and historically suggestive or picturesque, but to be authoritative and as comprehensive as possible; and this purpose it admirably attains. . . But Mr Ramsay . . . writes wtih clarity and enthusiasm; and now and then, too, he enlivens his pages further with an entertaining 'news item.' . . All this really goes to say that American pottery is a very interesting subject if it is treated interestingly, as it is here."

+ N Y Times p11 S 10 '39 500w

Pratt p14 winter '40

RAMSEY, FREDERIC, and SMITH, CHARLES EDWARD, eds. Jazzmen. 360p il $2.75 Harcourt

780.973 Jazz music. Musicians (W) 39-31807

An informal history of jazz music presented largely in terms of the men who have played it from the late 1890s to the present. The various chapters are written by a number of contributors who base their work on personal interviews with the practitioners and followers of the art. Index.

"In 'Jazzmen' are to be found as discriminating and lyrical a set of individual literary contributions as a popular art has ever inspired." Tom Parshley

+ Books p12 O 22 '39 400w

"The whole book should be fascinating to anyone who has even dabbled in jazz. To the uninitiated it will be an exciting, dramatic, though sometimes bewildering story." Roy Lamson, Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 600w
Christian Century 56:1212 O 4 '39 70w
New Repub 100:350 O 25 '39 40w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman
N Y Times p29 N 5 '39 700w

" 'Jazzmen' shares the bane of most anthologies—unevenness. Unquestionably its most successful section is the first hundred pages, devoted to New Orleans. . . This section arouses an anticipation that is not fulfilled by the rest of the book." Irving Kolodin

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:33 O 14 '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 1 '39 750w

RAMSEY, MRS GRACE (FISHER). Educational work in museums of the United States; development, methods and trends. 289p $2.50 Wilson, H.W.

069.1 Museums 38-29030

"A survey of the educational work of some museums in the United States, showing the early development, methods used, and trends followed to the present day. Chapters on teacher training in museums, educational activities with school classes, with handicapped children, and with individual children, museums and the radio, museum field trips, and extension work. Based on accumulated data and personal interviews. Bibliography: p.255-69; list of museums studied." Booklist

Booklist 35:151 Ja 1 '39

"A book of this character is likely to become a handbook of museum instructors in every part of the English-speaking world. It contains a great deal more than an impersonal and scholarly survey of activities in American museums. The lifetime experience of a distinguished teacher in one of our greatest and most forward-looking museums is to be found in its pages. The educational philosophy set forth gains weight by its pragmatic and cautious character." T. R. Adam

+ Library Q 9:232 Ap '39 380w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:10 Ja '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:138 Jl '39

RAND MCNALLY AND COMPANY. Standard atlas of the world. 382p il maps $3; 20 per cent discount to libraries and schools c1938 Rand McNally

912 Atlases

"[This atlas] contains 16 pages of small historical maps, 94 pages of political maps of the United States, and 70 pages of political maps of foreign countries. All are in two colors except a few of the historical maps which appear in full color. Elevation is indicated by hachuring, except in the case of South America and Australia. . . The indexes for the states of the United States include towns and cities of 1,000 or more population. Population statistics often differ from those of the official 1930 census but are said to represent 'latest census figures.' A general index of about 4,500 foreign cities gives population figures which appear to have been drawn from official sources though not always the latest obtainable. Pronunciation of about 3,200 geographical names is indicated in a 'Pronouncing gazetteer' of principal world places." Subscription Bks Bul

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 3 '39 80w
Pratt p24 spring '39

"The handy size of this atlas, which enables it to fit in the ordinary bookshelf, makes it especially suitable for the home library or for circulating purposes in the public library."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:34 Jl '39 360w
Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

RANDALL, JEAN. Priscilla won't. 251p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-31682

When young Priscilla Martin married Bill Richardson, instead of the artist or novelist her father and mother would have preferred, she supposed she was following common sense in picking out a business man. But Bill was irresponsible and unbusinesslike and Priscilla had many hard times before things finally were straightened out.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p19 N 5 '39 100w
Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 130w

"Writers of light fiction can improve their writing. Jean Randall is a living proof. And not only her style but her stories improve. This one is better in every way than her previous flights of fancy. She is beginning to penetrate into her characters, so that the reader knows a little more about them than that they look well in blue, and the plot makes a moderate amount of sense." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 N 5 '39 200w

RANGANATHAN, SHIYALI RAMAMRITA. Theory of library catalogue; with a foreword by S. E. Runganadhan. 393p il 10s 6d Madras lib. assn, Univ. lib, Triplicane, Madras, India; Goldston, E. [English publication]

025.3 Cataloging [39-8602]

"In this book, the author examines the theoretical foundations of cataloguing practice, and formulates the principles which should underlie the preparation of a library catalogue. After a careful and critical appraisal of the merits of different types of catalogues, he comes to the conclusion that the classified catalogue, though its arrangement may seem somewhat elaborate and complicated to the general reader, is the most efficient means of enabling him to get at the book or books dealing with the subject in which he seeks information, and that it most nearly fulfils the canons of library science." (Foreword) The author is librarian of the Madras University library. Index.

"This is a case study which all catalogers will find stimulating, thought provoking, exasperating, and amusing. It is the latest work of the most analytical mind writing today on the subject of library techniques. Mr. Ranganathan is a psychologist, a philosopher, a mathematician and scholar, and finally the Librarian of the Madras University Library." B. H. Holt

+ — Library J 64:278 Ap 1 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Fremont Rider
Library Q 9:358 Jl '39 900w

RANKIN, ROBERT STANLEY. When civil law fails; martial law and its legal basis in the United States. 224p $3 Duke univ. [15s Cambridge]

344 Martial law 39-16186

"The use of force in a democratic state raises a number of important and perplexing questions in a day in which the philosophy of force is at high tide and the limitations and self-discipline required by a government of law become extremely irksome to many. When, if ever, is martial law justifiable in a democracy? To what extent should it be employed, if its exercise under certain conditions is admitted? And what measures should be adopted to safeguard its use, if and when it is employed? These are some of the questions considered in a book in which Professor Rankin examines the subject of martial law and its legal basis in the United States as defined and outlined by both federal and state courts." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by F. R. Aumann
Am Pol Sci R 33:1095 D '39 700w

RANKIN, R. S.—Continued

"At first blush this volume encourages one to believe that the author has made a real contribution to the literature of the subject by including in his discussion a considerable quantity of extra-legal material to show the background out of which martial-law cases arise. But a careful rereading necessitates the conclusion that this is an unusually poor book." F. B. Wiener

— + Harvard Law R 53:356 D '39 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 20 '39 220w

RANSOME, STEPHEN. Death checks in. 268p $2 Doubleday

39-8475

Detective story.

"This tale seems insufficiently baked. Omission of sickening details might have helped." Will Cuppy

— Books p21 Mr 12 '39 130w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 18:96 Jl 15 '39 70w

"The book has not much to recommend it, but offers a lot of wild action and some suspense." Kay Irvin

— + N Y Times p18 Mr 12 '39 120w

"Ultra-staccato and extra-gory opus with thrills to burn, a tangled romance, and surprising dénouement. Hair-raiser."

Sat R of Lit 19:16 Mr 18 '39 40w

RANSOME, STEPHEN. A shroud for Shylock. 271p $2 Doubleday

39-31410

Detective story.

"The narrative may not be a faultless masterpiece, but it's full of surprises and keeps you reading from chapter to chapter. It's an improvement, too, on Mr. Ransome's 'Death Checks In.'" Will Cuppy

+ — Books p36 N 12 '39 200w

"Passably good." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 O 29 '39 200w

New Yorker 15:84 O 28 '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 21 '39 40w

RAPHAELSON, SAMSON. Skylark. 225p $2 Knopf

(W) 39-20162

Tony Kenyon, a successful advertising man, and his charming wife had managed to keep business and pleasure in separate grooves for ten years of a happy married life. The morning after their tenth anniversary the trouble began, and Tony found himself facing divorce. Bitter weeks of unhappiness followed until, in one final gesture, Tony gave up his job to keep his wife and his self respect.

" 'Skylark' is brittle and ironic with dialogue as bright and hard as enamel. It contains some neat thrusts at the advertising business, and people you didn't expect to meet—and never will outside its covers." George Conrad

Books p6 Jl 9 '39 420w

New Repub 100:28 Ag 9 '39 40w

"This novel by the author of 'Accent on Youth' is a clever story of New York jitters—amusing, up-to-the-minute, smart and at times stirring. . . Its dialogue is crisp and wisecracking, some of it hilariously funny. And if as superior light fiction it has a fault, it is that toward the finish it goes perhaps a shade too clever. Anyway, anybody who has ever been in the advertising business, or has observed the effect of advertising on the people who are embroiled in it, will not want to miss this pithy sample of advertising psychology." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 9 '39 410w

"Perfectly readable and even clever in spots."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Jl 8 '39 40w

"[The author] is a clever playwright who was once, among other things, vice-president of an advertising agency. He writes his first novel very much in the crisp and condensed fashion demanded by a good light play. . . Mr. Raphaelson writes with great economy and pace, and his dialogue is natural and often amusing. The Kenyons are real people." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Jl 8 '39 220w

"This is Mr Raphaelson's first novel, and it is a briskly written story, none the less interesting because it reads somewhat like a play. . . His dialog in 'Skylark' is crisp and his characterizations well-defined, even if the sequence of events seems rather improbable."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 30 '39 490w

Time 34:71 Jl 17 '39 160w

RAPHAELSON, SAMSON. Skylark [a new comedy in three acts; phot. by Valente]. 196p $2 Random house

812

Play adapted from the author's novel of the same name.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40

"It is brisk and workmanlike, and easily forgotten." W. P. Eaton

Books p8 Ja 21 '40 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Wellstone

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 70w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 150:337 D '39 330w

Dramatic criticism by Grenville Vernon

Commonweal 31:14 O 27 '39 230w

"If 'Skylark' had been written as a highly cynical farce-comedy which moved in a circle and ended on the implication 'this is where we came in,' it might have seemed passable at least. As a matter of fact, there are actually several purely satiric scenes which are penetrating and funny. But the dominant mood is one of rather gaudy sentiment, and we are asked to take it as some happy sort of solution for one of the problems of marriage in a world where 'business' sets the tune." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 149:448 O 21 '39 700w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by Stark Young

New Repub 100:368 N 1 '39 140w

Dramatic criticism by Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts Mo 23:855 D '39 420w

RATCLIFF, JOHN DRURY. Modern miracle men. 311p il $3 Dodd

610.072 Scientific research. Medical research

(W) 39-23042

In this popular summary of the work modern scientific research is doing, part one is devoted to the achievements of medical research, part two to work done along lines of improving and preserving foods.

Booklist 36:63 O 15 '39

"This is good reading. Not as good as De Kruif but it deserves a Grade A rating. And it is more reliable than a De Kruif. It doesn't sacrifice all to dramatization. The feet are kept on the ground. It is highly interesting but well modulated. For comparison one may say that this is similar to Bernard Jaffe's excellent 'Outposts of Science.' . . The information put out in the pages is almost all sound, but it wouldn't have injured the book to have had a bit more checking with experts." C. C. Furnas

+ — Books p18 O 15 '39 900w

Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 130w

Reviewed by W. M. Agar

Commonweal 30:591 O 20 '39 430w

"The author has a tidy manner of writing that we particularly liked. Coming close to the sensational in much of his subject matter, he treats it with restraint and good taste and makes it all the more absorbing." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 102:iii N '39 170w

"Mr. Ratcliff's book is a discussion of isolated research experiments, separated widely not only by geography but also by time and in enduring values. To those seeking a more comprehensive and more cohesive report of what is going on along the frontiers of modern medical research it may prove disappointing. But others . . . will find it an easy-to-read narrative which proves once again that victories measured in terms of bacilli, of longer life and a happier and healthier life are more important than victories won in bloody battle." H. G. Garbedian

+ — N Y Times p5 D 17 '39 650w

Reviewed by G. R. Harrison
Sat R of Lit 21:4 Ja 27 '40 500w

RATEL, SIMONNE. The weathercock; with 20 il. by Gertrude Mittelmann [tr. by Judith Bury]. 84p $1.75 Appleton-Century [7s 6d Cassell]

Describes the adventures of a discontented weathercock, who left his perch on top of the steeple in a French village and went off to see the world. After some rather painful adventures, he returned and gladly resumed his old position, glorified by a new coat of gilt paint, and made much of by his old friends.

"The story of the cock's adventures is pleasingly told but the bits of humor regarding the birds' domestic life may be too subtle for the children." R. W. Stewart
Library J 64:563 Jl '39 140w

"Entertaining fable which mixes fancy and humor with wisdom." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 4 '39 280w

"May be less nonsensical in its native tongue, but it is hard to take in English. Pretty pictures."

— + Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 10 '38 70w

RATH, MRS VIRGINIA. Murder with a theme song. 280p $2 Doubleday

39-27330

Detective story.

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 Ap 9 '39 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 130w

"The story of a baffling mystery would be much better were it not for the author's confused manner of telling it." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '39 130w

"With a Californian's penchant for bigger and better things, Miss Rath tries to handle a confusing number of characters and two detectives. Good, but complicated for simple minds."

+ — New Yorker 15:108 Ap 15 '39 50w

"Overabundance of characters and plot slightly confusing, but wind-up is logical and surprising. Expert."

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 30w

RAUSCHNING, HERMANN. The revolution of nihilism; warning to the West [tr. from German by E. W. Dickes] [Eng title: Germany's revolution of destruction]. 300p $3 Alliance bk. corp. [10s 6d Heinemann]

327.43 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Foreign relations. Hitler, Adolf
(W) 39-21141

The author of this book was at one time a member of the Nazi party and president of the Danzig senate. Because he opposed some of Hitler's orders he was forced to resign, and later became an exile. This book contains a former party member's analysis of the Hitler regime, particularly in its foreign policies. In conclusion, the author asserts that Hitler does not aim at peace, or merely at domination of eastern Europe, but at world dominion.

"There is no doubt that Rauschning has produced one of the best assaults on Nazism; but the work becomes too high-pitched, shrill, and vitriolic now and then, for Dr. Rauschning, who in 1933-34 was the President of the Senate of the Free City of Danzig, is now in exile and wants to even the scores with Berlin. Events have shown that he has been dead wrong in certain predictions, although likewise dead right in others." J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 206:174 N '39 600w

Booklist 36:41 O 1 '39

"It is not difficult to predict that . . . this will be one of the most widely read books on Nazi Germany of all that have yet appeared." Walter Millis

+ Books p1 S 3 '39 1650w

Books p2 D 10 '39 750w

"This is without doubt the most important book on the subject of National Socialism since 'Mein Kampf.' Although written in a ponderous and often times repetitious style, it reveals with great clarity and thoroughness the hideous revolution which has been taking place." Pauline Ehrlich
Boston Transcript p2 S 23 '39 900w

Cath World 150:245 N '39 500w

Reviewed by S. B. Barnes
Christian Century 56:1202 O 4 '39 700w

Reviewed by Emlyn Williams
Christian Science Monitor p f8 S 20 '39 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:4 O '39 350w

Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40 50w

"Had his book been published three or four years ago it might not have been understood at all, even though presented in Mr. Dickes's admirable translation (which is, at the same time, a masterly simplification). It would perhaps have been dismissed as the work of an embittered, hopelessly biased, and rather portentous mind. But to-day, when events corroborate every page Herr Rauschning has written, his book has come to be regarded—and rightly so—as the most searching analysis and truest account of National Socialism in general and of Hitler in particular that has yet been published." F. A. V.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 22 '39 1250w

" 'The Revolution of Nihilism' is easily one of the most illuminating and most exciting political works which the German emigration has produced so far. It gives precise, unwavering answers to the origin and development of the Nazi Party and the present and future plans of Hitler. Practical knowledge sustains its restrained but passionate polemic; every line, one feels, carries the conviction which is acquired in the bitter struggle of an honest conscience. There is a serious finality in this work which demands respect even of one who finds himself unable to follow all its interpretations or may become impatient now and then with an ethical catechism that takes at face value all the nice abstractions which in this world are only applied when they happen to fall in line with concrete material interests." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 149:248 S 2 '39 950w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
New Repub 100:164 S 13 '39 1050w

"Hermann Rauschning's book is now available in English. In view of the news from Europe, it has appeared at the right moment, and is, I should think, absolutely essential reading for all who wish to understand a crisis which is certainly not the crisis of Danzig, of Poland, of eastern Europe or of the Mediterranean, but a crisis of Western civilization. The blurb on the book cover calls it 'The most important book on German Naziism since Hitler's "Mein Kampf." ' I should think that is probably so." Dorothy Thompson

RAUSCHNING, HERMANN—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ag 21 '39 1650w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra

N Y Times p1 S 3 '39 950w

"One need hardly point out that Herr Rauschning's book is timely. It also makes absorbing, as well as merely terrifying, reading. Realizing that it may well be too late, I commend it to Mussolini and Stalin." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:74 S 9 '39 110w

Pratt p6 winter '40

Reviewed by Toni Stolper

Sat R of Lit 20:3 S 9 '39 2500w

"Herr Rauschning's book constitutes so complete a challenge to this common point of view that every American, for the mere clarification of his ideas, needs to be acquainted with it. The work, however, is not one which is immediately understandable. American readers of it should have been warned, I think, far more than they have been by the critics and commentators. It was written primarily for a European public, and presupposes familiarity with events and political programs which most Americans know about only superficially. Moreover, the author was clearly so emotionally perturbed that all he thought tumbled forth in a flood." Harry Scherman

Sat R of Lit 21:3 N 18 '39 10,000w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 1150w

Time 34:76 S 18 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Jl 8 '39 550w

Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

Reviewed by Hajo Holborn

Yale R n s 29:403 winter '40 900w

RAUSHENBUSH, HILMAR STEPHEN. The march of fascism. 355p $3 Yale univ. press

335.6 Fascism. Europe—Politics. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-27822

The author analyzes the growth and nature of the fascist political philosophy in Germany, Italy, and southeastern Europe, and shows how the conditions in which it grew there are comparable to conditions even now existing in the United States. Index.

Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

Reviewed by G. K. Smart

Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 400w

"A deeply disturbing book, this. And more disturbing now that war has come than when Mr. Raushenbush finished writing it, two months ago. For after reading this dispassionate yet penetrating study of the reasons why great European states have gone fascist, one can hardly escape the thought that if England and France win this war and then have nothing more to offer the common people of the rest of Europe than 'liberal' democracy has had, the deluge is very near." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 56:1206 O 4 '39 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

Foreign Affairs 18:371 Ja '40 60w

"A short review cannot convey how thoroughly the author analyzes the problem and how effectively he exposes its essential difficulties. One realizes only after putting down his book how impressive it is. 'The March of Fascism' is outstanding in contemporary political literature for its mastery of the material and, not less important, for its simplicity and unpretentiousness. And the breath of the faith for which Stephen Raushenbush is longing sometimes sweeps through his pages." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 149:394 O 7 '39 650w

" 'The March of Fascism' seems to me to be the shrewdest, most factual analysis of the cause of totalitarian government that has yet been written. Out of the mass of material that Mr. Raushenbush has painstakingly assembled there emerges a clear understanding of the failure of democracy in Germany to meet the Nazi challenge; the inherent weaknesses of the Weimar Republic; the fatal divisions that shattered that brief attempt at popular government." M. W. Childs

+ New Repub 101:24 N 8 '39 700w

"With a sobriety of style and an absence of vituperation which make his conclusions doubly telling and alarming, the author ties up the sinister onward march of Nazism-Fascism in Europe to the situation in the United States in a manner calculated to shake even the most confirmed ease of complacency on this side of the ocean. . . . Mr. Raushenbush's career has qualified him excellently for his self-imposed task of becoming still another Cassandra of imminent disaster." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p18 N 5 '39 1100w

"If, in this critical hour, you would like more precise information on what fascism is, how it gained its dominant position in Europe, and why its rise affects America, this book is highly recommended reading." D. H. Popper

+ Sat R of Lit 20:37 O 14 '39 350w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

Yale R n s 29:167 autumn '39 900w

RAUTENSTRAUCH, WALTER. Who gets the money? rev ed 122p $1.50 Harper

330.1 Income. U.S.—Economic conditions 39-20971

"A study in the economics of scarcity and plenty." (Subtitle) "A book by the same title was written by the author in 1934. This present book is not a revision but is entirely new in scope and content. It is based on more recent data, and contains the result of studies made within the past few years. The treatment of the data has been kept as simple as possible, but it is believed that in so doing the perspective is not distorted." (Pref) Index. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

Booklist 36:72 O 15 '39

"Dr. Rautenstrauch's . . . approach is essentially technocratic, and highly utopian. He more or less ignores the mass of law which keeps property in a status that is necessarily anachronistic, and he also ignores the imperfections of political tradition and the problems of social class. On the purely technical side his ideas are inpeccable."

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 100w

RAWSON, CLAYTON. The footprints on the ceiling. 256p map $2 Putnam

39-13883

Detective story.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39

"You can't go wrong with this meaty, excellently contrived phantasmagoria of shifty practice and death in several forms." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Mr 28 '39 310w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 My 27 '39 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 My 28 '39 180w

"Grand reading."

+ New Yorker 15:100 My 27 '39 60w

"Encyclopedically fascinating, with amazing bits about sunken treasure, catalepsy, 'the bends,' assorted poisons—also gun-play and sky-high suspense. Immense!"

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 27 '39 50w

"Immense!"

Sat R of Lit 21:20 D 23 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p719 D 9 '39 180w

RAWSON, GEOFFREY. The strange case of Mary Bryant. 288p il map $3 Dutton [12s 6d Hale, R]

B or 92 Bryant, Mrs Mary (Broad). Escapes. Voyages and travels (W) 39-5479

Mary Braund or Broad was an English domestic servant who in 1786 was convicted of felony and sentenced to seven years' transportation. With her went her lover, whom she married when they landed in Australia. Some time afterwards Mary, with her husband and two children, and seven others set out for Batavia. When they arrived at Cupang they had sailed and rowed 3,250 miles, without loss of life. Later Mary was recaptured, sent back to England, and retried. In 1793 she was pardoned and set free. This is the story of her case. Bibliography.

Booklist 35:269 Ap 15 '39

"The author apparently has examined all the historical sources, yet he seems to have jumbled the results together in a curious way. Part of the book is history and part is fiction, and the reader finds difficulty in telling one from the other. In fact, this is a rather deplorable example of the prevailing fashion of fictionalizing historical incidents in order to pep them up and give them popular interest. In the present case, Mary Bryant comes out of the hopper an extremely unreal and sentimental person." Lincoln Colcord

Books p14 Mr 19 '39 1150w

"Mr. Rawson has written a scholarly work, with frequent quotes from contemporary documents and profuse footnotes." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 270w

Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 8 '38 290w

"This kind of story writes itself, and but for some rather dubious dialogue Commander Rawson does not place any impediment in it. . . I warmly recommend this humbler Manon Lescaut to the reader." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 15:378 Mr 5 '38 750w

"It is a thrilling tale, whose interest is unfortunately weakened by the author's overemphasis. . . Mr. Rawson pitches his whole story in a high key of sentimentality as well as adventure. The events were exciting enough for a romantic novel, and in spite of his painstaking documentation it is really in the form of a romantic novel that he has set them down."

N Y Times p24 Mr 5 '39 500w

"A curious and thrilling true story. . . For lovers of marine adventure."

+ New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 30w

"Geoffrey Rawson has caused to live again the journals of plain seamen who did not realize that they were present at the creation of a new commonwealth and continent; he has recorded in a straightforward and restrained way man's—or rather woman's—perseverance in the face of heartbreaking obstacles, an irrational quality which belongs to no particular time or nationality. It is a worthy successor to such books as 'The Floating Republic,' 'Men against the Sea,' and Owen Rutter's 'Narratives of the Wreck of the Whale-Ship Essex.' " M. S. Curtler

+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 11 '39 390w

"Her character is mysterious and ill-defined; but the actual story is well-documented. . . Commander Rawson is thrown back on the device of improvising imaginary dialogue; but be it said that he handles this most difficult method extremely well. It is incomprehensible how so rich a cargo of excitement and adventure should have escaped all the literary privateers and wreckers from Tahiti to the Isle of Wight; but it could not have fallen as a prize into more deserving hands than those of Commander Rawson. His story is good in itself and admirably handled; and the book achieves a high standard, whether regarded as history or simply as a story of action and endeavour." Christopher Hobhouse

+ Spec 160:320 F 25 '38 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 19 '38 150w

RAWSON, MRS MARION (NICHOLL). Forever the farm; il. by the author. 380p $5 Dutton

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. Farm life 39-30823

A lover of old American ways and customs here writes of the American farm, the farmhouses and yards, the barns and stables, tools, harnesses, milk pails and cooking pots—as they were shaped and used in New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and the South. Index.

"Mrs. Rawson has a monumental store of information completely under control. In hands less deft than hers 'Forever the Farm' might have been a daunting volume, a Bible for antique collectors and an egregious chore for other readers. Thanks to the author's odd ability to breathe life into matters as natively inert as ancient scythes and rakes, milk stools, ox yokes, smoke houses, stiles, switchel jugs, cradles, sleigh-bells, road rollers and innumerable like relics, the farms and the farmers of a century ago live again, three dimensional, full colored." F. F. Van de Water

+ Books p17 O 29 '39 500w

Reviewed by W. H. Clark

Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '39 320w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 6 '40 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:55 O '39

"Mrs. Rawson has especially stressed the human note in this latest book, as the expression of her theme implies. Her many drawings show farm homes and farm implements and farm accessories in a delightful profusion. And her words themselves bring overtones of history —or nostalgia."

+ N Y Times p28 N 19 '39 500w

"Pleasant antiquarianism, made vivid by the author's loving pen-and-ink sketches."

+ New Yorker 15:104 O 14 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 1200w

RAY, MRS MARIE BEYNON (LYONS). Two lifetimes in one; how never to be tired, how to have energy to burn. 311p $1.96 Bobbs

131.3 Fatigue. Psychology, Applied 38-32174

"Energy is the invariable factor in all great success" says Mrs Marie Ray, and "no one in good health need be tired." The book analyzes the psychological factors that produce fatigue and shows how it may be cured by subduing emotions, compensating for personal handicaps, forming good habits and leading a balanced life.

Books p41 N 13 '38 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '39 80w

RAYMOND, ERNEST. In the steps of St Francis. 372p il maps $2.50 Kinsey [8s 6d Rich]

B or 92 Francis of Assisi, Saint. Italy—Description and travel 39-23184

This biography of St Francis is interwoven with an account of the author's visits to the places legend and history have connected with the story. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Raymond is as simple and joyful as the gentle saint in whose way he walks. He has poetry, imagination, reverence and an unashamed idealism." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p12 N 26 '39 450w

"The present biographer, although usually fair-minded, occasionally fails in this respect. . . The book is not important for the details it gives of St. Francis' life; as that is an oft told story, but its value lies in the fact that it is written by a non-Catholic who modestly calls himself a lowly lover of the saint." B. L. C.

+ — Cath World 150:367 D '39 350w

RAYMOND, ERNEST—Continued

"One feels that this was meant to be a book of travel, but that Francis stole the story, for surely it is far more of a biography than many that are called 'Lives.' He is ever present in his mirth and pain, soldier, troubadour and saint. The characterizations of his earliest companions are vivid, too, and sympathetic." D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 30:523 S 29 '39 500w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken

Living Church 101:7 D 6 '39 50w

Manchester Guardian p5 O 14 '38 250w

"Like a true Franciscan adept, Mr. Raymond is at once lighthearted and tender. He retells the famous story without minimising the tragic element in it, and, though he is an avowed heretic, with such certainty as to the efficacy of the Franciscan attitude to the problems of at any rate individual existence that, especially at a time when interesting books are mostly rather grim reading, this must be reckoned as that rare thing, an intelligently happy book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:68 Ja 14 '39 280w

"St. Francis of Assisi is, declares Ernest Raymond, 'The Hotspur of religion.' He stands out in history as an impetuous and charming, as well as a pious and courageous, figure. He has always been of deep and vivid interest not only as a saint but as a human being. And it is both as saint and as human being that he lives again for us in this reverent, poetic, vital story of his life."

+ N Y Times p11 S 17 '39 400w

"Aside from its merits as a sympathetic restatement of Francis's teachings, Mr Raymond's book is so sound historically that it deserves to take a place as the best popular presentation of the saint's life and work written to date. It is illustrated with numerous excellent photographs taken by the author." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 11 '39 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p608 S 24 '38 850w

RAYMOND, PERCY EDWARD. Prehistoric life. 324p il $5 Harvard univ. press

560 Paleontology 39-7232

A treatise on fossil plants and animals by a Harvard professor of paleontology.

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 10w

"Just as absorbing as the tales of strange creatures you meet in Prehistoric Life is the story of how they are discovered and identified and reconstructed. Professor Raymond tells both extraordinarily well." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:vi My '39 100w

Reviewed by Carey Croneis

J Geol 47:555 Jl '39 850w

New Repub 100:252 O 4 '39 20w

"This is a veritable 'university extension course' in paleontology, broad in scope, accurate in content, attractive in style and pleasant to digest. Professor Raymond's quarter century of service as curator and teacher in Harvard University has brought him eminence not only as a skilled paleontologist but also as an able and witty expositor. The vast amount of factual information in these closely printed pages is well organized and systematically presented. At the same time, there is a charming informality of style which prevents the reader from bogging down in a mass of scientific detail."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Mr '39 350w

"No one book, of course, can present all the significant data of so rapidly developing a science as paleontology; no one book can present such data so as wholly to please both specialist and layman. Professor Raymond's 'Prehistoric Life,' however, comes closer to achieving this dual impossibility than any other book which this reviewer has ever seen." J. H. Bradley

+ Yale R n s 28:859 summer '39 600w

READ, CONYERS, ed. See American historical association. The Constitution reconsidered

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Poetry and anarchism. 126p $2 Macmillan [6s Faber]

335 Poetry. Anarchism and anarchists [38-29230]

It is the author's conviction that "our civilization is a scandal and until it is remade all our intellectual activities are in vain." In these chapters "while preaching anarchism, [he confesses] the only place of refuge for man is into the free self, at peace with itself, purged from the lust for power and the fear of death; and his final words—the words of a poet—would almost show that he realizes the possibility of attaining this, not in the blessed hereafter, but in the troubled now." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Reviewed by Dorothy Fosdick

Am Soc R 4:427 Je '39 200w

"I find Mr. Read, the distinguished critic, a rather acid polemic, and I think he confuses the private anarchism of artists with the question of the need for a decentralized public life. But he is angry and impatient of trivialities and that is always stimulating." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 13 '38 120w

" 'Poetry and Anarchism,' as we should expect from Mr. Read, is a brilliant and provocative book. It is also a very confused book. It is brilliant and provocative because it deals with the primary problems facing our present civilization courageously and with the highest intellectual sincerity. It is confused because Mr. Read's search for an answer fails. It fails because Mr. Read does not have an equipment for assessing the work of the various philosophical and psychological studies he has made." W. J. Grace

+ — Commonweal 31:17 O 27 '39 500w

"It is difficult to see where Mr. Read is leading, for his anarchism destroys without creating. At the same time, as the expression of the mind of a sincere modern artist this volume is illuminating." B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p5 S 6 '38 330w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

New Repub 100:52 Ag 16 '39 700w

"Mr. Read speaks with caution of Progress and with something like dislike of humanism; nevertheless he is peddling the basic heresy which goes with those things, and in its most naïve and rationalist form. It is a matter for ironical reflection that it was Mr. Read who edited the works of T. E. Hulme. I suggest that he might re-read them to his personal profit." Desmond Hawkins

Spec 161:343 Ag 26 '38 550w

"Out of his indignation, he has provided a valuable stimulus to thought in others."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p420 Je 18 '38 700w

READING, DOUGLAS KUGLER. The Anglo-Russian commercial treaty of 1734. 337p $3 Yale univ. press [14s Oxford]

382.0942 Great Britain—Commerce—Russia. Russia—Commerce—Great Britain 39-2803

"The scope of this treatise, somewhat more ample than its title, includes the whole range of commercial and diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Russia for a half-century on each side of the date of the treaty and a consideration of the bearing of the British 'mercantilist' theory on international trade policies." (Christian Century) Bibliographical note. Index.

"This study has the well-nigh unique distinction of bringing together both the Russian and the English sources. Previous studies have been limited to archive material in a single language, so that only a good linguist could command all the important material. Mr. Reading has rendered western scholars an especially valuable service, for most of the Russian material has been very inadequately utilized by historians of the western nations. . . The volume will be indispensable to any who are interested in the early contacts between England and Russia." A. P. Usher

+ Am Econ R 29:852 D '39 400w

Christian Century 55:1549 D 14 '38 50w

REBELL, FRED, pseud. Escape to the sea; the log of a homemade sailor; with an introd by Richard Hughes. 227p il map $2.75 Dodd [8s 6d Murray, J]

910.4 Voyages and travels 39-25722

The author, a Latvian who as a youth left his native country in order to evade military service, writes about his life then and now, with emphasis on his trip across the Pacific, from Sydney to Los Angeles, in an open eighteen-foot boat.

"Both the physical and the spiritual voyages of this strange man make for unusual reading, and one is no more incredible than the other." E. B. S.

Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p612 O 21 '39 600w

RECK, MRS DAISY. Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; il. with photographs. 241p map $2.50 Farrar

917.295 Puerto Rico—Description and travel. Virgin Islands—Description and travel (W) 39-33963

Combination guidebook, history, and description of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, written for the layman.

Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

"A breezy, informal account of two of our West Indies islands. The author is content to leave history and statistics to guide books while she wanders about getting acquainted with people. Impressionism rather than information is the aim. The book appears rather hastily written, and I suspect it was put out to meet the demand of tourists who are turning south now that Europe is closed." P. J. Searles

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 80w

"Among many books on islands of the Caribbean, here is one which appears among the least pretentious, and yet should be among the most rewarding for the general public. Mrs. Reck has not tried to produce literature on the one hand or a guidebook on the other: she has simply written of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. . . Because she writes with observation and humor and clarity, she passes her own interest on to other would-be travelers and to people who enjoy good travel books."

+ N Y Times p30 D 3 '39 400w

No Am 248:410 winter '40 140w

RECK, FRANKLIN MERING. The romance of American transportation. 253p il maps $2.50 Crowell

385 Transportation—U.S. (W) 39-27047

History of transportation in the United States from the year 1789 to the present. The author outlines the development of the steamboat, the railroad, the automobile, and the airplane, and the contribution of each to the history of the country. Illustrated in part with reproductions of old prints. Index.

"The historian will find nothing new in it; its very brevity precludes its use as a reference work such as those of Dunbar or Hulbert. Many of the 149 pictures, charts, and maps are poor reproductions. The index is adequate, but there are no footnotes or bibliography." W. J. Petersen

— Am Hist R 45:236 O '39 180w

Booklist 35:209 F 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 My 28 '39 440w

"The romantic thread of the history of transportation is brought out clearly and readers, whether boys or adults, gain a new idea of the strength, the idealism and the ambition which first strung steel across the continent, followed it with paved roads and is now adventuring into the air."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 230w

"The whole story is entertainingly told by Mr. Reck, with many illustrations."

+ Christian Century 56:59 Ja 11 '39 70w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 64:197 Mr 1 '39 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:13 Ja '39

"A well-planned and delightfully illustrated book. . . The story of those early highways is a very interesting bit of detail. So is the story of the Mississippi River boats—a less familiar record than the annals of the Clermont, and more varied in its adventurousness. The remembered tale of the first successful motor cars is told here with surprising freshness of appeal."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 15 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:70 Ap '39

RECTOR, GEORGE. Dining in New York with Rector; a personal guide to good eating. 275p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

647.95 New York (city)—Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc. 39-16599

A famous New York restaurateur, now retired, gives his personal opinions on a long list of New York eating places from the Stork Club and El Morocco to the Automat and Childs. Index.

Books p8 Jl 9 '39 90w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 15 '39 30w

New Yorker 15:68 Jl 1 '39 30w

REDDAWAY, WILLIAM BRIAN. The economics of a declining population. 270p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen, G]

330.942 Great Britain—Population. Great Britain—Economic policy [39-30089]

A study of population trends in Great Britain and an attempt to predict the effect of a declining population on such economic questions as unemployment, national income, public finance, and international trade. Index.

New Repub 102:126 Ja 22 '40 30w

New Statesman & Nation 18:734 N 18 '39 160w

Reviewed by Honor Croome

Spec 163:552 O 20 '39 500w

"The declining birth-rate in practically every country and the approach of the time when, unless the existing trends are reversed, populations will, at first, remain stationary and then rapidly decline, have given rise to a host of new problems in economic theory and in social policy which have not heretofore received the attention which they deserve. This gap in our economic literature has been most worthily filled by Mr. Reddaway, whose notable book will appeal equally to the professional economist and to the general reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p727 D 16 '39 480w

REDDICK, HARRY WILFRED, and MILLER, FREDERIC HOWELL. Advanced mathematics for engineers. 473p il $4 Wiley [20s Chapman]

510 Mathematics. Engineering 38-29169

"Two professors in The Cooper Union Institute of Technology, New York City, present this work to show how advanced mathematics REDDICK, H. W., and MILLER, F. H.—Cont. are used in civil, electrical, mechanical, and chemical engineering. The topics are: Ordinary differential equations, hyperbolic functions, elliptic functions, infinite series, Fourier series, gamma and Bessel functions, partial derivatives and partial differential equations, vector analysis, probability, functions of a complex variable, and the operational calculus." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The presentation is exceptionally clear and easy to follow, since it indicates always in which direction and for what purpose an argument is being pursued, and the various steps are frequently illustrated by simple well-chosen examples. Not less will the engineering reader value the fact that the authors have shown how these methods work by applying them to a large number of problems covering a wide field of physics and engineering, and that in presenting proofs as well as applications they have considered his limited formal technique." A. B.

\+ Nature 144:369 Ag 26 '39 150w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:58 O '38

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. To make a poet black. 142p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. press

810.9 Negro literature 39-27275

An appraisal of Negro literature from the Negro point of view. The author selects representative writers from Jupiter Hammon to Sterling Brown, and interprets their work in the light of the time in which they lived. Bibliography. Index.

"An interpretation of the literary development of his race, marked by a very high degree of sympathetic understanding combined with intellectual honesty and fairness in criticism, and by pithy, original comments upon particular writers and their writings, situating them in their particular cultural backgrounds." E. V. Stonequist

\+ Am Soc R 4:445 Je '39 210w
Booklist 35:267 Ap 15 '39

"There is more than a slight probability that future literary archeologists will refer to this book as a landmark of Negro literature. Not that it is even remotely a work of monumental significance. But it does mark a new departure. The Negro author has already won acceptance in the field of creative writing. In this volume he breaks new ground, emerges as critic and appraiser of the works of his fellow craftsmen. . . There are times, of course, when one disagrees with his judgments, but mainly on grounds of opinion or taste." Theophilus Lewis

\+ Commonweal 30:79 My 12 '39 550w

Reviewed by Alain Locke
Survey G 28:455 Jl '39 350w

REDLICH, EDWIN BASIL. Form criticism; its value and limitations. 209p $2.25 Scribner [5s Duckworth]

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels 39-18805

"Canon Redlich is already known on this side of the Atlantic as the author of a useful Student's Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels. He has now supplemented this with an equally useful textbook and introductory compendium on form criticism. The book opens with a chapter on the history of the new method, whose beginnings the author rightly traces back before the war. . . The next chapter deals with the six major assumptions of form criticism, and concludes with a balanced estimate of (thirteen) limitations and (seven) contributions which it offers. . . After these two more or less introductory chapters, the bulk of the book takes up the various series in detail: apothegm stories, miracle stories, sayings and parables, the passion narrative, and 'form-less' stories." Christian Century

"One feels at times that the author is a bit more interested in the apologetic value of his findings than in their absolute historicity. But, for all that, the book is useful, constructive, stimulating, and deserves to be read by all students interested in knowing about the principles, assumptions and methods of the new school." F. C. Grant

\+ — Christian Century 56:447 Ap 5 '39 800w

"Although he protests occasionally against what he regards the reckless and sweeping skepticism of Bultmann and at times against that of the conservative Dibelius, [the author] does it with a complete lack of bitterness, innuendo, or mud-slinging. But this is, of course, only to remark that he is a scholar and a gentleman. The book is interesting reading. This remark is in itself news." M. S. Enslin

\+ Crozer Q 16:306 O '39 500w

"A few years ago in his Student's Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels Canon Redlich gave us quite the most usable of all the elementary treatises on the subject. Now in these new books he extends his treatment further. All the commendation bestowed on that Introduction can be given unchanged to Form Criticism as well." B. S. Easton

\+ Living Church 101:15 S 13 '39 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p116 F 25 '39 1050w

REDLICH, EDWIN BASIL. An introduction to the Fourth Gospel. 160p $2 (5s) Longmans

226.5 Bible. New Testament—St John 39-25955

"This small volume is meant to be an introduction to the main problems of the Fourth Gospel. . . The author sets out a case for the traditional view of Johannine authorship, at least in a restricted sense. He is cognisant of the many doubts that have been thrown on the authorship and on the historical value of the Gospel, but the arguments seem to him to have failed in great measure. The reasons for this conclusion are briefly set forth in the book." Pref.

"The problems are indeed difficult and much more complicated than a book so admirably clear and simple can suggest. Of course, it is not intended for the scholar, but it might have been better to give the alternatives an even more balanced statement. As it is, the book is something of an apologia." H. J. Cadbury

\+ — Christian Century 56:575 My 3 '39 450w

"Canon Redlich's discussion moves along trite lines, often sticking at surface phenomena and leaving basic problems untouched." B. S. E.

— Churchman 153:35 S 1 '39 100w

Reviewed by B. S. Easton
Living Church 101:15 S 13 '39 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p84 F 11 '39 250w

REED, DUDLEY BILLINGS. Keep fit and like it; with an introd. by Morris Fishbein. (Whittlesey house health ser) 325p il $2.50 (10s 6d) McGraw

613.72 Exercise. Sports 39-9479

Discussion of the psychological and physical benefits of exercise. The author, who is a doctor, and director of student health and professor of hygiene at the School of Medicine, University of Chicago, explains briefly the make-up of the human body and its need for exercise, and shows how exercise can be fun, as well as health giving. Partial contents: On choosing a recreation; When and how much; Golf; Bowling, swimming, hiking; Tennis; Riding; Skating; Calendar of sports by decades. Index.

" 'Keep Fit and Like It' is sensible in tone and easy to assimilate."

\+ Books p12 Jl 16 '39 100w

"Here are stimuli for the sluggish. . . . Psychological and nervous factors are considered, and the presentation of all this wisdom is attractive."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 50w

REED, RACHEL. Introducing the past. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 651p maps $1.68 Little

901 Civilization—History 39-2969

"This book provides a formula, worked out and used for fifteen years in high school classrooms in presenting a first course in history to entering students." (Foreword) The book has two sections of eighteen chapters each, each chapter intended to be a week's work. Teaching aids are found at the end of each chapter. Pronouncing index.

"After having casually placed this book on the reading shelves as a 'reference,' this reviewer was pleased to find the text being passed among the students by the students themselves. This, as teachers know, happens only to those texts that are readable." L. S. Eldridge

+ Social Educ 3:436 S '39 330w

"The clear cut organization and brevity of the chapters, the valuable study helps, and most of all the fact that a high school teacher has successfully developed and tested it in class for fifteen years should interest many in this book." H. T. Knight

+ Social Studies 30:236 My '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:214 D '39

REED, WILLIAM HENRY. Elgar. (Master musicians; new ser) 215p il $2 Dutton [4s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Elgar, Sir Edward William, 1st bart. [40-3129]

This biography of the English composer who died in 1934, has been written by a close personal friend who has also had the help and advice of Elgar's daughter.

"The whole story is told sympathetically and interestingly by Mr. Reed, whose good luck it was to be a personal friend of the Elgar family and also, in his capacity of violinist, to have taken part in the production and performance of many of Elgar's important works." Peter Bowdoin

+ Books p11 Ja 21 '40 1100w

Reviewed by R. A. Chace
Boston Transcript p1 Je 24 '39 200w

"It was a pity, I think, that Mr. Blom should have entrusted the Elgar in his excellent 'Master Musicians' series to Mr. Reed. . . [Mr. Reed] has already published an interesting volume of reminiscences called Elgar as I Knew Him, and the present volume tells us little that we did not know before." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 17:792 My 20 '39 240w

"Mr. Reed's book is intended for the English public. It is loyal and sympathetic, if not very skillfully written, but outside the British traditions and in the light of modern art criticism it will not stand close scrutiny. One cannot help wondering at the naive simplicity with which the author puts down statements such as the one concerning Elgar's First Symphony, 'the greatest symphony ever written by an Englishman,' which he considers 'a symphony to be ranked with the great classical symphonies of Brahms and his predecessors.' Still, there are many people left to admire the era and the art it represents who will enjoy reading of the life and works of the modest organist and fiddler who rose to become Master of the King's Musick." P. H. L.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 24 '39 270w
Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 170w

REED, WILLIAM MAXWELL. America's treasure; ed. by Carey Croneis; il. by photographs. 395p $3 Harcourt

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. Geology, Economic. U.S.—Industries and resources (W) 39-29414

Twenty-eight chapters on the mineral resources of the United States, written for young people. "How mineral deposits—gold and silver and tin—came to be where they are, how man has learned to extract ore from the earth, what petroleum is, how it was discovered and how many billions of barrels of oil are pumped from American wells, and many more such matters are, as Mr. Reed tells of them, dramatic and thrilling." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

"Children will find this book a clear, interesting and attractively illustrated discussion of our natural resources and how they were formed." H. N. Gardner

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 90w

"A handsome volume full of facts on the why and where of the natural resources of the U. S. Excellent photographs."

+ Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 20w

"The story of the origin of America's resources of minerals and rocks is simply told in this well gotten up and beautifully illustrated volume. The author has written popular books before and is adept at presenting the bare necessities for an understanding of complex processes in a few words." W. M. Agar

+ Commonweal 31:211 D 22 '39 210w

"Written in an easy, colloquial style, these chapters . . . make an excellent introduction to a study of our natural resources. For information on the minerals and metals, on building stones and petroleum, as well as many other subjects, boys and girls may turn with confidence to this book. America's Treasure is likely to be as popular as Mr. Reed's earlier volumes have been." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:394 N '39 70w
New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 30w

"In this volume . . . Maxwell Reed writes with a zest and enthusiasm that is all the more contagious since he deals with topics of current interest. . . The author's success in relating the past with the present, in showing how conservation of resources, the invention and development of machinery play their part in contemporary civilization makes this book of real value in building up an understanding of conditions today, and an intelligent attitude toward the future of this country." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 N 5 '39 250w
Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 3 '40 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 250w

REEDY, JOHN HENRY. Theoretical qualitative analysis. 451p il $3 (18s) McGraw

540 Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative 39-1185

"This is a book for the student rather than for the industrial worker. It is intended to furnish the student with the facts and theories forming the basis for qualitative analysis. The most important section seems to be the one on ionization, a subject frequently left, at least partially, to the imagination of the student." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

Chem & Met Eng 46:233 Ap '39 50w

"Used in conjunction with a practical manual, this treatise should train the student to be a more intelligent and therefore a more efficient analyst."

+ Nature 144:365 Ag 26 '39 200w

REEVES, FLOYD WESLEY; FANSLER, THOMAS, and HOULE, CYRIL O. Adult education. 171p $2 (12s) McGraw

374 Education of adults. Education—New York (state) 38-28754

One of a series of studies prepared by the Regents' inquiry into the character and cost of public education in the state of New York. This Inquiry "was undertaken in order to find out what the educational system of the State is accomplishing, how well its total program fits present-day needs, and what the costs of that program are and should be, and to assist the Regents in considering the present needs and problems of the school system, and in reformulating the fundamental educational policies of the State." (Foreword) The book is divided into six sections: The scope of adult education; Adult education agencies and activities; Special aspects of adult education; Influence of the state upon adult education; Evaluation of present program; The proposed program. Index.

REEVES, F. W., and others—Continued

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

"The authors of this survey have produced a valuable, provocative, informative document calling for an imaginative as well as a practical approach to the problems of adult education. Their reiterated plea for coordination, for elimination of wasteful duplication, for relation to pre-adult education is significant, timely, and worthy of wide study. To this reviewer there is one flaw in the whole study. The survey conveys the impression that adult education is predominantly a matter of teaching of class room or club room activity, of leadership of groups. Though the library is mentioned, perhaps taken for granted, the function of the library in the field of adult education in the state of New York is not properly evaluated, nor is its actual or potential use clearly described." J. M. Flexner

+ — Library J 64:230 Mr 15 '39 1500w

Reviewed by E. V. Hollis
School R 47:389 My '39 600w

Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 3:433 S '39 110w

Reviewed by I. A. Eckhauser
Social Studies 31:42 Ja '40 350w

REEVES, ROBERT. Dead and done for. 288p $2 Knopf

39-23526

Detective story.

"We found this a refreshing example of the tough school. It's no 'Little Caesar,' but it will do." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 17 '39 230w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 70w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin
N Y Times p20 S 17 '39 200w

"Underworld yarn with interesting new slant and explosive finish. Much shooting, slugging, sozzling, bad language—and something popping every second. Tough stuff."
Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 16 '39 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 200w

REICH, HERBERT JOSEPH. Theory and applications of electron tubes. 670p il $5 (30s) McGraw 537.53 Vacuum tubes. Electric circuits

39-2429

"This sizable volume by the Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering in the University of Illinois 'is intended to give the student a sufficiently thorough grounding in the fundamental principles of electron tubes and associated currents to enable him to apply electron tubes to the solution of new problems.' The student will need very little advanced mathematics, although the Calculus is sparingly used. The topics cover physical concepts, thermionic emission, grid controlled high-vacuum tubes, analysis of tubes and currents, modulation and detection, various amplifiers, oscillators, electrical conduction in gases, glow-and-arc discharge tubes and circuits, light sensitive tubes and cells, power supplies, and instruments and measurements. There are bibliographies, practical problems, and more than 500 diagrams." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Booklist 35:247 Ap 1 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:14 Ja '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:318 N '39

REICHARD, GLADYS AMANDA. Dezba: woman of the desert. 161p il map $3 Augustin

970.3 Navaho Indians. Indians of North America—Social life and customs

(W) 39-27467

The author, an anthropologist connected with Barnard College, has spent much time among the Navajo Indians. This story of a Navajo family is the outcome of her years of study. Dezba, the central character, is a synthetic portrait of a Navajo woman: wife, mother, and grandmother; and the experiences which she encounters are the usual happenings in the daily lives of these southwestern Indians.

Booklist 35:328 Je 1 '39

"Miss Reichard is an anthropologist of standing, whose ethnological data can always be relied upon. In a happy combination of scientific exactness and imaginative perception, she has succeeded in being at once charming and instructive." C. C. Walcutt

+ Boston Transcript p13 Je 30 '39 850w
Christian Science Monitor p18 My 25 '39 550w

"This book is interesting, alive and appealing, and it is illustrated with very fine photographs both of the Indians themselves and of their homes and herds and dramatic desert countryside. . . Miss Reichard has made her narrative impressively comprehensive, as she tacitly urges upon the white man a deeper understanding of the Navajo; and this excellent book should bring such understanding closer to the public at large."

+ N Y Times p17 My 14 '39 400w

REID, IRA DE AUGUSTINE. The Negro immigrant: his background, characteristics and social adjustment, 1899-1937. 261p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [14s King]

325.26 Negroes. U.S—Race question. Immigration

39-19999

"Reid deals objectively with the characteristics and social adjustment of the 100,000 foreign-born Negroes in the United States, who are culturally distinct from the native Negroes and constitute our largest group of colored aliens. He describes the attitudes and interests of the various national groups, showing how these affect assimilation. The study is based on documentary materials, life histories of Negro immigrants, and objective observations by the author." Social Forces

"The excellent influence of W. I. Thomas' The Polish Peasant is evident in the method of making the study. The section given to biographical case histories is especially interesting. The whole study makes clear the universal character of human beings in their culture conflicts. . . The book ends with a section giving all the available statistics and an excellent bibliography." H. A. Miller

+ Ann Am Acad 205:200 S '39 270w

"Students of American problems and of Negro history as well as social workers contacting the Negro will find this a useful and reliable source of information." M. E. Carpenter

+ Social Educ 4:148 F '40 600w

Reviewed by L. C. Copeland
Social Forces 18:308 D '39 500w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). All concerned notified. 275p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-27681

Detective story.

Booklist 36:10 S '39

"A madcap whiz through Mystery Land, inhabited by some of the darndest people you've ever met. And for real, solid sleuthing, you have McKee." Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 16 '39 220w

"In spite of the fact that I worried a lot about Mr. Todhunter, I was mostly entertained and amused by the case—that is, I was up to the conclusion. The end was just too much. To begin with, all the clues to the culprit except one were held back until the last. There was a definitely misleading description of the actions in the study the last night. And the final blow was that I had gotten quite attached to the criminal during the course of the story." Marian Wiggin

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 160w

"This is probably the most complicated and the most baffling case of McKee's entire career. The story is told with all the skill that Helen Reilly has at her command, and that, as any reader of the Inspector McKee stories will tell you, is a lot of skill." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 16 '39 140w

"Very fine reading with many clues to take your mind off the heat."

+ New Yorker 15:76 Jl 22 '39 40w

"Outstanding for action, detection and sharply etched characters—although one important link in evidence is handed McKee on platter. Capital."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 15 '39 40w

"Merits: good characters, fast action, nocturnal chills. Fault: complicated family relationship."

+ — Time 34:63 Ag 7 '39 40w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Dead for a ducat. 275p $2 Doubleday

39-27462

Detective story.

Booklist 35:333 Je 1 '39

"A resumé of the plot might sound slightly plush, but it isn't, really. Mrs. Reilly makes it all impressive and highly exciting right up to the finish. Moral: Never turn up your nose at a story about a girl named Daphne. It may be by Helen Reilly." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ap 23 '39 320w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:568 O 21 '39 100w

"Mrs. Reilly has shown herself to be a better novelist than ever before." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 23 '39 200w

"Oft-thwarted and highly emotional romance closely linked with murders, keeps yarn at somewhat enervating boiling point. Feverish."
Sat R of Lit 20:30 Ap 29 '39 40w

REILLY, JOSEPH. Explosives, matches and fireworks. 172p il $3 Van Nostrand [7s 6d Gurney; Oliver]

662 Explosives. Matches. Fireworks

[39-14816]

"A separate publication of a portion of Volume IV of Lunge and Keane's 'Technical Methods of Chemical Analysis': Second Edition. Edited by P. C. L. Thorne. Contains ten illustrations and abundant references to the literature of the subject. Well indexed." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Reviewed by C. G. Storm
Ind & Eng Chem 17:255 Ap 10 '39 220w

"The first two thirds of this book are very satisfactory, but unfortunately this cannot be said of the remainder." A. M.
Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Je 18 '38

+ — Nature 142:852 N 12 '38 400w
40w

REIMANN, GUENTER. The vampire economy; doing business under fascism. 350p $3 Vanguard

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Commerce. Industry—Organization, control, etc. 39-31138

An analysis of the economic conditions faced by the private businessman in the fascist totalitarian states. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:194 Ja 15 '40

"Mr. Reimann's book is both timely and instructive, and should do much to clear up misunderstandings prevalent in many quarters as to the economic set-up of Fascism." Ursula Wasserman

+ Books p20 N 19 '39 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

Reviewed by E. S. Lynch
Commonweal 31:350 F 9 '40 320w

Management R 28:456 D '39 50w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 149:737 D 30 '39 430w

Reviewed by Karl Billinger
New Repub 101:121 N 15 '39 1050w

"Well written and thoughtful volume. . . Mr. Reimann writes with authority and understanding, he has mastered a vast amount of first-hand information, and he traces a revealing picture of the decay of private business enterprise and of the general economic situation under the totalitarian rule." M. T. Florinsky

+ N Y Times p7 D 17 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:84 O 28 '39 10w

Reviewed by Toni Stolper
Sat R of Lit 21:17 D 30 '39 850w

REINER, ANNA, pseud. Five destinies; tr. from the German by Philip Owens [Eng title: The wall]. 453p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Secker]

39-23527

Stark, bitter story of German life in 1920 and the years following. The author is a young German refugee, living in London and writing under an assumed name.

"Miss Reiner is an able writer. 'Five Destinies' is written without rancor or personal bitterness by a woman who obviously knows her Germany and who has also—far more than that—the gift of understanding. Her story is a must for those who wish to cement the fragments of their hearsay, with the binding power of solid insight." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p2 S 24 '39 550w

"A deeply sensitive, delicately drawn tale."

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 14 '39 180w

"[This] is a terrible tale, and yet it is a tale of a terrible beauty, because, although Frl. Reiner spares us no detail of squalor or horror, unlike many of our modish realists, she does not deliberately exclude the redeeming virtues of her characters or ignore the unsubduable heroisms of the human spirit that have ever illuminated the darkest and most tragic passages of history." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '39 400w

"A sensitive, original novel, pardonably overwrought."

+ New Repub 100:224 S 27 '39 30w

"A really remarkable first novel. 'Five Destinies' is a book of truth and tenderness and pity as well as of that genuine subtlety which does not obscure but follows and makes distinct the many intricately involved threads which weave the woof of even the simplest human personality. . . 'Five Destinies' has in it much that is beautiful; it seems to have been written out of a deep, almost heart-crushing experience, and to be entirely genuine." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 S 10 '39 850w

New Yorker 15:78 S 9 '39 40w

REINER, ANNA—Continued

"Miss Reiner's dreamy and strained world is one familiar in post-war German novels: her people, even her children, have no hope, believe in no miracles. Therefore, although they are excellently drawn, individual and sympathetic, their tragedy is undramatic. They do not struggle: they only await the carrying out of a sentence long deferred." K. S.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 9 '39 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p549 S 23 '39 450w

REINHARD, JOHN REVELL, ed. and tr. Mediaeval pageant. 660p $4; text ed $3 Harcourt [15s Dent]

808.8 Legends. Literature, Medieval. Short stories—Collections (W) 39-9021

A collection of stories chosen from the works of the romancers and tale tellers of the Middle Ages. The compiler has re-translated many of them, adapted them, and set them in a framework similar to the Canterbury tales or the Decameron—this time a group of congenial spirits gathered in an Irish monastery. Bibliography. Index.

"Though there is much here that is likely to make a pedant wince, Mr. Reinhard shows himself a sufficiently good scholar and always keeps in mind the needs of the average reader. In no other single volume, so far as I know, are there gathered so many tales, or of so richly varied a sort." J. K. M.

+ — Cath World 149:760 S '39 310w

"Mr. Reinhard . . . places the serious student in his debt, and provides the general reader with some entertaining hours." C. R. Lloyd

+ Manchester Guardian p5 My 30 '39 390w

New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 50w

New Statesman & Nation 18:908 D 16 '39 150w

"The shortcomings of 'Mediaeval Pageant' are more than outweighed by its virtues. For it contains, after all, a large collection of rousing good tales—lively in their originals and not dulled by translation. Hardly any one will not find some stories here to amuse him; and he will find them here when he could hardly have found them elsewhere. The book represents an immense labor of search, and a commensurate success in finding." W. R. Trask

+ — N Y Times p14 My 14 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:87 Ap 8 '39 30w

"This book follows no other order or principle except that one good story leads to another, and that all of them are old, coming from somewhere between the tenth century and the sixteenth, and that most of them are new, having been forgotten long ago and decently embalmed by scholars on a catafalque of footnotes. It's good to have them alive again for easy shirtsleeve persons to read in good, straightforward English. You will want to keep them about you for those hours when you tire of modern novels and are willing to listen to the story-tellers of an age which asked of its fiction, not psychoanalysis or social significance, but that something astonishing or blood-curdling or richly comic should keep happening all the time." G. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 22 '39 210w

"Much enthusiastic research has gone to the making of this highly individual book, but the presentation of the matter will not escape criticism. The expedient of assembling a number of historical characters from many centuries and grouping them together for conversational purposes in the hall of a Welsh castle was perhaps unnecessary to give force to the magnificent material with which Mr. Reinhard deals, and the dialogue—usually imaginary—which is interposed between the stories does not add to the value of the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Jl 1 '39 420w

REISCHAUER, ROBERT KARL. Japan, government-politics. 221p maps $1.70 (7s 6d) Nelson

952 Japan—Politics and government 39-3379

"Japanese political thought, organization and history in simple terms, by a young Princeton professor, killed at Shanghai in 1937. Selected bibliography and glossary." Foreign Affairs

---

"The volume should prove particularly useful for reading in comparative government courses in which but a few days can be given to Japanese affairs. Inevitably, such an abbreviated explanation of Japanese government contains some statements which can easily be questioned; but these do not greatly detract from the book's value as a readable introduction." C. B. Fahs

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:1125 D '39 240w

Foreign Affairs 18:174 O '39 20w

"Dr. Reischauer and his literary executors have performed a most useful task. The contention that Japanese politics can be understood only in the light of the historical background peculiar to Japan is unassailable. If the book has a weakness it is in a failure always to point out in the details of recent political life the manner in which that background has been determinative. The hiatus between the introductory sections and the second part of the volume is, however, partly atoned for in an illuminating, though brief, concluding chapter." K. S. Latourette

+ Pol Sci Q 54:309 Je '39 460w

REISS, WINOLD, and SCHWEIZER, ALBERT CHARLES. You can design. (Whittlesey house publication) [128p] il spiral binding $3.75 (17s 6d) McGraw

745 Design, Decorative 39-2442

" 'Whether you realize it or not, the power of creating forms and patterns lies within you, and you should give yourself the pleasure that comes from this kind of self-expression.' This book is mainly an application of the principle thus laid down in the foreword. It carries many plates showing how designs can be devised out of almost anything, from scribble drawings and abstract floral, animal, and human forms to landscapes and groups of objects; and by the use of line, contrasts of black and white, or color. The suggestions are arranged in increasing order of difficulty, and there is just enough explanation to suggest how to go and do likewise, but not just to copy." J Home Econ

---

Booklist 35:266 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by Ruth Batchelder

Boston Transcript p1 My 27 '39 310w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 1 '39 250w

J Home Econ 31:261 Ap '39 160w

Pratt p19 summer '39

REITH, CHARLES. Police idea; its history and evolution in England in the eighteenth century and after. 262p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

352.2 Police—Great Britain. Crime and criminals—Great Britain. Great Britain—Social conditions [39-4657]

"Every student of the history of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century is struck by two things: the great and growing ferocity of the penal code, and the great and growing weakness of the provision for the maintenance of order. Mr. Reith has devoted his energies to discovering the causes of this weakness. . . Thus he gives an account of the London and Westminster Police Bill introduced by Sir Archibald Macdonald, Pitt's Solicitor-General, in 1785 and of its defeat by the strong forces of the City of London. It might have been supposed that the Gordon Riots would have convinced everybody of the necessity for reform, but the dread of French methods and the jealousy with which the City clung to its privileges were too much for the reformers. Pitt had to give way and the reform was put off for forty years until Peel took it in hand." Times [London] Lit Sup

Eng Hist R 54:183 Ja '39 260w

"The limited scope of the work gives the author an opportunity for discussion of detail. But the situation in the early nineteenth century is so entirely different from ours that the principles involved in those days seem almost medieval. Mr. Reith, however, has given a very interesting account of a vanished civilization." C. D. B.

Ethics 49:386 Ap '39 130w

"Of the men of whom the author writes, only John Wilkes—probably because of the author's considerable animosity toward that reputedly very unpleasant martyr—seems alive. The book, on the whole, dwindles away from a good start." S. J. R.

— + Harvard Law R 52:724 F '39 170w

"Mr. Reith is at his best when describing the problems of crime and violence which at one time seemed insoluble; he is less interested in the debates and committees which sought a solution, and his evident boredom has at one moment made him nod so gravely as to make Perceval Prime Minister four years after his assassination. But on the whole this is an important book of lasting value." A. J. P. Taylor

+ — Manchester Guardian p5 S 16 '38 350w

"A most useful piece of research."

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:704 O 29 '38 250w

"A valuable and interesting short study of a rather neglected question."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p93 F 11 '39 430w

RENAULT, MARY. Promise of love [Eng title: Purposes of love]. 361p $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Longmans]

39-5769

Love story of a young nurse in training and an assistant pathologist, both employed in an English provincial hospital.

"With a fluid technique rare in a first novel, Miss Renault tells a story of emotional and psychological development which is engrossing because of, rather than in spite of, its familiarity. . . The writing is excellent, the portrayal of the principal characters convincing and moving, the description of life in an English hospital interesting, the narrative swift and dramatic." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Mr 12 '39 700w

"A well written novel of young and very serious love done with full modern accompaniments, and lots of analysis."

New Repub 98:232 Mr 29 '39 40w

"The background, a hospital in the Midlands, is admirably drawn; and if there are people who do not understand why there is a shortage of candidates in the nursing profession, they have only to read this book. . . This first novel is fluent and intelligent, but one does not look forward to its successor without alarm." Roger Galway

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:290 F 25 '39 170w

"On a double count 'Promise of Love' strikes me as an unusually excellent first novel. There is a fusion between background and personal drama, between inner and outer reality, which enriches and dignifies both. The story of Mic and Vivian would not be nearly so arresting as it is if one were not so sharply aware of the pressure of their environment. . . When one adds to this that Mary Renault's style has a sure, fluid quality, that she possesses humor as well as sensitiveness, that even her minor characters are shrewdly drawn—the sum total is quite impressive." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 12 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:94 Mr 11 '39 20w

"If, as may be apparent, this first novel is a 'young' book, it has to its credit the characteristic virtues of sincerity and honesty. The hospital scenes have an impressive authenticity, and are something of a relief from the strains and stresses occuring in this notable story of modern love." Norah Hoult

Sat R of Lit 19:7 Mr 18 '39 340w

"The story progresses with increasing power and is a good story. Nevertheless it would have been a better one, and would even have gained in intensity, had it been told with more reticence, with less insistence on the physical side, on undressings and dressings, mutual bathings and dryings. These detract from, or at any rate distract attention from, the spiritual relation, which after all is the only relation that is interesting." Forrest Reid

— + Spec 162:320 F 24 '39 140w

"This story the author has told with humour, a supple intelligence and a peculiarly feminine sensitiveness, which should earn her a large public, particularly of women. Her minor characters are drawn with a sureness and an economy which suggest that she will do even better when she has stripped her style of some of its vivacity and fined it down into a harder and more austere vein."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 25 '39 380w

RENN, LUDWIG, pseud. See Vieth von Golssenau, A. F.

RENO, ESTHER WATSON. The pup called Cinderella: pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [32p] $1.25 Bobbs

39-21778

Picture-story book about some very haughty dogs and an ingratiating Bedlington puppy who won the blue ribbon away from them.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 O 8 '39 150w

Cath World 150:373 D '39 50w

"The Bedlington, that shy and ingratiating dog, deserves a better introduction to literature as a personality than this story gives him, for the text is without emphasis and none of the individual qualities of the breed are brought out here, but the pictures, in just the right tone of gray, picked out with lemon-yellow and black, are delightful. They supply a humor generally lacking in the text, and are, in addition, highly decorative." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 O 1 '39 270w

REWALD, JOHN. Gauguin. See Gauguin, P.

REWALD, JOHN. Maillol. See Maillol, A.

REYNOLDS, GERTRUDE M. (ROBINS) (MRS LOUIS BAILLIE REYNOLDS). It is not safe to know. 273p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

39-30069

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Ag 20 '39 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 80w

"All this might have made an enthralling story if the author had only been able to make her occultists convincing. As it is, they impress one as rather clumsy devices intended to add interest to a tale that is sorely in need of something to make it worth while." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ag 20 '39 220w

New Yorker 15:80 S 9 '39 40w

"Mystery overshadowed by mystic mumbo-jumbo and much perfervid sentiment. Some specially spooky scenes and highly fantastic finish."

Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 16 '39 30w

REYNOLDS, MARTHA MAY. Children from seed to saplings. 337p il $2.50 (15s) McGraw

136.7 Child study. Growth (W) 39-14069

"This book presents summaries of successive stages of the growth and development of children from before birth to the eighteenth birthday. It is intended to serve as a guide for the scientific study of children and is based on the premise that through an understanding of children adults can better understand themselves." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 35:374 Jl 15 '39

"The pleasant, nontechnical style of this book is suggested by its title. The author, formerly professor of child study at Vassar College, possesses both technical training in child development and long firsthand observation of their ways."

\+ J Home Econ 31:584 O '39 60w

REYNOLDS, NEIL B., and MANNING, E. L., eds. Excursions in science. (Whittlesey house publication) 307p $2.50 McGraw

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (W)

This volume contains materials first delivered as radio talks on a program sponsored by the General Electric Company and called The Science Forum. These talks were "designed to present the meaning, scope, and several purposes of modern scientific research and engineering in language that could be understood by the intelligent layman." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by H. N. Gardner

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 20 '40 130w

"Ranging in subject matter from astronomy to physiology, from atomic physics to archeology, they represent the knowledge of experienced scientists. Some names are well known; others should be better known. All have written in extremely simple language and in rather brief form." A. H. Compton & others

\+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 D '39 700w

RHEA, ROBERT. Dow's theory applied to business and banking. 131p $2 Simon & Schuster

380.123 Dow, Charles Henry. Business conditions—Forecasting 38-37869

A brief summary and explanation of the Dow theory, its history and record of accuracy in forecasting trends and movements in business, stock market, and banking.

Am Econ R 29:157 Mr '39 30w

Booklist 35:152 Ja 1 '39

Reviewed by J. L. Snider

Harvard Business R 17:373 spring '39 280w

Management R 28:35 Ja '39 50w

Special Libraries 30:99 Mr '39

RHOADES, WINFRED. Meeting the challenge of life. 187p $1.75 Lippincott

170 Conduct of life. Christian life 39-24676

A book of inspirational advice by the author of The Self You Have to Live With (Book Review Digest, 1938). Contents: Life's challenging paradox; What pulls your strings? From chaos to clarity; Coming to terms with life; The most difficult task in the world; The art of forgetting; On meeting Hurlothrumbo; Living up to your possibilities; Sources of power.

"The book is inspiring rather than 'inspirational.' That is, it is meant to encourage thinking rather than to provide an emotional substitute for thought."

\+ Books p22 N 26 '39 200w

Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 50w

Wis Lib Bul 35:211 D '39

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RICE, ALICE CALDWELL (HEGAN) (MRS CALE YOUNG RICE). Our Ernie. 234p $2 Appleton-Century

39-27823

Our Ernie is the important member of a happy-go-lucky Kentucky family. Altho a friendly youth, Ernie got mixed up in everything from love to an international spy case, but his incorrigible good nature always helped to extricate him from his difficulties.

Booklist 36:68 O 15 '39

"All in all, it is safe to say that the Alice Hegan Rice clientele will give Ernie a big hand." Lisle Bell

Books p11 S 24 '39 330w

"The story is a happy-go-lucky hodgepodge of buoyant entertainment, with backers of 'Our Ernie' winning all bets." Beatrice Sherman

\+ N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 320w

New Yorker 15:70 S 30 '39 50w

"Alice Hegan Rice will always be the author of 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' to the reading public. That story of that down-at-heels but up-at-heart family life made the whole country laugh when it first appeared and has kept readers looking for another one like it ever since. 'Our Ernie' is not that other, although it has some of the homely humor and some of the sharp wit expected from it. . . The funniest scenes are in the daily life of the Bossels and their friends, and the least credible ones are those which show Ernie hot-foot after the scheming villain." G. G.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 23 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p704 D 2 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

RICE, CALE YOUNG. Bridging the years. 269p il $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 39-21595

Autobiography of an American writer, a poet and dramatist, in which the author has concentrated chiefly on his career as a poet, bringing his book to a conclusion with an essay: Poetry's Genii, first published in Poet Lore. There are, however, many stories of literary acquaintances, and an affectionate picture of the author's wife—and frequent collaborator—Alice Hegan Rice. Index.

Booklist 36:43 O 1 '39

Reviewed by C. G. Stillman

Books p13 S 17 '39 950w

"Though there is discernible a disquieting air of being on the defensive and some lack of warmth in Mr. Rice's appraisals, nevertheless brief glimpses of dozens of literary celebrities and pictures of an almost idyllic bookish life make the book enjoyable to the ordinary reader as well as provocative to the poetry lover." W. K. R.

\+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 S 23 '39 700w

"This book looks at poetry and at people from the point of view of a personality that is as definite as it is distinguished." Katherine Woods

\+ N Y Times p5 S 10 '39 550w

"An agreeable volume of memoirs and comment which disclaims thoroughness either as autobiography or criticism."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 1100w

Time 34:59 Ag 21 '39 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p679 N 25 '39 240w

RICE, CRAIG. 8 faces at 3. 308p $2 Simon & Schuster 39-32376

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p36 N 12 '39 100w

"A fast and funny mystery, with the clever detection done between laughs. I am glad to learn that Helene and Jake will be at it again soon." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 70w

"There is a mystery in the book, and it is a genuine puzzler, but the main theme is alcohol." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 D 17 '39 160w

"Lively as a cricket."
+ New Yorker 15:92 N 11 '39 40w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 11 '39 40w

RICE, ELMER L. American landscape; a play in three acts. 145p $2 Coward-McCann
812 (W) 39-27050

Play based upon American customs and ways of living. In order to have a peaceful ending to a long life, an elderly Connecticut shoe manufacturer decided to sell the family business to a chain store company, and the family home to a Nazi culture group. The other members of the family, including ancestors long dead, protested, and the "American way" won.

Booklist 35:202 F 15 '39

"A fine and high minded attempt to dramatize the impulse to carry on our society, in the midst of a changing world after what we call the American way. . . Unfortunately, the material of the play does not seem to get dramatized, it does not quite come to emotional life. And the confusion which results from various ghosts of the past coming in and out does not help any." W. P. Eaton
Books p20 Ap 16 '39 160w

" 'American Landscape' shows Elmer Rice more concerned about some large current problems than about individuals, and therefore not in theater mood. The play is done with much earnestness and technical dexterity. . . It is a little astonishing that the playwright should have set himself the task he did, and more astonishing that he came as near as he did to making a play."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 18 '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

"In intention at least Elmer Rice's play is admirable. It shows too that Mr. Rice has abandoned his somewhat jejune attitude toward social questions, and has emerged a believer in the American tradition of democracy. In 'American Landscape' he no longer genuflects before the altar of the Kremlin. . . Mr. Rice evidently thinks that in New England people not only believe in ghosts, but are not surprised when they appear—even when two of them are Moll Flanders and Mrs Harriet Beecher Stowe. It is right here that Mr. Rice shows the weakness of his method. Ghosts are perfectly legitimate meat for a dramatist, but they must not be introduced into a purely realistic setting and among realistic people without some atmospheric preparation." Grenville Vernon
+ — Commonweal 29:273 D 30 '38 300w
(Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 147:700 D 24 '38 200w

Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 97:230 D 28 '38 250w

"It is not Mr. Rice's best play: any Connecticut shoe merchant with the same problem will find no answers here." Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p18 F 26 '39 170w

Reviewed by John Anderson
Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ap 29 '39 120w

"The entire play runs its course through discussions that are arresting and often effective, but at no point does it assert itself in terms of the theatre. Mr. Rice's characters are drawn in chalk on a blackboard; they are symbols rather than people; and though his equations evoke interest, they never stir the imagination nor quicken the pulse with that sense of conflict and conquest which is the theatre's peculiar magic." Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:87 F '39 1150w
Wis Lib Bul 35:48 Mr '39

RICE, MERTON STACHER. The man with the hope; ten sermons. 134p $1 Abingdon
252 Sermons 39-10235

Collection of sermons by the pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church, Detroit. Contents: The man with the hope; Liquidating devotion; Who did that? The If of the cross; Bring the live to life; Not to condemn but to save; The delayed coronation; The spiritual basis of security; So loved—; The burning heart.

"A good book of sermons, warm, evangelical and positive, indicating the general lines of Christian assault on the hopelessness of the times." F. G. Ensley
+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 3 '39 40w
Christian Century 56:419 Mr 29 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p6 My 8 '39 300w

RICHARDS, EDWARD AMES. Time strikes. 111p $1.25 Columbia univ. press [6s 6d Oxford] 811 39-14265

Poems by a young New England author. They are arranged in sections headed: In the first person; In the second and third persons; The town; The war; Hymns; The single tone. Many of the poems have been previously published in American periodicals.

"Mr. Richards's observation is crisp and certain; his technique unusually firm, precisely manipulated. The influence of Robert Frost (to whom the volume is dedicated) is pardonably apparent. 'Mayflower' specifically follows the conversational-comment pattern individualized by Frost. Mr. Richards, however, like Mark Van Doren, prefers to analyze the minute and particular object—the object being considered primarily in its private relation to the individual, whereas Frost more often considers the object in relation to the universal. . . Mr. Richards's portraits in the middle grouping are sympathetic, but lack the sharp, unmistakable bite. He has little gift for satire: the sonnets on war fail of their best intentions." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p12 Jl 16 '39 250w

"It is a hard thing to be harsh toward a beginning poet, and it would be rash for any one to say that he will not later find what now is lacking, for there are authors of far worse books than Mr. Richards who later have gone very far. But the fact is that the one poem in this volume which the reader cannot forget not only is influenced by Frost but would be accepted as his work if signed with his signature. And something more than that has to be done." T. C. Chubb
N Y Times p5 Jl 30 '39 130w

"Over a period of five years, in which Mr. Richards states he has made a new beginning after twenty years of writing poetry, he has become adept at rhyming and is now ready to be less conscious of the tools of his craft in saying whatever he wishes to say. He succeeds admirably in this first book in conveying one definite attitude, summing up in concise language certain accepted opinions. His readers' reactions will depend largely upon their personal attitudes toward such conventionalities. In any event a poet who can turn out such lyrics as Iron, and Stoic deserves the attention of poetry readers." Margaret Walker
+ Poetry 55:220 Ja '40 500w

RICHARDS, E. A.—Continued

"Mr. Richards is a mental poet in the sense that he is always master of the instinctive experience upon which he feeds. . . But although the tone and temper of his verse is intellectual and in such poems as 'Hymn to Man,' a little thin and bloodless, it is never unduly complex. . . It reflects a mind that is continually making discoveries, revealing or merely curious, in the familiar, and recording them with a sensitive precision."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p495 Ag 19 '39 100w

RICHARDS, MRS LAURA ELIZABETH (HOWE). What shall the children read? il. by C. B. Falls. 62p $1 (3s 6d) Appleton-Century

028.5 Children's literature (W) 39-21349

Four essays on children's reading. The author, who has written books for children for more than fifty years, divides her work into: A—apple pie, a plea for the alphabet; nursery lore; song and story; and the vision splendid, about the English Bible, and the work of Shakespeare.

Booklist 36:81 N 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Ja 28 '40 70w

"A vigorous, spicy commentary, its 19th century flavor enhanced by just the right number of the right kind of drawings." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 30 '39 140w

Christian Century 56:1078 S 6 '39 30w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 150w

"It contains more words of wit and wisdom than are often found in a book on children's reading. I give it a high place beside Samuel McChord Crothers' Miss Muffet's Christmas Party, published in 1902. Both are books by true lovers of reading at all stages of life. Both are free from pedantry and program and blessed with a sense of humor that is life-giving and both books take a natural place among the children's books in a library." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 15:295 S '39 70w

"Mrs. Richards writes out of her own golden experience and with her inborn humor and literary judgment. The book is warmly recommended to young mothers especially." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:389 N '39 50w

"As important as the listing of titles is the tonic and clear-sighted fashion in which the author writes about essential books for children —and about the fact that books are an essential. This little book is packed full of common sense, humor and charm. Young mothers will find it invaluable, for in these few pages it lays the foundation for a lifetime of reading." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 N 19 '39 200w

"I recommend it to parents both as good reading and as a practical handbook." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 15:86 N 25 '39 100w

Springf'd Republican p12 N 24 '39 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup xxiv N 18 '39 250w

Wis Lib Bul 35:194 N '39

RICHARDS, LENORE, and TREAT, NOLA. Quantity cookery; menu planning and cookery for large numbers. rev ed 343p $2.50 Little

641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. Menus 39-27515

"This completely revised edition of Quantity Cookery is designed to assist managers of food departments in restaurants, schools, colleges and institutions and to serve as a text for teachers of large-quantity cookery. In this edition that material from Quantity Cookery and Tea-Room Recipes which has proved most helpful has been revised and brought up to date. To this has been added much that is new, both in recipes and discussions of quantity-cookery problems." (Pref) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1922.

Booklist 35:349 Je 15 '39

"Persons responsible for church dinners should find many helpful suggestions in it."

+ Christian Century 56:611 My 10 '39 40w

J Home Econ 31:481 S '39 50w

RICHARDSON, EDWARD GICK. Physical science in modern life. 256p il $3 Van Nostrand [8s 6d English universities]

530 Physics [39-9164]

Study of recent knowledge in the physical sciences, written primarily for the layman. It deals with diverse topics—streams and eddies in water and air, wave motion, broadcasting behavior of colloid systems, exploration of the stratosphere, etc. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 24:29 Ap '39

"Dr. Richardson has produced a delightful volume. It is a streamlined story of the accomplishments of modern physics as they are manifested to the average person in his everyday life. One seems to flow through the volume without producing any signs of mental turbulence. It provides smooth easy reading due to the meticulous care of the author in using only the minimum number of necessary words to put across his ideas, and a literary efficiency achieved by the careful choice of the right words." John O'Neill

+ R of Scientific Instruments 10:296 O '39 1200w

"This book is noteworthy for its fresh presentation of various recent advances in physics which make contact with our everyday existence. . . It is well illustrated with plates and diagrams, and should appeal to general readers as well as to students of physics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 5 '38 60w

RICHARDSON, HENRY HANDEL, pseud. The young Cosima. 390p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Heinemann]

Wagner, Cosima—Fiction. Wagner, Richard —Fiction (W) 39-27208

Story of twelve years in the life of Cosima, daughter of Franz Liszt, beginning at the time when she was residing in Berlin in care of von Bülow's mother, covering the stormy years of her marriage to von Bülow, and ending with her departure to live with Wagner.

Booklist 35:253 Ap 1 '39

"We marvel at Miss Richardson's courage in making a novel out of a story which, however puzzling, has already been told, as well perhaps as it ever can be, in the letters of the chief actors. Every one of them was highly articulate, and all but Cosima were practised writers. . . In the conscientious attempt to report the episode as faithfully as possible, Miss Richardson has crammed her story with detail —in fact, she has overlooked it rather dangerously—and in the effort to get everything in she has tortured her style to a point where the book becomes extremely awkward." John Erskine

Books p14 Ap 2 '39 950w

"At the risk of some presumption, I should hazard that this is neither quite the book that Miss Richardson meant it to be, nor what we ought to expect when the author of an 'Ultima Thule' applies her talent to such potentially dramatic material." Charlotte Bassett

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 8 '39 800w

Cath World 149:763 S '39 160w

"As a novel the book has the inevitable price to pay for competing with biography. The illusion can never be complete, for the commentary of real life is never far off." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '39 140w

Reviewed by H. C. White

Commonweal 30:108 My 19 '39 480w

"There can be no question but that this is a great book, a worthy successor to those other great books 'Maurice Guest' and 'The Fortunes of Richard Mahony,' a vital, moving story in which the reader becomes so entangled that he will look up with wonder to find himself living in another and still more perplexing century." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 6 '39 500w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

Nation 148:408 Ap 8 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 98:258 Ap 5 '39 500w

"It is evident that Miss Richardson knows her way about the enormous mass of sources and authorities which she prints at the end of her book. . . Her equipment for the subject she has chosen is, in fact, admirable, nor will I grumble about the genre. There must be points in favour of fictionised biography, though it is difficult to remember what they are; at any rate, many readers like it, and a few good writers have used it. No; what kills The Young Cosima for me is the same defect that almost ruined The Fortunes of Richard Mahony; the quality of the writing." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

— + New Statesman & Nation 17:55 Ja 14 '39 500w

"Mrs. Richardson has set down an excellent story, with real feeling for character and a sure though never showy feeling for drama. But I am not sure that turning it all into fiction was wise, if only because the story itself is so 'fictional' in its situations that it ought to be factual in its approach. Everything may be perfectly in keeping with the facts; but scenes are now and then heightened, climaxes now and then timed; and there are conversations and incidents which must have been invented." Louis Kronenberger

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 2 '39 900w

"I wish I could honestly say that the author of that great book 'Ultima Thule' has here added to her solid reputation. I wish I could feel that 'The Young Cosima' is more than a carefully written failure. But a failure I think it is, the fault lying not in the author but in the subject." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 15:84 Mr 25 '39 600w

No Am 247:398 summer '39 130w

Pratt p29 autumn '39

"The slow, unrelenting development of [Cosima's] character, and the steady pressure that shaped it to the fanaticism into which it finally crystallized, are set forth so masterfully that no student of this human phenomenon could possibly lay the book down, having begun it; and no ordinary reader, looking for beautiful and fluent writing, and for an enthralling story, would want to. . . Of very few musical novels, if any, can it be said that they will take their places on library shelves as integral parts of the definitive literature on some serious subject. But that will surely be the well-deserved fate of 'The Young Cosima.'" Marcia Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Mr 25 '39 800w

"The Young Cosima is a pity. A disappointment. Reading it I frequently put the book down and wondered if, in fact, it was all a mistake about Henry Handel Richardson. . . It is a nice, neat book, like many others. What has happened to Henry Handel Richardson? . . Nevertheless, it certainly makes an interesting story. And this great novelist who has used it, bending her power, has shown Cosima by no means invented, but, as she must have been, wise, hard, alluring, true, courageous and generous. She is not so successful with Wagner, who can hardly have been quite the easy, coy, small stormer of these pages. But von Bülow is convincing, and their triangular situation must be, without reference to documents, true." Kate O'Brien

— + Spec 162:104 Ja 20 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 800w

Time 33:73 Mr 27 '39 300w

"Music is a dangerous theme for a novel but there is only half a page of purple in the whole book, where the author vainly tries to say what Tristan und Isolde is like. Her facts, barring two minor technicalities, are correct, and her skill in turning them to account may be illustrated from the deliberate and justifiable misplacement of one small detail."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 7 '39 440w

RICHARDSON, MARIE L. Work of Bruce Rogers. See American institute of graphic arts

RICHERT, GOTTLIEB HENRY. Retailing; principles and practices of retail buying, advertising, selling, and management. 432p il $2 Gregg

658.87 Retail trade 38-31208

"Planned as a basic textbook for introductory retailing courses in secondary schools, junior colleges, and vocational schools, the opening chapters . . . review briefly the origin and the development of retailing and the various types of retail stores. Beginning with store location and layout in chapter iii, various technical aspects of retailing are taken up. . . Then follow discussions of retail advertising, window and store display, types of customers, and the sales process. Three chapters are devoted to the study of merchandise materials, fashions, and customer service. The concluding chapters are given over to a study of personnel factors and relationships, store finance and accounting, credits and collections, and current trends in retailing." School R

Booklist 35:185 F 1 '39

Management R 28:375 O '39 40w

"The teaching of retailing in secondary schools is relatively new, and it is, therefore, difficult to suggest by implication or comparison what is the most suitable teaching content. In general, this book gives the impression of providing access to a wealth of instructural materials which will be most effective in the hands of a competent teacher experienced in retailing practices." E. A. Zelliot

School R 47:311 Ap '39 350w

RICKETTS, EDWARD F., and CALVIN, JACK. Between Pacific tides. 320p il $6 Stanford univ. press [27s Oxford]

591.92 Marine fauna. Invertebrates 39-8589

"An account of the habits and habitats of some five hundred of the common, conspicuous seashore invertebrates of the Pacific Coast between Sitka, Alaska, and northern Mexico." (Subtitle) The arrangement is according to characteristic habitat. Annotated systematic index and bibliography, and a general index.

Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

"The book is beautifully illustrated with informal photographic plates, which show the animals in natural poses and surroundings. . . The text, which is well written and not overly technical, deals at moderate length with the nature of the various habitats and discusses all the common animals that live in each. The authors have reduced technical description of species to a minimum. They do mention striking characters useful in identification, but devote most of their space to habits, economic importance to man and other matters of more general interest." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p11 Jl 9 '39 550w

Nature 144:1078 D 30 '39 200w

RIDDLE, DONALD WAYNE. The Gospels; their origin and growth. 305p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels. Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 39-31820

"The story of the origin and growth of the gospels, a growth which reflects the effect of social processes on the rise of Christianity. Of particular importance is Mr. Riddle's study of the period before the gospels were written and his treatment of the many other gospels written in addition to the familiar four—all of them variations on the sayings and stories of Jesus." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p13 F 4 '40 250w

"Specialists will find much that is stimulating in Dr. Riddle's work. But to make it of value to non-experts a thorough rewriting will be needed; a rewriting in which the labor of careful historical research will replace the facile solution of problems by invoking convenient formulas." B. S. Easton
— + Churchman 154:22 Ja 15 '40 240w

"An important book. . . Of special interest to other scholars in this field, the book will be valuable to all students and teachers of the New Testament." Elizabeth McCracken
+ Living Church 101:5 D 6 '39 40w

RIDER, PAUL REECE. An introduction to modern statistical methods. 220p $2.75 Wiley

311.2 Statistics 39-2952

"A discussion and explanation of the most widely used statistical methods developed by R. A. Fisher. Their application is illustrated by comparatively simple numerical examples. Fundamental classical concepts are developed, and an insight is given into the more modern methods." Management R

"For those who have some knowledge of statistical methods already and want to improve and extend it in accordance with the best present-day practice, this book will be found to be a useful and authoritative guide." G. A. Soper
Am J Pub Health 29:1263 N '39 250w
Management R 28:143 Ap '39 40w

Reviewed by M. J. Hagood
Social Forces 18:288 D '39 160w

RIDING, LAURA. Lives of wives. 323p $2.50 Random house [12s 6d Cassell]

40-2378

Three brief historical novels, each dealing with the wives of famous men. The times of Cyrus the Great and Croesus, of Philip and Alexander the Great, and of Caesar, Antony, and Herod the Great, are the periods of history singled out by the author.

"After the rather dreary going of the Persian section, 'Lives of Wives' takes on a certain curious interest. The effects are not always what the author intends, but the approach is markedly individualistic, almost perverse, while some of the stories are absorbing. Writing apparently from a vast contempt for men and a mystical overvaluation of women, Laura Riding achieves a triumph of a sort in taking so many of the great men of history and making them out such poor fish." Lorine Pruette
+ — Books p8 S 3 '39 600w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 500w
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 30 '39 600w

" 'Lives of Wives' will give refreshment and the utmost satisfaction to the reader who is already tired of the current stories about contemporary life and no-life. For this season at least there is certain to be no attempt at historical fiction so splendidly courageous, no achievement so complete." Thomas Moult
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 350w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:405 S 16 '39 300w

"Miss Riding has tried so hard to get away from the frivolous Winchell-like romances of history that her book sags on its own pretensions. If the book has no gossip, it has too many battles, abdications, accessions. . . As a historian in the grand style, Miss Riding is merely dull; it is when she rises to the morose and stubborn humanity of her kings and queens, when she gives them charming lies to tell and wonderful insights to suggest, that the book lives." Alfred Kazin
— + N Y Times p6 S 24 '39 900w

"A good idea, but in the earlier period Herodotus is more fun to read, and in the latter, when Miss Riding is writing of Aristotle, for example, she rather lets her imagination run away with her. Great men are probably a nuisance and their wives more interesting than historians give them credit for, but it's hard to prove."
New Yorker 15:78 S 9 '39 90w

"There are three excellent stories here; and excellently they are told, so far as the construction of the book goes. . . Yet the book will probably find few readers. For the general it is damaged by the effort, or lack of effort, that caused the inclusion of three stories under one tent. . . All in all a book which falls between two stools; a book to be read by serious students of history in their lighter moments. It is a pity this is so, for the material is there, and the skill, to have accomplished something far more important." Fletcher Pratt
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:16 S 9 '39 410w

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec 163:420 S 22 '39 260w
Time 34:90 S 11 '39 380w

"Throughout the work, the ancient background is brilliant, colourful and scholarly in detail, but there are no new lights; and, putting the book down, one is left with a feeling of flatness. That may have been the writer's intention. If that is so, the very negativeness of her thesis, that the great men of these ages were far less great than their women, has robbed her book of its legitimate vitality."
Times [London] Lit Sup p610 O 21 '39 450w

RIDLER, ANNE. Poems. 50p $2 (5s) Oxford

821

Thirty short poems by an English Shakespearean critic.

"Poems . . . this book is called, but a poem should be something that the mind can take in as a whole, and it is not easy for Mrs. Anne Ridler's headed entities to be taken in so. Even if her syntax were not difficult, as it is, if her versification were not gnarled, if her rhymes were not obscure, her content has often a complexity toilsome indeed to unravel." C. P.
— Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 7 '39 170w

"[These poems] evince an unusual fusion of intellectual and sensuous content with a craftsmanship that is precise, discriminating and highly original."
+ New Repub 100:280 O 11 '39 60w

"One catches traces of Donne, and occasional lines have the air of early lyric—but Mrs. Ridler makes her own material and stamps it with the mark of a firmly independent, although still immature, poet." Desmond Hawkins
+ — Spec 162:1140 Je 30 '39 140w

"It is the lack of mellifluous fluency combined with an unusual talent for writing in her own way which makes her verse interesting and original."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p345 Je 10 '39 550w

RIDLEY, MAURICE ROY. Poetry and the ordinary reader. 151p $1.50 Dutton [2d ed 3s 6d Dent]

808.1 Poetry. Poetics 39-20736

A book "to help readers enjoy poetry." The work had its origins in a series of radio talks. When these resulted in numerous questions from listeners it was decided to print the substance of the talks, adding more detailed treatment of some points and fuller illustrations. Index.

Booklist 36:40 O 1 '39

"The book is conservative and old-fashioned, and no doubt very sound. The greater part is, of course, taken up with the study of poetic form and device, and in this Mr. Ridley shows himself the kindly scholar." John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p13 O 26 '39 100w

"Careful reading and continued reference to Mr Ridley's comprehensive little book should prove not only illuminating and instructive but also distinctly helpful in the formation of critical standards and personal taste."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 7 '39 230w

Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

RIEDEL, FREDERICK CARL. Crime and punishment in the Old French romances. 197p $2 Columbia univ. press [10s Oxford]

841.1 Romances. Crime in literature 39-8313

"This useful study fills in the legal background for part of medieval French literature by examining aspects of crime in certain twelfth and thirteenth century romances, and comparing them with surviving thirteenth-century custumals. Romances selected are twenty-three distinguished by realism, including 'Durmart le Galois,' 'Le Roman de la Violette' and 'Yvain.'" (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"A novel contribution to the history of taste and morals as well as of criminal law."

+ Christian Century 56:158 F 1 '39 120w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 15 '39 150w

RIESENBERG, FELIX. Cape Horn; charts by William Briesemeister. 452p il maps $5 Dodd

983 Cape Horn. Voyages and travels. Explorers 39-27824

"The story of the Cape Horn region, including the Straits of Magellan, from the days of the first discoverers, through the glorious age of sail, to the present time; recounting the exploits of Magellan, Drake, Schouten, Fitzroy, Darwin, Melville, and many others, including the author's own experiences; wherein many new facts are brought to light, an important geographical discovery is made, and several great heroes of the sea, foremost of them John Davis, are for the first time given their due." (Subtitle) Index.

For biographical sketch of the author see Sat R of Lit 21:17 D 2 '39

Booklist 36:66 O 15 '39

"Captain Riesenberg has written novels about seafaring life, as well as books about his sailings, but with this book he is at his best as historian. With great skill he compresses the histories of conquerors of the sea into vignettes, expanding when their adventures touch Cape Horn and Magellan Straits. . . It is all presented in what seems to be an easy and effortless way, but which is, manifestly, the result of hard work, independent judgment, wide knowledge and careful thought. It is a book by a man who has experienced, and who has read widely after his active experiences came to an end." C. J. Finger

+ Books p5 O 1 '39 1150w

"Cape Horn is a distinguished contribution to sea history. Hitherto nothing of such sweeping dimensions has been written about the epic of geography embracing the discoveries and explorations in this wild, forbidding region. . . His willingness to explore new documentary sources has paid a particularly valuable dividend—the clearing up of the mystery of Sir Francis Drake's missing Elizabeth Island." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 21 '39 650w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 101:147 N 22 '39 400w

"Captain Riesenberg's 'Cape Horn' is a book that must be put down as one of the truly great contributions to the literature of the sea. Painstaking and thorough to the last degree, sound to the last gasket and tholepin, it is, nevertheless, so handled in what Matthew Arnold called the grand manner that the reader is unaware of the years of research which preceded the laying of the keel. From now on none can boast of his 'sea shelf' until he has added to it this gorgeous postlude on the great voyagers of the world." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p4 S 24 '39 1650w

"A grand big volume for mariners, whether old salts or armchair sailors."

+ New Yorker 15:79 S 23 '39 50w

" 'Cape Horn' is not only a stirring book, but a noteworthy contribution to letters." A. C. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 30 '39 550w

RIESENBERG, FELIX, and ALLAND, ALEXANDER. Portrait of New York [phot. by Alexander Alland]. 213p il $5 Macmillan

917.471 New York (city)—Description. New New York (city)—Social conditions (W) 39-11281

Sixty-four full-page photographs illustrate this panoramic study of present-day New York city. "Mr. Riesenberg, as always, is cryptic, allusive, lyric, and full of lively phrases, with perhaps a touch of advertising-copy over-writing here and there. There's nothing orderly about his survey, but he manages to pack a great deal of the town, particularly of the town of thirty years ago, into his pages. He ends his commentary in bang-up Thomas Wolfe-Walt Whitman style, with an evocative catalogue of Manhattan that makes you realize, as usual, how little you really know about New York." (New Yorker)

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

"Although not strictly a guide book—it often omits both addresses and directions—'Portrait of New York' offers such fascinating descriptions, both verbal and pictorial, of the many facets of New York's character that it might even stir some natives to inspect their home town. Mr. Riesenberg's text is sometimes as undisciplined as the scenes and tempo of the city he tries to catch in prose, but he shows a compensating facility for tying historical fact to current phenomenon and then for describing them in poignant epigram." Jack Steele

+ Books p6 My 28 '39 500w

"Riesenberg's prose is fascinating in itself, fascinating in so far as it troubles one to discover just how he achieves such a powerful, and ominous effect. There is no question that he writes in a manner peculiarly fitted to pin down his diffuse and virtually inexhaustible subject. . . A fine book. The choice of photographs, in the documentary sense, is not a final one by any means. But in the aggregate, taken one by one, they are artistically sound and without affectation. The book should serve as a mark for its successors." E. B. Garside

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 13 '39 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 56:708 My 31 '39 360w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 15 '39 80w

N Y Times p5 My 14 '39 700w

RIESENBERG, F., and ALLAND, A.—Cont.

"Books about our town are coming down the chute in carloads. Most of them are not worth your attention. One, at least, is—'Portrait of New York.' . . . Mr. Alland's camera does noble work. He's conservative in his technique, and all the more telling and genuinely illustrative for that reason. When he takes a picture of a Library lion, it looks exactly like a Library lion. . . . This self-restraint has resulted in a first-rate picture book." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:100 My 13 '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 35:144 Jl '39

RIEZLER, WALTER. Beethoven; with an introd. by Wilhelm Furtwängler; tr. from the German by G. D. H. Pidcock. 312p il $3 Dutton

B or 92 Beethoven, Ludwig van 39-15936

In this interpretation of Beethoven the author attempts to answer the question: "What is the essence of Beethoven, and what do his works mean?" After an outline of his life and a consideration of Beethoven and absolute music, the greater part of the book is devoted to a detailed analysis of his most important works. Glossary of technical terms; chronological list of the more important works; bibliography; index.

"The supplementary notes, glossary, chronological list of the more important works, bibliography, and index have their share in turning out an eminently useful volume." Peter Bowdoin

+ Books p23 Mr 5 '39 130w

"The strait-jacket in which erudition now finds itself in Germany has resulted, once again, in a commonplace, adulatory attitude to the subject, from which it is impossible that anything really new could be said. . . . In the last (and longest) section of his book, the author, released from his ideological strait-jacket has much to say that is interesting, sound and illuminating."

— + New Statesman & Nation 17:66 Ja 14 '39 310w

"Walter Riezler's 'Beethoven' will prove to be an excellent guide for the seeker of Beethoven the musician. It is one of the works that comes from the small group of writers approaching the task with the critical eyes of the scholar and with the loving care of the sensitive musicians. While there is nothing essentially new in its pages, there is no work that offers as many new ideas to the English or American reader, for the author has obviously ransacked the whole literature usually not touched by critics and biographers." P. H. Lang

+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 25 '39 650w

"Mr. Riezler's analysis rarely goes too far. As a result of it one may find on every page of his book some suggestion which shows his sure insight helpful to the student. Unfortunately, like many German writers on music, he is too little conscious that there have been any others. . . . We would suggest that this book may be a useful companion to Tovey's 'Essays,' though, except in the case of the exhaustive Eroica analysis, it does not go so far. It has been well translated by Mr. Pidcock with the technical help of Mr. Alan Bush, so that in general it reads like an English book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 8 '39 550w

RIGGLEMAN, JOHN RANDOLPH, and FRISBEE, IRA NOBLES. Business statistics. 2d ed 790p il maps $4 McGraw

658.001 Business. Statistics 38-39094

Second edition of a textbook first published in 1932 (Book Review Digest, 1932). "The book has been expanded particularly with regard to machine tabulation, index numbers, and the analysis of business cycles and long-time trends, and a chapter has been added on the normal curve and the problem of sampling. The illustrative material has been brought up to date where feasible, and new illustrations have been added where necessary." (Pref. to the 2d ed) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:175 Ja 15 '39

"This book is wholly American. It contains no mention of English statistics and all its illustrations are from studies and investigations made in the United States. Yet it is the most practical book on business statistics which has as yet been published in this country [England]."

+ Economist 134:300 F 11 '39 550w
Management R 28:143 Ap '39 40w

RIGSBY, HOWARD. Voyage to Leandro; pictures by Henry Pitz. 242p $2 Harper

39-23981

Novel of adventure for older boys. In the eighties David Lester and his friend Charles fell under the spell of the pirate and outlaw, Jeremy Robb. Rebelling against parental rules they set off in the Shark for the South seas, but were wrecked on the rocky island of Leandro. There they found Robb, escaped from prison, and more than half mad. After weeks of excitement, the boys finally escaped from the island.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p28 N 12 '39 240w

"This is a superior adventure story for older boys. It is written with a dashing brilliance which can evoke either a sense of strange, almost macabre, horror, or the disillusion and discomfort of romance gone astray. It is full of tension which depends not so much upon circumstance or accident as upon human nature, and in particular the complexities of a tortuous, tragic character." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 10 '39 320w

RILEY, MARCENE. Daylight through Mexico. 255p il map $2.50 Humphries

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel

39-27276

Description of a seven weeks' conducted tour thru Mexico. The traveling was done by train or car, and all in daylight. The appendix contains such guidebook information as: ports of entry into Mexico; regulations for entering country; travel accomodations; information for motorists; comparative expenses; important cities en route; vocabulary list; and some sample itineraries. Map on endpapers. Index.

Booklist 35:268 Ap 15 '39

"History and tourist objectives are mixed in agreeable proportions and the whole is seasoned with good earthy facts about costs for taxis, true native handicrafts, translations of road signs and information for motorists. No guide to Mexico will ever be complete." Daniel Rochford

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 110w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Duino elegies; the German text, with an English translation, introduction, and commentary by J. B. Leishman and Stephen Spender. 130p $2 Norton [7s 6d Hogarth]

831 39-17406

These elegies, the last great work of the poet, were named for the castle of Duino on the Adriatic, where they were first conceived. In this translation the German original appears on pages opposite to the English version. The elegies, profoundly influenced by the author's bitterness after the World war, "are actually about the poet's attempt to build up the world again, inside himself, perfectly because invisibly." (New Statesman & Nation)

"At any time the volume would be a magnificent addition to poetry. At this time, when the difficult task of 'not understanding,' which was Rilke's chief occupation during the war years, is the common burden, the Elegies, as presented here, are an immeasurable gift." Babette Deutsch

+ Books p6 S 10 '39 1000w

"There can be no question of the fervor and originality of this poetry, but what of its value for life? Granting all its psychic vision and its marvellous sincerity, a twofold doubt remains. First, that its philosophy is merely an artist's philosophy, good for Rilke but not good for us. Second, that it was not even good for Rilke, since it is all so esoteric and withdrawn and may prove to be no more than the reductio ad absurdum of his own introspectiveness. . . . One thing is certain. For [understanding] Rilke the present volume is invaluable." Barker Fairley

Canadian Forum 19:126 Jl '39 500w

Reviewed by Charles Powell

Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 1 '39 400w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld

Nation 149:176 Ag 12 '39 700w

"With the Duineser Elegien we enter the inmost sanctuary of Rilke's temple. The difficulties of translation become almost insuperable, and Messrs. Leishman and Spender, probably rightly, have preferred accuracy to beauty; in this sense, their version is a considerable advance on that published in 1931. Profiting by the letters of the poet, and by several books written about him by German writers since that date, Mr. Leishman has been able to add an apparatus criticus that leaves little to be desired from the point of view of interpretation. There no longer remains any excuse for 'not understanding' this most important poem. . . I remain unconvinced that English hexameters are preferable to blank verse, in translating Rilke. The result, in the present case, sacrifices sound to sense. This is probably a good thing for those who have enough German to read the original, using the translation to verify the exact meaning of a particular line. But will those who can read only the translation appreciate more than a few strikingly harmonious passages, here and there? . . In spite of my admiration for the translators' courage and adroitness, I cannot help doubting it." Edward Sackville-West

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:900 Je 10 '39 900w

"Rilke cuts through the usual German melancholy and mysticism, through the ugly made-up words for made-up philosophies, to a reopening of the human heart. The operation is superb. What we realize from the poem is naturally what we are in sympathy with. But this is his real work, inward, beyond landscape: 'what had been given him to say, he had now said.' The Elegies were finished in the same year that T. S. Eliot's 'The Waste Land' was published. Each is an expression of the difficult feeling of our time; each is likely to become a 'classical' expression." P. M. J.

+ N Y Times p2 S 17 '39 900w

"Rilke's power over language was immense, and he could work in the most exigent forms. The 'Elegies,' however, are written in what seems to be a relatively untrammelled manner. Actually, their style, based for the most part on the hexameter, is laborious and condensed. The language everywhere is welded and weighted, and nowhere blurred or diffuse. Rilke, in his struggle to indicate the mystery of man's destiny, to 'open up a universe without barriers,' pushed language to extraordinary limits, suiting the range of his insight." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 15:84 Je 24 '39 950w

Reviewed by Kerker Quinn

Poetry 55:98 N '39 950w

"With the translation of the 'Duino Elegies' most of the work of Rilke, from the comparatively simple early prose to the late and often baffling poetry, is now available to the English reader. The newest, and in many ways the most important, of the presentations will enlarge the reader's conception of the Austrian poet who created a new German style. But it will not ensure Rilke a large American audience." Louis Untermeyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:10 Jl 15 '39 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 18 '39 90w

"There are few poets of whom it can be said as truly as of Rilke, especially in these magical Elegies, that his words stir up the unsuspected depths of suggestion and reflection in our own minds. All lovers of poetry owe a debt of gratitude to the translators for enabling them to enjoy a rare and remarkable poetical experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 17 '39 700w

Reviewed by Eugene Davidson

Yale R n s 29:172 autumn '39 950w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Translations from [his] poetry, by M. D. Herter Norton. 245p $2.50 Norton

831 (W) 39-1371

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 101:214 Ap '39 440w

"It is with regret that we find that in this instance Mrs. Norton's effort falls somewhat wide of her splendid mark. Wisely aware that a translator must not alter his poet's symbols, Mrs. Norton has aimed at a literal, almost line-for-line reproduction of Rilke's words and images, and striven to repeat his rhythms. In this respect she has been quite successful. . . Fortunately, the volume juxtaposes on alternate pages the German and the English: thus it by no means is love's labor lost. It has prime value for those who have some German, desire to read Rilke's poems in the original, but are baffled by his vocabulary and intricate style. Mrs. Norton indeed has provided them with a most delightful trot: it must awaken gratitude. For it can carry its riders into the most fascinating region in 'the paradise of the Idea' where Rilke thrones." Paul Rosenfeld

+ — Nation 148:182 F 11 '39 650w

"Mrs. Norton has not included any examples of the last lyrics, supremely beautiful and profoundly Rilkean. She gives the 'Marien-Leven' complete, without providing Rilke's previous reworking of Old Testament and Greek myths, so that this cycle does not link up with a solid body of Rilkean reinterpretation, as it should. But the German stands on the page, and can be examined. Anyone who possesses the inexplicable taste for great verse will recognize what is here, and be grateful for some aid toward further studies." Louise Bogan

+ — New Repub 98:78 F 22 '39 1300w

"Mrs. Norton has employed a dangerous method in her 'Translations From the Poetry of Rainer Maria Rilke,' but the result appears to have justified the method—that is, for the end that she had in view. . . The spiritual and idealistic temper of Rilke is fairly well presented in such an offering. How important that is to the English reader is a matter of decision by the individual. Rilke, to this commentator, has always seemed to be somewhat over-rated. The idea of constantly going back to him and rereading him (which is the test of all great poets) is not appealing." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p2 F 19 '39 470w

"Mrs. Norton places the German on one page and, opposite, Englishes it with generally intelligent, seldom oppressive literalness. . . Reading her versions aloud, with the left hand covering the German and without excessive regret that it needs to be translated at all, one finds genuine poems on the right pages, despite a few downright mistranslations and her occasional mistake of keeping too strictly to the word order of the German, which always the verb at the end of a dependent clause puts. Her notes on the poems are to the point." Kerker Quinn

RILKE, R. M.—Continued
+ Poetry 55:96 N '39 450w

Reviewed by Eugene Davidson
Yale R n s 29:171 autumn '39 210w

RIMBAUD, JEAN NICOLAS ARTHUR. A season in hell; tr. [with an introd] by Delmore Schwartz. ltd ed 99p $2.50 New directions 841

This is the first translation published in America of Arthur Rimbaud's prose poem Une Saison En Enfer, one of the landmarks of modern literature. French and English texts are printed [on opposite pages] and the translation is the work of the young poet Delmore Schwartz, author of In Dreams Begin Responsibilities. Schwartz has prefaced his version with an analysis of Rimbaud's role as poet and man. [Adapted from publisher's note].

"The translation has the merit of being literal though it naturally loses the quality of implication which is not only characteristic of the French but also a mark of Rimbaud's style. This work is not, of course, for general reading." W. J. Grace
Commonweal 31:351 F 9 '40 360w

" 'A Season in Hell' . . . ranks as the peak of [Rimbaud's] poetical genius and a very high peak in French letters it is. It is a book that must be read and reread if we are fully to digest its dramatic intensity although its first impact on the sensitive mind is profound and lasting. Delmore Schwartz has performed a great service in making 'A Season in Hell' so easily available to American readers." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '40 900w

" 'A Season in Hell' is magnificent and shattering because in it a boy of not quite nineteen who had plunged himself into vice and crime turns to inspect his reasons in an absolutely mature and ruthless fashion. . . This 'diamond prose' shines with a thousand facets, and I, for one, refuse to think it merely a by-product of its time. Its truth is absolute and inexhaustible." Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 15:60 Ja 27 '40 550w

"To readers of his version of 'A Season in Hell,' Delmore Schwartz comments upon the J. Sibley Watson translation of this heroic prose-poem of Rimbaud's in The Dial in 1920. 'It contained serious errors,' he asserts. . . Mr. Schwartz is living in a glass house and throwing stones. His own 'strict' version of the 'Season' and the seven poems included in it is anything but free from 'serious errors,' and in instances grossly paraphrastic. . . Nor does its style quite recapture the male violence, the sarcasm, and inordinate excitement with which Rimbaud conveyed the torments of his young soul. What distinction the translation possesses flows mainly from its consistent rhythmicality and the thoughtfulness of Schwartz's Introduction. The format of the slender volume, too, is graceful." Paul Rosenfeld
— + Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ja 20 '40 300w

RING, GEORGE CYRIL. Gods of the gentiles; non-Jewish cultural religions of antiquity. (Science and culture ser) 349p il map $3.50 Bruce pub.

290 Religions—History 38-39300

"This book is based on the lectures given by the author on the history of religions to his students of theology. It is an introductory study of the basic ideas and practises that characterized the forms of religious belief among the people of the Near East and of the Mediterranean district in pre-Christian and early Christian times." Commonweal

"On many counts Father Ring's book is a valuable addition to the Catholic book-shelf. The reviewer regrets the omission of some account of the religions of Asia Minor. In the matter of style, the occasional humorsome form of writing was found distracting. By every test the book is thoroughly worthy." W. J. McGarry + — America 60:647 Ap 8 '39 400w
Cath World 150:126 O '39 250w

"The material now presented to a wider audience is generously hailed by the general editor of the Science and Culture Series as 'a standard work' based on a background of solid historical science and intimate archeological research. Yet some of the author's observations and conclusions are in fact downright theological and moral judgments, with the result that his contribution is to be considered rather in the field of apologetics than in that of strictly historical science. . . He has added so much apologetic coloring that his volume develops definitely into a defense of revealed religion against all who in the name of archeological findings tend to identify the phenomena of pagan religions with those of Christianity, instead of comparing and contrasting them. In his final chapter Father Ring alludes to the problems thus raised, making some telling and useful observations regarding questions that may arise in the minds of students interested in a deeper study of the history of ancient religions." Thomas Michels
+ — Commonweal 30:26 Ap 28 '39 390w

RITCHEY, JAMES. Pattern making; rev. by Walter W. Monroe and Charles Wm. Beese and Philip Ray Hall. 233p il $2 Am. tech. soc.

621.72 Pattern making 38-33159

"A practical treatise for the pattern maker on woodworking and wood turning, tools and equipment, construction of simple and complicated patterns, modern molding machines and molding practice." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 35:176 Ja 15 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:59 O '38
Pratt p14 spring '39

RITNER, ANN. And some had wine. 314p $2.50 Mill
39-31532

Story of a middle-class American family, living always on the verge of poverty, but making the most of their advantages. The responsible one of the family is David, the older brother, whose courage and good sense in some measure offsets the muddling and incompetence of the rest of the family.

Booklist 36:215 F 1 '40
Books p10 D 24 '39 160w

"Unpretentious but extremely amusing story of an irresponsible family. . . A good family to drop in on some evening."
+ New Yorker 15:105 N 18 '39 60w

RITTENHOUSE, ISABELLA MAUD (MRS EARL H. MAYNE). Maud; ed. and arr. for publication by Richard Lee Strout. 593p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 (W) 39-27945

The author of this diary is Isabella Maud Rittenhouse, and the years covered are 1881 to 1895. The journal records Maud's life in detail and a good many of the family and social events of the day in the little town of Cairo, Illinois.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

"This is a fine escape from a troubled modern world. Sipe water was the only menace in Cairo. . . As Maud would say, 'Sweet Journal, you are wonderful.' I wouldn't have missed you for anything." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p3 O 15 '39 1050w

"Maud, in spite of the somewhat spicy suggestions of its jacket-blurb, seems to the present reviewer an only mildly entertaining series of extracts from the diary of a young girl living in rural Illinois during the 1880's and 1890's." K. B.

Cath World 150:631 F '40 140w

"Any young people of today who are interested in knowing what life was like 'when grandma was young,' need seek no farther. And any other claimants for the title of 'the last Victorian' must reckon with Maud."

Christian Century 56:1379 N 8 '39 80w

"Enchanting is Maud, to be recommended as a real addition to any choice circle of interests." E. C. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '39 700w

"It is all very cozy, slightly amusing now and then, and invariably warmed by the very evident sense of honest observation. Altogether here is a nice book to have by one's bedside, to be picked up and read in snatches as the mood may occur." E. S. Hertell

+ Churchman 153:38 D 1 '39 90w

"The wealth of her emotions gives depth and amusement to her diary; her rich intelligence adds keen pleasure to her comments; her happy heart inspires the lengthy record of her experiences with sparkles of delight. Maud is still alive, 'a pleased observer' of the popularity and excitement her published journals are creating." D. S. Rankin

+ Commonweal 31:167 D 8 '39 480w

New Repub 101:149 N 22 '39 40w

"The six hundred pages might have been somewhat condensed, but not at the expense of a single one of the chuckles which outnumber the pages." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p4 O 22 '39 1400w

"The journal is written in a tone of mingled skittishness, high-toned Victorian morality, and lively, girlish exuberance, and offers an amusing literary tintype of provincial manners in a now forgotten America."

+ New Yorker 15:102 O 14 '39 60w

"Her journal is very much of a piece. It is far too long, and would have profited enormously by rigorous editing and ruthless cutting. . . Nevertheless 'Maud' will delight those in the long line of readers who have rejoiced in the annals of a young lady's entrance into the world from the days of Evelina on. And the book is excellent Americana." Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:12 O 21 '39 650w

"The writer's vivacity sustains in unexpected degree a too voluminous record of introspection and experience—mostly the latter. As a whole, the work presents also a good deal of unconscious portrayal, which is of interest to students of temperament—especially of the 'literary' temperament and its egoism. For the rest there are concrete notes on life and manners in a middle-western town in the 'horse and buggy' age. There is rather less of the atmosphere of larger events than might be hoped even if Maud's sprightliness imparts life to her records of trivial occurrences."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 900w

"As fascinating reading as was ever found in an attic."

+ Time 34:88 O 23 '39 30w

RIVER, WALTER LESLIE. The Torguts. 364p map $2.50 Stokes

39-27940

At the end of the eighteenth century Catherine of Russia was setting one tribe against the other in southeastern Russia, to keep them from attacking the Empire. The Torguts, weary of this strategy, set out in January, 1771, to return to their ancient homeland in China. This story of the migration of a whole tribe, of the hardships endured en route, and the terrible conditions the survivors found when they arrived at their destination, has for central characters the young hero Subutai and the Princess Cedar-chab, whom he loved.

Booklist 36:111 N 15 '39

"To recite such a melancholy tale and keep it interesting is a task that requires skill and subtlety. Mr. River is not always up to par on subtlety, but his skill is admirable and ever-present. . . Mr. River keeps his large canvas of people and places and events well balanced, so that movement is smooth throughout, and a collective, or mural imprint, is left on the mind." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p4 O 29 '39 1150w

Reviewed by O. E. Schoen-Rene

Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 370w

Living Age 357:393 D '39 70w

Nation 149:532 N 11 '39 100w

"There is some quite brilliant writing in 'The Torguts,' and there is also some appallingly bad writing. So long as Mr. River is preoccupied with his Torguts en masse, so long, that is, as he is dealing with collective experience as modern as the flight from Catalonia or the migration from the Dust Bowl, his style is distinguished and the book is absolutely convincing. The moment he tries to individualize his Torguts, they are no more historical than the Ruritanians of the late Anthony Hope. Here in short are 'The Flight of a Tartar Tribe' and 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' combined and rewritten as a tract for the times." Michael Sayers

+ — New Repub 101:23 N 8 '39 420w

"There are perhaps 60,000 readers in the United States alone who will think that this is one of the finest novels they have ever come across. I confess that I am one of them. 'The Torguts' is one of those rare novels which develop 'atmosphere,' poetic thought and bittersweet emotion; it is one of those semi-true stories concerning far-off lands, strange peoples and intimate human relations. Unlike the majority of American novels, it breathes universality; it is not provincial or localized." Lloyd Eshleman

+ N Y Times p4 O 15 '39 800w

"Mr. River is at his finest when dealing with the Torguts as a whole, and particularly when he describes their suffering under what seem unbearable vicissitudes of fortune. . . He rises to impressive heights when he drops his cinema love story with a thud and concentrates instead on the sufferings, heroisms, and delusions of his Torgut horde." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:98 O 14 '39 900w

Pratt p24 winter '40

"To the legend of this pilgrimage Mr. River lends his distinguished talent for drama and description. The passage through the desert cannot but remind one of the similar transit in 'The Grapes of Wrath.' Nor is the ultimate failure of the Torguts to find freedom in the Promised Land at all unlike the final tragic disillusionment of Mr. Steinbeck's Americans in California. . . The whole work bespeaks an imagination that borders on intuition, that rare and elusive component of an author's creative phantasy. In its delicate and accurate impact lies the secret of this beautiful novel." Katharine Anthony

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 O 21 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 22 '39 700w

ROBBINS, HOWARD CHANDLER. Preaching the gospel. 151p $1.50 Harper

251 Preaching 39-22332

"The John Bohlen Lectures for 1938. The book offers a plan for a year's preaching appropriate to the seasons of the Christian year. The calendar followed is not identical with but closely resembles that of the Anglican communion. Dr. Robbins is professor of pastoral theology in the General theological seminary and a preacher and writer of note." Living Church

ROBBINS, H. C.—Continued

"His book is scholarly in its easy familiarity with the tradition of Christian preaching. If it seems conventional, remote, unexciting, it may be because I read it in company with Dr. Root's volcanic volume." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p31 D 10 '39 100w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '39 60w

"It might be felt that his dealing with theological matters is a bit too orthodox, particularly in his treatment of the death of Christ, and his suggestions for some days, as for instance Thanksgiving day, would be beyond the comprehension of an average congregation. But he is not giving sermon outlines and he is making valuable suggestions which will stimulate the thinking of his readers. The book will help preachers a great deal in getting out of preaching ruts. It will bring out of hiding many subjects which have been neglected for years, and enrich the preaching of him whose line has become monotonous." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 153:17 N 1 '39 180w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken

Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 50w

ROBBINS, LIONEL CHARLES. The economic basis of class conflict, and other essays in political economy. 277p $2.25 (6s) Macmillan

330.1 Economics [39-29625]

"[This volume] is a collection of papers falling into two sections, for the first and more important of which the title essay sets the tone. Group and social interests clash where monopoly gives scope for the pursuit of restricted buying or selling. . . Part II turns to a different theme—public finance in its bearing first on the trade cycle and then on long-run economic and social developments." Christian Science Monitor

---

Reviewed by W. N. Loucks

+ Ann Am Acad 207:233 Ja '40 550w

"Some parts of Professor Robbins' argument are less convincing than others. . . But these disagreements are rarely such as to prevent acceptance, whether whole-hearted or grudging, of the practical questions immediately at issue; nor do they ever inhibit one's admiration for the typically liberal quality, displayed on every page, of seeing things steadily and whole." H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 3 '39 500w

"Many of the false doctrines here exposed were uprooted (one thought for ever) by Adam Smith. It is deplorable that an economist of the quality of mind of Professor Robbins should have to turn from his proper field of speculative thought to tear them up again. But no one who has watched the encroachment of vested interests in recent years will be other than grateful that he has spared time to write this book." T. S. A.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 23 '39 290w

"Professor Robbins writes well and clearly; but he shows his customary lightness in passing over the criticism that laissez faire does not in fact secure either 'full employment' or, in view of the disparity of property and incomes, a distribution of resources that can be regarded as consistent with human welfare. His arguments against capitalist restrictionism are conclusive; but his treatment of the class question in his opening essay is both superficial and jejune."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:156 Jl 22 '39 230w

"Readers of Professor Robbins will find here, as in his previous volumes, vigor of style, rigor of thought and an uncompromising liberalism." Henry Hazlitt

+ N Y Times p9 O 22 '39 700w

"Liberal vision informs the whole book; and even those to whom that vision seems a partial and inadequate guide to the good society must recognise its integrity, its much-belied humanity, and the standard of values which it presents in a distracted world." Honor Croome

+ Spec 162:1046 Je 16 '39 700w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 28:502 Ag '39 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Ag 19 '39 900w

ROBERTS, CECIL. They wanted to live. 422p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Hodder]

(W) 39-6123

A sequel to Victoria, Four-thirty (Book Review Digest, 1937). "Here Cecil Roberts follows the fortunes of the station-porter, Jim Brown, a character in the previous novel, after he wins a football pool of $5000 and marries Lizzie Parrish, a waitress. The ensuing honeymoon on the continent, leads to their meeting a number of unusual people, visiting Buda-Pesth and one of the great Hungarian estates, and matching with personal tragedy the tragedy of Czecho-Slovakia." (Springf'd Republican)

Booklist 35:291 My 1 '39

"There are spots in Mr. Roberts' account of shameful Nazi practices, where the admirable sincerity of his resentment contribute a true simplicity and value to the text. And there is about 'They Wanted to Live' such a good-natured and disarming lack of masquerade as anything more significant than it really is, that criticism of any kind is perhaps irrelevant." Ernest Buckler

+ Books p16 Ap 2 '39 500w

Cath World 149:381 Je '39 110w

"A gay and clever story."

+ Christian Century 56:387 Mr 22 '39 30w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 20 '39 320w

"Not as varied, not as much of a tour de force as 'Victoria: Four-thirty,' the story is interesting in itself, and especially interesting in the comments it enables the author to make on present-day Europe. . . Mr. Roberts is evidently much in love with the country of the Magyars, and he makes the reader feel the fascination of gay, beautiful Budapest." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 26 '39 600w

"Cecil Roberts's stories of medium-high adventure do not illuminate life or reflect its complexity; they are designed merely to entertain the average literate, but not too exacting, reader, and they rarely fail to provide this entertainment." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Mr 25 '39 480w

"While to the more thoughtful the book's moral may seem a little too pat, its characters a trifle too expertly assorted and paired, the plot a trifle too much on the Hollywood side, no one will deny the expert writing, the brilliant pen-pictures of central Europe, and the book's mounting excitement. Readers who like to be carried out of themselves by a story—and who doesn't?—will certainly enjoy this intelligent English novel which moves so swiftly against its cosmopolitan up-to-the-minute background."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 21 '39 370w

Wis Lib Bul 35:114 Je '39

ROBERTS, HARRY. The troubled mind; a general account of the human mind, and its disorders and their remedies; with chapters on the insanities by Margaret Nelson Jackson. 284p $2 Dutton [6s Murray, J]

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Insanity

39-4470

"This book is not intended as a text-book of psychology or of psychiatry. Rather should it be regarded as an attempt to explain, in simple language, some of the outstanding conclusions of contemporary psychologists, with such criticism as the experience of the authors suggests." (Pref) Index.

"It could be read with profit even by those who have a minimum of psychological knowledge. It should serve as a healthy antidote to extremists and faddists in this field." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr 1 '39 140w

"There is much that is reliable in the book, but where it is good, it tends to be commonplace, and where it diverts from the commonplace, there is a distressing lack of scholarship in the literature of both psychology and psychoanalysis." E. S. Conklin

+ — J Religion 19:307 Jl '39 200w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 15:962 Je 4 '38 1250w

"This book is another of that long line of publications which is designed solely to carry lay readers quickly and comfortably over the scattered, perplexing and contradictory fields of modern psychiatric thought. The author achieves his goal in a creditable manner. Artfully, he mixes many a passage of good hard common sense with well arranged facts and without cheapening his style, writes as simply as can be expected." Livingston Welch

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 29 '39 360w

Springf'd Republican p12 S 22 '39 380w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.
Survey 75:93 Mr '39 90w

"Dr. Roberts has covered a wide field in an instructive and entertaining way, and his thoughtful and unpretentious book may be warmly recommended as an excellent introduction to modern trends of psychological thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p230 Ap 2 '38 500w

ROBERTS, MICHAEL. The Whig party, 1807-1812. 453p $8 (25s) Macmillan

329.942 Whig party (Great Britain). Great Britain—Politics and government

"This book presents a study of the Whig Party in decline. Its purpose is to analyse the reasons for the impotence and unpopularity of the Opposition by an examination of their policies with regard to the major questions of the day—Ireland, the war with Napoleon, economical and parliamentary reform—and to discuss the effects of their views upon their political prospects." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"The scholarship is competent, and one of the features of the book is the extensive quotations from the correspondence of the leading actors. The style is not, however, always as clear as it might be and the topical organization tends to obscure the chronological continuity. Moreover, the dates which mark the limits of the treatise seem to have been chosen rather arbitrarily." J. R. Starr

Am Pol Sci R 33:539 Je '39 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Albion
Ann Am Acad 204:201 Jl '39 480w

"Drawn from a vast body of original research and with a steady precision of thought, this book is a contribution to scholarship of the first importance." A. J. P. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 24 '39 500w

"This is an admirable contribution (admirable both in its depth of research and in its presentation of the results of research) to the series of Studies in Modern History, of which Professor Namier is the distinguished editor. The book should obviously be carefully read by all who teach history and by all who hope to win the good graces of their teachers in an examination, as it upsets several preconceived notions about the motives and the aims of the Opposition during these years. Nor is the book without interest for the general public and in particular for politicians." Roger Fulford

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:220 F 11 '39 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 11 '39 850w

ROBERTS, RICHARD. The contemporary Christ; introduction by Rufus M. Jones. (Great issues of life ser) 148p $2 Macmillan

261 Christianity. Theology 38-34320

"The reason for the title of the book is the author's well grounded attitude that the revelation of God in Christ underlies and is the vital dynamic of our Christian faith and prayer and worship. . . Prayer and worship are our human ways of responding to a divine environment which enwraps us. . . One of the major notes of emphasis in the entire volume is that on 'community.' The creation of community life, community spirit, is an essential feature for the formation of any genuine personality and it is the sine qua non of any vital religion." Introd.

"Dr. Roberts's book is a work of theology. It is orthodox theological argument in its best estate." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p14 D 18 '38 150w

Reviewed by Ernest Thomas
Canadian Forum 18:381 Mr '39 500w
Christian Century 56:880 Jl 12 '39 130w

"A very readable and stimulating book on the Christian position in general, with a steady if not always clear progression from the first chapter to the last. One cannot help feeling that there would have been more of a unity about the book if Dr. Roberts had not tried to keep too close an eye on his original subject while really wanting to let himself go on the idea of Community. For all that, he has succeeded in showing the relation between prayer and worship and contemporary social problems; and there is not a page in the book which is not illuminated by some penetrating observation or choice turn of phrase." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 153:17 F 1 '39 220w

Reviewed by W. R. O'Connor
Commonweal 29:389 Ja 27 '39 100w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 16:141 Ap '39 180w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
Ethics 49:391 Ap '39 30w

Reviewed by M. H. Shepherd, Jr.
J Religion 19:308 Jl '39 90w

ROBERTSON, ARCHIE. The government at your service; a handbook of federal help for the citizen. 340p $2.75 Houghton

353 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Government publications (W)

A handbook which tells the average citizen what help he can ask of the government in various fields—in the home, in health, at work, in his business, in education, in saving for old age and sickness, in political life. The arrangement is not by departments supplying the help but by the kind of help needed. The author is a newspaper man who has had years of experience in various government departments. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:169 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by Allen Raymond
Books p10 F 4 '40 550w

" 'Government at Your Service' pleased and surprised this reviewer, who, having spent four active years in New Deal Washington, thought he knew something about the Federal Service. Everywhere that my experience fitted me to make a judgment I found Mr. Robertson both accurate and comprehensive. The surprise was to learn how much of interest about our national government I did not know." J. F. Stone, Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 120w

ROBERTSON, ARCHIE—Continued

"The book . . . is not only comprehensive but very sensibly arranged."

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 7 '40 290w

"Practical and informative."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ja 18 '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:12 Ja '40

ROBERTSON, FRANK CHESTER (FRANK CHESTER FIELD, pseud). Rip roarin' Rincon. 254p $2 Dutton

39-15799

Western story.

"High-powered Western, one of the author's speediest." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Je 18 '39 110w

N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '39 150w

"Colorful, fast-moving western."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 180w

ROBEY, WILLIAM HENRY, ed. Health at fifty. 299p il $3 Harvard univ. press

613 Hygiene. Middle age 39-27160

"Health at fifty implies the fact that 'there must be conservation and promotion of physical and mental vigor during childhood and adolescence, early attention to remediable impairments, and prevention of disease and disability through adequately applied knowledge.' . . Twelve subjects are considered and range from a discussion on heart disease and blood pressure, the question of weight and the problem of cancer, to rheumatism, menstruation and the menopause, care of the eyes, vitamins, glands, and social stress and mental health. Dr. Robey concludes with remarks upon increasing the life span, health habits, and a philosophy of life which will make old age not only very comfortable but interesting and worth-while." Scientific Bk Club R

"The lectures are written for the laity in language that can be easily understood by anyone with ordinary education. It is an extremely useful book, authentic in every detail, which deserves a place in every public library." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 29:678 Je '39 230w

Booklist 35:227 Mr 15 '39

Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 60w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 50:8 Ap '39 200w

J Home Econ 32:42 Ja '40 130w

"This is a most useful book for the family library."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '39 480w

Pratt p11 autumn '39

"Each of the authors who has contributed to this volume is an expert in his field, but writes so simply and conclusively that no part of the book is too technical for the most uninitiated to understand."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 F '39 250w

"A fund of reliable, practical information. . . These lectures dispel some superstitions and fears and suppositions on the part of the average man and tell him what the medical profession recommends."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 3 '39 330w

Reviewed by I. V. Hiscock

Survey 75:264 Ag '39 280w

ROBINS, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Story of the lamp (and the candle) with 50 illustrations showing nearly 500 specimens, mostly from the author's own collection. 156p $5 (15s) Oxford

665.6 Lamps. Candles. Lighting—History

39-25727

"F. W. Robins, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and member of several other associations of scholars or explorers, is the possessor of some 800 specimens of man's achievement in the 'lighting art.' He has studied, and collected, lighting appliances around the world and through the ages. . . The whole story of lighting is interesting in itself, as it is comprehensively told and profusely illustrated here." N Y Times

"The publication of any new book on the history of the development of lighting devices would be welcomed by lamp collectors and by readers in general, but a work by an English author is doubly welcome, since up to the present time there have been no English books on the subject. . . Mr. Robins's book will give the student of the history of lighting something to think about, and there is much else to interest the general reader." L. L. Thwing

+ Boston Transcript p8 O 21 '39 2000w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:40 Jl '39

N Y Times p12 S 17 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p507 Ag 26 '39 400w

ROBINSON, ALONZO CLARK. Things used to be different. 274p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 39-30411

Reminiscences, supposed to be those of the author's friend Mr X, of the '80s and '90s in New York, Yale university, Paris, and including a trip around the world. There are stories of some of the well-known people of those days: Payne Whitney, Gouverneur Morris, the Vanderbilts, Bob Chanler, and Rodin.

"Some good anecdotes here, but not enough of them."

New Repub 100:350 O 25 '39 40w

"It's an entertaining book, when it isn't too insensitive or exasperating. . . Alonzo Clark Robinson says that he is quoting his 'friend X' from memory and 'can guarantee neither fact nor fiction.' But when Mr. X chatters for pages about Bob Chanler it is too bad that that artist's name is invariably misspelled."

+ — N Y Times p5 O 8 '39 430w

"As the title indicates, his book really dates—it ends with the last War—but that is the fun of it. We doubt if one can find a swifter, more vivid picture of the gilded young men of the nineties, for whom Richard Harding Davis was the hero, and a chaperone held more terror than the Boxer Rebellion. There is much keen discrimination and good taste in the book that cannot be indicated by this brief sketch. A multitude of readers will find chuckles in the self-portrait of Alonzo Robinson, and especially in his terse humor and biting philosophy." Orrick Johns

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 30 '39 350w

ROBINSON, CLARK SHOVE, and GILLILAND, EDWIN RICHARD. The elements of fractional distillation. 3d ed 267p il $3 (18s) McGraw

542.48 Distillation, Fractional 39-2427

"Slightly enlarged and completely reset, this book has been revised to include important advances since the publication of the 2nd edition (1930). The authors emphasize the introductory character of the text, but state that it represents the best general practice in distillation design at present writing. The subject is based almost wholly on physical chemistry, the principles of which are explained in the first few chapters. The authors are professors in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The third edition of 'The Elements of Fractional Distillation,' by Robinson and his colleague Gilliland, comes nearer to fulfilling our requirements in the educational world than any other treatise on the subject. . . It is predicted that [it] will find considerable use as an elementary textbook on the subject in all universities where unit operations are taught in detail. Furthermore, it should be of real interest to all column designers who wish to read and digest the more recent methods of determining the number of theoretical plates required for multi-component mixtures." D. B. Keyes

+ Chem & Met Eng 46:231 Ap '39 490w

"The book is essentially one for the specialist, who will undoubtedly find it of great value, but it must be hard reading for the engineers and operators mentioned in the preface."

Nature 143:1001 Je 17 '39 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:21 Ap '39

ROBINSON, CYRIL EDWARD. England. rev ed 892p il maps $4.50 Crowell

942 Great Britain—History 38-27827

"A history of British progress from the early ages to the present day." (Subtitle) The subject matter has been brought down to 1938, a new bibliography added, and new illustrations. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1929. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:67 O 15 '38

"The style is attractive and the language within the range of youth. . . A rather full bibliography is given, of literary and historical works, including sources, with indications of their usefulness for young readers and for older students." M. W.

+ Social Studies 30:142 Mr '39 160w

ROBINSON, EDWIN MARSHALL. Training for the modern office. 543p il map $1.98 (12s) McGraw

651 Office management (W) 39-17341

Discussion of procedure in the modern office, presented in a vocabulary suitable for the high school or junior college student. Contents: How business is organized and carried on; The place of the office in business; The accounting department and its work; The sales and advertising departments; The credit department and its work; The traffic department and its work; The purchasing department and its work; The treasurer's office and work; Handling mail and correspondence; How to file letters and papers; Telephone, telegraph, and radio; Office reference books and how to use them; How to get a job and how to keep it; Personality in business. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39

"Training for the Modern Office . . . is written by an experienced office manager who is also an experienced schoolteacher. It is one of the few books which portray the modern office in action, assigning to each department of the office the relative importance which it deserves. It provides the student with the perspective of the functions of a large business organization and gives detailed information concerning the handling of related procedures, lines of authority, and control." Ann Brewington

+ School R 48:76 Ja '40 280w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Winged feet; scouting for George Washington; il. by Julian Brazelton. 311p maps $2 Dutton

39-20725

Story of Nathan Snow and his Indian friend Squando during the months leading up to the Revolution. Appointed scouts for Washington, the boys work largely in the Maine woods around Portland and take part in a series of exciting events ending in the capture of spies. For grades six to eight. Bibliography.

"A well-written, convincing story. . . The value of Indian friendship and help to Yankees and Redcoats is made clear, and frequent references to historical documents satisfy one as to the book's authenticity. Illustrations in black and white by Julian Brazelton." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:762 O 1 '39 90w

"It is a very good story for boys and a lot of older people, who may get here a realistic picture of some phases of the colonial background. Five pages of bibliography at the end suggest how carefully the author 'speaks by the book.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 130w

ROBINSON, HENRY WHEELER. Suffering, human and divine; introd. by Rufus M. Jones. (Great issues of life ser) 230p $2 Macmillan

231.8 Suffering. Providence and government of God. Atonement 39-27996

Discussion of evil and suffering, by the principal of Regent's Park College, Oxford. "Several chapters are devoted to general material. One is concerned with the fact of suffering. A second brings explanations which have been offered for suffering on the biological, moral and religious levels. A third presents the problem of suffering in the Old Testament, with a consideration of Israel's various explanations of it as retributive, disciplinary, probationary and evidential, revelational, sacrificial, and eschatological. Having dispensed with such general material, the author plunges into the heart of the matter, seeking to set the reality of suffering where the Christian must finally set it; namely, before the background of that God whom we have come to know through Jesus Christ." (Crozer Q) Index.

"The author of this very good book is a theologian worthy of attacking the problems of theodicy. And he has done a very thorough piece of work." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 153:18 N 15 '39 170w

"This scholarly book is recommended to all who desire to see the reality of suffering through the eyes of the Christian's deepest faith. Having thus seen, the way will no longer be darkness, but shining light." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 17:76 Ja '40 450w

"Much of this book is admirable, much of it is by the side, and much of it is positively wrong in its approach. However, we hope that the clergy at any rate will read it, because it suggests helpfully (for those who are called on to aid persons suffering, bereaved, or struggling) some useful and important considerations." W. N. Pittenger

+ — Living Church 102:12 Ja 17 '40 220w

ROBINSON, HENRY WHEELER, ed. See Society for Old Testament study. Record and revelation

ROBINSON, LENNOX, ed. The Irish theatre. 229p $3 Macmillan

792 Theater—Dublin. Dublin. Abbey theater. Irish drama

"Lectures delivered during the Abbey theatre festival held in Dublin in August 1938." (Subtitle) Contents: The early history of the Abbey theatre, by A. E. Malone; Synge, by Frank O'Connor; Lady Gregory, by Lennox Robinson; Yeats and poetic drama in Ireland, by F. R. Higgins; The rise of the realistic movement, by A. E. Malone; George Shiels, Brinsley MacNamara, etc., by T. C. Murray; Sean O'Casey, by Walter Starkie; Gaelic drama, by Ernest Blythe; Problem plays, by Michael MacLiammoir; Festival programme.

"The book is necessarily of limited interest. Lectures do not easily weld themselves into a good book and do so less easily when the lectures are on different subjects by different people; nor will the serious student of drama find here the detailed information so necessary to his purpose. . . The book hardly pretends to be more than a testament to the work of the Abbey, and in this purpose it succeeds." Diarmuid Russell

Books p18 D 3 '39 450w

ROBINSON, LENNOX, ed.—Continued
Reviewed by Mary Manning
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 500w

"The stirring story of the Abbey Theatre, and incidentally the story of the entire Irish Renaissance, is recounted clearly and concisely." W. P. Sears, Jr.
+ Churchman 154:19 Ja 1 '40 150w

ROBINSON, LENNOX. Killycreggs in twilight, and other plays. 290p $2.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan 822 [39-27503]

Contents: Killycreggs in twilight; Is life worth living? (drama at Inish); Bird's nest. The second play was published separately several years ago (Book Review Digest, 1934).

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p11 Jl 23 '39 100w

" 'Killycreggs in Twilight' . . . is a slight and gentle play, Irish characters in search of a plot with, however, the virtue of a good last act. . . Much more robust, 'Is Life Worth Living?' ran in London and New York. . . 'Bird's Nest' . . . is a short, neat, ironic comedy of pleasant people in the Irish middle class." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p8 My 12 '39 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 1 '39 800w

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Runner of the mountain tops; the life of Louis Agassiz; with decorations by Lynd Ward [and eight full-page color plates]. 290p $3 Random house
B or 92 Agassiz, Louis (W) 39-27559

Biography of the Swiss naturalist and geologist who left his home and European conquests to come to lecture in America in 1846. In 1847 he became professor of zoology and geology in Harvard, with which university he was connected until his death in 1873. The author "has tried simply to capture 'some of the essence of the man who, boy to man, never ceased to be a Runner of the Mountain Tops,' in his 'headlong splendid race through life.' " (Scientific Bk Club R)

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

"Fitted by background whose roots reach into the New England soil which gave Agassiz splendid nourishment during the last decades of his life and by emotional and intellectual inclinations which made the natural sciences the choice of her early career, Miss Robinson brings to the portrayal of the man a sympathy and understanding which he would have prized." Rose Feld
+ Books p2 Je 11 '39 1050w

"The reader of this volume will find a charm in the recitation of stirring events rarely experienced in biographical writing. A great personality is made to live again and this effect is accomplished without overpraise or undervaluation." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 26 '39 700w

"To the growing list of fine biographies for young people is added now this exciting, fast-moving and contagiously enthusiastic study of Louis Agassiz. . . In Runner of the Mountain Tops, Mabel Robinson has written a book that will fasten and hold the attention of many young people this summer, filling them with the desire to see, to know and to understand more of these natural wonders, the study of which brought such deep and thrilling satisfaction to a boy born in Switzerland over 130 years ago."
+ Horn Bk M 15:229 Jl '39 650w

"It is a well rounded picture and a book for every library. . . Though Agassiz possessed a rare and dynamic personality and lived a life filled with unusual drama and incident, here is no straightforward narrative. The author never permits her subject to speak for himself; his every move is explained, analyzed and interpreted until the book becomes the loving apologia of a fond parent." J. L. Sauer
+ — Library J 64:563 Jl '39 280w
Reviewed by W. M. Smallwood
New Eng Q 12:588 S '39 1250w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:36 Jl '39

"No doubt there is much more to be said about Louis Agassiz than is said in this book. Miss Robinson doesn't essay a balanced scientific judgment of what his work was worth and what it now means, though she must be competent to do so. She does give the general reader an enchanting picture of a man who loved the adventure of knowledge more than anything else in the world. . . Young people with a taste for science and a distaste for market places ought to read this book about him, and their elders will also find it absorbing." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Je 18 '39 1500w
New Yorker 15:95 Je 10 '39 20w

"To describe this book as a biography is perhaps a misnomer. Rather, it is a lively, intuitive portrait by an informed admirer whose background still bears traces of the scenes which surrounded Agassiz; a chronicle by an observer who has captured the spirit of the man and of his accomplishments. Poetically written, it is surest in its picture of Agassiz the enthusiast, the boy who never quite grew up; least sure in its descriptions of the men about him and of the times in which they moved. But this last circumstance, which would be a defect in a more pretentious work, is easily forgiven in the rapid flow of the narrative." Townsend Scudder, III
+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 24 '39 380w
Reviewed by Katharine Ulrich
Sat R of Lit 21:24 N 18 '39 70w

"Into this biography has gone the zeal of an enthusiast for a long contemplated project. The author . . . has wanted to make Louis Agassiz live again 'for a generation which thrives on his efforts without knowing it.' To her endeavor she has brought infinite patience for research and the art of the story-teller. Let no one be deceived by the simplicity of the narrative! The fictionized form, some sentimentality, and the easy, flowing style carry all that was vital in the personal and scientific life of one of the world's greatest scientists. . . Miss Robinson has brought to this work her own high standard of what a biographer must do in order to recreate a man in a wise balance, against the background of his heritage, in his relationships to others, with due consideration for all the facets of his character and achievements."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Je '39 420w
Wis Lib Bul 35:219 D '39

ROBINSON, WILLIAM WILCOX. On the farm; with pictures by Irene Robinson. [40p] $2 Macmillan 39-9818

Picture-story book for young readers, with double spread pictures in color. The stories and pictures show the various animals on a farm from cockcrow to the roosting of the chickens at night.

Booklist 35:350 Je 15 '39

"The text that goes with these pictures of farm life is to be read aloud to an age that takes particular pleasure in poring over very big color pictures of well known scenes, while some one tells about them; no doubt for this reason animal cries, delightful at this age, are almost always given in the course of the text. . . 'On the Farm' has a particular attraction for our children besides its choice of strictly American animals; they are shown softly, even tenderly, in surroundings reproduced with evident affection." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 My 14 '39 500w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p13 Je 29 '39 30w

"A perfect book for the picture book age and older, excellent to read and think about in anticipation of summer holidays." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 29 '39 150w
Horn Bk M 15:223 Jl '39 180w

"The book will be enjoyed most by little children when it is read aloud to them. To children old enough to read for themselves, it will seem written down." E. G. Mullan
Library J 64:517 Je 15 '39 170w

" 'On the Farm' is evidently an experiment in drawing pictures for the youngest children on a larger scale than has hitherto been used. The colors are charming and catch the eye, but the dimensions of the drawings seem puzzling rather than pleasing to children. . . The text, which consists of rather lengthy and quite uneventful descriptions of farm animals, lacks life and interest." A. T. Eaton
— + N Y Times p12 Je 11 '39 210w

"Method and ideas good but the style and pictures just miss."
— + Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 60w

ROBISON, GEORGIA. Revelliere-Lepeaux, citizen director, 1753-1824. 307p il maps $3.50 Columbia univ. press [16s King]

B or 92 La Révellière-Lépeaux, Louis Marie de. France—History—Revolution 38-34343

Biography of one of the five Directors of the French Revolution period, who was one of the founders of the Jacobin club, and voted for the king's death. He has also been called the "pope" of the religious cult, Theophilanthropy. He retired to private life just before Napoleon came into power, and spent the last twenty-five years of his life in scientific pursuits. Bibliography. Index.

"Solid work of scholarly erudition, which incorporates the best printed researches and the fine combings of public and private archives. Despite [the author's] pronounced sense of organization, the narrative occasionally lags from the weight of its details." Leo Gershoy
+ Am Hist R 44:981 Jl '39 280w

"Special students of the French Revolution cannot afford to overlook this thorough and expert piece of research which illuminates the entire period with light from many unusual sources."
+ Christian Century 56:452 Ap 5 '39 330w

ROBLES, ANTONIO (ANTONIORROBLES, pseud). Merry tales from Spain; tr. from the Spanish by Edward Huberman; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 141p $1.50 Winston

39-23858

Eight stories, six of which are about the Three Wise Men who bring toys to good Spanish children at their Christmas celebration.

"These stories are not to be saved for winter use: funny, unexpected, continuously entertaining, sparkling with little pictures in the same gay spirit, they are additions to a young year-round library. They have so many funny turns, told so seriously, that not one could be boiled down to a synopsis without losing the fun. The narrator has a straight-faced way of addressing his hearers at the most absurd parts, as if of course they were going to believe this: the true touch of a natural raconteur." M. L. Becker
+ Books p14 N 12 '39 200w

"The world of these stories is, for the most part, not the fairy tale, but the natural world, in which fairy elements come as surprises and the magic is a material rather than a fairy magic. There is inventiveness and strangeness of happenings, rather than imagination, and the author is almost always apparent." Alice Monroe
+ Library J 65:37 Ja 1 '40 190w

RODDA, CHARLES (GAVIN HOLT, pseud). The theme is murder. 313p $2 Simon & Schuster [7s 6d Gollancz]

40-2313

Detective story.

"Grim, exciting stuff told by a narrator who is frankly on the funny side, and a smooth mixture it is, too. If you would relish a couple of killings in a mad and musical atmosphere thick with Wagner and Nibelungs, and supposing you can do with plenty of laughs at the same time, remember to shop for 'The Theme Is Murder.' " Will Cuppy
+ Books p26 D 10 '39 450w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '39 30w

"Mr. Holt has an eye for character, and his slangy and perky style is effective enough, though it will please most those who like perky and slangy styles. Beneath the superficial smartness, however, there is ample evidence of wide reading and experience." E. R. Punshon
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 2 '38 130w

"The Theme is Murder is happier among the wisecracks than with its theme." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 16:228 Ag 6 '38 40w

"A mystery story that will keep you interested whether or not you are a devotee of Wagner." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p7 D 10 '39 200w

"Lighthearted, exciting story, successfully patterned after the best of the made-in-America variety."
New Yorker 15:124 D 16 '39 70w

"Well-plotted but soggily British opus. Fair enough."
Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 16 '39 40w
Time 35:60 Ja 8 '40 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p495 Jl 23 '38 180w

RODELL, FRED. Woe unto you, lawyers! 274p $2.50 Reynal

340 Law 40-347

Sharp criticism of the Law, lawyers, and American courts by a professor of law at Yale University. The author concludes that we would all be better off if we did away with Law and put the settlement of disputes and the determination of justice into the hands of non-legal experts.

Booklist 36:209 F 1 '40
Reviewed by M. DeW. Howe
Books p10 D 17 '39 650w

"The book is amusing, if not entertaining, but it may be doubtful if it creates the stir that the author may have expected. The best part of it is the quotations which head each chapter and which have delighted lawyers thro' the ages." J. C. Bassett
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 450w

"Professor Rodell must have had a lot of fun writing this book. I had fun reading it. That was probably because we are both lawyers and, as the Professor says, 'every lawyer is just about the same as every other lawyer.' But other folks not endowed with our peculiar sense of fun may take the book seriously. That is the author's purpose and hope. He wants to plant in the average man 'the seed of skepticism about the whole legal profession.' . . When I finished the book I neither bristled nor snorted. I was just plain disappointed. There is a real need for a readable book for the layman in this field. The blows which Professor Rodell strikes at the needless complexity of legal language indicate how his writing ability might be usefully directed. But something more than cleverness is required. While it is refreshing to be spared the pretense of learning, it is disheartening to be deprived of the fruit of that learning." E. S. Greenbaum
+ — Columbia Law R 40:353 F '40 1700w

RODELL, FRED—Continued

"The author in his preface anticipates that the reader will question why he is a law professor, and he states that a 'hint' as to the answer will be found in Chapter IX. No sufficient explanation appears. No calling can fail to be benefited by thoughtful, serious criticism, however severe and however severely expressed, from without or within. But no stretch of the imagination could class this book as useful criticism." W. B. L.

Harvard Law R 53:363 D '39 150w

"Lawyers play entirely too commanding a role in American government and politics, a point on which de Tocqueville throws much more light than Rodell. But the latter's conclusions do not seem the product of ripe reflection." I. F. Stone

Nation 149:583 N 25 '39 850w

Reviewed by Walton Hamilton

New Repub 102:92 Ja 15 '40 1250w

"It's difficult not to like Mr. Rodell; he's so very sure of himself, and is such a perfect example of how delightful it is to live and let off steam in the United States, that I think we ought to hail him as our Anarch-of-the-Month." J. R. Parker

Sat R of Lit 21:13 N 25 '39 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 30 '40 480w

RODIN, AUGUSTE. Rodin [119 reproductions in monochrome photogravure; pref. by Sommerville Story]. (Phaidon press art bk) 150p $3 Oxford [10s 6d Allen, G]

730 Sculpture

Over a hundred photographs, showing many details, of some of Rodin's most famous pieces of sculpture. Contains an introductory chapter on Rodin's life and work.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"[The photographs] bring out the qualities of the marbles and bronzes with singular effectiveness. There are two items of text to be favorably signalized apropos of the 'Rodin,' Sommerville Story's well written introduction and the quite indispensable catalogue by Georges Grappe." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p3 D 17 '39 50w

"Mr. Sommerville Story's critical and biographical introduction is a serviceable and well-written condensation of the outstanding facts of Rodin's life. Useful notes on the plates are to be found at the end of the book." Eric Newton

+ Manchester Guardian sup xii D 1 '39 170w

"The Rodin book is excellent value. It contains [119] admirable and large photographs, chosen to represent every phase of the sculptor's work. There are no drawings, which is a pity, as these stand up to the passing years better than much of the sculpture. The marbles, in particular, show the bad influence of the period, an Art Nouveau deliquescence or swooniness, as if the stone had melted and run. But looking at these photographs, you cannot but feel that Rodin was a whale of an artist." Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:836 D 9 '39 140w

"These big plates reveal unsparingly the ruthlessness of Rodin's modeling. . . This exposure of the minute technique is more edifying to the student than really pleasure-giving to the art lover. To students, however, this well-chosen selection of high-class photomechanical reproductions, at the price of a mere handful of equivalent photographs, is obviously a boon." F. J. M., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 16 '39 80w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 18 '39 300w

"The collection is well chosen, with many details of the major works, and is well designed to give a good idea of Rodin's startling virtuosity and grasp of form. . . Mr. Sommerville Story's introduction does not attempt much criticism and is evidently the work of a wholehearted admirer of almost every manifestation of Rodin's character. He makes some curious statements, as for instance that Rodin 'was restrained in the expression of his ideas and opinions.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p690 N 25 '39 190w

ROGERS, AGNES (MRS FREDERICK LEWIS ALLEN). Abraham Lincoln; a biography in pictures. 128p il $2 Little

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham (W) 39-22993

About 175 pictures, prints, drawings, and photographs, with accompanying text, showing the life and times of Abraham Lincoln.

"Mrs. Rogers has certainly done an excellent job. Such a book might very well be adopted as a supplementary high school text. The commentary itself is quite adequate, pithy, anecdotal and swift-moving." E. B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 16 '39 300w

"This is a deeply rewarding and valuable book, and it is not too much to say that it ought to have a place in the home library of every American family." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 S 17 '39 320w

New Yorker 15:79 S 23 '39 20w

ROGERS, BRUCE. See American institute of graphic arts. Work of Bruce Rogers

ROHDE, ELEANOUR SINCLAIR, and PARKER, ERIC, comps. The gardener's week-end book; with decorations by Beryl Irving and Anne Bullen. 428p $2.50 Lippincott [8s 6d Seeley]

635.9 Gardening

Gardener's bedside book which attempts to "answer most of the questions which owners of a garden may find themselves asking." The different sections treat of: Herbaceous borders; Annuals and biennials; The small rose garden; Some rock garden plants; Some flowering shrubs; The heath garden; Climbers and creepers; Topiary; Bulbs; Vegetables for small gardens; Uncommon vegetables; Garden birds; Bird-boxes; Garden butterflies; Garden moths; Garden nuisances; A list of garden tools, with prices. Indexes.

"It is sure of a large sale and can be highly recommended." A. W. Boyd

+ Manchester Guardian sup xiii D 1 '39 90w

"A handy volume well packed with information and entertainment, and pleasantly illustrated with pen and ink drawings."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p582 O 7 '39 180w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARSFIELD WADE). The drums of Fu Manchu. 308p $2 Doubleday

39-21858

Detective story.

" 'The Drums of Fu Manchu,' is exactly the dish of speed and insidiousness required by faithful fans." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Je 25 '39 320w

"It isn't very often that the same sort of thing we enjoyed back in the pig-tail days is still as enjoyable and thrilling. Mr. Sax Rohmer has proven to be an exception. The last time we read a Fu Manchu story we were very young and impressionable. When we opened the latest . . . we expected to be disillusioned. But we weren't. Careful post-reading analysis shows that, without a doubt, the story is pure fairy tale. But the old excitement and horror are still present in Mr. Rohmer's writing." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 230w

"This new story supplies that special brand of adventure, mystery and excitement which the admirers of Sax Rohmer's tales so eagerly lap up." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '39 110w

"Wily Chinee this time plots death of merchants of war. His ways are dark, devilish, and exciting as ever. Blood and thunder."

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 24 '39 40w

ROJANSKY, VLADIMIR BORISOVICH. Introductory quantum mechanics. 544p $5.50 Prentice-Hall [22s 6d Blackie & son]

530.1 Quantum theory 38-35970

"Presenting the simpler physical ideas and mathematical methods of quantum mechanics, this work requires on the reader's part a knowledge of the elements of calculus and of ordinary differential equations, also a recognition of the failure of classical mechanics in the domain of atomic physics. There are numerous test problems. Dr. Rojansky is Professor of Physics in Union College." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Professor Rojansky writes with a very fluent and agreeable style, and has given us a valuable addition to the literature of quantum mechanics by writing a lucid and unusually explicit account of elementary quantum mathematical physics." J. H. Van Vleck

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:759 Mr '39 1050w

"In the opinion of this reviewer Rojansky's text fills in an admirable manner a need that has existed for a long time in the literature of quantum mechanics. The whole book shows evidence of a careful selection and arrangement of material as well as choice of explanatory method. While making few demands on the previous mathematical training of the student, it still manages to cover most of the material necessary for a good foundation in the basic principles of quantum mechanics. The numerous problems are easy but not trivial, and seem to be well chosen for their explanatory character." E. L. Hill

+ J Phys Chem 43:389 Mr '39 340w

"The presentation of the fundamental statistical conceptions especially is very satisfactory. But a student who would learn quantum mechanics from this book only will get no impression of the intellectual struggle which led to the final theory. This unhistoric attitude is observable even in such details as the quotation of literature; the names of American authors who have added refinement to an existing theory are included, while those of the originators are omitted. Apart from these minor objections, the book can be warmly recommended."

+ — Nature 144:743 O 28 '39 220w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:60 O '38

ROLFE, EDWIN. The Lincoln battalion. 321p il maps $2.50 Random house

946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939—Foreign participation 39-31522

A history of the American volunteers who fought on the Loyalist side in the Spanish civil war. Index.

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Leigh White

Books p14 N 26 '39 900w

Reviewed by Mario Collaci

Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '39 180w

"Rolfe's history is lacking in realism because he ignores what Bessie recognizes—that in war men become demoralized and curse their officers and hate their companions. . . But Rolfe has done an exceedingly workmanlike job; thirty-eight photographs and six maps of the various actions help to give us a panoramic view of the day-by-day struggle." Samuel Romer

+ — Nation 149:557 N 18 '39 290w

"All the Lincoln's battles are in this serene-tempered book. They are described as a man should describe his fights, with neither literary encumbrances nor mock heroics. It is an honest-to-God, straightforward account of a thrilling and significant experience." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 101:293 D 27 '39 1100w

New Yorker 15:106 N 18 '39 30w

"Rolfe writes hardly ever as an individual but as the chosen chronicler of a group. His book is thus an official history, clearly and decently told but subject to the narrowness and reticence of its kind, supplementing and to be supplemented by such a vivid personal history as Alvah Bessie's."

+ — Time 34:84 N 20 '39 230w

ROLL, ERICH. A history of economic thought. 430p $3 Prentice-Hall [12s 6d Faber]

330.1 Economics—History [38-17908]

In his Introduction the author says, "My aim has been to provide an historical background to the great theoretical controversies of to-day. . . The purpose and guiding principle of this book have determined its plan. . . Apart from the most outstanding economists of the past, only those have been included whose contributions to economic thought appear to have significance in relation to present-day theory and controversy. Secondly, stress has been laid both on writers and views which exemplify most clearly different trends of thought." Index.

"This book is as stimulating as anything that the author has yet given us. For the most part, it is concise and clear. The chapters on Commercial Capitalism and Marx could hardly be bettered in a work on this scale. The book as a whole will be read with profit (if not always with ease) by the intelligent layman. To the student it is likely to become a standard work of considerable value, in spite of Professor Roll's unorthodox prepossessions."

+ Economist 131:605 Je 11 '38 700w

"Professor Roll's new work rouses high expectations. In the by no means easy field of elementary presentation of economic and monetary theory his earlier books achieved notable success; and the same qualities of mind—order, proportion, that sure grasp of essentials which is the first requisite of successful presentation—rank high among those demanded for a history of theoretical development. How far are these expectations fulfilled in this longer, more ambitious and more important book? Largely, but not entirely. The clarity is there, the selectivity is there; but there is lacking that sympathetic insight into the working of other minds which was Cannan's special gift, and which is essential to any just and profound estimate of other men's work." Honor Croome

+ — Spec 161:26 Jl 1 '38 750w

ROLLEFSON, GERHARD KROHN, and BURTON, MILTON. Photochemistry and the mechanism of chemical reactions. 445p $5.75 Prentice-Hall

541.35 Photochemistry. Chemical reactions 39-6789

"Of the fifteen chapters of this work the first five are devoted to a more or less elementary presentation of the effects produced by the absorption of light and the behavior of the effects produced in this manner. For understanding these phenomena the authors state that complete knowledge of spectroscopy, atomic structure, and quantum mechanics is not essential. The remaining chapters deal with specific reactions. Doctors Rollefson and Burton are associated with the University of California and New York University respectively." (N Y New Tech Bks) Subject and author indexes.

"The book is authoritatively and clearly written and the reviewer agrees with the contention of the authors that it is possible for a person using it to 'find himself with a working

ROLLEFSON, G. K., and BURTON, M.—Cont. understanding of what has been done and an appreciation of what is still needed' in photochemistry." P. A. Leighton

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:2567 S '39 400w

"In one sense, reading all this material leaves a feeling of disappointment, although it is by no means the fault of this excellent book. . . There exists today the greatest challenge and the greatest opportunity for the chemist interested in the mechanism of chemical reactions—namely, the determination of the characteristics of elementary reactions, especially those involving rupture of a molecule into fragments, as well as reactions of the fragments with molecules and with one another. Photochemistry offers a peculiarly direct and effective tool for this study, and the authors are to be congratulated on gathering together and digesting the great mass of material in this field." F. O. Rice

+ — Ind & Eng Chem 17:357 My 20 '39 330w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:27 Ap '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum

Special Libraries 30:318 N '39

ROLLINS, PHILIP ASHTON. Gone haywire; pictures by Peter Hurd. 269p $2 Scribner

40-2889

A tale of "two tenderfoots on the Montana cattle range in 1886." (Subtitle)

"The name of Philip Rollins sets up a commotion in the memories of younger and older readers. To the former it suggests 'Jinglebob,' to the latter a standard work of reference on an already legendary American, 'The Cowboy.' Mr. Rollins is erudite in his own field, where heaven knows a little learning is needed to make way against a flood of misconceptions. His vocabulary is picturesque, but when writing for boys, sufficiently restrained." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 13 '39 600w

"Based on Mr. Rollins's own reminiscences of range life, cattle drives and encounters with cattle thieves and hostile sheepherders, 'Gone Haywire' is written for readers of all ages, apparently—but young boys should enjoy it most." M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 90w

"Although possibly of chief interest to boys, being about the adventure of two young tenderfoots from the East, Mr Rollins's story has compelling interest for all ages and provides an unusual amount of accurate information about the business of cattle ranching before plows broke up the huge grazing areas."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 20 '39 300w

ROMBAUER, MRS IRMA S. Streamlined cooking. 210p il $1.75 Bobbs

641.5 Cookery (W) 39-13818

Contains recipes in which canned, packaged and frosted foods are featured, as well as ways of rapid preparation of fresh foods. Index.

"The world's first cook-book for can-openers will be the lazy lady's prop and the trailer wife's delight hereafter." Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39

Pratt p13 autumn '39

RONNS, EDWARD. The corpse hangs high. 257p $2 Phoenix

39-11749

Detective story.

"Mr. Ronns's writing manner is easy, natural and always bright. In fact, we predict quite a future for him if he holds to his course of temperate ruthlessness and never gets any tougher. . . A somewhat meatier plot would have helped, though this department was satisfied just with the admirable wordage, the characters and the general excitement." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p12 My 14 '39 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 100w

" 'The Corpse Hangs High' is a good enough yarn of the hard-boiled type." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 My 21 '39 120w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 40w

ROOD, ELMA, and LINGHAM, GERTRUDE. Taking care of the family's health; a teaching guide for rural classes; 100 il. and charts; phot. by Herbert Clarence White. 2v $6.50; pa $5 Rural press, Madison College, Tenn.

614.07 Hygiene, Rural (39-3556)

"Manuals intended 'to give practical teaching help to persons in the public health field who are interested in bringing about an improvement in rural life through the understanding and participation of lay people.' They present instructional units organized for use with adult and high school classes and discussion groups. One volume includes Part I, devoted to 'The Family in Health,' while the other contains Part II on 'The Family in Illness' and Part III on 'The Family and Public Health.' Miss Rood is the director of public health nursing education at the University of Kentucky and Miss Lingham, professor of health and director of nursing education at Madison College, Tennessee." J Home Econ

"Values of several good illustrations would have been increased by the use of descriptive titles. However, the activities proposed are excellent and the subjects of the units are well chosen, being topics especially appropriate for rural groups. Procedures are suggested for class periods and opportunity is given for the imaginative nurse or teacher to use her own initiative in the adaptation of material." I. V. Hiscock

Am J Pub Health 29:1051 S '39 180w

J Home Econ 31:43 Ja '39 100w

ROOD, ROYAL DAVENPORT. Matrimonial shoals. 424p $3.50 Detroit law bk. co, room 401, 17 Cadillac sq, Detroit

347.6 Divorce 39-10381

"A lawyer's tabulated analysis of 270,000 divorces." (p. 3) Contents: Of the disappearing security of women, children and old folks; Of tattling adults and multiple marriages; A substitute for the family, and vanishing family authority; Development in the statutes of the new kind of marriage; Facts and figures; What do the figures prove? Who cares? The silent rebellion; The social worker vs. the court; Conclusions and remedies. Index.

"It is unfortunate that a writer so genuinely interested in social conditions as Mr. Rood should be so unskilled in the interpretation of social problems, so naïve in his relating of cause and effect, and so sure that simple procedural changes will cause extensive reduction in family disintegration. His book is interesting to sociologists primarily because it shows the necessity for extensive study of the effects of legal processes on the family." H. I. Clarke

— + Am Soc R 4:762 O '39 350w

Reviewed by Geoffrey May

Ann Am Acad 205:203 S '39 230w

"When a lawyer gets excited over the appalling rise of metropolitan divorce and the consequent diminished security for women, children and old age, something happens. Hence this unusual book. . . One needs a legal mind to comprehend the entire argument. . . For solutions of the problems involved the author seems to rely still on law-makers who for the family have substituted a 'new kind of marriage'. Unfortunately, we believe, he regards church and religious agencies as practically negligible." C. H. Brewer

Churchman 153:17 Ag '39 190w

"Mr. Rood's primary interest is in the stability of the family as related to American culture and democracy, and he has written this book not to propose or defend a thesis but because of great social concern. Those who share this concern will do well to take his arguments into account." Gordon Poteat

+ Crozer Q 17:74 Ja '40 200w

Reviewed by C. M. Rosenquist
Ethics 50:240 Ja '40 130w

J Home Econ 31:480 S '39 60w

"An interesting viewpoint, thoughtfully expressed." Frank Meyerson Religious Educ 34:192 Jl '39 80w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.
Survey 75:326 O '39 180w

ROOM, THOMAS GERALD. Geometry of determinantal loci. 484p $10 Macmillan [42s Cambridge]

516.57 Geometry, Projective [39-14552]

"As first designed this volume was to have provided a systematic account, taking Reye's lectures on projective geometry as its model, and using purely synthetic methods, of the properties of the loci in higher space which correspond to quadric and cubic surfaces in ordinary space. As the work progressed it became clear that the limitations imposed by these methods were too strict, particularly when numerical results were sought, and that proofs by them were often very long and involved. Thus in this, the final form, synthetic and algebraic methods, whichever seem more appropriate to the solution of the problem in hand, are adopted impartially, much as they are by Professor Baker in the book that is the second godparent of this." (Pref) The author is Professor of Mathematics in the University of Sydney, Australia.

"The book consists very largely of original researches, and among these the chapters on the representation of spaces by points and the chapter and appendix on the freedom of loci are particularly interesting. The index and table of contents are admirably complete and the author suggests a useful course of selective reading." D. W. B.

+ Nature 144:960 D 9 '39 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:25 Ap '39

ROONEY, JOHN JEROME. Collected poems; with an introd. by Edwin Markham. 137p $2 Dodd

811 38-39611

"The late John Jerome Rooney, journalist and jurist, liveliest spirit of the Poetry Society of America, all during his long life tossed off verse, written sometimes on the margin of his morning newspaper in the subway—ballads of American wars and Irish rebellions, love poems, devotional pieces, polished and pithy bits of gnomic philosophy. All these found ready acceptance and were widely published, and it is well that a selection of them should be put between covers." Books

---

Books p14 F 19 '39 150w

Cath World 149:248 My '39 160w

"Here is a clear sounding note of hope and belief. Verses of gay and tender love for children: verses, reverent, but as joyous, of love for God and His saints. Behind them is scholarship of a sort we have almost forgotten, so taken for granted and unself-conscious it is. Here are poems which in their simplicity are yet not cheap; which if they lack careful originality of phrase may yet for that be nearer to the need of the common man." Margaret Widdemer

+ N Y Times p23 F 5 '39 650w

"A journalistic type of poet, whose work considerably dates, it shows evidence of a kindly and genial man underneath." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 50w

ROONEY, PHILIP. Red sky at dawn. 304p $2.50 Kenedy [7s 6d Gill, M.H.]

39-14614

"It's a yarn of Ireland early in the nineteenth century, relating how Niall Carolan returned to his native country after ten years before the mast on American merchantmen, how he stepped ashore in Sligo town for a bit of grog, took part in a fight, and escaped from the law through the not too willing aid of an arrogant enemy of the crown. Carolan repaid his benefactor by stealing the heart of his girl, which was certainly inviting trouble." Books

---

"'Red Sky at Dawn' is composed in swift and musical measure; it has Irish eloquence to match its Irish warmth and narrative vigor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 Ap 16 '39 130w

Cath World 149:253 My '39 130w

"Those who like a simple but virile tale, somewhat mechanically constructed, will like 'Red Sky.'" Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 23 '39 700w

"The tale is well constructed and told with restraint and conviction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p799 D 17 '38 40w

ROOSEVELT, HALL, and MCCOY, SAMUEL DUFF. Odyssey of an American family. 339p il map $3.75 Harper

910.4 Voyages and travels. Roosevelt family (W) 39-9014

"An account of the Roosevelts and their kin as travelers, from 1613 to 1938." (Subtitle) To a large extent the account is based upon family documents and letters.

Booklist 35:305 My 15 '39

"This book is a real contribution to the lore of an American people that was frankly 'on the make,' scheming, roving and fighting individually for the more abundant life." Allen Raymond

+ Books p4 Ap 30 '39 800w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 29 '39 90w

"This is a book which is at once unusual and representative, full of diverse enterprise, and very interesting indeed." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '39 650w

"Not a family history but a set of colorful pictures of America on the move. Excellent illustrations."

New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 50w

"The account of these Rooseveltian and near-Rooseveltian adventures, as set down by Mr. Hall Roosevelt, makes an adventure book comparable to any adventure story of modern times. As a key to the conduct of the Roosevelts of this generation, the book has its special value. Incidentally, it is charmingly written." W. A. W.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 160w

Wis Lib Bul 35:144 Jl '39

ROOT, EDWARD TALLMADGE. The Bible economy of plenty. 198p $1.65 Harper

220.833 Bible. Whole—Economics 39-25413

"The author reviews the teachings of the prophets and their denunciation of riches secured by unrighteous means; the ideal of the Hebrew law that there should be 'no poor with thee'; the admonition of the Wisdom writings that 'neither poverty nor riches' are good for man. He faces the problem of the Psalms and Job, 'Why do the wicked prosper?' He presents Jesus' 'Seek first the Kingdom of God' as a revolutionary social life-purpose adequate to implement the social forces of our day." Christian Century

---

ROOSEVELT (rō'zù-velt)

ROOT, E. T.—Continued
Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p31 D 10 '39 160w
Reviewed by Charles Gerlinger
Christian Century 56:1505 D 6 '39 420w
Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 25 '39 500w

"Few books reveal the timeliness of the Bible as this one does. To those who believe the Bible has nothing to do with economic questions, this volume will be an eye-opener; to those who believe the Bible was suitable only to an agricultural and commercial society based upon scarcity, it will be a revelation; to those who feel the Bible has lost its place in our contemporaneous life, this book will prove the Bible is the most modern book in the world's library." C. L. Willard, Jr.
+ Churchman 153:21 D 1 '39 220w

ROOT, ROBERT KILBURN. Poetical career of Alexander Pope. 248p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]
821 Pope, Alexander 39-2347
For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by Robert Walcott, Jr.
Atlantic Ap '39 130w

"With contagious delight in the music of Pope's verse, the range and power of his imagery, and the dynamic thrust of his wit, Mr. Root imparts to the reader the information necessary to an understanding of the poet, imparting it in terms of generally intelligible human values." H. S. Hughes
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '39 900w

"History, particularly literary history, appears to move in cycles. . . It may be that the present reign of lawlessness, in literature no less than in affairs, will give rise to another period of static repose, and that the renewed interest in the 18th century, of which 'The Poetical Career of Alexander Pope' is only one manifestation, marks the beginning of a return swing of the pendulum. If so, this stimulating critical survey and interpretation of a poet who represents the best that new-classicism has to offer will achieve that wider popularity which its merits deserve." R. J. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 700w

"To those who are contemplating a course of Pope and wish to acquire a background first, this volume can be warmly recommended; the complexities, for instance, attending the publication of the Dunciad are clearly explained, as indeed are the particulars of the origination of the other poems. . . The value of Mr. Root's work is considerable for newcomers to Pope, if less for convinced Popeians of whom the number has probably always been greater than seems to be allowed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 4 '39 230w

RORTY, JAMES. American medicine mobilizes. 358p $3 Norton
614.2 Insurance, Health. Medical economics. Medical service. American medical association (W) 39-27406

This book presents, in popular form, the arguments for compulsory health insurance. Part one gives, in semi-dramatic form, the story of the National Health Conference held in Washington, July, 1938. Part two analyzes and criticizes the functioning of the American Medical Association. Part three contains a survey of various forms of socialized medicine now in practice both at home and abroad. Index.

Reviewed by D. W. Orr
Ann Am Acad 205:145 S '39 550w
Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

"Mr. Rorty has packed a large area of social and professional history into 'American Medicine Mobilizes' and has given it with a vigor, breeziness and good humor which will enlist the interest of the so-called general reader and the guinea pig, the patient. The book should gain the thoughtful—and doubtless often enthusiastic attention—of doctors also and of the far larger body of men and women concerned professionally with medical care as educators, nurses, welfare administrators, research workers, pharmacists and technicians." Mary Ross
+ Books p4 Je 4 '39 850w

"On the whole, it is a very partisan book. Of that vast number of variables having to do with the health of the nation, two are seized upon and made a basis for a future plan. A knowledge of the incidence of disease and of the income of patients seems to be all that is necessary. It is a good book, well worth reading, but with a realization that it is thoroughly biased, as perhaps it must be." A. W. Stearns, M.D.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 3 '39 400w
Christian Century 56:953 Ag 2 '39 250w

"This work shows sympathy for the practitioner and bitter disillusionment over the organization that dominates medicine in the United States. Doctors must read this sort of thing, however much they disagree with it. Those of them who have served in the army will still know that, however efficient the government scientist and hygienist may be, the independent physician, human as he is, is better trained to exercise the priestly function of the practitioner of medicine than is a government official." E. L. Keyes
+ — Commonweal 30:50 My 5 '39 480w
Reviewed by H. H. Darby
Nation 148:622 My 27 '39 500w
Reviewed by Abraham Epstein
New Repub 99:369 Ag 2 '39 300w
Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p5 My 21 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:99 My 27 '39 50w

"Despite Mr. Rorty's oft-times astigmatic logic, he has written a thought-provoking, timely book, and has collected evidence inaccessible to many. It is to be hoped he will find many interested readers. No one in medical or social work questions the pressing need of an extended medical service. The more generally and argumentatively this need is discussed, the sooner we may hope to evolve the best way to go about meeting it." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:12 Ap 22 '39 1100w

"The American Medical association, like most American institutions, has incurred legitimate criticism. The recent policies of its journal do not appear to have been altogether tactful or wise. Yet its errors as well as its accomplishments have to be considered in relation to the whole practice of medicine and the progress of medical science. Mr Rorty's book, offered frankly as propaganda, has too much the manner of a tirade."
Springf'd Republican p7e My 14 '39 850w

"A well-documented, one-sided account of issues and events in medical economics during the past fifteen years. . . Here are facts which progressive physicians who love their profession will be sorry to see in print, and which they know are only half the medical story. But they will agree that the facts should be told. However, the physician cannot merely be hitched to the cart of a better medical economics; he is a racehorse that must be managed rather than driven." M. M. Davis
+ — Survey G 28:342 My '39 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

ROSEAMAN, IVY PENELOPE. Leatherwork. 84p il $2.25 Manual arts press [5s Dryad]
675 Leather work

"An attractive little book on hand leather work, describing leathers and tools, patterns, thonging, sewing and skiving, gussets, fastenings, handles, pockets, tooling, modelling, staining, pressing, and leather renovation. There are drawings, photographs, and descriptive texts for the making of 45 useful and attractive articles." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 36:105 N 15 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:40 Jl '39

ROSENBERG, ARTHUR. Democracy and socialism; a contribution to the political history of the past 150 years; tr. from the German by George Rosen. 376p $3.50 Knopf [12s 6d Bell, G]

335 Socialism. Democracy. Communism
39-11988

"Prof Rosenberg's intention in this volume is to reassess the history of socialism since the time of the American and French revolutions, and to show the considerable degree to which the advocates of democracy and socialism have had the same aims. His historical emphasis is necessarily upon France, which has been the proving ground of many political theories. But he also deals with the important socialist and democratic movements in other countries." (Springf'd Republican) The author was formerly a professor of history at Berlin university and is now teaching at Brooklyn college in this country. Index.

Am Hist R 45:193 O '39 50w

"Professor Rosenberg's volume is a very valuable contribution to the general history of parties and party ideologies. It is characterized by a welcome breadth of outlook, which includes a consideration of the smaller European countries whenever they show significant developments. . . On the whole, the book is an important step in the reorientation which is taking place amongst progressive leaders throughout the Western world." C. J. Friedrich
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:685 Ag '39 1000w

Reviewed by W. L. Langer
Books p10 S 3 '39 1050w

"This is a stimulating book, full of ideas, but Mr. Rosenberg, despite his excellent qualities—and they are many, as readers of his earlier books know,—is not free from the German vice of spinning an interminable cocoon of verbiage." A. J. P. T.
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 30 '39 280w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 148:648 Je 3 '39 900w
New Repub 98:315 Ap 19 '39 70w

"Anything by Arthur Rosenberg is bound to be worth reading, and Democracy and Socialism is a worthy successor to the History of Bolshevism and The Birth of the German Republic. . . Here are no wishful thinking, no mock-heroics and no jargon, but a sober piece of historical analysis which can be compared for independence of judgment with the historical studies of Marx himself. Which is not to say that Marxists will necessarily approve of it!" R. H. S. Crossman
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:945 Je 17 '39 850w

"Any book that helps us to understand the origins of some of our contemporary disillusionments is welcome, whatever its faults, and Professor Rosenberg's book undoubtedly does that." D. W. Brogan
+ — Spec 162:1138 Je 30 '39 550w

"Prof Rosenberg's subject is a fascinating one—the story of a century and a half of development and divergence in socialist thought. A straightforward historical treatise on it would receive a widespread welcome and would fill a real need. To a certain extent the author has given such a treatment and offers a worth-while amount of penetrating comment on the complex questions at issue. However, he has weighted down his work—sometimes to the point of dullness—with interpretations of Marxist ideology which shed little light on the conflict of political philosophies now in progress and which are usually neither very concise nor very compelling." D. D.
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 12 '39 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p430 Jl 22 '39 480w

ROSETT, JOSHUA. Mechanism of thought, imagery, and hallucination. 289p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

153 Psychology, Physiological. Thought and thinking. Imagination. Hallucinations and illusions 39-8043

"In this book Dr. Rosett of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, gives an authoritative account of the anatomy and physiology of the brain in relation to certain aspects of thought, feeling and action, including a special chapter on sleep. In addition he gives particular attention to the law of evolution and to the dissolution of the nervous system." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"In the opinion of the reviewer, the book has not succeeded in advancing the theory of the Mechanism of Thought. This, the reviewer believes, is because Dr. Rosett's fruitful and ingenious mind was not provided with the easily accessible psychological material on which to work." George Humphrey
— + Am J Psychol 53:159 Ja '40 650w

Reviewed by Karl Menninger
New Repub 102:58 Ja 8 '40 210w

"This is, without question, one of the most significant books on the subject that has appeared in years." Livingston Welch
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 30 '39 600w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Ap '39 60w

ROSMAN, ALICE GRANT. William's room. (Minton, Balch bk) 291p $2 Putnam
(W) 39-27505

Quiet story of family life in a village not far from London. The members of the Willows and Brentwood families are friendly neighbors, their homes separated only by lawns and a hedge. After the death of her invalid husband, Mrs Willows takes as paying guest a mysterious, lovely woman, who calls herself Mrs Hereford. Crispin Brentwood, who comes frequently to play the piano in William's room at the Willows' house, meets the paying guest, and falls in love. The story is of their love, and of the part played in it by Penny Willows, the young daughter of the house.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

"You come to the end of the book refreshed and reluctantly. The story is the author at her best." Lisle Bell
+ Books p6 Je 18 '39 420w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:254 Ag 12 '39 300w

"One of the most enjoyable of the Rosman novels. It is an excellent story of the nicest sort of English family life." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 Je 18 '39 600w
Pratt p29 autumn '39

"Alice Grant Rosman has the gift of writing gay, gracious, and witty novels. Highly selective, she creates an internally consistent world which, if excluding the deeper problems of actuality, is nevertheless thoroughly realistic within its own self-chosen limits. . . Ever since her 'Visitors to Hugo' several years ago, Mrs. Rosman's novels have been doing much to fill the ever-present need for 'light entertainment' in fiction that intelligent readers can enjoy. They maintain a delicate, difficult balance between the over-sophisticated, wise-cracking type, on the one hand, and the all too sweetly sentimental on the other." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Je 24 '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p477 Ag 12 '39 80w

ROSS, JAMES ALEXANDER. Speculation, stock prices and industrial fluctuations. 426p $4.50 Ronald

332.64 Speculation. Stock exchange. Business cycles 38-12315

"Professor Ross' book is 'an introduction to a study of the economic significance of trading for capital gains in the stocks of corporations listed on the stock exchanges in the United States.' It is a thorough study both of speculative practices and of theories of speculation. Special emphasis is given to the effects of speculation on stock prices, although attention is also directed to the effects of various economic factors upon stock prices and, in turn, the influence of stock prices on various economic factors. The book is not organized from the business cycle point of view, but a study of changes in stock prices and other economic variables is necessarily tinged with business cycle implications." Harvard Business R

Reviewed by R. S. Tucker
Am Econ R 28:565 S '38 400w

"As a research publication the work is weak in that the data are almost exclusively from the postwar United States experience, and in the use of many secondary source materials which are themselves open to attack from some points of view (e.g., Congressional Hearings in which political elements were present, quasi-popular writings, and so forth). The reviewer frankly admits that he does not understand some of this book, and he is of the opinion that incisive and critical restatement of much of the theory of Chapters 1, 2, and 3 would increase the usefulness of the volume." F. F. Burtchett
Ann Am Acad 202:224 Mr '39 220w

Reviewed by J. L. Snider
Harvard Business R 17:372 spring '39 190w

ROSS, LEONARD Q., pseud. See Rosten, L. C.

ROSS, MALCOLM HARRISON. Death of a Yale man. 385p $2.50 Farrar

B or 92 Labor and laboring classes (W) 39-27336

The theme of this autobiography is the author's development from Yale graduate bondselling to a position as director of publications on the National Labor Relations Board.

Reviewed by Carl Raushenbush
Am Econ R 29:868 D '39 130w
Booklist 35:289 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Edward Angly
Books p22 Ap 2 '39 900w

Reviewed by Elliott Earl
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 320w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"The result of Mr. Ross's having chosen to fish rather than cut coupons is a book you wish every middle-class American might read, not because it is a great book, but because it is so fine and convincing a book for our time." Arthur Mizener
+ Nation 148:471 Ap 22 '39 650w

Reviewed by B. J. Loewenberg
New Eng Q 12:783 D '39 650w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven, Jr.
New Repub 99:194 Je 21 '39 390w

"Just as long as Mr. Ross keeps his two lives at arm's length from each other, by just that much he contributes to continued misunderstanding. To him black is black and white is white; there are no grays. For that reason it is a question how many converts he will make. His book will please those who believe that the Wagner act is perfect. Those who believe otherwise should find in Mr. Ross's earnest advocacy a revealing exposition of the psychology and viewpoint of those administering the act." S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p2 Ap 2 '39 650w

"An interesting and significant informal autobiography."
+ New Yorker 15:79 Ap 1 '39 50w

"Malcolm Ross has here written the postwar equivalent of Lincoln Steffens's 'Autobiography.' Lest this be sacrilege, a paragraph makes haste to qualify what a sentence affirms. The range of Steffens's experience was so vast as to make him unique in his generation. Ross writes as a younger man whose life is only beginning to offer the opportunities embraced by Steffens's later years. In his shorter span, Ross has bridged an experience common to other Americans possessed of wanderlust, intelligence, and imagination. Steffens wrote an effortless, flowing prose never conspicuous as an end in itself, always sufficient to the tasks at hand. Ross surpasses Steffens in variety and scope of language and style. But beneath these surface differences there is an important commonality of experience, intellect, sympathy, and conclusion." R. R. R. Brooks
+ Sat R of Lit 19:4 Ap 1 '39 700w

Reviewed by L. R. Mason
Survey G 28:504 Ag '39 450w
Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

ROSS, MARGARET ISABEL. The Dawn Hill brand; with il. by Forrest Orr. 227p $2 Houghton

39-30364

A sequel to Greentree Downs (Book Review Digest, 1937). Elizabeth and Sidge Turner decide to operate a dude station, not far from Greentree Downs, and have their share of discouragement and fun.

Booklist 36:202 Ja 15 '40

"To say that Margaret Ross knows her Australia is not enough. In countless ways those who read her books live and breathe and learn to love that country of 'missing links, primitive species, and forgotten freaks.' " Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:38 Ja 1 '40 130w

"Only middling."
Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

ROSSKAM, EDWIN. San Francisco, west coast metropolis; with an introd. by William Saroyan. (Face of America) 136p il $2.50 Alliance bk. corp.

917.9461 San Francisco—Description (W) 39-27506

A book made up largely of photographs combined with brief text in which the author's main purpose—to define the spirit of the city—is served by omission of most of the customary guide-book information.

Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by H. N. Smith
Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 80w

"Mr. Rosskam's photographs catch the feeling and essence of the city from the fog to Fisherman's Wharf, and his text manages to be both amusing and informative without using clichés."
+ New Repub 99:84 My 24 '39 40w

"Both in text and photograph, this book on San Francisco opens the door to a real acquaintance with the West Coast metropolis, for readers at a distance as well as for visitors to the Treasure Island Exposition of this Summer. It is not a guide book, but something broader and more searching, executed with an understanding and affection which the photographer-author is able to pass on to the public. In Mr. Saroyan's introduction there is a lyric enthusiasm."
+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '39 320w
New Yorker 15:101 My 13 '39 90w
Sat R of Lit 20:21 Je 17 '39 300w

ROSSKAM, EDWIN, and BLACK, RUBY AURORA (MRS HERBERT LITTLE). Washington; nerve center; with an introd. by Eleanor Roosevelt. (Face of America) 144p il $2.50 Alliance bk.

917.53 Washington, D.C. U.S.—Politics and government 39-27942

This guidebook to Washington, set forth by means of many photographs and brief text, is a guide not only to the city itself but also to the work done by various governmental departments which have their headquarters there.

Booklist 36:104 N 15 '39

"Mr. Rosskam's writing is colloquial (sometimes too colloquial), but it is terse and readable; and although he does not shrink from the charge of a 'point of view,' he has rightly emphasized the collection of pertinent and varied fact."

\+ N Y Times p11 O 15 '39 440w

Survey G 28:699 N '39 30w

ROSTEN, LEO CALVIN (LEONARD Q. ROSS, pseud). Dateline: Europe. 243p $2 Harcourt (W) 39-27407

An adventure story in the Graustarkian manner. The chief characters are a foreign correspondent (headquarters Paris), and two girls —a society girl and an ambitious young reporter. The event which starts them off is the assassination of the King of Belgovenia, somewhere in the Balkans.

Booklist 35:307 My 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p19 Ap 30 '39 200w

Boston Transcript p1 My 13 '39 230w

"The founder of Hyman Kaplan & Co. proves that his touch works as smoothly on light fiction as on boners in adult education. An amiably giddy story."

\+ New Repub 99:28 My 10 '39 50w

"It is a rather clever yarn of action, argument and romance, Graustark revisited in 1939. Pure Hollywood in conception, plot, characters and incident, it should make a good movie. And it is a good enough novel if all you are looking for is pure entertainment and if you don't strain at gnats." Robert Van Gelder

\+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '39 360w

"Seems curiously old-fashioned in spite of Mr. Ross's faithful attention to spot news and his lively style."

New Yorker 15:122 Ap 29 '39 40w

"The story rolls along, gathering momentum as it goes, and the characters keep accumulating nobility until everything just naturally bursts at the end. But have no fear. The pieces all fall into exactly the right position. Anyone with a taste for adventure who believes that human life began with Vincent Sheean and Negley Farson will find this good going." R. H.

Sat R of Lit 20:30 Ap 29 '39 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 260w

"A glib, neatly joined short novel. . . As one character says: 'It's like a cross between Graustark and the Arabian Nights, written by E. Phillips Oppenheim.' Authors McCutcheon, Scheherazade, Oppenheim might object, but to most readers Dateline: Europe will seem like a versatile slip which can do Author Rosten no harm, if not repeated."

Time 33:91 My 1 '39 180w

ROSTEN, LEO CALVIN (LEONARD Q. ROSS, pseud). The strangest places [il. by George Price]. 226p $2 Harcourt

817 (W) 39-21439

Fourteen sketches about funny people and funny places in New York city, Chicago, San Francisco or New Orleans. Some of them have appeared in the New Yorker in what the author calls "less lusty form"; a few have been hitherto unpublished.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p4 S 3 '39 550w

"[The author] does his job thoroughly, squeezing deep laughs out of people and situations which might be lost upon the unobservant. He delights in the incongruous, and his prose is clear and specific. He tells you exactly what, and as much, as you want to know. . . Mr. Ross might just as well be a Victor record, when it comes to catching the nuances of dialogue. He is charmingly frank, and he packs in the human interest." Olga Owens

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 490w

Christian Century 56:1046 Ag 30 '39 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"When the author leaves New York and treats of alien subjects, I find that much of his charm disappears. This is true also of his few attempts at the hard-boiled manner. That sort of thing is simply not Mr. Ross' dish. The most successful pieces are 'Café Royal,' 'Mr. Barney's Place,' and the study in animalism entitled 'Savoy Ballroom,' which is as uncomfortable and accurate a piece of reporting as I have read in some time." J. G. E. Hopkins

\+ — Commonweal 30:483 S 15 '39 180w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 100:137 S 6 '39 310w

"All of the sketches are dizzily humorous reading, for Mr. Ross has a keen eye for spotting the incongruous, the pretentious, the phony and the funny." Beatrice Sherman

\+ N Y Times p5 Ag 27 '39 480w

New Yorker 15:62 S 2 '39 70w

"All the pieces are well written, informative as to curiosa, and amusing if never hilarious. The book is rather miscellaneous in content, but at the same time a shade monotonous in treatment; better to read off and on than all at once." G. S.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 9 '39 170w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 31 '39 490w

Times [London] Lit Sup p702 D 2 '39 200w

ROTHA, PAUL. Documentary film [pref. by John Grierson]. 320p il $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Faber]

791.4 Moving pictures 39-27507

This is the first American edition of a book published in England in 1936. The history of the documentary film is traced, the aims and problems described, and the probable future considered. The author is one of the founders of the British group producing documentary films. The book is profusely illustrated from documentary films of different nations, and contains a list of documentary film directors, and some of their pictures. Index.

Booklist 35:345 Je 15 '39

"Although Mr. Rotha's book is a mine of information about every phase of the documentary film, it is highly readable and should be of interest not only to those in the industry but to anyone who is concerned with the future of one of our greatest mediums of public entertainment. The inclusion of 79 plates of splendid 'stills' from famous documentary films adds greatly to the book's attractiveness." Elizabeth Laine

\+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 10 '39 550w

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 6 '39 220w

N Y Times p2 My 21 '39 490w

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Sat R of Lit 20:12 Ag 12 '39 800w

Reviewed by Richard Griffith

Survey G 28:549 S '39 360w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). Norway; changing and changeless [phot. by Harry Rogers Pratt]. 294p map $3 Viking

914.81 Norway—Description and travel (W) 39-27408

Once more the author has traveled to her beloved Scandinavia and brought back a travel book which tells the tourist what to see and how to see it, but also includes much of history and social conditions, many anecdotes of people and places. The book is illustrated with numerous fine photographs taken by the author's husband. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:305 My 15 '39

"Life is so short for such an eager observer that often in writing about impressive scenery or quiet art she employs adjectives as exciting as those used by sports writers to describe a football scrimmage. Miss Rothery's revelation of Norway is all that one could ask for in 300 pages turned out at white heat. If her narrative is breathless, her appendices and bibliographies are calm and authentic. . . The illustrations are always original and personal as well as professional; for her husband, who accompanies her, photographs as excitingly as she writes." H. G. Leach

+ Books p3 Ap 30 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40 10w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 11 '39 360w

New Repub 99:230 Je 28 '39 40w

"Agnes Rothery has established herself so firmly as a soundly interesting and authoritative writer on the Scandinavian countries that her fourth book on that part of the world needs no introduction to a public that is no doubt already waiting for it. Nor does the public need to be told that just as she clearly differentiated Sweden and Finland and Denmark from each other in their special character, so here she wholly divorces the word 'Scandinavian' from any sense of mere blanket description, and sets Norway before her readers in all its own sure distinction. What may come as a surprise, in this book, is the singing quality of the author's response to that distinction." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 23 '39 1200w

Pratt p22 autumn '39

"To say that Agnes Rothery's new book is less thorough, less effective generally, than her 'Sweden: The Land and the People' is not to disprize it, for it stands high above most of the recent books on Scandinavia. Her writing has such ease and warmth to it that you feel this to be a personal travel book, whereas actually it is quite objective, and it is startling to realize that there is not an 'I' among all the visions and opinions it contains." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 6 '39 350w

Reviewed by P. H. Johnson

Spec 162:1054 Je 16 '39 110w

"Miss Rothery has now written books on Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Norway; and she has done them thoroughly. . . But while she wrote a very pleasant book on Sweden, with Norway she has defeated herself. She has aimed much higher and has never caught up with her ambition. Anyone will sympathize with her who has tried to catch a landscape in words."

Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Jl 15 '39 420w

ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY. The politics of the Balkans; foreword by Fritz Morstein Marx. 168p $1.50 (8s 6d) McGraw

949.6 Balkan states. Eastern question (Balkan). Europe—Politics (W) 39-27560

Briefly outlines the politics of the different Balkan nations—the "high tension zone of European power politics." The author considers and interprets the politics of Yugoslavia, Rumania, Albania, Greece, Bulgaria, and the Macedonian scene. He describes the duel between France and Italy in the Balkans, Hitler's bid for control, and Dr Schacht's barter system, and asks What next? Index.

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Am Pol Sci R 33:1107 D '39 180w

Reviewed by H. N. Howard

Ann Am Acad 205:169 S '39 380w

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 15 '39 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey

Commonweal 31:52 N 3 '39 420w

Foreign Affairs 18:170 O '39 50w

Reviewed by O. I. Janowsky

Living Age 357:96 S '39 340w

"This timely book is a lucid interpretation of a state of affairs that every student of world events should understand. It is an excellent work that should have a place in all libraries and on all reference shelves of European politics." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 15 '39 300w

ROUGHEAD, WILLIAM. Murder and more murder; with a foreword by William Lyon Phelps. 305p $2.50 Sheridan

343 Murder. Crime and criminals 39-21178

Résumés of seven celebrated English and Scottish murder trials. Contents: The Ardlamont mystery: or, The misadventures of Mr Monson; The monster of Ballantrae: or, The last of the ogres; The mélanges of Monsieur Chantrelle: French master, physician, and murderer; Mrs Donald's crime: or, The force of circumstance; Deacon Brodie: or, The dyer's hand; The shadow on Shandy Hall: or, What love costs an old man; Katharine Nairn.

"The book is notable not only for the choice of cases, but also for the delightful manner in which Mr. Roughead makes dull court records interesting reading." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 2 '39 140w

New Repub 100:251 O 4 '39 20w

"Each of these stories has been selected for some specific reason . . . and each one can stand alone in its claim to attention. But their broad reach of interest is in the way they are told. William Roughead is an original scholar who is also the master of an enlivened elegance and an ironic wit; his prose is a delight." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 S 17 '39 700w

"Perfect for readers who crave hard, cold facts, and more exciting than any crime story of fiction."

+ New Yorker 15:63 S 2 '39 50w

"For connoisseurs."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 26 '39 30w

ROURKE, THOMAS, pseud. See Clinton, D. J.

ROUSE, WILLIAM HENRY DENHAM. The talking thrush; stories of birds and beasts. 218p il $1.50 Dutton [5s Dent]

398 Folklore—India (W) 39-27023

"Forty years ago a volume of stories of birds and beasts, collected in India by W. Crooke of the ethnological survey of the northwest provinces, was published in England. It has run through numerous editions. A selection of beast stories, albeit the first is the title story, 'The Talking Thrush,' is now published. A well-known English schoolmaster, W. H. D. Rouse has edited these 43 stories, making various changes to adapt them for juvenile consumption." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 35:209 F 15 '39

"The ill-doer is punished and the outwitter outwitted in these tales, but often very cruelly, as in 'The Sparrow's Revenge,' to give only one example, and for young minds in the making one could wish more tales of the type of 'Reflected Glory,' which has a kind ending. It is rather a book for the student of comparative anthropology, who would find it of real value and be able to trace in it many a fable and tale familiar to us all." Evelyn Sharp

Manchester Guardian sup xiv D 9 '38 160w

"Adult readers will recognize some old familiar tales, like that of the camel getting its head into the tent. Such tales belong not to any one country, but are folklore from the whole Orient, spontaneously indigenous to many lands. In spite of this polysyllabic characterization, they are simple, amusing entertaining and true to Aesop and all his brethren in many lands."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 20 '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 35:191 N '39

ROUSH, GAR A. Strategic mineral supplies. 485p $5 (30s) McGraw

338.2 Mines and mineral resources. War—Economic aspects. Geology, Economic 39-21866

This review, based on a series of articles in The Military Engineer, presents the status of strategic mineral supplies in the United States, both from a military and general industrial viewpoint. Index.

Booklist 36:85 N 1 '39
Chem & Met Eng 46:723 N '39 170w

"This book, which is a study of the strategic mineral supply of the United States, is highly recommended as one of the best books on the subject. Of all authorities capable of writing such a volume, G. A. Roush is most eminently fitted. . . A timely, good book."
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:759 D 10 '39 300w

Reviewed by T. H. Holland
Nature 144:921 D 2 '39 1350w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:59 O '39

ROWAN, RICHARD WILMER. Secret agents against America. 267p maps $2 Doubleday

355.34 Spies. Secret service. Propaganda 39-27337

The story of foreign espionage and sabotage in America and a plea for more efficient counter-espionage. By the author of Spies and the Next War (Book Review Digest, 1934).

Booklist 35:284 My 1 '39

Reviewed by W. A. Roberts
Books p9 Je 18 '39 420w
Foreign Affairs 18:162 O '39 10w

Reviewed by Ludwig Lore
Nation 149:49 Jl 8 '39 90w
New Repub 98:232 Mr 29 '39 50w

"This is, of course, a most difficult subject on which to write a reasonable book. Little worthwhile information can be disclosed, for while the press is free enough in disclosing the steps in the tracking down of criminals, the facts of the highly specialized work of counter-espionage are, in all common sense, kept out of print. Highlights caught by the newspapers may be reprinted, and generalized propaganda in favor of better organized counter-espionage work naturally is privileged. But spies remain the province of an Oppenheim or a historian." Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p4 Ap 2 '39 550w

Reviewed by O. G. Villard
Sat R of Lit 19:10 Ap 1 '39 130w

ROWE, KENNETH THORPE. Write that play. 418p $3 Funk

808.2 Drama—Technique. Drama—History and criticism 39-9020

With several chapters on the problems of play-writing treated generally, the author has combined detailed analyses of three plays: Dunsany's A Night at an Inn, Synge's Riders to the Sea, and Ibsen's Doll's House.

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39

"Write That Play will profit the aspiring playwright who is serious enough and studious enough to accept detailed and painstaking advice. Mr. Rowe's approach, though academic (he is professor at the University of Michigan), is sound, and his material ranges from the Book of Job to the latest Broadway success. The meat of the book is to be found in [the] masterly analyses. . . The chapter on the art of revision will also repay close attention."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:684 S '39 100w

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Political and strategic interests of the United Kingdom; an outline. 304p $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations. Great Britain—Defenses. Imperial federation. World politics [39-25316]

"A comprehensive and remarkably objective examination into the factors upon which British interests rest in the various parts of the world. The subject is divided into its regional aspects, with two concluding chapters on imperial defense." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by C. A. Timm
Am Pol Sci R 33:899 O '39 550w

"The volume, according to its authors, was intended as 'a concise but readable guide.' As such, the general reader and also the specialized student will find it a convenient and compact survey of the multitudinous problems which now confront British statesmen in Whitehall." T. W. Wallbank
Ann Am Acad 206:178 N '39 370w
Foreign Affairs 18:170 O '39 40w
Geog R 29:703 O '39 550w

"It need not be regretted that this book was completed in the first days of March. Since the middle of that month developments have occurred in British policy and the scope of British interests that could not yet be discussed with the same full knowledge or in the same scholarly spirit which distinguish this book. Meanwhile, all praise is due to the editorial committee, and to its secretary, Mr. Wight, for this thoroughly reliable guide to British policy."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Jl 8 '39 850w

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Information department. The Baltic states; a survey of the political and economic structure and the foreign relations of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. 194p map $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

947.4 Estonia. Latvia. Lithuania 39-8235

"The countries here considered are the three Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which were all until recently part of the Russian Empire. The object of the work is to provide a concise, and at the same time relatively comprehensive, review of the historical backgrounds of the three States, their political and economic development and structure, and their foreign relations." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The best parts of this work are those dealing with the economic and financial features of the Baltic States and the impact thereon of the crisis of 1931. Very interesting are also the sections covering the political developments, showing the transformation from the ultra-democratic constitutions promulgated in 1920 to dictatorial regimes, which appear to be groping towards some new organization of the state upon a corporate basis. . . The weakest aspect of the study is its lack of a good bibliography. Whatever bibliographical references there are, they are incomplete and omit numerous excellent studies." J. S. Roucek

ROYAL INST. OF INT. AFFAIRS—Continued

+ — Ann Am Acad 203:231 My '39 500w

Economist 133:660 D 24 '38 130w

Foreign Affairs 17:445 Ja '39 30w

"For those who desire a succinct statement of the political and economic history of the new Baltic States, this volume admirably fulfills the requirements. The presentation is unbiased and hence particularly valuable in the current critical period. . . The volume is of value also as an interesting comparative study. The comparative aspect of geography is one pursued all too little yet one that holds large possibilities for the future of the science. Although this particular monograph is not offered as a geographical presentation, it has much to commend it to the geographer." Eugene Van Cleef

+ Geog R 29:517 Jl '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p573 S 3 '38 70w

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Information department. Southeastern Europe; a political and economic survey. 203p maps $2 Oxford [5s The institute]

940.5 Europe—Politics. Europe—Economic conditions. Balkan states 39-17709

"After a brief introduction dealing with geographical and ethnographical factors, the book falls into three sections. First comes a general survey of the foreign policies of Central and South-Eastern Europe since the War; then a review of the internal situation in each of the seven countries concerned (Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Albania, Greece, Bulgaria and Turkey); and, finally, a study of the economics, trade and finance of the same seven countries. This last section is the work of Dr. Benham, who visited these countries at the end of last year in order to prepare a report for the London and Cambridge Economic Service." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Am Pol Sci R 33:1108 D '39 80w

"The present work will go a long way toward making the Danubian world known. . . The best parts are those surveying some particulars of economic structures. . . Next in our appreciation comes the section describing the foreign policies of the Balkans, and especially the game played by the great powers at the beginning of April 1939. The chapters covering the internal politics of each country are the weakest ones. A mere description of the governmental changes and party elections is insufficient and fails to explain the social forces of political changes." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 205:169 S '39 380w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 800w

+ Economist 135:420 My 20 '39 140w

Foreign Affairs 18:379 Ja '40 30w

"This survey is extraordinarily useful and the material is presented with a pleasantly dispassionate precision. It is, moreover, rich in statistical tables and maps. After the upheavals of 1938 and of the spring of 1939, with their far-reaching repercussions in South-Eastern Europe, it is particularly valuable to have this guiding thread through the labyrinth." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ Spec 162:909 My 26 '39 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p274 My 13 '39 900w

ROYDE-SMITH, NAOMI GWLADYS (MRS ERNEST MILTON). The altar-piece; an Edwardian mystery. 316p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

(W) 39-11748

An English vicar and his wife, the young curate whose athletic progress was a bit boring at times, a beautiful young girl with a psychopathic condition, and a mysterious widow with an unwholesome passion for ecclesiastical embroidery, are some of the characters in this story of crime and mystery.

"Miss Royde Smith doesn't give a hang for speed and, in our opinion, her book is the better for it. She brushes in her colors and characters with a loving eye out for an impressive climax. Just relax and follow her tale of Mrs. Mayhew." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 My 21 '39 330w

Christian Century 56:645 My 17 '39 30w

"Miss Royde Smith has written a powerful and an absorbing story, but not one for the nervous or the unduly sensitive." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 170w

"Miss Royde-Smith is famous enough in her own sphere to need no introduction, and she wrestles with the particular difficulty of a crime plot with all the skill of a seasoned novelist. But the result is not a great success." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 17:545 Ap 8 '39 110w

"Miss Royde-Smith's dry humor is admirably designed for characterizing, without caricature, the vicars and curates and wealthy churchgoers of the snug residential suburb of Estingford. It is not the sort of humor to provoke a laugh. Indeed, Miss Royde-Smith does not quite mean us to laugh. In the most expert and disarming way she is leading us on to a decidedly macabre climax—a climax which fully justifies the novel's subtitle 'an Edwardian mystery.'" Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 My 21 '39 850w

"Not particularly hair-raising, but entertaining."

New Yorker 15:94 My 20 '39 50w

"Miss Royde-Smith is a skillful writer who knows how to create tension with delicate strokes and who is adept in holding the elements of her tale in solution until the proper moment for their precipitation. There is reality to her characters and a quiet simplicity to her writing which convey the flavor of scene and personality. Her book in its combination of clerical atmosphere and dramatic incident, strikes a fresh note in mystery literature." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 My 27 '39 330w

"Miss Royde Smith's story . . . though a little long-winded and slow in development, perhaps, from the point of view of the detection-fan, has some really creepy moments. She understands how one sharp, incongruous detail can affect our nerves more than pages of screams and bloodshed." Nicholas Blake

+ — Spec 162:558 Mr 31 '39 70w

"As if she herself were a little doubtful of the effect, Miss Royde Smith hovers uncertainly between the humours of the very familiar and the inexplicable. Neither comes off too well in the result. The tale puts out ever new shoots and finally becomes a rather tangled growth."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 11 '39 280w

ROYDE-SMITH, NAOMI GWLADYS (MRS ERNEST MILTON). The younger Venus. 369p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

(W) 39-27008

Susan Adderley, a modern English girl with the face of a Botticelli Venus, acquires a book which fascinates her so thoroly that she falls in love with its author, altho he is unknown to her. The author, meanwhile, has rented Susan's country home while she is absent on the continent, and falls in love with Susan's picture. The villain of the story is an elderly scholar with a penchant for stealing and forging works of art. His attempt to impose on Susan in the matter of smuggling some Botticelli drawings into England, gives the girl a chance to meet her unknown lover and clear him of a suspected robbery.

Booklist 35:191 F 1 '39

"It's not often that one encounters a novel in which the hero and heroine are in love with each other throughout the whole of the book without ever having met, and finally fall into each other's arms on the last page. [The author] has cut out for herself the rather difficult task of making the plot which supports the above premise sound plausible and, considering the obstacles, she succeeds fairly well. She has, in addition, managed to make her novel palatable reading; if 'The Younger Venus' isn't convincing, whatever blame is due should be placed on the original premise." F. J. Feldkamp

+ Books p8 Ja 22 '39 500w

"Miss Royde Smith's new story is certainly plotted with much skill. . . She indeed boldly, in these days of self-righteously purposeful propagandists, labels her new story 'an escape,' and a very refreshing holiday it proves. . . . Character, scene, and situation are touched in with an exquisite art and above all, Miss Royde Smith knows when to stop." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 7 '38 260w

New Repub 97:380 F 1 '39 50w

"There is humor, deepgrained and unliftable but giving the tale a pleasant, salty tang. Everywhere there is beauty of phrasing and of idea, and delight in beauty. But nowhere is there preciosity. And the close of it, when the lovers find each other, is as unstaled and as swiftly exquisite a finish to a romance as one could wish for. It is more than just the ending of a story. It is life caught on the wing." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 22 '39 800w

New Yorker 14:71 Ja 21 '39 50w

"This is a fragile, sentimental tale which, although somewhat streamlined, is strongly reminiscent of the innocent love stories of the nineties. . . The novel is rescued from banality by the author's deft characterizations and her indubitable skill. This reviewer must confess that it seemed as unrelated to life as lived in 1939 as are the novels of 'the Duchess,' but we are sure that day-dreaming adolescents of all ages will find it tender and charming, and to these we recommend it, the more confidently because of its finished dialogue and careful writing." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 21 '39 220w

"A sentimental comedy of great charm, delicate and imaginative, recalling, though it is modern, always a faint fragrance from the past; and that, I take it, is what she herself means when she describes it as an 'escape story.' The characters at all events are real enough, and sharply etched, even if there is something dreamlike in the love story." Forrest Reid

+ Spec 161:626 O 14 '38 330w

"If one likes pure romance, he will find it here. If the plot seems too fantastic and somewhat labored with complications, one can only say it is meant to be that way. A sound knowledge of art will help in the enjoyment of the book. It is a good 'story,' but not one that is likely to linger long with the reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 22 '39 550w

"This is an ideal 'escape' book, written round an ideal love story, with the loveliness of an English country house linked with all the coloured memories of the Renaissance in Italy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p629 O 1 '38 370w

RUBENS, SIR PETER PAUL. Paintings and drawings [introd. by R. A. M. Stevenson]. (Phaidon press art bk) 302p $2.50 Oxford [7s 6d Allen, G]

759.9 Paintings, Flemish. Drawings

39-29412

Contains 232 reproductions, six in color, of the paintings and drawings of Rubens. The text is largely biographical. The paintings are arranged according to subject. There is a chronological table; an index of places; and an alphabetical index.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Royal Cortissoz

Books p3 D 17 '39 320w

Commonweal 31:291 Ja 19 '40 50w

Reviewed by Eric Newton

Manchester Guardian sup xii D 1 '39 320w

New Repub 101:212 D 6 '39 40w

"The text contains some acute observations on his methods and importance as an artist. Unfortunately, the index is not sufficiently comprehensive."

+ — New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 50w

Springf'd Republican p12 N 9 '39 320w

"Several books reproducing the majority of Rubens's works already exist, and there is not perhaps so much need for this as for some other editions from the Phaidon Press. But it is a very well-arranged and well-selected collection. . . Relevant drawings and sketches are also placed next to pictures of the same subject, and the drawings seem to have been particularly well chosen."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p566 S 30 '39 250w

RUBICAM, HARRY COGSWELL. Pueblo Jones [il. by Sydney E. Fletcher]. 275p $2 Knopf

39-25959

Colorado Territory in the early 1860s is the scene of this adventure story for older boys. Pueblo Jones is a frontiersman, who helps a young American in his difficulties with Cheyenne Indians.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p28 N 12 '39 370w

"The book is not for the timid reader, but is very well written and seems to have followed carefully the historical documents written about that period." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 64:713 S 15 '39 100w

"This is a story to satisfy the craving of man and boy for blood and thunder and it has its roots deep in early incidents and characters of Colorado. The writing is not always as swift as the action, and except for Pueblo Jones, veteran Indian fighter, the characters are longer-winded than the Western tradition would have us believe." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p38 N 12 '39 150w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Handmaid to fame. 261p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder]

39-2162

Terry Gray was chosen by Val Lavery's fiancée to be his secretary because she was obviously the least attractive of all the girls who applied for the post—secretary to England's foremost film star. But Terry found many occasions to prove her worth, blossomed unexpectedly, and finally won both romance and fame.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p9 Ja 22 '39 70w

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 130w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Mock-honeymoon. 274p $2 Dodd

39-15596

Diana, a young dancer, marries a handsome young Englishman for security, but not for love. On the honeymoon a woman from the groom's past appears. There follows a lengthy course of dashes hither and yon over Europe, until finally the villainess loses out.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ag 27 '39 100w

"The whole business is 'frightfully amusing,' if you know what we mean." O. O.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 90w

"Here is a jolly little story of frustrated love. It is artificial and highly improbable, but amusing." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 25 '39 300w

RUDOLPH, MARGUERITA. Masha, the little goose girl; il. by Emma Brock. 64p $1.50 Macmillan

(W) 39-6848

Story of a little Ukrainian girl, aged eight, who considered herself old enough to help with the work of the older people—with the washing, picking mushrooms in the forest, cutting cabbage in the fall, or helping with the baking.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

"Outdoor and indoor work on a farm in the Ukraine is made interesting to an American child just able to read easily. A progressive school will use the stories, but this is not a school book; its farm experiences are entertaining by their difference from anything our children, even on farms, know about. . . Miss Brock's scarlet, blue and gold pictures keep up with the action and sometimes run ahead of it. For Miss Brock is noted for exuberant humor in pleasant pictures." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 7 '39 250w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 40w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 29 '39 90w

Horn Bk M 15:165 My '39 120w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 64:425 My 15 '39 100w

"Although the family relationships are not drawn with the warmth that one looks for in an account of such a closely-knit household, there is a clarity of impression which brings the young reader close to the outward manner of peasant life, and its gusto is reflected in Emma Brock's cheerful, bright-colored illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 9 '39 280w

New Yorker 15:105 My 13 '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 10w

Wis Lib Bul 35:191 N '39

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY. Changing countries and changing peoples; an introduction to world geography with historical backgrounds. (Man and his changing society. Rugg social science ser, junior high school course) 586p il maps $1.88 Ginn

380 Geography, Economic. Geography, Historical (W) 38-35233

"Originally published in 1930 under the title Changing Civilizations in the Modern World [Book Review Digest, 1930]. The present book has been rewritten in part, some of the material of the former book condensed, and two new chapters added, on the Scandinavian countries and Italy. Eighteen countries are studied in this volume as against 10 in the 1930 edition. Additional charts and illustrations." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:314 My 15 '39

Reviewed by Grace Davis
Social Studies 30:46 Ja '39 110w

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY, and KRUEGER, LOUISE. Mankind throughout the ages. (Man and his changing society. Rugg social science ser, elementary school course) 583p il maps $1.28 Ginn

901 Civilization—History (W) 39-1523

"This is volume eight in the Rugg social science series designed for elementary school use. The authors have assembled and coordinated much of the material in the previous books with frequent references to the earlier titles. The information is in survey form, discussing the various aspects of the civilization of mankind, and is intended as an introduction to a more detailed study. Good lists of suggested readings accompany each chapter. Grades 6-7." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:293 My 1 '39

"A commendable contribution. . . The story is well balanced, with the possible exception of an emphasis on the Norse discoveries and explorations in North America which some authorities will consider out of proportion to their historicity and results. The maps and the illustrations are attractive and have real teaching value. The style is forceful and personal in its appeal to the pupil. At the end of each chapter there is a well-selected list of 'Books You Would Like To Read.'" B. W. Phillips

+ El School J 39:796 Je '39 300w

RUKEYSER, MURIEL. A turning wind; poems. 120p $2 Viking

811

"In her second book of poems, 'U. S. 1,' Muriel Rukeyser began a work whose intention was a social evaluation of the Atlantic seaboard. The present book adds to that evaluation only with a short group of Lives, or five New England portraits. These are made to stand also as part of a separate framework devised for this volume—a plan which Miss Rukeyser outlines in her introductory note. Here her concern is with the 'sources of power' which in our time have been obscured or locked out; the fear of symbols, linked with 'the fear of poetry', and references to individual creative energy." Books

"For the third time Muriel Rukeyser has written a book of poems that is both exciting and serious, enchanting and intellectual. . . The only criticism one might venture of the stimulation of her poems is in relation to their larger symbols. . . They ought to carry their own light; they ought, though they speak in a tongue of fire, to make themselves felt along the ear and blood. Sometimes they do not—at least they didn't to me. Thus, though Miss Rukeyser has avoided the pitfalls of many modern poets—shorthand, private codes, tricks and shocks—and the vagueness, wordiness, and roguishness of mystic, pedagogue, and actor, she does not always give the blessed release that comes from the clear, direct, simple statement." Mildred Boie

+ — Atlantic F '40 600w

"Nothing in the present volume stands up to Miss Rukeyser's 'Book of the Dead' in 'U. S. 1.' . . In her present nebulous, complex, confusingly expressed detour into symbols and sources of power, Miss Rukeyser has taken what seems to me a wrong turning. I should like to see her go back again to the solid highway of U. S. 1." Ruth Lechlitner

Books p10 Ja 7 '40 1050w

"What most distinguishes Muriel Rukeyser's third book from her earlier work is an extension of method and point of view, which has greatly enriched her poetry and at the same time introduced a corresponding, though not, I believe, a necessary obscurity." Philip Horton

+ — New Repub 102:123 Ja 22 '40 750w

"Miss Rukeyser can write with great complexity. She should come into herself completely when she lets down a little, masters a wider range of feeling, and mixes some loud laughs with her high scorn." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 15:120 D 16 '39 400w

"A Turning Wind proves [Miss Rukeyser] to be the boldest and most abundant of the younger American poets." T. C. Wilson

+ Poetry 55:214 Ja '40 750w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman
Sat R of Lit 21:7 D 9 '39 500w

RUNYON, DAMON. My old man. 150p $1.50 Stackpole sons

817 40-1038

Lightly written, semi-humorous essays, giving "my old man's" opinions on a large variety of matters from love and nitwits to bankers and the advisability of indulging wives.

"The portrait which emerges is that of an American who loves his fellow man, regardless of his faults or perhaps because of them. In a day when most people are in a chronic state of irritation, suspicion and mental jaundice, the effect is sane and soothing." Lisle Bell
+ Books p16 D 3 '39 440w

"For those who are acquainted with the author's refreshingly insane short stories this book will be a downright disappointment. Only once does the Runyon flavor escape in, not surprisingly, a story about a gambler and a shady miss disguised as 'On Lady Sports.' And while a comparison with Clarence Day's masterpiece might be unfair, we must admit that 'My Old Man' lacks individuality, richness: this father appears to be a composite in monochrome. But we should recall that these 'philosophical' bits were written as a series of syndicated columns for a wide audience—too wide an audience." Stephen Baldanza
Commonweal 31:142 D 1 '39 190w

"He thought everything out for himself, Damon Runyon's old man. This book of his opinions has a tonic and earthy shrewdness, and its humor is human and unforced."
+ N Y Times p26 N 19 '39 360w

RUSCHE, GEORG, and KIRCHHEIMER, OTTO. Punishment and social structure; with a foreword by Thorsten Sellin [English version by M. I. Finkelstein in collaboration with Dr Kirchheimer]. 268p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

343.2 Punishment. Prisons. Crime and criminals 39-13828

"Georg Rusche and Otto Kirchheimer interpret punishment as an independent social phenomenon determined by social forces, primarily economic. They deal with punishment in its specific manifestations, the causes of its changes and developments, and the grounds for the choice or rejection of specific penal methods in specific historical periods. The history of penal theories and practices is traced down to the present and their relationship to the general conditions of the periods under discussion is established." (Books) Index.

"The basic idea of the book is sound. . . Unfortunately, from the beginning the promising approach is undermined by the unrestricted acceptance of a one-sided sociological theory, that of Marxism. . . One of the best chapters of the book is the one devoted to the study of new trends under Fascism; the increase, both in the severity and the length of imprisonment, is well demonstrated. It is a pity that the authors failed to make a study of the corresponding development in Communist society; there, they would have found good evidence in support of their theory in the large scale restoration of penal transportation in connection with labor shortage in remote parts of the country." N. S. Timasheff
+ — Am Soc R 4:722 O '39 400w

"The theory of this book does not give the whole truth, in my opinion, since the most complicated processes lie at the bottom of our penal reforms and regressions. This book, however, contributes a new and neglected element to our knowledge, and will be read with considerable benefit." Hans Von Hentig
+ — Ann Am Acad 207:262 Ja '40 400w

"The first of the new American series of publications by the National Institute of Social Research (affiliated with Columbia University), this book sets a high standard in scholarship and good writing. 'Punishment and Social Structure' is a real contribution to the literature of penology, which will be of advantage to all who are interested in the field of crime and punishment." Jay Beck
+ Books p11 Ag 20 '39 420w

Reviewed by M. N. Winslow
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 600w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen
Social Forces 18:291 D '39 280w

"Altogether, Drs. Rusche and Kirchheimer probe deeply and diligently into the problem of motivation, often coming up with facts that should give conservative penologists pause. Thorsten Sellin supplies a brief but acute introduction." S. G. Kling
+ Survey 75:261 Ag '39 350w

RUSK, RALPH LESLIE, ed. See Columbia university. Library. Letters to Emma Lazarus in the Library

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE MURRAY. The case of the topaz flower. 278p $2 Doubleday 39-4660

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 F 19 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 70w

"Charlotte Murray Russell's favorite spinster sleuth does not appear in this story, but Wally Kent does very well as a pinch-hitter." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p25 F 19 '39 120w

"Frequent inter-family fights and backbitings gum up action of none too tightly knit plot. Solution is clever."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 18 '39 40w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE MURRAY. The clue of the naked eye. 271p $2 Doubleday 39-30322

Detective story.

"Amanda Jane may be a little wordy at times, but she is interesting company and she always gets her man. The tale of her latest adventures is exciting enough and as homey as a batch of cookies." Will Cuppy
+ Books p13 S 24 '39 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 70w

"An excellent mystery yarn. But the consistent humor of Jane's personality and Arthur's temperament is what gives the novel its special tang."
+ N Y Times p20 S 24 '39 210w

"Prosaic characters and forced humor slow down this story of crime in the Middle West."
New Yorker 15:72 S 30 '39 40w

"Good fun."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 30 '39 40w

RUSSELL, OLAND D. The house of Mitsui. 328p il $4 Little

920 Mitsui family. Japan—Economic conditions 39-27690

An account of one of the greatest of the five great Japanese industrial families. "In the eleven generations of Mitsuis since the business house was founded by the patrician turned saké brewer, the family has been a dominant and at times the dominant factor in the economic growth of Japan. Practically every enterprise that the family has touched—shipping, heavy industry, munitions, mining and banking—has turned into gold." (N Y Times)

Booklist 36:7 S '39

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Books p3 Ag 20 '39 1350w

"Mr. Russell has done a substantial piece of research, and he writes like the practiced and competent journalist that he is."
+ Christian Century 56:1077 S 6 '39 360w

"The account, though excellent journalism, is nevertheless too pedestrian for the romance back of it, too short of a sense of history and perspective. A minor Gibbon may come along later, and he will be grateful for Mr. Russell's blueprint." H. B. E.
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 8 '39 650w

RUSSELL, O. D.—Continued
Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 30:500 S 22 '39 500w

"Russell has done a masterful job on a subject heretofore considered well-nigh impossible to approach. . . The historical record of the building of the fabulous Mitsui fortune, is engaging reading, not only because it is the story of an extraordinary family, but because it shows the equally amazing development of Japan, slowly over many centuries, from feudal days to the rise of a great power." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 51:4 N '39 470w
Foreign Affairs 18:383 Ja '40 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:iv O '39 300w

"The author . . . has done a splendid job on a subject heretofore considered well-nigh impossible of approach." Walker Matheson
+ Living Age 357:291 N '39 750w

"Mr. Russell has used his material well. . . The author could easily have glossed over the family's shortcomings and presented an Ivy Lee portrait. But he has done the job of a sound journalist. Where there was scandal, he has presented it in all its details. Obvious efforts to humanize the family and to popularize it in an era of social consciousness have not impressed him too much." Ernest Von Hartz
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 20 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:66 Ag 19 '39 30w

"This is by no means a muck-raking biography; its subjects are almost uniformly presented in a favorable light. Material drawn from exposés of Mitsui policy—its ruthless competitive practices, various scandals (as in the Toyo Rayon case), and labor conditions—are sparingly introduced. To the discerning reader, however, these sections will throw a light on much that is left unsaid. On the whole, the volume presents an illuminating picture of the rise of capitalism in Japan, as viewed from the evolution of its premier business family." T. A. Bisson
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 19 '39 320w

RUST, WILLIAM. Britons in Spain. 212p il maps $1 Int. pubs. [2s Lawrence]
946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939—Foreign participation,

History of the British battalion of the International brigade which for two years fought on the Loyalist side during the Spanish civil war.

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 24 '39 350w

"Mr. Rust's record is valuable; it tells the story, with excellent photographs, gives details of the campaign and ends with a roll of honor which is none the less memorable because it belongs to a first consciously political army raised in Britain since the days of Cromwell's Ironsides."
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:224 F 11 '39 350w

"The book, though combative, is not aggressively Communist in tone and is a useful summary."
Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Ap 8 '39 110w

RUTLAND, HARRIET. Knock, murderer, knock! 288p $2 Harrison-Hilton [7s 6d Skeffington] 39-15711

Detective story.

"Put Miss Rutland on your list and enjoy a swell triple murder." Will Cuppy
+ Books p24 N 19 '39 200w

"Miss Rutland, who obviously knows the hydroes and their inhabitants, tends to be a bit long-winded. The basis of her story, however, is good." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 50w

"The story is both baffling and entertaining, even though the solution may disappoint those readers who are sticklers for the rules of detective story writing as laid down by certain experts." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p18 N 26 '39 180w
Sat R of Lit 21:29 N 18 '39 40w
Time 34:87 D 11 '39 40w

"Whether the actual method of committing the crimes is altogether feasible is perhaps open to question, and the author in common with many other writers of detective stories would be advised to study the elements of the law of libel and of contempt of court especially in relation to newspaper practice. But these are minor criticisms. Miss Rutland has leapt at once into the front rank of detective story writers."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p790 D 10 '38 240w

RUTLEDGE, ARCHIBALD HAMILTON. It will be daybreak soon; sketches by B. Hay Gilbert. 129p $1 Revell
325.26 Negroes 38-39080

Sketches of the author's Negro friends on the plantation that has been his family's ancestral estate since before the Revolutionary war. The sketches illustrate the spiritual insight of the Negro, his psychic power, and the frequent poetry of his speech.

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '38 20w

"By some means Mr Rutledge senses unerringly the heart of southern scenes. His psychic understanding of life and Nature makes it possible for him to interpret the plantation Negro, who, he says, is the highest type of the southern American black man."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 8 '39 480w

RYAN, GRACE LAURA, ed. Dances of our pioneers; music arrangements by Robert T. Benford; il. by Brooks Emerson. 196p $2 Barnes, A. S.
793.3 Dancing (W) 39-27508

A collection of quadrilles, contra dances, circle dances and couple dances, with detailed instructions, the calls, and suggestions for music. Illustrated with line drawings. Some music is included. Index.

Booklist 35:349 Je 15 '39

"The line drawings by Brooks Emerson—while not particularly well-drawn—have a diagramatic suggestibility that is appealing. Lists of phonograph recordings, and actual music for accompaniment completes this good work." Lincoln Kirstein
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 240w
Christian Century 56:582 My 3 '39 20w

"For many years Miss Ryan, who is on the faculty of Michigan's Central State Teachers College, has been tracing country dances in a number of localities; and she has now given them permanent and practical record. This book is not a mere picturesque sidelight on old-time custom but an efficient handbook, complete from Miss Ryan's glossary to Mr. Benford's music arrangements and with sprightly and informative drawings."
+ N Y Times p14 My 7 '39 240w
Pratt p19 autumn '39

RYMILL, JOHN. Southern lights; with two chapters by A. Stephenson, and an historical introduction by Hugh Robert Mill. 296p il maps $5 Harper [31s 6d Chatto]
919.9 British Graham land expedition, 1934-1937. Graham land. Penola (schooner). Antarctic regions [39-17985]

This book contains the official account of the British Graham Land expedition of 1934-1937, written by the leader. The book deals primarily with the plans and travels, the country and climate, the pleasures and the disappointments of the expedition. Scientific results other than exploratory are not described. Index.

Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

"It is a good book, a record of work done well, conscientiously, and on little money, and a standing rebuke to all the romantic claptrap that the publicity experts are constantly handing us." E. P. Hanson

+ Books p6 D 24 '39 900w

"The writing is clear and factual, a sort of extended diary. . . But the finest thing about 'Southern Lights' is the spectacle of the men in their daily lives. The faces which peer out from the beautiful sepia photographs illustrating the book are without guile or self-interest. Their actions bear out this impression. It is reassuring to see civilized men who can still take it, and enjoy the process." E. B. Garside

+ Boston Transcript p15 N 24 '39 450w

"Mr. Rymill has written a long book, beautifully illustrated and amply supplied with maps. All the details of sea and land travel are recounted: every week and almost every day has its entry. The care and conscientiousness of the journal will be valuable to future expeditions and are an expression of the thoroughness with which this expedition worked, but it tends to produce a sameness in page after page." R. N. R. B.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 22 '38 450w

"Although the style is rather pedestrian, Mr. Rymill is to be congratulated on the production of a very useful book and also for not having adorned himself with laurels, or a cap and bells." J. E. H.

+ Nature 144:54 Jl 8 '39 390w

"Though Southern Lights is not one of the epics, it impresses by its quiet success. The age of tragic exploration, perhaps, is past, and the useful efficiency of Mr. Rymill and his companions has taken its place."

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:938 D 3 '38 180w

Reviewed by Michael Spender

Spec 161:1014 D 9 '38 550w

" 'Southern Lights' is no book for the armchair explorer who likes dramatic and human values to stand out from a cosy geographical haze. Mr. Rymill's is a plain tale so unadorned by character study that his men remain less known to the reader than the dogs they drove. One must read this narrative with the map open and diligently applied. It is just as well to have a good, hard, laconic book about good, hard work. The photographs are magnificent."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 12 '38 550w

S

SABATINI, RAFAEL. The sword of Islam. 393p $2.50 Houghton [8s 6d Hutchinson]

Doria, Andrea—Fiction (W) 39-947

Adventure tale of sixteenth-century Genoa, involving Prospero Adorno, serving under Andrea Doria, in the naval squadron blockading Genoa. Prospero changed sides several times, but having survived captivity and calumny, he is rewarded by winning the beautiful Gianna.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ja 15 '39 250w

"[The] plot elements handled by this writer with his easy mastery of technical device, his keen appreciation of character and his enviable vocabulary. It's a Sabatini!"

Boston Transcript p1 F 4 '39 280w

"A fast-moving, colorful story which has excellent characterizations. Suspense and crises are shrewdly handled by an author skilled in the technical devices of plot construction. Readers of romantic fiction will find this tale of derring-do well up to the Sabatini standard." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 15 '39 700w

Pratt p30 summer '39

"It is not the sort of book usually considered literature in the age in which it is perhaps our misfortune to live, any more than the paintings of Meissonier are considered art. With a little more skill in dialogue, a little less simplicity in characterization, it would be good Dumas; with a few more long-winded descriptions and a little less action, it would be excellent Scott. . . But of its kind excellent, not worse than the rest of Sabatini and better than much." F. P.

Sat R of Lit 19:19 Ja 14 '39 210w

"It is a good story, with lots of excitement, ingenious tangles to untangle, and so on, as is true of all the stories of this 'new Dumas,' but it is not quite up to the Sabatini standard. The long descriptions of naval maneuvering make rather heavy seas for the landlubber reader."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 22 '39 200w

Time 33:63 Ja 16 '39 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 14 '39 100w

Wis Lib Bul 45:104 My '39

SACHAR, ABRAM LEON. Sufferance is the badge. 598p $3.50 Knopf

296 Jews—Political and social conditions (W) 40-493

Survey of the position of the Jews in the contemporary world, dating from the Versailles treaty to 1939, by the author of A History of the Jews (Book Review Digest, 1930). "The author suggests that the vital forces of the Jewish tradition must be rallied to the service of liberal democracy." (New Yorker) At head of title: The Jew in the contemporary world. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:229 F 15 '40

"Further relief and valuable information could have been furnished if Jewish cultural life in the last two decades had been given larger treatment. In a book that deserves to be the standard work on the subject, it is a serious defect to make no mention of Martin Buber, Marc Chagall, Ernest Bloch, Chana Orloff, Erich Mendelsohn, or the Encyclopaedia Judaica. . . As it is, every reader can nevertheless be grateful for a good job and a hard job well done. It is difficult to believe that any one can lay down the volume and not understand that anti-Semitism is as great a menace to the world as to its obvious victims, and not agree with the author that the menace can be dispelled only by providing economic opportunity and civil liberties for all men." Marvin Lowenthal

+ — Books p3 D 24 '39 1300w

"[The book] merits a prominent place on the historical bookshelf of our time. It is comprehensive, pungent, and highly readable." Robert Pell

+ Forum 103:iv F '40 440w

"All through Dr. Sachar's book indignation throbs and bitter hatred of injustice is expressed with telling effect. Not alone in his pages on the Nazi Reich—which burn with anger and horror—but over and over again in other parts of his work he pours out words that glow with an intensity of feeling sure to communicate itself even to the most casual and and callous reader. His indictment of the cruel anti-Semitism of our day is tremendous in its concentrated strength. It reads like the fiery curse of some prophet of biblical times." T. R. Ybarra

N Y Times p2 Ja 7 '40 1100w

"A readable, intelligent survey."

+ New Yorker 15:122 D 16 '39 40w

"The pressing problems of the Jewish people are all surveyed with penetrating insight and sound scholarship. . . The volume is adequately documented and reveals most of the author's sources as authoritative and intelligently selected. An excellent bibliography and index complete the work. [The book] is an original contribution and performs a real service in making the contemporary Jewish situation more understandable." C. B. M.

SACHAR, A. L.—Continued
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 1150w

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY (MRS HAROLD GEORGE NICOLSON). Solitude; a poem. 56p $1.75 Doubleday [5s Hogarth]
821 39-22151

"In her new long poem, Solitude, Miss Sackville-West is concerned not with the country scene but with the reflections that it induces. Among the fields and orchards, beneath the sky whose stars cannot be seen from city streets, the poet watches late into the night, alone. She attains happiness by detachment and proportion, seeing herself as a 'brief dweller on a meek mean planet slewed around a middling star.' Death she contemplates without alarm. . . Remembering past loves with some contempt—'we take a heart, and leave our own intact'—she contemplates the ultimate problems of human destiny, seeking urgently but vainly for truth." New Statesman & Nation

Booklist 35:377 Jl 15 '39

"Steeped in classic tradition and in the heritage of the great English romanticists, Miss Sackville-West's work is scholarly, sound; for color it relies much on mythological allusion; its imagery, seldom modern, resembles the rich, formal embroidery on medieval vestments." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books p7 Ag 6 '39 150w

Reviewed by Earle Birney
Canadian Forum 18:319 Ja '39 100w

"As poetry the verse is distinguished by cultivated craftsmanship. To many readers it is likely to sound strangely removed from the present century. Such poetry as this maintains the poetic status quo with old-world grace and distinction." J. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '39 190w

"It is written in a gravely moving measure and has many felicities of phrase. Though subdued in its prevailing tenor, 'Solitude' is the work of a courageously adventuring soul who has 'loved life with its tigers and its lions,' and so is not afraid to face death, even though the end of the quest be annihilation. It has many lovely and even some exhilarating passages, phrased with a true poetic nicety and precision, and only rarely have the exigencies of rhyme led to the relaxation of artistic vigilance." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian sup vii D 9 '38 210w

"The scope of Solitude commands particular admiration, because entire seriousness has become the rarest of poetic virtues. And by attacking the most important human problem, without timidity or self-consciousness, Miss Sackville-West seems to me to have achieved a very noble work. It is, however, necessary to add that this is hardly in the true sense a philosophical poem. A succession of thoughtful moods is expressed with deep feeling and natural grandeur, but no serious reason is suggested for the poet's belief in God, or for her rejection of traditional religion. Exact ratiocination is not to be looked for in poetry, but here the intellectual foundations of faith and scepticism seem unduly neglected." Raymond Mortimer
+ New Statesman & Nation 16:696 O 29 '38 1400w

"This threnody by the distinguished English poet is one of those rare things not always to be found in our times. . . Later anthologies will reprint this poem as one of the most beautifully executed and penetrating outgivings of a troubled day." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p9 My 28 '39 250w

New Yorker 15:100 My 27 '39 20w

"Miss Sackville-West's remarkable talent for pastoral description has become submerged in a succession of cloudy musings on life and death, beauty and truth, faith and God. In attempting these high themes she has, I feel, over-reached herself. One misses in her latest book the smell of the earth. What she has tried to do has already been done more perfectly by Thompson, Wordsworth, Tennyson and Arnold." John Hayward
— Spec 161:1010 D 9 '38 140w
Times [London] Lit Sup p690 O 29 '38 380w

ST DENIS, RUTH. An unfinished life; an autobiography. 391p il $3.75 Harper
B or 92 Dancers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-6663

Autobiography of the American dancer, emphasizing the part played in her career by her mother, and the importance of the spiritual significance of her dances. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 35:289 My 1 '39

"Few writers of memoirs have surpassed Miss St. Denis in candor, or have yielded so unreservedly to the catharsis of confession. Reticence has played a negligible part in the composition of her book. It seems to have been dictated by the perplexity of an irrepressible, uncompromising conscience. . . Whatever their critical estimate of Miss St. Denis's art, lovers of the dance are likely to rank her autobiography with those of Isadora Duncan and Angna Enters as an indispensable record. Other readers, less specifically concerned with the dance, will find it a valuable, provocative document upon the relation of an American pioneer and innovator to her cultural environment." Lloyd Morris
Books p6 Mr 26 '39 1500w

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 15 '39 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"A two-sided autobiography: a record of the important work done by the famous American dancer and an almost painfully clinical report of what a high-strung, talented girl from New Jersey goes through when nothing satisfies but the Cosmic. The title means that Miss St. Denis has begun life anew with the Oxford Group. Not well written or edited. Interesting photographs."
New Repub 98:316 Ap 19 '39 60w

"Ruth St. Denis writes with a candor which is generous as well as self-revealing. Her book is too long; there is too much iteration of the personal quest for fulfillment, too much underscoring of personal romance; there are far too many people in this story—one feels that the author wants to say something about every one she has known. But the book has both substance and suggestions as it records a significant and completely individual career." Katherine Woods
+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 26 '39 850w

"Required reading for students of the dance in America, this autobiography is a candid, personal story, a little too high-flown and exalté, perhaps, to appeal to a large public."
+ — New Yorker 15:87 Mr 25 '39 30w

"Here is rather a vague recital of superficial events in a successful career coupled with a good deal of soul chit-chat. The book, apart from its failure to bring any of its personalities to life, is much too long and detailed, and it has been carelessly edited." John Anderson
— Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 550w

"Miss St. Denis's life-story is well presented. It appears that several of her friends had a hand in its composition before it reached its final form, but, contrary to what might be expected from an 'autobiography' written in this way, the final result is informative, and has kept a distinctly personal atmosphere." Anthony Powell

+ Spec 163:552 O 20 '39 420w

"Her book must be read, not only as an intimate story of personal adventure, groping and disillusionment, but for its historical import. It should be read, moreover, by a wide audience." George Beiswanger
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:759 O '39 800w

"Unlike most theatrical 'lives,' it is no mere record of performances and travels, mingled with anecdotes of famous personages. There is a thoroughness about the account of what she has done which gives the book the quality of a novel."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p536 S 16 '39 450w
Wis Lib Bul 35:103 My '39

SAINT EXUPERY, ANTOINE DE. Wind, sand and stars; tr. from the French by Lewis Galantière [decorations by John O'H. Cosgrave, II]. 306p $2.75 Reynal

629.13 Aeronautics—Flights (W) 39-27509

Philosophical essays on flights and fliers, containing the elements of an autobiography of the French aviator-author. He has flown the mail over the Sahara, and across the Patagonian Argentine; he was in Spain during the recent war. Something of all these adventures, and of wind, sand, and stars, is presented in this book.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Library Bulletin 14:90 S '39

"Wind, Sand and Stars is much more than a book of adventure and near death. In it Saint Exupéry has drawn up 'the balance sheet of the hours in my life that have truly counted.' His narrative has depth as well as height, beauty of language as well as the zest for speed. . . To read it is to forget that we are earth-bound." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic Ag '39 450w
Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39

"His descriptions of flying in all conditions and over every kind of territory . . . are accurate, lyrical, thrilling, haunting, and magnificent. Once he has written of them, such pioneer pilots as Mermoz and Guillaumet are not to be forgotten. The story of his ill-fated Paris-Saigon flight, with its horrible description of thirst in the desert and its final hymn to water, is a self-sufficient masterpiece. . . Yes, the descriptions of flying are magnificent, but they are not what gives this book its power and significance. For once, a jacket blurb speaks truly when it says that Saint Exupéry is a poet and a philosopher. He is a poet by nature and a philosopher by virtue of experience and thought. He has found, for himself at least, a meaning in life, and he sees all things and evaluates all happenings within the frame of that meaning." B. R. Redman
+ Books p1 Je 18 '39 1300w

Reviewed by W. M. Frohock
Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 700w

"An adventure in prose which at times has a lyrical quality. . . Saint Exupéry is in essence a poet and his book is memorable." D. G.
+ Cath World 149:629 Ag '39 330w

"This is a great, a beautiful and a permanent book." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 56:853 Jl 5 '39 550w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 8 '39 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 30:501 S 22 '39 250w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:6 D '39 60w
Nation 149:23 Jl 1 '39 190w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 99:256 Jl 5 '39 1100w

Reviewed by David Garnett
New Statesman & Nation 18:431 S 23 '39 1250w

"This book is drenched clean of all the petty cloying values of the earth. It is a beautiful book, and a brave book, and a book that should be read against the confusion of this world, if only that we may retain our pride in humanity and our excitement in this modern age." Clare Leighton
+ N Y Times p1 Je 18 '39 850w

"An even better book than 'Night Flight,' this is a moving, beautifully written account of a French airman's adventures. . . Once in a while rhetoric gets the better of him, but for the most part he writes magnificently."
+ New Yorker 15:87 Je 24 '39 110w
Pratt p12 autumn '39

"It was, I think, George Jean Nathan who observed that no one had ever been able to write badly about the sea. That, alas, is not true of the equally mysterious and pervasive air which, as yet, has had no Conrads, Melvilles, Masefields to create and make rich a literature of the skyways. But there are occasional stories by a Kipling, a Kessel, a Bellah, a Mrs. Lindbergh, which are beginning to create such a literature. And this book, though it is not a continued narrative, and is uneven in the merit of its contents, gives added reason why [the author] heads the list of current writers of wind, sand, and stars." Bruce Gould
Sat R of Lit 20:5 Je 17 '39 750w

"We do not know whether Saint Exupery had the thoughts at the same time as the adventures or whether they ripened slowly in him afterwards. It does not really matter. What does matter is that they have somehow ripened, and the fruit, whole, beautiful, and golden, is there for us to take." A. M. Lindbergh
+ Sat R of Lit 20:8 O 14 '39 2400w

Reviewed by Cecil Lewis
Spec 163:478 O 6 '39 750w

"The rhythmical command of [the author's] words never fails. There is magnificent aptness in the figures, and poetic creation. But there is some forcing of impressions; in the meditations, there is personal insight, but there is some tenuity of cogitation."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 850w
Time 33:81 Je 26 '39 330w
Times [London] Lit Sup p548 S 23 '39 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

SAINTE-SOLINE, CLAIRE. Mountain top; tr. from the French by Louise W. Baur. 238p $2.50 Dodd

39-30366

On an early morning fishing trip, the boat carrying Frederic Houssais and his wife capsizes. The wife is drowned, but Frederic is saved. When he recovers he is overcome with remorse, for he feels that the accident was his fault and his wife's death his secret desire. He sells out his business and retires first to a mountain farm, then to higher pasture lands where, living with simple folk, he finally works out his own salvation.

"A beautiful book." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p14 N 5 '39 650w

"Mme. Sainte-Soline handles her difficult theme with intelligence and understanding. . . Although Frederic is unable to express entirely the spiritual exaltation that touches his journal (the last chapters are his copy-book jottings), or the translator lost too tenuous a beauty; nevertheless, there is in this book a genuine feeling of strength and inspiration." O. O.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 180w

"The observation of scenery and animal life is fresh and convincing, in spite of a rather stilted literalness in translation."
New Repub 101:150 N 22 '39 50w

SAINTE-SOLINE, CLAIRE—Continued

"The personal story of Frederic Houssais has a curiously attenuated quality. It is told with obvious sincerity and a good deal of minuteness, yet it never attains substance in itself. The novel's reality is in its background, and its most convincing character is not Frederic, with his tragedy and growth and change, but the herdsman Leonard, who is unchanging and limited and vital." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p28 N 12 '39 650w
Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '40 250w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 240w

SAIT, EDWARD MCCHESNEY. American parties and elections. rev ed 790p $4 Appleton-Century

329 Political parties—U.S. Elections—U.S. 39-29418

Revised edition of a work which first appeared in 1927 [Book Review Digest, 1927]. In his preface to the revised edition the author states "I have rewritten certain chapters completely and others in part. Elsewhere contemporaneous facts have displaced the superannuated, being woven into the text without much alteration of its structure. Five chapters have been added." Index.

Booklist 36:154 D 15 '39

"A very fine work, indeed, one that should grace every library shelf in the country."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 70w
Christian Century 56:1512 D 6 '39 40w

SAIT, EDWARD MCCHESNEY. Political institutions: a preface. 548p $4.50 (15s) Appleton-Century

320.1 Political science. State, The 38-5374

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Prof. Sait has written a fresh and vigorous volume on the state. . . We hope that he will in any future edition rewrite his chapter (xix) on 'The Decline of Democracy'—not because he takes sides with those who think that democracy is collapsing but because the argument of this chapter is stated on a level far inferior to that of the rest of the book. . . . Apart from this chapter, the book as a whole is well calculated to stimulate a more intelligent study of politics." R. M. MacIver

+ — Am Hist R 44:577 Ap '39 650w

"One seeks in vain for the author's working definition of institutions; this results in some confusion respecting political institutions, principles and philosophies. The author makes much of the decline of democracy but barely mentions dictatorships. This is peculiar in a realistic work in view of the present ubiquitousness of dictatorships. . . Probably due to the scarcity of strictly scientific works the author is also forced to depend on many works of the 'armchair' variety for his source materials. A considerable number of these border painfully upon the 'excogitated' variety. Nevertheless the work deserves to be designated as the best 'natural history' of political institutions to date, and is recommended as such to all students of institutions." J. O. Hertzler

+ — Am Soc R 4:125 F '39 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Elstien
Ethics 49:361 Ap '39 1400w

SALIERS, EARL ADOLPHUS. Depreciation; principles and applications. 3d ed 482p il $5 Ronald

657 Depreciation 39-3266

"Professor Saliers' Principles of Depreciation was published in 1915 [Book Review Digest, 1916]; it was revised in 1922 under the title, Depreciation: Principles and Applications; and this third edition is a revision of the 1922 volume. Moreover, as great progress has been made toward better understanding of both the physical and financial aspects of depreciation between 1922 and 1939, so has the revision of the present volume been thorough and complete. The physical volume itself has been reduced from 590 to 482 pages, with a rearrangement of the chapters and the pertinent subject-matter." Am Econ R

"Where it is necessary to do so the author clearly and fearlessly presents his own beliefs and points of view. Depreciation will obviously continue to have its controversial points, and no reader will agree entirely with the author; nevertheless Professor Saliers in this new edition of his book has added materially to our knowledge and has stimulated our thinking on the subject." J. H. Jackson

+ Am Econ R 29:605 S '39 300w

Reviewed by W. A. Paton
J Pol Econ 47:735 O '39 1600w
Management R 28:142 Ap '39 50w

SALLE, ANTHONY JOSEPH. Fundamental principles of bacteriology with laboratory exercises. 679p il $4 (24s) McGraw

589.95 Bacteriology 39-3020

"The author states that the usual textbooks on the fundamentals of bacteriology are too elementary or do not contain enough material for a solid foundation for advanced work. He attempts to correct these defects in this combination textbook and laboratory manual, which has also added explanations of phenomena described. Profusely illustrated with chemical formulas requiring a knowledge of inorganic and organic chemistry." (Booklist) Index.

"The author's outlook is ambitious. To a large extent he has succeeded in his objective and has produced a useful book, especially as a reference. We fear that much of the material is heavy for an elementary course while in other respects it is not complete enough for the specialist. . . The book is well written and clear. It can be recommended for reference but we doubt if it is well adapted for courses as usually given in any schools, medical, agricultural, or others, hence its adoption would necessarily lead to reorganization of instruction." M. P. Ravenel

+ — Am J Pub Health 29:1263 N '39 450w
Booklist 35:265 Ap 15 '39

SALTEN, FELIX. Bambi's children; the story of a forest family; tr. by Barthold Fles; ed. by R. Sugden Tilley; il. by Erna Pinner. 315p $2.50 Bobbs

(W) 39-32485

Continuation of the story of Bambi (Book Review Digest, 1928). It is the story of the twins Geno and Gurri, the children of Bambi and the lovely Faline.

Booklist 36:177 Ja 1 '40

"Salten's grace and beauty of style is unimpaired, his underlying philosophy the same; the difference is chiefly in getting in so much that the exquisite economy of his method need not be practiced." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 D 3 '39 550w

"Two differences appear between this book and its predecessor. One is the attitude toward man. . . The second difference is the method of characterization. Salten seems to have moved away from that strict attention to natural detail as it exists, which marked 'Bambi' to a more constant dependence on analogies between animal and human life. His new book, then, is more like fable than history. His effects are achieved just a little more easily than they were in 'Bambi,' and they are just that much nearer to sentimentalism. But in spite of this tendency in 'Bambi's Children,' it is a nearly magnificent book." Ruth Page

+ — Boston Transcript p6 D 9 '39 400w

"The format of the book is uniform with Bambi. Recommended for young people's collections and for children's rooms where Bambi is read. Both are classic tales which should not be passed over lightly by children's librarians." Effie Power

+ Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 150w

"In this book, Salten plunges more deeply into the world of fantasy than before. . . An invisible line has been overstepped, ever so lightly, and now Bambi's children seem more nearly related to Br'er Fox and Br'er Rabbit than to the half-legendary creatures of medieval fable, as did Bambi. Yet, so perfectly balanced is the story that never for a moment is lost the sense of the freshness of the forest, the acute realization of the grace and beauty of the deer, and the whole is illuminated by the tender humor—which is true wisdom—with which the author sees life as a whole." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p5 D 3 '39 800w

"Herr Salten lights his gentle forest tales with satire not less telling because it is kindly. A wise and charming book which will make Bambi more friends than ever."

+ New Yorker 15:121 D 16 '39 50w

Reviewed by D. C. Peattie
Sat R of Lit 21:14 D 23 '39 650w

"The author has a poet's sensitiveness to natural beauty, and shows a light and rollicking humor that relieves the sense of danger always hovering over forest dwellers. Young people will enjoy the story as such, but mature readers need little imagination to see humanity photographed here by a master."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 190w

SALTER, SIR JAMES ARTHUR. Security; can we retrieve it? 391p $3.50 Reynal [8s 6d Macmillan]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign policy. Great Britain—Defenses. League of nations. Security, International. World politics

(W) 39-27561

Study of British imperial security of the moment. The book submits a policy to meet present needs, gathering its argument under four main heads: the general international position; a study of the evolution of the League of nations; the question of British national strength; and an outline of a constructive policy for a new foundation of peace. A brief fifth part summarizes the book's contentions, and suggests "measures which it is urged that the democracies should take in their defence." (Pref)

Booklist 35:358 Jl 1 '39

"Sir Arthur is bored, he is moderate, he is almost painfully thoughtful and reasonable and judicious. . . It is impossible not to respect [his] effort; unfortunately, it is impossible to forget the fate of the similar [plan] of seven years ago. Again Sir Arthur seems, at bottom, to be calling only for the recreation of an age already dead. . . Actually, if this picture of a frightful war menace, to be met only by extremes of regimentation, compulsion and quasi-totalitarian unity, and for which no more realistic general settlement than this can be devised, is the best that a thoughtful, high-minded and experienced Englishman can do, then the book seems to me not only depressing but profoundly tragic in its implications." Walter Millis

Books p3 Je 11 '39 1750w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p1 Je 24 '39 450w

"Despite all criticisms Sir Arthur's book is important. Fundamentally the problem is what he says it is, namely, the necessity of superseding unfettered nationalisms with some sort of larger unity. This cannot be begun, let alone carried through, until the Versailles injustices have been cleared away. Sir Arthur has little faith in dazzling schemes like Mr. Streit's Union Now, but his belief that there is still room and time left for fruitful negotiations is something that the war-dreading public should take as a sign of hope." Paul Hutchinson

+ — Christian Century 56:1071 S 6 '39 700w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 12 '39 550w

"The twofold needs of the present situation, preparedness and peace, are Sir Arthur's theme. It would be hard to dispute the main outlines of his platform for preparedness."

+ Economist 135:417 My 20 '39 1800w
Foreign Affairs 18:158 O '39 140w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson
Living Age 357:98 S '39 320w

"Sir Arthur pulls up his steed at the crossroads, surveys the gloomy landscape, and gallops off furiously in all directions. Although horse and rider glide through the air with the greatest of ease, the observer is never quite certain of the direction of movement. Sometimes the Red Queen is teacher and Sir Arthur dashes madly onward in order to stay in the same place. But at the end it is clear that his mentor in equitation is none other than 'Wrong-Way' Corrigan." F. L. Schuman

— Nation 148:704 Je 17 '39 700w
Nature 144:221 Ag 5 '39 1450w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
New Repub 99:312 Jl 19 '39 750w

"Sir Arthur's limitations add to his value at a time of crisis. He is an administrator, not a philosopher. He writes as the man who organised world shipping during the war, who was the centre of the best of the League's activities at Geneva, who has thrown his sane and constructive energies into the Air-raid Defence League and has proved himself one of the most useful private members of the House of Commons. . . His picture of the change wrought in England by the abolition of our insular position, his account of the economics and strategy of the dictatorships and his summary of recent British policy and League history are lucid and valuable, if not particularly original." Kingsley Martin

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:828 My 27 '39 1000w

Reviewed by J. T. Adams
N Y Times p1 Jl 2 '39 2300w
New Yorker 15:94 Je 10 '39 50w

Reviewed by T. W. Lamont
Sat R of Lit 20:3 Jl 29 '39 4650w

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor
Spec 162:860 My 19 '39 1250w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 950w

"This is a stimulating book. . . It is because the book is rich in constructive ideas that it will commend itself to readers who are not prepared to endorse all its criticisms both of policies and of persons."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 20 '39 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 35:140 Jl '39

Reviewed by W. A. White
Yale R n s 29:169 autumn '39 950w

SALZBURG, JACOB LOUIS. The singing cobbler; il. by Sidney Lazarus. 133p $1.75 Harper

39-24724

Twelve modern fairy tales with a wide range of subject. For boys and girls from six to ten.

"Good for reading or telling."

+ Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 10w

"Collections of good, new fanciful tales are rare; this one will be a welcome addition to fairy tale shelves which need replenishing. It may be useful to the story-teller and the children will certainly enjoy it. . . This is not a pretentious book, but it is pleasing in its make-up, with clear print and wide margins. The pictures by Sidney Lazarus are in keeping with the stories." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 90w

SAMAROFF STOKOWSKI, OLGA. See Stokowski, O. S.

SAMPSON, ARTHUR. The two quarterbacks. 210p $1.75 Houghton
(W) 39-21776

Day by day story of two college quarterbacks, from their first practice to the victory dinner after the big game.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 8 '39 60w

"This book is intended primarily for boys but all football fans will find it interesting. . . The inside story of what goes on behind the scenes of the autumn's most popular sport comes at a good time and should show the most rabid fan that there is more to the game than a collection of husky young men battering each other for fame and dear old Siwash." V. N. Fletcher
+ Boston Transcript p3 O 14 '39 100w

SAMS, OSCAR ERNEST, ed. Tested one-act plays. 341p il $2.50 Noble 812.08 College and school drama. Amateur theatricals. Drama—Technique
(W) 39-27338

Collection of non-royalty plays, written for high school or college production. There are six comedies, four serious plays, two tragedies, and a fantasy written for radio. Three introductory chapters deal with play writing, scenario preparation, and play production.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

SANDBURG, CARL. Abraham Lincoln: the war years. 4v il maps set $20 Harcourt
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham (W) 39-27998

An exhaustive study of the life of Lincoln from the point where the author's Abraham Lincoln, the Prairie Years (Book Review Digest, 1926) left off to his assassination and death. The biography constitutes as well a history of the United States during those years. Index at end of volume four.

"There are places where Mr. Sandburg's style touches genuine poetry, there are others where it descends to bathos. And, now and then, he permits himself a sort of rhetorical broodiness which is neither poetry nor prose. But, when all this is said, the book remains. To chip at it with a hammer is a little like chipping at Stone Mountain. It has faults. But it happens to be a book that every American should read. The copious illustrations deserve a special note. They are superbly selected—a magnificent and extensive gallery. . . Yes, a mountain range of a book. And there never was a better time for it than this year of our Lord 1939." S. V. Benét
+ Atlantic D '39 850w
Booklist 36:132 D 1 '39

"There has probably never been such a summoning of witnesses before in American literature or law, no such marshalling of incident, such sifting of rumor, such collecting of evidence, eye-witness and hearsay, as the author here produces. . . What people said about Lincoln, what they saw him do, what they heard he said and did—it is all here, as detailed as Dostoivsky, as American as Mark Twain." Lloyd Lewis
+ Books p3 D 3 '39 4000w
Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '39 1100w

"The bigness of this work is bewildering. . . The research necessary to produce such a work is enormous, the industry of the author constant, painstaking and persevering. . . Considered as a painting, the canvas of this work is colossal. Regarded as a building, it is massive, spacious and towering. Conceived as music, it is a grand and majestic symphony. Viewed as poetry, it is an epic, magnificent in form and sweep." E. DeW. Jones
+ Christian Century 57:21 Ja 3 '40 1400w

Reviewed by C. S. Lowden
Christian Science Monitor p10 D 23 '39 1400w

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 153:22 D 15 '39 350w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:6 D '39 50w

"Over and over again Mr. Sandburg has done the almost impossible in his narrative of that complicated era: heaping up incidents or pouring out a perfect torrent of details, he smothers neither the life of his narrative nor the interest of his reader. Only rarely did we wish for less fact and more of the author's own judgment. The more we read, the more we felt that Lincoln himself would have liked tremendously this story of his life and times." M. L. Elting + Forum 102:iv D '39 500w

"These four volumes constitute a major work. The industry they represent, their range of information, and their adaptability to leisurely reading by reason of their style and chapter arrangement make them an outstanding contribution." L. E. Robinson
+ Nation 149:614 D 2 '39 1350w

"With these four volumes Carl Sandburg completes the life of Lincoln begun in 'The Prairie Years.' Taking the total achievement, there is nothing in historical literature that I know quite comparable with it. I generally distrust the meeting of perfect writer and perfect theme. There is a blueprint seemliness about such conjunctions that rarely issues in a creative product. The surprising things about Sandburg writing on Lincoln is that in this case the results are good: the democrat, the poet, the story-teller, the earthy Midwesterner, the singer of the people has managed somehow to write about another democrat who was also something of a poet in his way and a vast story teller and an earthy Midwesterner and a product of the popular mass." Max Lerner
+ New Repub 101:197 D 6 '39 2750w

"Twenty years ago Carl Sandburg of Illinois started to write the fullest, richest, most understanding of all the Lincoln biographies. His work is now complete. 'The War Years' follows 'The Prairie Years' into the treasure house which belongs, like Lincoln himself, to the whole human family. It has been a monumental undertaking; it is grandly realized." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Times p1 D 3 '39 3000w

"Anyone who wishes to know what Lincoln was thinking, doing, and feeling from the day of his first election to the day of his assassination will in the future have to refer to Sandburg. The 414 halftones of photographs and the 249 cuts of cartoons, letters, documents, etc., constitute the finest collection of Lincoln illustrations ever put between book covers. Of this there can be no question. . . The book is written in two styles. The first is plain, downright factual reporting. The second is a kind of prose poetry, often moving, occasionally a little high-flown. There can be no doubt that Sandburg's work will endure. Whether it would last as long were it condensed about fifty per cent is a question for people like myself to pose and experts to answer." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:114 D 2 '39 500w
Pratt p22 winter '40

"Mr. Sandburg has written one of the greatest of American biographies. It has its faults—some of them the defects of its virtues. Pouring as he does with unstinting hand, he sometimes heaps fact upon fact, example upon example, to an unnecessary and otiose total. . . At not a few places he would have done well to sow by the hand rather than the bag. The total lack of documentation is another defect. Finally, the huge book is deficient in emphasis. It is often difficult to distinguish important events and phrases from the unimportant. But in view of the great and varied merits of the work, these criticisms are of little importance. It is not merely a biography; it is a magnificent piece of history, an epic story of the most stirring period of national life, and a narrative which for decades will hearten all believers in the stability of democracy and the potentialities of democratic leadership." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:3 D 2 '39 4000w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 130w

"This four-volume biography as it now stands completed is a work whose meanings will not soon be exhausted, whose greatness will not soon be estimated. It can be said that no U. S. biography surpasses it in wealth of documentation and fidelity to fact, that none . . . can compare with it in strength, scope and beauty."

+ Time 34:84 D 4 '39 3000w

Wis Lib Bul 35:215 D '39

"The poets have always understood Lincoln, from Whitman and Emerson to Lindsay and Benét, and it is fitting that from the pen of a poet should come the greatest of all Lincoln biographies, one of the great biographies of our literature. It is great in the reflected beauty and honesty of its subject; it is great, too, in the telling. It is such a biography as Lincoln himself would have wished and would have understood, genuine, simple, broad, humane, dramatic, poetic, thoroughly American in its muscular, idiomatic words, in its humor, in its catholicity and democracy." H. S. Commager

+ Yale R n s 29:374 winter '40 1550w

SANDEMAN, CHRISTOPHER. Forgotten river; a book of Peruvian travel and botanical notes. 311p il $5 (12s 6d) Oxford

918.5 Peru—Description and travel. Huallaga river. Botany—Peru

"This book is a full account, in diary form, of three months' travel in Peru. Christopher Sandeman, well known in England as a gardener, made the journey for the dual purpose of collecting rare plants and exploring some practically unknown districts. . . The plants found included rare orchids, shrubs, herbs, cacti, including one new genus and several new species." Books

Books p35 D 10 '39 150w

"I wish I could agree with the publisher of A Forgotten River about the gentleness of Mr. Sandeman's irony. I should incline to call it heavily facetious, but there are some good descriptions of scenery and of people in this botanist's diary." Beryl de Zoete

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:851 D 9 '39 90w

"It is an interesting book because of its subject and its day-by-day material, of course: an interesting book of travel and adventure. But it has an added fillip of interest in the travelers' easy matter-of-factness and often humorous observation, and in their enjoyment of simple hospitality and acquaintance, as well as exciting incident, in Peru. Excitement, indeed, is modestly played down, all through the diary."

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 14 '40 550w

"It is among the qualities that make his writing good travel literature that he is generous in recognizing the virtues of people living in primitive conditions—the courtesy of those of Spanish descent, the tolerant sagacity of priests, the skill of raftsmen, the endurance of mountain porters. On the other hand he does not yield to the temptation to overrate what is known to few besides himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 S 30 '39 700w

SANDERS, SUE. Our common herd. 261p $1 Garden City pub. co.

B or 92 39-17706

Autobiography of a pioneer woman. Born in 1880, the ninth child of a Texas frontier family, Sue Sanders began life with crippled ankles. She worked on the farm from the age of seven to her marriage at fourteen. And after marriage she worked harder, left her husband, and until 1913 earned a living for herself and two daughters washing and cooking in oil towns. Finally she won a fortune—in oil—and lost it, but never afraid of work she resumed her task of earning her own way.

"You won't forget Sue Sanders. Her humor is coarse, her language is racy and earthy, and Ma is dreadful when she gets self-consciously pious. But her book, particularly up to the point where she is successful is amazing and unique, impressive and exhilarating." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 30 '39 850w

"Here is a book which, as a picture of the people who live in the Short Grass—that region comprising parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, and New Mexico centering around what is now known as the Dust Bowl—has it all over 'The Grapes of Wrath' in more ways than a farmer could whip a mule. . . This is the most honest, convincing, and authentic book as yet printed about the people of the last frontier." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 Ja 6 '40 500w

SANDERSON, EZRA DWIGHT, and POLSON, ROBERT ARNOLD. Rural community organization. 448p maps $3 Wiley [18s Chapman]

323.354 Sociology, Rural. Community life 39-22323

Altho planned as a textbook on rural community oragnization, the authors believe "that it will be found useful to extension workers in agriculture and home economics, to planning officials, and to rural professional leaders, such as school superintendents and principals, rural pastors and church executives, social workers, and organization executives. . . The book presupposes that the student will have had a course in general sociology or rural sociology, but, although desirable, this is not a necessary prerequisite for mature students who have had personal experience in rural life, as we have found in our teaching of the subject." (Pref) Bibliography. List of agencies, private organizations, and government bureaus which may be of assistance in various aspects of community organization. Index.

Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

"Interesting and readable volume. . . Its subject matter should give it a wide audience in these days of bitter divergences of opinion in America and growing recognition of the great importance of problems of our rural population." W. W. Pettit

+ Survey 75:391 D '39 350w

SANDERSON, IVAN TERRANCE. Caribbean treasure; with 32 il. by the author. 292p map $3 Viking

591.98 Zoology—West Indies. Zoology—Dutch Guiana. Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 39-29419

After a busman's holiday-honeymoon in the West Indies, the author, an English zoologist, and his wife, spent most of the year 1938 in Dutch Guiana making frequent trips into the jungles to collect specimens and study the habits of wild animals. This book is in three parts: From Trinidad; Through Haiti; To Surinam. In his introductory chapter the author says "This book should be looked upon as an account of the lighter and more human side of our travels, though always told from the viewpoint of a zoologist, and also as an advance statement of the actual results of our work, in so far as it can at present be viewed."

Booklist 36:146 D 15 '39

"Every naturalist and every lover of nature and travel will enjoy it. In fact, I heartily recommend it to every one who would like a refreshing breath of tropical air and animation." C. H. Pope

+ Books p5 N 26 '39 1400w

"Exciting, fascinating and beautifully written." G. S. Reid

+ Boston Transcript p13 N 17 '39 220w

SANDERSON, I. T.—Continued

"One of the secrets of the book's undeniable charm is its author's delight in what he is seeing and doing. . . He has a rich vein of humor, an appreciation of beauty, an occasional warm burst of sentiment. . . His drawings are admirably explicit and artistically pleasing. He does not present a photograph of himself or any member of his party—perhaps an excess of good taste, but still good taste." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 N 19 '39 1100w

"You must remember Mr. Sanderson's previous book, 'Animal Treasure,' [Book Review Digest, 1937] a brilliant affair that put him at once in a class with Will Beebe and almost with W. H. Hudson. 'Caribbean Treasure' is perhaps a little less exciting than its predecessor, but is written with the same combination of scientific precision and imaginative ardor. . . Mr. Sanderson's prose, his ideas, and his illustrations are equally clean-edged. There are thirty-two pencil drawings of his favorite fish, insects, and mammals, and they are small works of art, exact in their detail, sensitive in their feeling for the inner life of which the detail is but the outer expression." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:87 N 11 '39 700w

Reviewed by L. J. Halle, Jr.

Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 18 '39 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 19 '39 600w

"A distinguished scientist, a gifted artist (the animal illustrations in Caribbean Treasure are a part of its charm), Sanderson is considerably more entertaining about small animals and bugs than most writers are about lions and tigers."

+ Time 34:88 N 20 '39 360w

Wis Lib Bul 36:15 Ja '40

SANDIFORD, PETER. Foundations of educational psychology; 2v; v 1 Nature's gifts to man. 464p il $3.25 (12s 6d) Longmans

370.15 Educational psychology (38-15344)

"The author tells us in his preface [that this] is the first of a series designed to give a general survey of the foundations of educational psychology for advanced students of education. The field covered by this first volume, he tells us, is approximately that which Thorndike called, 'The Original Nature of Man.' A second volume, he promises, will deal with the 'Psychology of Learning.'" Am J Psychol

"The writing of an up-to-date two or three volume treatise on educational psychology which will supplant Thorndike's out-of-date three volumes is a much needed work. It would seem, however, that Professor Sandiford has not gotten off to an exceptionally good start in this task, nor has he succeeded in writing a thoroughly acceptable book for the purpose stated in the preface. There are a number of prominent lacunae occurring in the discussion of certain topics, which omissions are really inexcusable in a book written for graduate students. . . [However] Sandiford has written a valuable book. The advanced student whose knowledge enables him to recognize the lacunae will profit much from reading it. It would be too bad, however, to put it into the hands of the student just beginning his graduate work in educational psychology unless it is studied with warnings and critical guidance from the instructor." E. B. van Ormer

+ — Am J Psychol 52:483 Jl '39 1250w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p11 Je 15 '39 230w

SANDOZ, MARI. Capital city. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 343p $2.50 Little

(W) 39-28961

A story of a mid-western city—here called Franklin, the capital of the State of Kanewa—and of the conditions existing there which prefaced the coming of Fascism, labor strife, pogroms, etc.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 12:364 F '38

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

"The novel has no vital central character such as Miss Sandoz's other books possessed. For though Hamm Rufe may be considered the hero of 'Capital City,' he never comes fully alive as leader, son or lover. But if Miss Sandoz fails to create a central character who holds the attention throughout the book, she succeeds marvelously well in introducing and developing a score of minor characters and plots. As a portrait of an American city, true in detail if not in total, 'Capital City' is a challenging document." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 D 3 '39 800w

"Considering what has already been done in this line by Sinclair Lewis, T. S. Stribling, and other novelists, 'Capital City' has not quite the explosiveness that the publishers claim for it, but it is a substantial, sharp-visioned reinforcement to fiction's assault on fascist and near-fascist forces in America." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 149:686 D 16 '39 490w

"The display is so cluttered that the eye and mind become weary. . . The purity of her blacks and whites gives outline to the author's subject, but no flesh or color to the actors. One can hardly expect the daughter of tyrannical Old Jules to see life lightly, or to compromise with hypocrisy; but unalloyed spiritual earnestness is as hard to live with and for as wickedness." B. E. Bettinger

— + New Repub 101:240 D 13 '39 550w

"Twenty years hence 'Capital City' may seem as curiously dated as 'Main Street' does now. It has, for the moment, a similar veracity and consequence." Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p7 D 3 '39 900w

"The author has plenty of hardbitten talent, as 'Old Jules' and 'Slogum House,' her previous books, testify, but I think 'Capital City' makes very little use of them. The message of 'Capital City' is not one American citizens can lightly disregard. It seems too bad that it has not been clothed in more convincing form. Indignation alone does not make novels." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 15:114 D 2 '39 490w

"The violence in this new novel is almost unrelieved by any sweetness and light. . . The book would have been a better piece of art had it been relieved by some concession to innate goodness in capital city inhabitants. Miss Sandoz makes no compromises with her general theme of the city's overmastering greed. She writes as hard as a man and hits with the crushing force of a Joe Louis. Her toughest characters freely mouth the phrases of the hobo jungle. This novel is strong meat; not at all for the squeamish. . . Occasionally the author's appreciation of moral courage brightens with light otherwise sordid pages. Her sincerity cannot be doubted." George Grimes

— + Sat R of Lit 21:13 D 2 '39 600w

Time 34:84 D 11 '39 40w

SANDS, LEDYARD. Bird, the gun and the dog; il. from phot. and from paintings by Courtenay Brandeth. 523p $7.50 for sale by Morrow

799.24 Game and game birds. Shooting. Dogs 39-24205

"A carefully planned work covering all feathered creatures in this country which are classed as game birds. It gives, first, a naturalist's description of the bird; next a discussion of the proper loads, barrels, equipment, and so on; and, finally, a delightful discussion of the breed of dog best suited to shoot that bird over." Books

"Authoritative, thorough and well written. . . Bird-dog men are likely to find some of their pet notions challenged here, but challenged in a very persuasive manner. . . This [book] is both practical and scholarly, and the author gives evidence of writing skill which is exceptional in American sporting books. It is illustrated with handsome color plates by Courtenay Brandeth and contains a useful glossary and index." R. P. Harriss

+ Books p8 D 31 '39 150w
Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '39 180w

SANFORD, EVA MATTHEWS. The Mediterranean world in ancient times. 618p il maps $4.50 Ronald

930 History, Ancient. Civilization, Ancient 38-17227

"Dr. Sanford, in this survey of ancient civilization from the Stone Age to the Middle Ages, views ancient civilization as essentially unified and under the influence of controlling factors through the ages, rather than as a series of separate developments—Egypt, Assyria, Greece, Rome, etc. . . One-third of the work is devoted to Greek civilization, including the Hellenistic Era and nearly half the book is given to the Roman Era, including the decline. The book is planned for college students, but it is useful for reference work with the older, abler, secondary-school pupils." Social Studies

"Attractive and valuable supplements to the narrative are the numerous excellent and well-chosen illustrations and the eleven maps prepared especially for this history. . . The style, while clear, is somewhat dry and lacking in sparkle and vividness. . . On the whole, however, the text reflects credit on the author and editors for its sound, up-to-date scholarship, its balanced interpretations, its remarkable freedom from errors of fact or printing, and its freshness and independence of approach." A. A. Trever

+ — Class Philol 34:291 Jl '39 1000w
Geog R 29:338 Ap '39 80w

"This was written specifically as a textbook for college students of ancient history. However, it is based on such sound scholarship and is so well written that it may be considered a standard reference book for high school teachers of ancient history and the social studies." M. A. Egelston

+ Social Educ 3:71 Ja '39 550w
Social Studies 29:378 D '38 110w

SANFORD, JOHN B. Seventy times seven. 195p $2 Knopf

39-5849

Realistic story of an upstate New York farmer, accused of murder. Much of the story is told in flash backs as the farmer tells the story of his hard life to the District Attorney. Interposed are some poetic interludes, describing the life of the wanderer whom the farmer is said to have murdered.

Reviewed by William Soskin
Books p10 Mr 26 '39 750w

Reviewed by Sarah Chokla
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 500w

"Oddly enough, the very loathsomeness of the book, if you have the stomach for it, holds you from one bitter page to the next. But be sure you have the stomach for it."
Nation 149:203 Ag 19 '39 250w

"A first-rate story of violence and congealed hate in upstate New York. The fact that Mr. Sanford unwinds his plot by indirection gives him a chance to exhibit a variety of techniques, from the very tough to the frankly poetic, and makes its impact none the less terrific."

+ New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 50w

"John Sanford seems to have clenched his teeth, doubled up both fists and gone out to dispel, in short order, the current belief that life close to the soil makes the spirit tender. With a briny eye he has selected his characters from among some Upper New York rurals and proceeded to trim them down in a meat-cleaver manner. The prose is fresh and energetic, the story-telling superb, and the writing comes out raw and terrifying as an exposed nerve. But there is scarcely a happy moment in the book except at the burial of those overworked and tortured souls who have the good fortune to die early." Stanley Young
N Y Times p7 Mr 19 '39 750w

"About as tough as they come, this novel is a weird combination of Hemingway and Caldwell, with a few decorations not so far contributed by either. . . As is usual in novels of violence, there is a combination of brutal language and actions with sentimentality. For those who prefer their reading hardboiled with melted butter."

— New Yorker 15:86 Mr 18 '39 90w

"The structure has its points of originality; and even when the detail seems somewhat extraneous, such is the vividness of Mr. Sanford's writing that it is never uninteresting. But the plot is rather too neat. One feels in general that the author is too fond of artifice at times. And the danger of 'fine writing' is not always resisted." W. R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 8 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 650w

SARGEANT, WINTHROP. Jazz, hot and hybrid. 234p $5 Arrow editions

780.973 Jazz music 39-7562

A sober, at times somewhat technical, discussion of what jazz is, where it came from, its "pure" form and its commercialization, its connection with African music, and its place in the world of art. The author has been a member of symphonic orchestras, a music critic and a music teacher. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Tom Parshley

+ Books p15 Ap 16 '39 600w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"An outstanding example of a first-rate analytical job. Not only does the author display a clean competence and balance in arranging for the treatment of the progressive elements of his discussion, but he has written an actual histology of jazz, so painstakingly adept and inclusive as to justify calling it the only definitive treatise so far written."

+ Commonweal 30:22 Ap 28 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 99:363; 100:48 Ag 2; Ag 16 '39 1550w

"If you like mental exercise, if your idea of entertainment is actually to participate in it, you are in for a fascinating experience. You are in the hands of a civilized American who himself implies that he is only concerned with the measurable; who knows that scientific analysis of a culture requires awareness of the external as well as the internal factors involved and who, combining adroitly both requirements, is never pedantic or dull for a minute. There are enthusiasms in the book, but they never intrude; there is integrity in the pursuit of facts, but it never bores." A. L. Langley

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 23 '39 500w
Pratt p19 autumn '39

"Mr. Sargeant's study has its own bias, expressed in his statement that his 'interest in jazz is clinical rather than rhapsodic.' This has its advantages in the portions of the study that are purely analytic, but his discussion of the esthetics and essential value of jazz, in the chapter headed 'Jazz in Its Proper Place,' makes one dubious of his real liking for jazz in its common manifestations. He seems impatient of its idolators, skeptical of its emotional basis, and frankly contemptuous of its right to be called an 'art.' This disagreement with certain of his conclusions by no means lessens one's enthusiasm for the brilliant scholarship Mr. Sargeant has brought to his task." Irving Kolodin

+ Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 22 '39 390w

Reviewed by L. M. Isaacs
Theatre Arts Mo 23:762 O '39 320w

SARGENT, DANIEL. Our land and Our Lady. 263p $2.50 Longmans

282.73 Roman Catholics in the U.S. U.S.—History 39-24407

A volume of historical essays dealing with the part played by Roman Catholics in the colonising of America and in its later history. Contents: The Santa Maria; The Spanish explorers; La Conquistadora; Father Marquette; The French bubble; Maryland; Bishop John Carroll; The deluge; Father De Smet; Sapientia; The continuance. Index.

Reviewed by T. F. Meehan
America 62:77 O 28 '39 320w

Reviewed by J. L. Burke
Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '39 270w
Cath World 150:501 Ja '40 280w

"In reviewing other books by Daniel Sargent, I have remarked that he had what were to me some irritating mannerisms of style, though those books I nevertheless thought admirable. No such qualifications need be raised here. All is perfect lucidity and almost all is perfect tact. . . Daniel Sargent . . . has put all American Catholics—and all Americans—deeply in his debt." Theodore Maynard
+ Commonweal 31:52 N 3 '39 500w

"There can be no question that this book was badly needed, and it is by no means intended solely for Catholics. It also deserves a wider audience than the Catholic one." Mason Wade
+ N Y Times p30 O 15 '39 800w

SARGENT, ERIC, comp. The aircraft calendar [an authoritative dictionary of all aeroplanes currently manufactured in every country of the world]. 146p il $2.50 Appleton-Century [7s 6d Low]

629.133 Airplanes 39-17204

Data and specifications on most of the airplanes now being manufactured. The arrangement is alphabetically by country. Illustrated.

Pratt p16 summer '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:199 D '39

SARK, SIBYL MARY (COLLINGS) dame of. See Hathaway, S. M.

SARKISSIAN, ARSHAG OHAN. History of the Armenian question to 1885. 151p $2; pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

956.6 Armenian question 38-28369

"Mr. Sarkissian has studied the Armenian Question as 'an offshoot of European diplomacy' and as 'an important phase of the history of a people scattered far and wide in all parts of Asia Minor and surrounding countries.' . . His last chapter gives a valuable survey of the cultural advance of the Armenians up to 1885." Am Hist R

"The major features of this tragic story are not new, but Mr. Sarkissian has merited gratitude for exploiting a considerable body of Armenian material, notably the records of the National Assembly." David Harris
+ — Am Hist R 44:947 Jl '39 270w

"Whatever weaknesses there are in the book arise from the fact that it is a doctorate thesis, crammed with so many facts that it reads like a telephone directory. Though certainly not an inspired writer, the author is an honest one, and, within his limits, a respectable historical craftsman." J. S. Roucek
+ — Am Pol Sci R 32:1210 D '38 140w
Eng Hist R 54:548 Jl '39 500w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. My heart's in the Highlands. 140p $2 Harcourt

812 39-17112

Text of the play first presented by the Group Theatre and later taken over by the Theater Guild. Contains a preface by Harold Clurman, director of the Group Theatre, the music to My Heart's in the Highlands, the reviews of the play from the New York papers, and the story upon which the play is based.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p11 Jl 23 '39 180w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
+ Cath World 149:344 Je '39 390w

"Mr. Saroyan writes even more lightly than Mr. Behrman, but with a great warmth of heart at the same time and a love of humanity and human yearning. And Mr. Saroyan's instincts are so sure, his gift of spontaneity so vast, his skill so great that 'My Heart's in the Highlands' becomes one of the treasures of the season, one of the most enchanting little plays of many seasons." Arthur Pollock
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 21 '39 430w (Dramatic criticism)

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"William Saroyan's little play falls into classification with Gertrude Stein's 'Four Saints in Three Acts' and e. e. cummings's 'Him'—modern, rather arty, experimental, a sort of extra-curricular activity from standard drama. You are never quite certain what it's all about. . . [It] is packed with symbolism, laughter, the wonder of life, fun, typical Saroyan autobiographical touches and futility of 'The Waste Land' variety." P. T. Hartung + Commonweal 30:22 Ap 28 '39 450w (Dramatic criticism)

"Mr. Saroyan's play, formless, naïvely direct, with simple American language and humor, reads like a folktale. Its best scenes have a pathetic, tender warmth that well expresses Saroyan's resentment against greed, deceit and unkindliness and his perplexity at a troubled world." P. T. Hartung
+ Commonweal 30:322 Jl 21 '39 310w

" 'My Heart's in the Highlands' is one of the best and the most typical of Mr. Saroyan's stories." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 148:538 My 6 '39 500w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 98:379 My 3 '39 340w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p17 Jl 30 '39 160w

"It is pure theater, virtually a tour de force in pure theater. It plays upon the emotions, visually and orally, as shrewdly as the old nickelodeon pianolas used to pump out 'Hearts and Flowers' in sad scenes of the sinless cinemas. This is no small achievement in a theater given over largely to tidy carpentering, and jig-saw stencils. Its power is the power of sheer effectiveness, neurotic and absorbing, but it is power." John Anderson
Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 12 '39 400w
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 27 '39 190w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Peace, it's wonderful [and 26 other short stories]. (Starling press bk) 177p $2; pa 50c Modern age

(W) 39-27391

Contents: The greatest country in the world; The insurance salesman, the peasant, the rug merchant, and the potted plant; The year of heaven; The Europa club; 1924 Cadillac for sale; The love-kick; Little moral tales from the old country; The warm, quiet valley of home; A number of the poor; The monumental arena; Peace, it's wonderful; Piano; The mouse; The adventures of a young man some day to be another Jack London; Romance; At the chop suey joint on Larkin street at two thirty in the morning; Ohio; The war in Spain; Comedy is where you die and they don't bury you because you can still walk; Noonday dark enfolding Texas; Johnny the dreamer, Mary the model at Magnin's, and Plato the democrat; The best and worst people and things of 1938; What we want is love and money; The sweet singer of Omsk; The same as twenty years ago; The Russian writer; The journey and the dream.

Booklist 35:310 My 15 '39

Reviewed by L. A. MacKay
Canadian Forum 19:293 D '39 110w

Reviewed by L. B. Salomon
Nation 148:679 Je 10 '39 360w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 99:79 My 24 '39 360w

"Mr. Saroyan's one-man campaign to prove that short story writing can be fun here progresses through twenty-seven more samples, some of them quite good, some mighty slight, but all of them rather attractive." Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p7 Je 11 '39 320w

" 'Piano' is a touching story, and 'Peace It's Wonderful' a quaint one, and 'The Greatest Country in the World' an original one, and 'The Sweet Singer of Omsk' a fine bit of Byronic impertinence. The rest of the pieces, I think, don't strike one as forcibly as those in previous Saroyan collections." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:76 Ap 22 '39 600w

"The need of every human being for pity and love and understanding and protection—that is the underlying theme of all the stories in this new Saroyan collection. At his best, Mr. Saroyan makes very moving his picture of the 'chaos and unrest and agony and magnificence of this place of man.' At his worst—and unfortunately his percentage of failure is high—he is anecdotal and repetitious, and sentimental as only the hard-boiled writer can be." K. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:31 Ap 29 '39 80w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. The time of your life. 247p $2.50 Harcourt

812 (W) 40-211

Text of the first Theatre Guild play of the 1939-1940 season. The scene is a San Francisco water front saloon, and the central character is one Joe, who spends his time drinking and dreaming and trying to help the other lost souls who frequent the place.

Booklist 36:211 F 1 '40

"Delightful to see and delightful to read. In a day when other promising authors, like Odets, whine at fate, it is refreshing to find a dramatist who is unblushingly sentimental, who finds good in everything (or everybody), whose humor is playful and warm, and who can strike sparks of poetry almost at will." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p15 Ja 14 '40 360w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 150:335 D '39 600w

Christian Century 57:50 Ja 10 '40 290w

"Almost everyone who likes 'The Time of Your Life' will speak of its abundance and be sure that he is making an original remark. Original or not, the word is inevitable for this play, which has fullness rather than power, and has flexibility rather than force, but which carries all its varied content with gusto and a kind of open delight in itself." Stark Young

+ New Repub 101:169 N 29 '39 900w (Dramatic criticism)

Pratt p18 winter '40

"In content the play is much the same as is everything that Saroyan writes, a hymn to the human heart expressed in terms of a poet's imagination. It abounds in vitality and humor, but at the same time it is, as was its predecessor, suffused with nostalgic melancholy. . . It is all inconsequential, ingratiating, witty and full of laughter." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts Mo 24:11 Ja '40 1000w (Dramatic criticism)

SARTON, MAY. Inner landscape. 64p $2.50 Houghton [5s Cresset]

811 39-16254

Second volume of verse by a young poet. "Done with something of the eighteenth-century care for the sedate, unemotional line, her poems suggest the even lawns and precise gardens of the time of Queen Anne and the first of the Georges, before the turbulence of the romantic movement rushed in from the left to bewilder and overturn a strictly ordered world. Nevertheless, there is at the same time more emotion beneath the surface of Miss Sarton's dignified verses than was common to eighteenth-century poetry." (N Y Times)

"Taking for her entire landscape the heart, presumably of the poet, Miss Sarton, in her latest published volume of poems, gives us a highly introspective and, accordingly, somewhat monotonous collection too narrowed in interest to seem much more than words. Beautiful words, cultivated words, it is true, but much too analytical to strike a warm response in the heart of the average reader. . . The delicate torture of the soul which is the burthen of many of the poems in this book is nevertheless expressed with a finished craftsmanship. There is a grace of style which no pose of emotional analysis has obscured."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '39 140w

"This volume of verse reveals a further development of delicate intensity and restrained but exalted perception. In her own words, 'the structure of this passion is a spire.' "

+ Forum 101:240 Ap '39 40w

Reviewed by Charles Powell
Manchester Guardian p7 My 19 '39 550w

"The workmanship that has gone into the making of these poems is beyond cavil. . . In selecting the title for her book Miss Sarton has to some degree acknowledged the accuracy of this critique of her poetry. Though the medium through which the reader may gaze on that landscape is translucent, nevertheless he may see it only through an interposed medium; the poet does not let him come into actual contact with her soul." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 5 '39 360w

"The writer's attention has never really been focussed, and as one reads the book one becomes increasingly aware of the snatched-at effects, the inefficient poeticisms. 'Inner Landscape' is a disappointing performance."

— Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 26 '39 390w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins
Spec 162:868 My 19 '39 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 340w

"Whether in her love sonnets or her lyrics, she plays a subtle counterpoint between the actual and imagined worlds. Her verse suggests comparison with that of Elinor Wylie or Edna St. Vincent Millay and certainly does not suffer by it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 180w

SARTORI, MARIO. War gases; chemistry and analysis; pref. by G. Bargellini; tr. from the 2d enl. Italian ed. by L. W. Marrison. 360p il $7.50 Van Nostrand [21s Churchill]

546 Gases, Asphyxiating and poisonous. Chemical warfare

"The first edition of Sartori's book, 'Chimica delle sostanze aggressive', was printed in Milan, Italy, in 1933, while the second Italian edition, by the same publisher, appeared in 1939. . . Sartori presents his book from the viewpoint of the chemist and in this respect it is the outstanding book of the world on war gases. He gives the chemical reactions by which all of the suggested war gases can be made, as well as the details of both laboratory and industrial preparation. He goes into considerable detail on the methods of identification and analysis of various gases. An innovation is in Chapter 2, in which he studies the relation between chemical structure and aggressive action. . . Throughout the book Sartori clings to the single point of view—namely, that of presenting such information on war gases as is necessary to a full understanding of their properties, synthesis, detection, and analysis by the chemist." (Ind & Eng Chem) Author and subject indexes.

SARTORI, MARIO—Continued

"Naturally many of these materials are used for peace-time purposes also and, thus, the book has an added use as an organic chemistry text."

+ Chem & Met Eng 46:726 N '39 140w

"Mr. Marrison has done an excellent job, in general, in translating the Italian into good chemical English. However, there are a few terms in the English translation which are not in general accord with the current usage of the American and British chemical warfare publications. But these are minor and do not detract in any way." M. E. Barker

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:614 S 20 '39 350w

"The book is evidently the result of years of work and will be found an indispensable guide through the scattered literature of the subject in spite of some inaccuracies in the numerical data. For each substance the available information is given of the properties, laboratory preparation, manufacture and analysis. The translation has been well carried out and the get-up is good." Arthur Marshall

+ Nature 144:996 D 16 '39 650w

SASSOON, SIEGFRIED. The old century, and seven more years. 267p $2.75 Viking [8s 6d Faber]

B or 92 (W) 39-27010

The author of Memoirs of a Fox-hunting Man tells the story of his first twenty-one years from 1886 to 1907. These are the mellow recollections of an idyllic childhood in a country house in Kent, of relatives, governesses and schoolmasters, of years at preparatory schools and at Cambridge.

Booklist 35:189 F 1 '39

"Apart from its beauty of cadenced language which is to be expected from one who, even as a child, felt himself dedicated to the rhythmic line, the book makes an appeal to the heart for its freshness and honesty, its modest and humorous self-evaluation." R. C. Feld

+ Books p5 Ja 8 '39 900w

"The firm, simple, natural prose of this book, its crystalline and meditative quality, are a delight." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 5 '38 440w

Churchman 153:35 Ap 15 '39 30w

"Mr. Sassoon is a master of refinement in thought and language, and nothing could be subtler than the web of reconstructive imagination by which he revives in this volume not so much his childhood itself as the romance of its fleeting experiences under the enchantment of the backward view. . . The defect of his book is that, though it is poetically exquisite, substantially it is rather thin." B. S.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 O 14 '38 300w

"In the first volume of his autobiography, Siegfried Sassoon writes the mellow story of a good boy, a happy society, a fortunate era. . . One cannot quite level criticism at this pleasant garden of English sensibility. . . Lacking the vitality and wit which distinguish the best of his previous work, Mr. Sassoon's new book is almost too unassuming. Appearing so sedately and politely amid our other contemporary chronicles of turbulent adolescence, 'The Old Century' reminds us of nothing so much as Mr. Pinkerton among the young Lonigans."

Nation 148:127 Ja 28 '39 180w

New Repub 98:112 Mr 1 '39 30w

"A book which is soaked in beauty and in the spirit of peace. The figures of nursemaids and tutors and schoolmasters are seen through the happy mist of childhood. One can hear the pony trotting down the road, the butcher boy hitting a six on the village green—in a world that knew no fear or doubts, and was as blandly delighted with Uncle John's torpedo-boats and destroyers as it was with Uncle Hamo's statues." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:418 S 17 '38 1050w

"There is nothing in these limpid pages but peace, the impish innocence of childhood and the long, long thoughts that are the happiest possession of adolescence." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 8 '39 1050w

"I feel that big Mr. Sassoon is just a trifle too obviously in love with little Master Sassoon. . . There can, however, be no two judgments of the quality of Mr. Sassoon's prose, lucid and musical, though candidly minor. Debussy might have set some of the pages to music." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 14:74 Ja 14 '39 380w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

" 'The Old Century' is a superb book, a poet's book by one of the living masters of English prose. In an age of jitterbug writing Sassoon's rich, lucid prose is the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. The fine promise of 'The Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man' (Sassoon's first volume of prose) is richly fulfilled in 'The Old Century.' Here one discovers the same quiet, unlabored beauty, the same crisp pictures of Kentish meadows and Weald; but the humor is richer and deeper, especially in the sketches of his amazing relatives and Kentish neighbors, and in the shrewd analysis of his own budding creative talent." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ja 14 '39 550w

Reviewed by Graham Greene

Spec 161:449 S 16 '38 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 16 '38 480w

"His happy memories are really a tribute to the optimistic spirit of upper-class Englishmen's pre-War world. That spirit Siegfried Sassoon conveys exactly. Defending it, The Old Century is his testament that the worst that can happen in peace is idyllic compared to the best that can happen in war."

+ Time 33:59 Ja 16 '39 360w

"Mr. Sassoon writes with extreme simplicity. To call his book of reminiscences 'charming' would be to dispraise it; for he does not appear to make that conscious effort to charm, or to amuse, or to shock, so frequently found in records of childhood and youth. Perhaps his is the art which conceals art, but in any case the effect is very pleasing. . . Those whose tastes are for the sensational may object that little seems to happen in these pages. The autobiographer who neither exaggerates, nor is arch, nor indulges in irony, is something of a rarity nowadays. Yet it is not too much to hope that the reading of Mr. Sassoon's reminiscences will of itself improve the palate, so that by the end of them there will come an appreciation of their value. As an evocation of a comparatively narrow section of time past they are in their fashion nearly perfect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p615 S 24 '38 600w

Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

SATTERLEE, HERBERT LIVINGSTON. J. Pierpont Morgan; an intimate portrait. 595p il maps $3.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Morgan, John Pierpont (W)

Shortly before his death in 1913, Mr Morgan gave his son-in-law permission to write his biography, stipulating only that it should not be published until long after his death. The biography, now completed, is based on personal knowledge and the reminiscences of friends and relatives, rather than on printed sources. Index.

Booklist 36:176 Ja 1 '40

"Whether it is the 'true' story of Mr. Morgan's life may be doubted. That it is a sincere one is obvious. . . The early chapters on the boyhood life of young Pierpont Morgan are fascinating. And so are the subsequent ones, as he grows to maturity." H. F. Pringle

+ — Books p5 D 3 '39 1400w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 700w

Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 150w

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 154:21 Ja 15 '40 250w
Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
+ — Commonweal 31:269 Ja 12 '40 300w
Nation 150:105 Ja 27 '40 350w

"Mr. Satterlee's book cannot be entirely dismissed as being suitable only for private publication and of interest only to the Morgan family. It is an appreciation, not a criticism; but it is a sincere appreciation and Mr. Satterlee is of sufficient stature to look up to Mr. Morgan without looking down at himself. Mr. Satterlee's prodigious limitations are self-imposed. He has undoubtedly succeeded in what he set out to do. But Mr. Morgan is seen, as through a class, darkly. And Mr. Satterlee has not portrayed much more of his Hamlet than the 'customary suit of solemn black.'" E. D. Kennedy
+ — New Repub 102:124 Ja 22 '40 850w

"This portrait is deficient in just one respect. It is too smooth; it does not show the iron in Morgan's character, the grimmer, harder side of the man. It gives us no real glimpse of that terrifying personality as it was seen by some rival he hated, some opponent whom he was bent upon destroying. But for all that, it is a revealing and valuable book, which achieves the main object attempted by the writer." Allan Nevins
+ — N Y Times p1 D 17 '39 1850w

"This 595-page book brings out a good deal of previously unavailable, sometimes important, information about the man and his period without ever quite getting down to the man himself. More old-school charm than you'd expect, but the volume is devout and a trifle aseptic."
New Yorker 15:118 D 2 '39 70w

"This is an absorbingly interesting narrative. . . . The first four chapters of the book, portraying Morgan's boyhood and young manhood, were privately printed in 1937, on the centenary of his birth; but to most readers that part of the story will have the interest of novelty. It is written quietly. Except for an occasional reminder of the sources from which incidents or personal impressions were obtained, it might almost duplicate the first chapters of an autobiography—which are often the most arresting part of an interesting man's own reminiscences." A. D. Noyes
+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 D 9 '39 1150w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 1000w
Time 34:80 D 18 '39 800w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). Post stories of 1938. 424p $2.50 Little (37-27266)

Twenty-two short stories selected from those printed in the Saturday Evening Post during 1938. Contents: Up periscope! by Alec Hudson; "Oh, once in my saddle—" by David Lamson; The Roman kid, by Paul Gallico; From the mother of the groom, by Martin Storm; Valedictory, by MacKinlay Kantor; The yogi of West Ninth street, by Guy Gilpatric; It's gotta rain sometime, by R. R. Annett; The tin bridge, by Almet Jenks; Mr Chinnus and the plat-eye, by Glenn Allan; The car, by Dorothy Thomas; Young Ames goes down the river, by W. D. Edmonds; Doc Mellhorn and the pearly gates, by S. V. Benét; Gone away! by Robert Murphy; Groper in the dark, by Joseph Harrington; Tugboat Annie sails again, by N. R. Raine; May the dew be heavy, by G. S. Perry; A letter home, by Charles Rawlings; A preacher goes to Texas, by J. W. Thomason, Jr.; Traffic trick, by Leland Jamieson; Trail's end, by Holmes Alexander; One hour to wait, by C. L. Clifford; Showman, by Patterson McNutt.

Booklist 35:380 Jl 15 '39
Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p6 Je 18 '39 400w

"A few of the stories are poorly conceived and badly written, but most are very well done, and a few are gems of a small but perfect kind. This collection stacks up very competently with its predecessors; the pity is that the book is not longer." W. M. Murphy
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 160w

"All of the stories are entertaining, expertly written, knowledgeable—and though it must be admitted also that most of them are modishly thin—it is unlikely that a better anthology of current tales will appear for many months." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p6 Je 18 '39 700w

"None of the selections in the present volume could be safely termed a literary masterpiece, but there are precious few literary masterpieces turned out anywhere today. What can be remarked, however, is the high degree of competent craftsmanship displayed in the stories, a craftsmanship too often neglected by the young writer in revolt." J. H. Smyth
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Je 17 '39 440w

SAUER, JULIA LINA, ed. Radio roads to reading; library book talks broadcast to girls and boys [foreword by John Adams Lowe]. 236p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

028.5 Children's literature. Radio plays
(W) 39-17305

"This book edited by the Head of the Department of Work with Children of the Rochester Public Library contains actual scripts of twenty radio programs given by the Rochester School of the Air and addressed to the children in the Rochester schools. The classes for which the programs are designed range from the fifth grade to the tenth and eleventh grades and these scripts have been selected from those given over a period of five years." Library J

Booklist 36:1 S '39

"A book which will prove both practical and inspiring for librarians who are experimenting with book broadcasts for children." F. H. Hyers
+ Library J 64:790 O 15 '39 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 35:182 N '39

SAULNIER, RAYMOND JOSEPH. Contemporary monetary theory; studies of some recent theories of money, prices and production. 420p $4 Columbia univ. press [16s King]

330.1 Economics. Money. Business cycles. Hawtrey, Ralph George. Robertson, Dennis Holme. Hayek, Friedrich August von. Keynes, John Maynard 39-4889

"The main purpose of this study is to summarize and to examine the theories of four of the outstanding recent writers on monetary and business cycle problems: R. G. Hawtrey, D. H. Robertson, F. A. von Hayek, and J. M. Keynes. The emphasis throughout is on the concepts and analytical procedures which are involved in the different theoretical systems. . . The materials that have been used are the published books and journal articles of the four writers and also those of other writers who have directly or indirectly developed criticisms of the theories with which we are concerned." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"On the whole the book gives rather too negative an impression; although adverse criticisms are mostly well conceived, the author has not found much in each of his subjects which he can regard as genuine contribution, and he has not ventured far in synthesizing the membra disjecta into a positive theory of cycles." H. S. Ellis
Am Econ R 29:555 S '39 900w
Economist 135:662 Je 17 '39 700w
Management R 28:108 Mr '39 100w

SAXBY, CHARLES. Death cuts the film. 285p $2 Dutton 39-20954

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p12 Ag 13 '39 200w

SAXBY, CHARLES—Continued
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 120w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 Ag 6 '39 160w

"Bursting with 'Hollywood poison,' crammed with action, and notable for richest assemblage of loathsome people ever gathered in one spot. Swell!"
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 5 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 210w

SAXTON, MARK. Danger road. 280p $2 Farrar 39-20953

Mystery-adventure story.

"Highly recommended. . . Mr. Saxton's writing is vastly superior to that mostly encountered in the field; all of which appears to give him a flying start to fame and fortune." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Ag 20 '39 180w

"The plot of the story may not always be strongly motivated, but what it lacks in this respect it makes up in excitement." Regina Madden
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 200w
Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '39 500w
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 19 '39 30w

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). The devil to pay; a stage-play. 147p $1.50 Harcourt [5s; pa 3s 6d Gollancz]
822 Faust [39-24478]

This poetic drama, first presented at the Festival at Canterbury cathedral retells "the famous history of John Faustus the Conjurer of Wittenberg in Germany; how he sold his immortal soul to the Enemy of Mankind, and was served XXIV years by Mephistopheles, and obtained Helen of Troy to his paramour, with many other marvels; and how God dealt with him at the last." (Subtitle)

Booklist 36:130 D 1 '39
Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Books p38 N 12 '39 850w
Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 120w

"The play is highly provocative and, because of the clear-cut characterization, makes excellent reading." W. P. Sears, Jr.
+ Churchman 153:18 N 15 '39 100w

"There are moments of beauty and poetry in her play, but it lacks vitality in the reading and seems too episodic to play well. Catholic readers, however, should find it worthy of their attention, for Miss Sayer's second-best is better than many an author's best. No one can write a 'Zeal of Thy House' annually." Mason Wade
+ — Commonweal 31:290 Ja 19 '40 360w

"Miss Sayers is well cut out for her task because she combines an interest in theological argument with a nice command of English prose and poetry. The blank verse passages will, of course, not challenge comparison with Marlowe, but they will stand setting beside most of English dramatic poetry; they have the right copiousness of image and pulse of rhythm and must be very agreeable matter for an actor used to the clipped, monosyllabic stuff of ordinary stage dialogue." Ivor Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 310w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 450w

"In the final scene Miss Sayers's verse, which elsewhere is utilitarian, makes an impressive approximation of the grandeur of her theme. It is a play of no great poetic distinction; but the seriousness of its purpose is sustained by the power of lively invention and clear-cut characterization."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 17 '39 650w

SAYERS, WILLIAM CHARLES BERWICK. Library local collections. (Practical lib. handbooks) 128p il $1.45 Wilson, H.W. [5s Allen, G]
025.17 Libraries—Special collections
[39-11090]

"The present handbook is obviously addressed—in considerable part, at least—to the small, English public library. . . In suggesting what to collect under 'material about the area,' Mr. Sayers specifically lists legal, parochial, municipal, and business manuscripts and manuscripts of local authors. Under 'printed material' he names histories; literary, church, government, municipal, and business records; music and theatrical records; and sports records. It is also urged that 'material produced in the area and not about it' be added. . . . There are ten chapters in Mr. Sayers' little handbook, and those which deal with cost and methods of collection, with arrangement and cataloging, with photographic and regional survey records, with housing and filing, and with maps contain many helpful suggestions which are adaptable within the range of our general practice." Library Q

Booklist 35:382 Jl 15 '39
Reviewed by J. I. Wyer
Library J 64:790 O 15 '39 400w
Reviewed by J. E. Towne
Library Q 9:529 O '39 300w

SAYRE, FARRAND. Diogenes of Sinope; a study of Greek cynicism. 139p $2 J. H. Furst co, 20 Hopkins pl, Baltimore
183.4 Diogenes, the Cynic. Cynicism
38-31240

"The various legends which have grown up about Diogenes the Cynic are here approached by way of a preliminary examination of the probable doctrines and sources of Cynicism. The conjecture that some elements of Cynic teaching may have had an Indian origin is explored and arguments are given to show that Antisthenes the Socratic was not connected with the position. Then the life of Diogenes is traced, with emphasis given to its psychopathic features and the symbolism which various episodes in it were to furnish later Cynics." Ethics

Reviewed by Alan Gewirtz
Ethics 49:507 Jl '39 80w
J Philos 36:433 Ag 3 '39 390w

SAYRE, FRANCIS BOWES. The way forward; the American trade agreements program. 230p $2.75 Macmillan 337 U. S.—Commercial policy. Tariff—U.S.
39-17015

In his preface the author states that he has sought "to state as simply and concisely as [he] could in laymen's language, the reasons for the adoption of the trade agreements program, its nature and its purposes, the method by which it is carried out, how it touches the people of our country, and the results thus far achieved."

"This book is the outgrowth of a series of articles and speeches which the author has prepared in defense of the program which he, as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of trade agreements, has carried forward. . . The book will dispel much of the fog that has obscured the program. The style is simple, objective, and straightforward." J. D. Larkin
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1091 D '39 490w

"A clear, temperate, well-organized, up-to-date, and cogent presentation of the program as seen by a man who has been a leader in its formulation and in its execution. If widely read, the volume should do much to dispel popular misconceptions concerning this program and to make clear its national and international significance." P. S. Peirce
+ Ann Am Acad 207:230 Ja '40 350w

Booklist 36:37 O 1 '39

"The man who has been primarily responsible for the execution of the Hull trade agreements policy here gives an understandably simple and straightforward account of the whole subject. . . It is a useful little book. . . Naturally, Mr. Sayre does not tell quite the whole story. . . But he makes a powerful case for the wisdom and rationality of the program over which he has presided." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 Jl 30 '39 800w

Reviewed by Barrett Parker

Boston Transcript p13 O 6 '39 950w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 5 '39 550w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 50:5 Ag '39 280w

Foreign Affairs 18:373 Ja '40 30w

New Repub 100:84 Ag 23 '39 40w

"Mr. Sayre's book is to be commended not merely to the public at large, but especially to his fellow officials in the government. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace ought certainly to read it before going further with the program of export subsidies (a typical autarchic device) which appears to have been launched." E. V. Bell

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 27 '39 700w

"As Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Sayre has been in direct charge of this program and he therefore speaks with authority. His book is well-written. Technical subjects are dealt with in language that the layman can readily understand, and at the same time the treatment is sufficiently comprehensive to avoid misguiding the reader through oversimplification. . . For all who seek an intelligent understanding of the basic principles of the Hull trade program, this book is a 'must.'" W. O. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Ag 5 '39 410w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 20 '39 650w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Survey G 28:761 D '39 450w

SCARFOGLIO, CARLO. England and the Continent. 343p $2.75 Fortuny's [7s 6d Putnam]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign policy [39-25939]

"However indignant recent events may have made us with the bad faith shown by the rulers of other nations, we have to recognize that the legend of perfidious Albion is no less widely accepted on the Continent than in years past. Signor Scarfoglio, in a rather hasty gallop through the last two and a half centuries of British foreign policy, gives it free play. He opens with an essay on 'self-righteousness,' the characteristic national failing that most English critics of their country have confessed, and then proceeds to a narrative of the wars of Europe from the end of the seventeenth century, with England always the villain of the story." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor

Commonweal 30:542 O 6 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Ap 22 '39 1050w

SCHACK, WILLIAM. A biography of Louis M. Eilshemius: and he sat among the ashes. 303p il $3 Am. artists group, inc, 106 7th av, N.Y.

B or 92 Eilshemius, Louis Michel 39-29608

Biography of a contemporary American artist, who, after years of what he has felt was unjust neglect, has at last attained some considerable degree of recognition from fellow artists, art critics, and collectors. The book is illustrated with many black and white reproductions of his work. Index.

Booklist 36:237 F 15 '40

"The story of the total obscurity of Louis M. Eilshemius, who even to this day lives on the top floor of a brownstone house, bought by his fashionable family in 1888, half-a-block from the popular shopping district on East Fifty-seventh Street, is certainly one of the strangest tales in the saga of overlooked artists. This story has now been beautifully and objectively told for the first time by William Schack." Carl Van Vechten

+ Books p4 N 12 '39 2050w

Reviewed by Ashton Sanborn

Boston Transcript p13 D 22 '39 380w

"This is matter for a slender, sympathetic study. Mr. Schack has blown it up beyond the natural scale of its form and content in 'And He Sat Among the Ashes,' producing a massive book packed with inconsiderable detail. His tone, unfortunately, is facetious, and the slight inner theme is lost." Constance Rourke

— Nation 149:527 N 11 '39 130w

"The tough world did to Eilshemius what it did to Lear. What one gets out of his life history, reading more between the lines than in them, is the impression of a courageous spirit that could be twisted and diverted from its true path, but could not be, and was not, broken. It would have been generous of Mr. Schack, who is properly appreciative of Eilshemius's paintings, to make more of this point, also." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p5 D 10 '39 1350w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 17 '39 650w

SCHAUFFLER, ROBERT HAVEN. Enjoy living; an invitation to happiness. 381p $3 Dodd

171.4 Happiness (W) 39-27155

Psychological, physical and recreational hints on how the fairly normal, average adult can live a happy, contented life. Mr Schauffler insists that in this search for happiness the surest method is not to strive for things beyond one's reach. Many of his practical suggestions are based on the teachings of Coué.

Booklist 35:225 Mr 15 '39

"Mr. Schauffler's 'Enjoy Living' takes happiness so seriously that after regarding it from some twenty-four points of view you wonder whether it's worth going through so much to learn so little. Nearly four hundred pages on the practice and psychology of this art—with an appendix full of portentous notes—should settle the subject. Unfortunately, it almost buries it as well."

— Books p16 My 7 '39 60w

"We've never had time for a serious workout on any of the current systems of winning success and happiness, so it's not quite fair to hand on an opinion about Robert Haven Schauffler's Enjoy Living. Nevertheless, the book seems to these innocent eyes to make sense. What is more, it is thoroughly delightful reading, whether you take the author's recipes to heart or not." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:v Ap '39 180w

"This book, like others of its kind, offers some definitely good advice, and will perhaps direct its readers toward painless, or nearly painless self-discipline. Mr. Schauffler's . . . book is more pretentious than some of the others, aims at a wider mark, is more ornate in its writing. The fact that such books are so widely read is itself a sad comment on our civilization."

N Y Times p26 F 26 '39 440w

"The suggestions of the book are largely confined to the individual by himself, as a unit. Social relationships are largely left out; but one cannot be fully understood or aided, independently of the social medium in which he lives. Within its chosen scope, however, this book is sure to be suggestive, invigorating and helpful." R. K. M.

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 31 '39 300w

SCHEINFELD, AMRAM. You and heredity; assisted in the genetic sections by Morton D. Schweitzer; il. by the author, with 4 color-pl. and 75 drawings, maps and diagrams; incl. an original study of The inheritance of musical talent. 434p $3 Stokes

575.1 Heredity (W) 39-4223

"Mr. Scheinfeld's definite purpose for writing the book is threefold: first, 'to sift out from the genetics laboratories and research fields the outstanding facts about heredity directly applicable to human beings'; second, 'to present these facts in clear-cut, untechnical language, diagrams, and illustrations'; third, 'to point out what their significance may be to the individual and to society, leaving the reader to draw his own conclusions.' One-half the book is concerned with the ultimate production of a human being, and the 'how' and 'why' of his physical appearance and peculiarities, with predictions involving the probable body characteristics of the children of any two given parents. The second half of the book, instead of dealing with human beings as mechanisms, considers them as social animals." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 36:39 O 1 '39

Reviewed by L. C. Dunn

Books p21 O 8 '39 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"This is a valuable book on a fascinating subject. The author has popularized the scientific biology of heredity so well that it is no wonder that he has drawn complimentary criticisms from many men who have a right to an opinion on the subject. The most valuable feature of the book is that in spite of the author's knowledge of so much that has been accomplished in this twentieth century in the field of heredity, he is quite willing to make the sincere confession with regard to many topics, 'I do not know.'" J. J. Walsh

\+ Commonweal 31:123 N 24 '39 300w

"Mr. Scheinfeld has rung the bell. Here is an amazingly fine piece of work, a satisfactory popularization of all that science knows about human heredity. 'You and Heredity' is unquestionably the best exposition of this vital and absorbing subject yet published." L. L. Snyder

\+ Living Age 357:391 D '39 200w

"Mr. Scheinfeld has done a very good job. Every sentence has been vetted by professional geneticists, and yet is readable. The mechanism of heredity is expounded in the simplest terms, with excellent explanatory diagrams." J. G. Crowther

\+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 12 '39 250w

Reviewed by Harold Ward

New Repub 101:204 D 6 '39 300w

"Throughout its four hundred pages 'You and Heredity' maintains a high standard. The material is important, abundant and well selected. The exposition is almost always lucid and concise." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

\+ N Y Times p18 O 29 '39 1000w

"The book makes extremely easy reading. . . The book is more than informative; it is extremely useful, particularly for young married couples. But even if you are not a young married couple, that should not deter you from reading it." Clifton Fadiman

\+ New Yorker 15:61 S 2 '39 180w

"The book is very clearly and interestingly written throughout."

\+ No Am 248:206 autumn '39 90w

Pratt p9 winter '40

"It is to be noted that while the book is written expressly for the layman and by a layman it is not 'amateurish.' The author demonstrates an unusual appreciation of the scientific viewpoint and method, and combines objectivity with the ability to expound the subject clearly and in a fashion to excite popular interest. . . As is always the case when scientific popularization is attempted, the author is faced with the problem of speaking with assurance about matters which can be and often are minor fads in scientific viewpoints. . . Such errors can hardly be avoided even in textbooks meant for scholars, and in effect detract only a little from the generally high quality of this work." Antonio Ciocco

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:6 S 2 '39 700w

"The illustrations include many extremely vivid and compelling diagrams that cannot fail to impress the reader by their simplicity—a definite achievement when one considers the intricate phases of heredity, brought, through thorough scientific learning, to such clear-cut, conclusive explanation."

\+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 F '39 440w

"While Dr Scheinfeld's exposition need not be accepted as final in all respects, it helps anyone to see how hereditary and survival factors must be weighed against accident, mutation and environment. Illustrations and charts assist the reader in an understanding of the text, which itself is lucid and engaging."

\+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 5 '39 650w

"This book is written by an American student of heredity who, while possessing much knowledge of the subject, makes no claim to professional qualifications. It has been edited by Professor Haldane, one of the leading authorities on genetics, who commends it to the general reader. It may be taken, therefore, to be as authoritative as it is simply and attractively written."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 23 '39 1550w

SCHELL, ERWIN HASKELL, and GILMORE, FRANK FORSTER. Manual for executives and foremen. 185p $2 (12s) McGraw

658 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial. Foremen 39-5090

Advice for the executive or foreman on how to employ the methods of the management engineer in finding ways to improve departmental processes, work places, attitudes of the worker, output, equipment, and storage. The book, written in simple language, has, the authors say, but one purpose: to help the individual "to lengthen his period of official usefulness to his company."

Am Econ R 29:385 Je '39 50w

"The book is by no means a pretentious or exhaustive treatment of production management. However, as a compact manual of procedure, it serves the purpose for which it is intended. In addition, it is a neat example of a book in which some imagination has been applied to the problem of exposition." C. C. Balderston

\+ Ann Am Acad 206:203 N '39 400w

Booklist 35:266 Ap 15 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

"The present volume follows [an] admirable technique. Problems are described, and possible procedures outlined to fit a variety of cases. This manner of presentation makes the book especially valuable for group discussion, and also, of course, greatly facilitates individual study. Although two authors have collaborated on this volume, Professor Schell's simple, lucid style is happily very much in evidence." Carl Heyel

\+ Management R 28:212 Je '39 380w

SCHERER, JAMES AUGUSTIN BROWN. The lion of the vigilantes, William T. Coleman and the life of old San Francisco. 335p il $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Coleman, William Tell. San Francisco—History 39-20045

William T. Coleman, the subject of this biography, was one of those who left the East and went to California in '49 seeking gold. He early gave up the idea of gold, and became established as a merchant in San Francisco. Three times during the early turbulent years he was one of the leaders of those who sought to maintain law and order in that frontier town. The title: The Lion of the Vigilantes, was bestowed upon him by Stevenson. Index.

"No book like this can be complete without something, at least, of the background, some indication of the social setting in which the drama takes place. Dr. Scherer is careful to paint in the scene, or at any rate the highlights of it. Readers will find here lively and sound biographical writing about a man whose life was worth investigating and at the same time an excellent reflection of the time in which that man lived." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p25 N 19 '39 800w

Reviewed by Anita Moffett

N Y Times p16 S 17 '39 1350w

New Yorker 15:66 Ag 19 '39 50w

SCHIDDEL, EDMUND. Scratch the surface. 264p $2.50 Harcourt

39-21293

"Young New Yorkers in the nineteen-thirties. They wear smart clothes, spend too much money, talk with great frankness, make love without paying any attention to the rules. Underneath it all, says Mr. Schiddel, they are just folks." New Yorker

"Although the author's plot is fairly routine, his handling of the material should delight many. The more picturesque locales involved in leading a full alcoholic life in Manhattan find their way into the story regularly—as well as some of their inhabitants. . . The dialogue is casual, blunt, witty in spots and catches neatly the characters that Mr. Schiddel has set out to portray. A really entertaining 'novel of Manhattan' doesn't appear very often, so Mr. Schiddel's should be welcomed." F. J. Feldkamp

+ Books p8 Ag 27 '39 450w

Reviewed by R. A. Chace

Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 160w

"Mr. Schiddel's 'novel of Manhattan' follows the classic formula for such novels: the style is flip, racy, occasionally lurid, and occasionally shot through with 'philosophic' overtones; some of the situations have a tabloid violence; and all the characters are latter-day representatives of the 'lost generation,' in whom the depression has either modified or exaggerated certain initial behavior patterns. . . Mr. Schiddel's plot, which deals with one of the most crucial and far-reaching situations in modern times, seems to occur in a vacuum, without reference either to its broad social implications or to fundamental human values: for all its drama, and the occasional lucidity of its presentation, it fails consistently to move us." Helen Neville

Nation 149:251 S 2 '39 330w

"Mr. Schiddel can, indisputably, write, and his fictional craftsmanship is modern. His usage of the stream of consciousness method of depicting character and of recalling past events is a combination of sharp, staccato vividness and flowing smoothness that never palls. . . One would not call him a humorist, though his people—particularly Joel Service, whose modern rake's progress is one of the three main threads of the narrative—have something of that saving grace of humorous perception that keeps tragedy at bay. . . To be artistically convincing [the book] called for either merciless satire or straight tragedy. As it is, you get unquestioned entertainment and some enlightenment." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 27 '39 850w

"A bit hectic and not entirely convincing." New Yorker 15:62 S 2 '39 50w

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR. Kant's pre-critical ethics. 185p $2.50 Northwestern univ.

193.2 Kant, Immanuel 38-15169

"This book presents a study of Kant's writings on ethics before the Critiques. . . The author's main conclusion is that, contrary to the belief of many scholars, there was no sharp break in Kant's ethical thought but rather a continuous, though slow, development of ideas present in his thinking from his earliest writings. It is the opinion of the author that Kant early formulated the requirements for a solution of the ethical problem, that his various attempts to solve the problem during the pre-critical period show a unity of direction and method resulting from his conception of the requirements for a satisfactory treatment of the ethical problem, and that study of the early writings reveals that Kant's essential insight, at least during this period, was that a solution of the ethical problem must be found in terms of analysis of rational method rather than by setting up dogmatic goals or criteria." Ethics

Ethics 48:571 Jl '38 140w

"This sympathetic and scholarly study, long over-due, is a valuable contribution to Kantian scholarship. Some of the author's conclusions are perhaps not as novel (at least in certain quarters) as he believes them to be, but they are, in the reviewer's judgment, fundamentally sound, and they certainly provide a welcome and much-needed corrective to the deplorable misconceptions of Kant's ethical position which are still widely entertained by prominent ethicists." T. M. G.

+ J Philos 36:51 Ja 19 '39 370w

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR, ed. The philosophy of John Dewey. 708p $4 Northwestern univ.

191 Dewey, John 39-33290

"This book . . . contains (1) a biography of Professor Dewey signed by Jane M. Dewey to which, as the editor's preface tells us, two other daughters contributed and for which some material was furnished by Professor Dewey himself, (2) seventeen critical essays about various phases of Professor Dewey's philosophy by seventeen writers chosen by the editor, (3) an article of over ninety pages by Professor Dewey in rejoinder to the critical essays, and (4) a bibliography of Professor Dewey's writings for which the Thomas Schneider bibliography of 1929 serves as basis and to which other compilers have added material sufficient to bring the bibliography up to date." J Philos

"The symposium on Dewey put out by Northwestern University has as its aim not only exposition but criticism. It is the first volume in a projected 'Library of Living Philosophers' for which works on Santayana, Croce, Russell, and Brunschvigg are announced as already in preparation. . . If the subsequent volumes are as good as the first, each will prove indispensable for further study of its subject." E. S. Bates

+ Books p2 N 5 '39 850w

Reviewed by Albert Wohlstetter

Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 470w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 6 '40 700w

"It is impossible in this review to do justice to all seventeen of the critical essays and Professor Dewey's reply. The critical essays range all the way from futility to wisdom. An outstanding example of almost total misunderstanding and profitless faultfinding is the essay by Mr. Bertrand Russell. . . Mr. Santayana's essay . . . likewise misses the whole intent of Professor Dewey's position. . . At the other extreme from these essays are those of Professor Piatt and Professor Randall." S. P. L.

+ — J Philos 36:691 D 7 '39 1600w

Reviewed by Paul Weiss

New Repub 101:206 D 6 '39 140w

"Reading these essays along with Dewey's brilliant defense, in which his pen often strikes sparks, becomes an adventure in the kind of ideas which in their ceaseless conflict and in some mysterious manner add their elusive content to human knowledge." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 N 11 '39 900w

SCHISGALL, OSCAR. Swastika. 238p $2 Knopf 39-11747

A young American couple, the man German-born and not yet naturalized, go to Germany for a three-months visit. The young wife watches her husband while he gradually becomes infected with enthusiasm for the Nazi régime, and finally the marriage is wrecked and the wife returns to America with her child. The time is the summer of 1938.

"Born in Belgium and educated in the United States, Oscar Schisgall lived for a time in Germany before Hitler came into power. He was not an eye-witness of the destruction of the charm and serenity of the civilization he knew, but one would never suspect that from reading 'Swastika,' which has the impact and sharp intensity of events transcribed from immediate experience." George Conrad

\+ Books p12 Ap 30 '39 370w

Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 60w

"This journalistically written story has a slight timely interest. It is as convincing as—and no more convincing than—a news story in any propagandizing newspaper." R. B.

Commonweal 30:261 Je 30 '39 110w

"'Swastika' has all the elements desired by a magazine editor—terse style, mounting suspense and smashing climax. It is not a great novel, but the picture it portrays of contemporary Germany appears to be closer to reality than Miss Waln's account." L. L. Snyder

Living Age 356:498 Jl '39 100w

"The characters are pretty light to bear the weight of anti-Nazi sentiments: both suffer in consequence."

New Repub 99:56 My 17 '39 50w

"Essentially 'Swastika' is nothing more than a mediocre, slick-paper story written round a major theme. Its feeble characterizations, its stiff, forced dialogue which slips so painfully into sprightliness, its outcroppings of melodrama, its complete predictability—all this adds up to an unimpressive total. Pages ahead of time, one knows just what is going to happen in 'Swastika'—except, possibly, for the unconvincing climax. It has none of the right kind of surprises, springing from rich and skillful treatment. Mr. Schisgall's heart is in the proper place, but his execution is poor." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p7 Ap 30 '39 800w

"Mr. Schisgall lays it on pretty thick, but one may be sure things are bad enough. His current history, thanks to the daily newspapers, is more real than his characters."

\+ — New Yorker 15:91 My 6 '39 50w

"If the characters of Eric and Carol had been given enough of human, individual fullness, this might have been a novel of magnitude. As it is, 'Swastika' is distinguished by its realistic treatment of Berlin's tense existence."

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:15 Ap 29 '39 330w

"A fast-stepping, isn't-that-just-what-you'd-expect story, likely to be popularly received."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 300w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1918-
Orestes A. Brownson: a pilgrim's progress. 320p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Brownson, Orestes Augustus 39-27468

Biographical study of the New England journalist and theologian of the period of Emerson, Thoreau, and Alcott, whose spiritual pilgrimage led him from the Presbyterian church, thru the Universalist and Unitarian ministries, into the Catholic church. Bibliography. Index.

"The development is sketchy, and usually only one side of Brownson's many controversies is given. Too much reverence is paid, unwittingly I think, to the epistemological system of Hegel and Marx. But the book not only fills a gap in the history of prominent American Catholics but will go a long way toward accomplishing what the mystery of the bronze head started, making Brownson a part of our national heritage." P. L. O'Connor

\+ — America 61:237 Je 17 '39 450w

"This book is a model of the succinct biographical method by which facts are made to speak for themselves. It moves swiftly, with a lunge and drive that carry the reader onward almost irresistibly. The style of it is not unlike the style of Brownson's writing itself, which Mr. Schlesinger characterizes as 'vigorous, forthright and clear, lacking in subtlety and variety, gaining in cogency by its rude and unadorned strength.'" Odell Shepard

\+ Am Hist R 45:416 Ja '40 500w

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Mr. Schlesinger has charted with patience, clarity and critical perception the labyrinthine progress of this strange pilgrim of a double pilgrimage, whose courage, vigor and brilliance might have made him a leader if he could have found his direction and kept it, if the fierce conflicts in his nature had not repeatedly blinded him to what he had already seen or lured him into a mirage. . . This is a sympathetic study of an extraordinary man whom the author values highly for his unique relation to American thought." C. G. Stillman

\+ Books p15 Ap 16 '39 900w

Cath World 149:499 Jl '39 750w

"We have long needed a work that would accurately depict the life of Brownson and that would provide an introduction to his thought. Mr. Schlesinger's volume fulfills these purposes to a high—if we cannot say to a perfect—degree." F. E. McMahon

\+ Commonweal 30:54 My 5 '39 500w

"In this extremely well-written and scholarly biography, Mr. Schlesinger, son of the prominent Harvard historian, has attempted to revive public interest in this lonely figure. Believing that Brownson deserves kinder treatment than he has obtained in the past, Mr. Schlesinger now wishes to restore him to all Americans as 'a part of the national heritage.'" Sydney Zebel

\+ Nation 149:107 Jl 22 '39 500w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

New Eng Q 12:582 S '39 2450w

"When a competent appreciation of Brownson is so long overdue, it seems paradoxical to call Mr. Schlesinger's biography premature. . . The book bears the hallmark of extensive scholarly research; it shows an admirable gift for portraiture. More than that, it gives an inkling of Brownson's insight into some of the dilemmas of capitalist democracy. It is not Mr. Schlesinger's fault that the tools at his disposal—the preliminary studies for an American cultural history—are inadequate to produce a satisfying portrait of one of the most complex figures in our heritage." H. S. Mims

\+ — New Repub 99:136 Je 7 '39 850w

"Mr. Schlesinger's study of Brownson is a masterly one. It has technical brilliance—a sure control of materials, an effective handling of background, a skillful use of colors and a certain bravura of execution. It has, in addition, sincerity and integrity, sympathetic understanding, and an astonishing maturity." H. S. Commager

\+ N Y Times p3 Ap 23 '39 800w

Pratt p25 autumn '39

"Mr. Schlesinger writes as though in haste to fill this obvious gap in our knowledge of the New England past. In saying this one does not mean that his work has been hasty. It is merely incomplete. Everything that enthusiastic and highly trained industry can do to bring Brownson back into the world of the living Mr. Schlesinger has done. . . His books shows an almost ascetic avoidance of comment, of humor, of charm. . . Highly as one respects it, therefore, one must say that this account of Orestes Brownson is somewhat harsh, crude, and feverish. But then, one may well remember, so was the man himself. It is also powerful. So was he. It moves everywhere at top speed. So did he." Odell Shepard

\+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 22 '39 440w

SCHLICK, MORITZ. Problems of ethics; auth. tr. by David Rynin. 217p $2 Prentice-Hall

170 Ethics 39-14688

"Professor Schlick was the leader of the vigorous and influential 'Vienna Circle,' a group of scientists, logicians, and philosophers who attacked in a fresh way the persistent problem as to what the nature and the significant function of philosophical reflection really is. These thinkers, in general, carry on the traditions of empiricism and positivism, which they have reformulated in the light of certain views arising from a logical analysis of language and symbols. Accordingly, the position which these writers represent sometimes goes by the name of 'logical positivism.' The application of the methods and results of this type of analysis to some of the traditional problems of ethics supplies the substance of this book." (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 50:96 O '39 430w
J Philos 36:630 N 9 '39 2000w

SCHLOSS, MRS HANNAH W. Short cuts and left-overs. 130p $1.50 Barrows

641.5 Cookery (W) 38-29071

The body of this book is filled with recipes which employ left over foods, arranged in the usual order beginning with canapés and soups and ending with fruits and desserts. Preceding this, however, is an alphabetical list of foods that might be "left-overs," with references to the recipes. There are also the customary tables of kitchen hints, measurements, necessary utensils, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:170 Ja 15 '39
J Home Econ 31:333 My '39 50w

SCHMECKEBIER, LAURENCE. Modern Mexican art. 190p pl $7.50 Univ. of Minn.

709.72 Art, Mexican. Paintings, Mexican. Mural painting and decoration. Decoration and ornament, Mexican 39-27756

"A survey that explains the rise of Mexican art in successive chapters on its background, the Syndicate of Painters and Sculptors, Orozco, Rivera and the Mexican School, written without political or personal partisanship. Two color plates and 216 halftones." (New Repub) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:39 O 1 '39

"By its comprehensiveness and wealth of admirably chosen illustration, Dr. Schmeckebier's study of modern Mexican art easily eclipses its fragmentary predecessors in the field. But by its unevenness and unaccountable blind spots it falls short of becoming the definitive survey that was intended." B. D. Wolfe
\+ — Books p32 D 10 '39 500w
New Repub 100:320 O 18 '39 30w

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell
N Y Times p22 D 10 '39 240w

Reviewed by Oliver Larkin
Sat R of Lit 21:17 Ja 20 '40 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 6 '40 200w
Wis Lib Bul 36:14 Ja '40

SCHMECKEBIER, LAURENCE FREDERICK. Government publications and their use. (Inst. for gov. research. Studies in administration) 2d ed rev 479p $3 Brookings

025.1734 Government publications. U.S.—Government publications 39-22433

"The first edition of this volume was published in 1936, and has been out of print for some months. Since the publication of the first edition there have been important developments, both in the laws and in the classes of publications discussed. The book has been completely revised, and gives a picture as of approximately the beginning of 1939. The revision has not been confined to new practices and publications, but includes amplification of many topics, and the addition of new material on some older publications that are likely to be of interest." (Pref. to 2d ed) List of depository libraries. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936.

"An excellent index and a list of all depository libraries in the United States contribute to the value of this useful manual." J. E. Kallenbach
\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1123 D '39 150w
Booklist 36:72 O 15 '39

"So much change has occurred in the last three years that the new edition is fully warranted. There is reason to suppose that in the future the administrative agencies and the legislative and judicial branches of the federal government will keep changing, at a possibly accelerated pace. Therefore, we shall welcome frequent revisions of Government Publications and Their Use as a handy book of reference in research bureaus and as a very necessary one in many libraries." R. W. Noyes
\+ Library Q 10:139 Ja '40 300w

SCHMIDT, CARL LOUIS AUGUST, ed. The chemistry of the amino acids and proteins. 1031p il $7.50 Thomas, C. C. [34s Bailliere]

547.8 Amino acids. Proteins 38-31777

"Dr. Schmidt, who is Professor of Biochemistry in the University of California, has had the collaboration of fifteen other contributors in the preparation of this sizable work which emphasizes the chemical rather than the biological aspects of the subject. There is an historical introduction of 18 pages. Selected references to the literature are included at the chapter endings." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is the most substantial and modern treatment of certain of the fields considered, that is at present available and unquestionably will replace the earlier studies of Robertson and of Loeb, written, respectively, eighteen and sixteen years ago." E. J. Cohn
\+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:220 Ja '39 450w

"An important feature is the collection and presentation, wherever possible, of fundamental and important data in graphic or tabular form. The authors have provided a reference book on protein chemistry, which should be readily available to every student and investigator in this field." H. B. Lewis
\+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:651 D 10 '38 500w
J Home Econ 31:116 F '39 40w

"Whereas the book is defective in many respects and may not be compared with numerous classical works of reference in other subjects, it must be acknowledged and welcomed among protein chemists as the best available to meet their needs at the present time." A. S. McF.
\+ — Nature 144:923 D 2 '39 800w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:53 O '38

SCHMIDT, CARL THEODORE. The corporate state in action; Italy under fascism. 173p $2.25 Oxford

945.09 Italy—Politics and government. Italy—Fascist movement 39-27469

The author of The Plough and the Sword (Book Review Digest, 1938) here reviews the progress and deeds of Fascism in Italy, particularly as it has affected the standard of living, the position of labor, the weight of taxation, and finally the necessity for war. Thruout he attempts to show how the Fascist claims of improving conditions in Italy are false.

Reviewed by W. G. Welk
Am Econ R 29:577 S '39 200w

Reviewed by J. Rumney
Am J Soc 45:488 N '39 350w

SCHMIDT, C. T.—Continued
Reviewed by H. R. Spencer
Am Pol Sci R 33:1108 D '39 550w
Reviewed by H. S. Miller
Ann Am Acad 205:211 S '39 1000w
Booklist 35:328 Je 1 '39
Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p22 N 5 '39 230w

"Written in an easy style, the book makes its information accessible to the general reader; and because of its brevity and its factual material, it should be recommended to those interested in the realities of the present Italian situation." Hans Kohn
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 140w

"An excellent treatment of contemporary Italy." Paul Kiniery
+ Commonweal 30:191 Je 9 '39 180w
Foreign Affairs 18:377 Ja '40 10w

"Mr. Schmidt never preaches or gets excited about Mussolini and Italian Fascism; his study of them is lucid, unemotional—and devastating." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:iv Ag '39 280w

"This little volume is perhaps the most incisive analysis and the most eloquent indictment of Fascism which has yet appeared, apart from the writings of Gaetano Salvemini to whom the author dedicates his work. The indictment is crushing, for it rests upon official data and upon a merciless dissection of the brain and bowels of the new tyranny." F. L. Schuman
+ Harvard Law R 52:1386 Je '39 430w
Reviewed by Adolf Sturmthal
New Repub 100:194 S 20 '39 360w
Reviewed by J. H. Crider
N Y Times p16 Je 4 '39 750w

"Dr. Schmidt's book is a sober and conscientious piece of work. . . The author's sentiments are outspoken against fascism, and it is refreshing to see here how scientific objectivity can be combined with partisanship. Perhaps in this direction Dr. Schmidt went a little too far. He has followed the trend of many Italian anti-fascists who consider the regime they hate in an international vacuum, as if it had no relations with the social and economic forces of our day operating all the world over. With these qualifications the book can be recommended as one of the most reliable essays on the subject." Max Ascoli
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 1 '39 230w

SCHMIDT, WILHELM. Primitive revelation; tr. by Joseph J. Baierl. 309p $2.75 Herder

291 Religion, Primitive. Revelation 39-23182

"This work originally appeared in 1912 as a contribution to Esser and Mausbach's great apologetic symposium, 'Religion Christentum Kirche.' The present translation by Dr. Baierl, from the fifth edition of 1923, contains a good deal of supplementary material drawn by the translator from Father Schmidt's publications issued since the latter date. The study deals with four topics: first, the essence, contents and scope of primitive revelation, treated from the theological and exegetical standpoint; second, the bodily and spiritual capability of the earliest men to receive such revelation, in the light of the evidence from the Bible and from the sciences of prehistoric archaeology and cultural and physical anthropology; third, the data from cultural anthropology in support of the historical actuality of primitive revelation; fourth, the unity of the human race and the decay of primitive revelation, chiefly from the anthropological evidence. A selected bibliography and index are appended." Commonweal

---

"Father Wilhelm Schmidt is an ethnologist of the first rank. Hence this book from his mature years, written with the clarity and simplicity which distinguished this scholar, is welcome because it shows us that the story of early man as we know it from science is quite compatible, nay more harmoniously fits, with the story as we know it in the supernatural revelation of the early chapters of the Bible. Father Baierl is to be thanked for making this book available in a translation which is uniformly smooth and clear. . . I counsel every intelligent Catholic to have this book; I advise that all who read the pages on the evolution of man's body reserve opinion on the Church's attitude on the question until more adequate reading has been done." W. J. McGarry
+ — America 61:598 S 30 '39 500w
Cath World 150:632 F '40 230w
Reviewed by J. M. Cooper
Commonweal 30:570 O 13 '39 750w

SCHNEIDER, DAVID MOSES. The history of public welfare in New York state, 1609-1866. 395p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press [13s 6d Cambridge]

360.9747 Charities—New York (state). New York (state)—Social conditions 38-38004

History of the development of public welfare in New York state from 1609 to 1866. A second volume is promised to cover the years 1867 to 1938. The whole field of public welfare is covered: relief, education, health, delinquency, and other phases of the social problem. The arrangement of the work is chronological, the main divisions are: Poor relief under the Dutch; New York as an English colony, 1664-1776; Transition, 1776-1823; The trend toward indoor relief, 1824-1866. Bibliographical references at ends of chapters; index.

Reviewed by S. M. Lindsay
Am Hist R 45:162 O '39 600w
Reviewed by R. C. White
Am J Soc 45:490 N '39 150w

"While for research purposes topical treatment may be valuable, the presentation of each topic as a separate entity with its own chronological development separately described, has made it difficult to get a sense of the entire picture at any given period. Such a treatment is, moreover, confusing to the reader who must return to the beginning of the period covered at the introduction of each new subject. But Dr. Schneider is fluent and graphic, citing a wealth of incident to point out the conditions described. . . We find in the present work the painstaking research of an archivist, but not the reaction of a scientist seeking to marshall his material in form to meet problems of society. It is to be hoped that the latter treatment will be more useful to social workers and legislators and less a collection of data for the student of textual facts." Henry Epstein & E. S. Epstein
— + Columbia Law R 39:745 Ap '39 1200w

"This history is all that such a book should be—objective, scholarly, thoroughly documented, provided with summaries at the end of each chapter, and adequately indexed. The volume has established a standard to which histories of public welfare in the still unstudied sections of our country should conform. The second volume will be awaited with eagerness." F. S. Hall
+ Survey 75:230 Jl '39 900w

SCHNEIDER, ELISABETH. Aesthetic motive. 136p $1.75 Macmillan

701 Esthetics 39-19366

"The author discusses the motive which impels men to esthetic creation and esthetic appreciation—in short, the reason for art. With somewhat of a biological and psychological emphasis, she finds this motive in the human craving for unity and synthesis in the face of the miscellaneous confusion and baffling 'otherness' of the world." Sat R of Lit

---

J Philos 36:719 D 21 '39 180w

"As a personal statement it is dignified and intelligent, but lacks the necessary flair and special humor needed to make this sort of discussion interesting to the non-academic public or genuinely suggestive to the student."
New Repub 99:371 Ag 2 '39 50w

Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 29 '39 130w

"The reader . . . will find much that is stimulating and sound in the author's observations on the purpose of art, the significance of the artist's medium, the psychology of the artist and the relation between art and society."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:840 N '39 150w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud). The story of the United States; a biographical history of America. 416p $2.50 Doubleday

920 U.S.—Biography. U.S.—History 38-29036

The history of the United States as set forth in brief biographical sketches of some of its leading statesmen, clergymen, industrialists, soldiers, etc: John Winthrop; Benjamin Franklin; George Washington; Thomas Jefferson; John Jacob Astor; Nathaniel Hawthorne; Brigham Young; William Lloyd Garrison; John Brown; Abraham Lincoln; Ulysses S. Grant; Brigham Young; William Lloyd Garrison; John D. Rockefeller; Theodore Roosevelt; Woodrow Wilson; Jane Addams; Calvin Coolidge; Franklin D. Roosevelt; and many others. Index.

Booklist 35:157 Ja 1 '39

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 60w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 25 '39 550w

Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

SCHOCH, EUGENE PAUL, and FELSING, WILLIAM AUGUSTUS. General chemistry; an introductory course of lessons and exercises in chemistry. 524p il $3.25 (18s) McGraw

540.72 Chemistry 38-16233

"Based on a special text used at the University of Texas for nearly 30 years, this book is perhaps a more rigidly fundamental presentation of general chemistry than any other of the first year college textbooks on the subject. The inorganic material, for example, is presented in two distinct divisions based upon the general types of chemical reactions, i.e., (1) simple reactions in which there is no change of valence and (2) oxidation-reduction reactions. Fundamental principles of each type are stressed 'with just enough descriptive material to furnish a basis for generalizations.' It is intended that the interest of the student will be maintained by frequent remarks and illustrations relative to industrial applications." Chem & Met Eng

"The extensive descriptions of less common elements, particularly the metals, found in many elementary books are absent, but the practical side of the subject and the industrial applications of chemistry have been emphasized whenever possible. An interesting feature of the book is the two well-written chapters devoted to the reactions of ions and their qualitative detection, an insertion which will benefit those students who do not continue in chemistry or whose course of study does not include Qualitative Analysis. . . . The skilled presentation deriving from the authors' long experience, and the innovations in method and arrangement, should win for this text a fair trial and numerous adoptions." A. D. Bliss

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:979 Ap '39 220w

"This book is a departure from the usual general chemistry text and should prove a very effective teacher." R. L. Taylor

+ Chem & Met Eng 45:560 O '38 250w

SCHOLES, PERCY ALFRED. The Oxford companion to music; self-indexed and with a pronouncing glossary. 1091p il $6.50 (21s) Oxford

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians (W) 38-29033

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 18 '39 700w

"The 'Oxford Companion to Music' conceals under its modest title, a vast amount of learning, set out in orderly and scholarly fashion, and designed to provide clear and exact answers to the thousand-and-one questions raised by any inquiring and intelligent amateur of the art. It would be idle to expect to find, even within the compass of nearly eleven hundred large octavo pages of small print, detailed treatises on harmony, counterpoint, singing, the pianoforte, the organ, and so forth. But Dr. Scholes does better. He gives succinct accounts of the fundamentals of the technical side of the art, sufficiently detailed to give the reader a firm grasp of the elements of the subject, and in many instances provides pointers which show where further information may be obtained." A. F.

+ Nature 143:496 Mr 25 '39 500w

"A thorough and abundant system of cross-references has been worked out, and at the end of the book there is a pronouncing glossary. The hundreds of illustrations, in their variety and piquant juxtaposition, enhance the value of the book. There are a number of 'imaginative' or 'synthetic' portraits of outstanding figures in the history of music made by the artist Oswald Barett ('Batt'), who seems to carry it off." H. H. Taubman

+ N Y Times p17 F 19 '39 360w

Pratt p21 spring '39

"The style of the articles is concise and, as the work of a single author, possesses an agreeable unity and personal quality, the latter being especially evident in the anecdotal and antiquarian material with which the volume abounds. In the opinion of musicologists the technical discussions are excellent. A large number of well-qualified authorities and specialists are cited as consultants in the preparation of the material in this volume. . . The Oxford Companion to Music is a dependable, interesting handbook for the student or music lover. In public libraries it should be valuable as a supplement to other works in which American musical biography, institutions, etc., are more comprehensively treated. The Oxford Companion to Music is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:30 Ap '39 900w

Wis Lib Bul 35:198 D '39

SCHOONMAKER, EDWIN DAVIES. Democracy and world dominion. 331p $3 Smith, Richard R.

909.8 Europe—Politics. U.S.—Foreign relations 39-13864

A survey of international politics during the last twenty years in which the author sees England and France with their imperialist ambitions, along with Russia and its Communist philosophy, as the instigators of a new period of international conflict. In a foreword the author says he is not German but an American of Holland Dutch descent.

"To guard against the charge of writing Nazi propaganda, Mr. Schoonmaker goes out of his way to tell us that his ancestors had 'lived in America for more than three hundred years,' which, he thinks, should 'settle the matter.' It seems unfortunate that, with such a background, he should never have learned to accept the American tradition of religious and racial tolerance." E. S. Bates

— + Books p25 N 19 '39 850w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 4 '39 100w

"Mr. Schoonmaker's lengthy discussion of Russia displays neither a knowledge of her history nor a comprehension of the character of the revolution. . . If a refutation of [his] grotesque and pernicious theories were needed, it is amply provided by the developments in Poland and the Baltic countries since the signature of the Soviet-German pact." M. T. Florinsky

— N Y Times p4 D 10 '39 700w

SCHOONMAKER, E. D.—Continued

"The volume represents a type of reasoning which, if taken seriously, would be anything but conducive to peace, national or international. Much of what the author says is harmless enough. . . While the remarks in the first half of this book can be read without annoyance, the remainder is devoted to an extravagant tirade against Jewish communism. . . The author backs up his statements with an array of references and quotations which seem to have been gathered together on the theory that anything in print is valid evidence provided it defends, or can be made to defend, a point of view already taken." A. R.

— + Springf'd Republican p8 My 31 '39 650w

SCHUMAN, FREDERICK LEWIS. Europe on the eve; the crises of diplomacy, 1933-1939. 586p maps $3.50 Knopf [18s Hale, R]

940.5 Europe—Politics (W) 39-27207

Discussion of the history of Europe from the rise of Hitler in 1933 to January, 1939. The author, who is professor of political science at Williams college, analyzes England's position and probable course of action, Germany's plans, the Russian policy, and the position of the middle European nations.

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox

Am Pol Sci R 33:680 Ag '39 850w

"Europe on the Eve is well organized, accurate, well documented, and altogether the best history of the period the reviewer knows. More than this, it is written with a vigor, a courage, and an honesty all too rare in books by academicians. One is not required to agree with Professor Schuman's interpretations of history, and his book would be good history without them; but they are fortunately included and are well worth studying." W. H. Heicher

+ Ann Am Acad 204:189 Jl '39 500w

Booklist 35:250 Ap 1 '39

"The combination of the thoroughgoing, exhaustive scholarship with a thoroughgoing, excoriating fury is rare enough to be exciting in itself. When Professor Schuman turns such a combination upon the last half-dozen years of European diplomacy, the result is at once historical drama in the grand style and a terrible tract for the times, unrelieved in its picture of mendacity, weakness, knavery and imbecility, unmitigated in its proclamation of inevitable disaster." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 Mr 19 '39 2000w

"Professor Schuman's methods are not those of the impartial historian, scrupulously drawing a just balance between the good and the reprehensible in the statecraft of the thirties, but rather those of the prosecuting attorney. . . It is a method of investigation highly prevalent today, which, however ably documented and however tightly packed with facts—and Professor Schuman's work is eminently complete in both respects—leaves one in the end vaguely dissatisfied and wondering if this cold, brilliant detraction omits some warmer quality that is necessary for a complete understanding of the subject." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 7 '39 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 50:2 My '39 650w

Foreign Affairs 17:805 Jl '39 200w

Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 8 '39 300w

" 'Europe on the Eve' can hardly be too highly praised. It should be read by everybody who wishes to know how the present deplorable situation in Europe has come about. Professor Schuman shows by evidence the validity of which cannot be contested, and for which he gives his references in the copious notes at the end of the book, that the big responsibility for the present state of Europe rests on the governments that have successively held office in England and France since 1933. . . The few mistakes or omissions in 'Europe on the Eve' do not detract from the great value of the book." Robert Dell

+ — Nation 148:441 Ap 15 '39 650w

"The book is massive with solid information, brilliantly presented. Seldom is such 'commanding industry' found together with such force and felicity of statement. Some of the quotations from literature are of a deadly appositeness." D. S. Miller

+ New Repub 98:346 Ap 26 '39 900w

"Sensational though his theory is, it cannot be dismissed out of hand. . . But even the painter of this hair-raising picture gets to suspecting, here and there, that it is too bad to be true. . . It is all too neat. . . It is all too simple. . . It is all too unfair. It is all too fantastic." T. R. Ybarra

— + N Y Times p13 My 14 '39 1200w

"If you are going to read one detailed book on our period, perhaps it had better be this one. Illuminating if not cheerful."

+ New Yorker 15:86 Mr 18 '39 120w

"Recounted with an unending succession of pungent phrases and a rare flair for the dramatic. Verbose but constantly stimulating, Schuman paints truth in blackest colors and rushes on to the realm of conjecture beyond. . . No mere reviewer, in the brief compass of a review, can sift the evidence on which cosmic assertions like these rest. Suffice it to say that for almost every point in Professor Schuman's case there is a counter-point. . . Nor is the future course of civilization quite so clearly charted, in this reviewer's opinion, as Professor Schuman believes. History is replete with the pronouncements of Cassandras whose grim forebodings never came true." D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 18 '39 550w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 5 '39 750w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Survey G 28:337 My '39 130w

Time 34:78 S 18 '39 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Jl 15 '39 360w

SCHUMANN, MARY. Strife before dawn. 440p map $2.50 Dial press

(W) 39-31681

A historical novel of the Ohio valley during the years 1764 to 1782. The chief characters are a young Quaker pioneer, Keith Maitland, and the two women who love him, his wife Hope, and Jacqueline Norris, the Virginian belle.

"[Miss] Schumann is a shade too ambitious in the span of years she attempts to cover, especially in those eventful pre-Revolutionary and Revolutionary days. . The factual background, we have no doubt, is conscientiously authentic, and her situations are dramatic in essence." Fred Feldkamp

Books p10 O 8 '39 400w

"The fiction is pleasant, and Miss Schumann's researches are scrupulously detailed but never tedious. The writing is clear and well paced." Richard Rovere

+ New Repub 100:315 O 18 '39 330w

"So far as its historical background is concerned, 'Strife Before Dawn' is good, and based on good material. . . Unfortunately, Miss Schumann, from a literary standpoint, is none too adroit, and the deficiencies of her novel are all the more apparent when one compares it to the definitely comparable books of Kenneth Roberts. Over-factual, stilted and jejune where romance is concerned, 'Strife Before Dawn' sounds too often as if it had been written for bright 12-year olds." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p24 O 15 '39 750w

Sat R of Lit 20:39 O 14 '39 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 29 '39 420w

SCHURZ, WILLIAM LYTLE. The Manila galleon. 453p maps $6 Dutton

382.0946 Merchant marine—Spain. Spain—Colonies. Spain—Commerce. Philippine Islands—Commerce 39-13186

From 1565 to 1815, every year at least one Spanish ship crossed the Pacific from Manila to a port in Mexico, carrying goods from the Orient—especially China silk—and returned with silver Mexican pesos, soon to be established as the predominating currency of the Far East. The story of this commerce, its relations with Spain's imperial ambitions, the difficulties of the crossing, are set forth in this comprehensive volume, the fruit of twenty-seven years' labor. Bibliography. Index.

"The volume is not, as the publishers state, 'with the exception of Barrows' short text book', 'the only historic work on the Spanish period in the Philippines to be written during the American occupation.' Nevertheless, Dr. Schurz is to be congratulated on presenting such an interesting and important contribution." R. R. Hill

+ Am Hist R 45:440 Ja '40 230w

"The book's curiosities are many, and its usefulness to students of Hispano American history will be great." C. J. Finger

+ Books p5 Je 25 '39 900w

Boston Transcript p11 My 26 '39 650w

"This is an unusual book and a rewarding one: ancient ambitions and achievements made clear and vivid, and not without their pertinence of interest for readers today."

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 30 '39 500w

"The story of the Manila galleons must be among the strangest and most romantic of the records of empire. In this book it is competently told. . . Besides utilizing an immense amount of printed matter, Mr. Schurz has dug into the Archivo de Indias at Seville for fresh and welcome information, and written a book not only for the general reader but for the student of economic history also. That being so, it is a pity that the student gets so little help towards using it." Garrett Mattingly

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:13 My 13 '39 650w

SCHWARTZ, DELMORE. In dreams begin responsibilities. 174p $2.50 New directions

811 39-8052

This collection of miscellaneous work by a young American writer includes a long short story, a long philosophical poem based on Coriolanus, a group of lyrics, and a play in prose and verse.

"Any one who has been following the work of Delmore Schwartz will open this collection with a good deal of interest. He will find occasions for delight, and also for disappointment. Here is a versatile young man who believes that the duty of the poet is 'to be useful and to entertain,' and acts upon it, but whose work lacks the intensity found in some writers of lesser range. Concerned with fundamentals, with the problem of identity, of knowledge and belief, haunted by the noise time makes, able to write wittily and movingly, Mr. Schwartz is betrayed by a failure of concentration." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books p21 Mr 5 '39 550w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

Nation 148:353 Mr 25 '39 650w

"Delmore Schwartz's In Dreams Begin Responsibilities is one of those rare first books that oblige an immediate recognition of their genuineness as poetry. Indeed, no first book of this decade in American poetry has been more authoritative or more significant than this one. . . In spite of Mr. Schwartz's exciting virtues as a poet, it would be unwise to deify him too early in his career. The premature deification of Mr. W. H. Auden, with all of its unfortunate effects upon recent British poetry, should warn us against such a proceduce. The most that we should assert—but we should assert this without qualification—is that Delmore Schwartz has made an admirable beginning." G. M. O'Donnell

+ Poetry 54:105 My '39 850w

"The story and the lyrics are completely successful; the long poem is less so. The play is interesting for its ideas and for its beautifully modulated diction, but it fails as a play because it is not conceived in terms of stage speech." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:29 Ap 29 '39 380w

SCHWED, FRED. Wacky, the small boy; il. by Gregor Duncan. 85p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

39-32819

Wilberforce Wallaby, Jr, was nicknamed Wacky. Because he was the smallest of the gang of neighborhood boys Wacky set himself up to tell everybody what to do, and thus make up for his lack of size. That worked until an even smaller boy joined the gang. But it took an illness to teach Wacky just what was what.

"Older people may think because they enjoy this story it must be a book for them. Leave it where the young son of the house may find it, and see. As for the pictures, they have muscles as well as fun; they could move." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 N 12 '39 300w

"This book is remarkably free of the sentimentality, the superficial moralizing and the coy whimsicality which, in one degree or another, mar most of the books discussed in these columns, and especially those designed for the younger age group. If children should by some odd chance not take to Wacky, their parents will certainly enjoy this ordinary, wholly delightful and amazingly real boy who learns his moral lessons only as experience itself would teach them." Ruth Page

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 80w

"Amusing as the story is, there is a specious quality about it. The motives are true enough, and so are the sidelights on boyhood, yet Wacky seems just a little too quick with a pat remark, and the humor is of the adult variety of understatement. Phil Stong does this sort of thing better because he seems to work from the inside out rather than as an interested onlooker." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 D 24 '39 280w

"Extremely funny."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 200w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. African notebook; tr. by Mrs C. E. B. Russell [Eng title: From my African notebook]. 144p il map $2 Holt [5s; 3s 6d Allen, G]

916.7 Kongo. Missions, Medical 39-9669

A volume of reminiscent essays by a noted German medical missionary who has spent many years on the Congo. Contents: On the tracks of Trader Horn; Tales of olden days; Differences between white people and black people; Taboos and magic; Hospital stories and scenes; More stories; Oyembo, the forest schoolmaster—African character; Boys in Europe.

"There's a something I recognized in all these tales. As a parent I've felt an expression of long-suffering, patient control freeze on my face in my most parental moments. So I recognize the expression when I see it. One's sense of humor is dead at such times. And that, I think, is what I've missed in Dr. Schweitzer's notebook. There's not a glimmer of humor, never even a chuckle at the expense of either himself or Europeans in general. Yet how any one can spend years close to Africans without laughing at one's self is hard to understand. There must be something insidious about teaching or helping others less advanced in some ways than ourselves which produces the 'preachy' manner as surely as winter follows summer." M. C. Hubbard

Books p11 Je 11 '39 850w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT—Continued

"This brief volume deserves wide reading not alone for its captivating human interest, but also because it portrays that regard and love for all men which alone can constitute the spirit of the world community which Christians hope shall some day be." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 17:82 Ja '40 300w

New Statesman & Nation 17:260 F 18 '39 100w

"This is a little book, but it is filled with the great kindliness of a missionary who sees Africans as human beings and not merely Christian mortar." H. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 Ap 15 '39 130w

Reviewed by Haniel Long

Survey G 29:40 Ja '40 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 28 '39 440w

Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

SCOTT, FRANCIS REGINALD. Canada today; a study of her national interests and national policy; with a foreword by E. J. Tarr; prepared for the British commonwealth relations conf, 1938; issued under the auspices of the Canadian inst. of int. affairs. 163p maps $2 (6s) Oxford

917.1 Canada. Canada—Politics and government 39-719

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 19 '39 800w

Reviewed by George McLure

New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 180w

"The author has a rare ability to describe and interpret facts. At the same time, by a patient analysis of alternatives, he suggests reasonable solutions of problems. Professor Scott, a member of the National Council of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, makes no secret of his political philosophy in his general approach to Canada's domestic and external problems. . . But his political values in no way prevent his giving a lucid and objective account of 'the most important economic, political and social factors which determine Canada's national interests and outlook . . . and the relations between internal forces and external policy.'" I. F. G. Milner

+ Pacific Affairs 12:96 Mr '39 950w

"It is a brilliant survey, compact, well-documented: one of the best available introductions to Canadian problems." Gregory Vlastos

+ Survey G 28:343 My '39 400w

SCOTT, KATE FRANCES. College course in hygiene; il. by William Dunlop Sargent, Margaret J. Sanders. 232p spiral binding $2.50 Macmillan

613 Hygiene 39-15773

A textbook by an associate professor of hygiene at Smith college. "Part I is devoted to 'Hygiene as It Concerns the Individual'; Part II, 'Hygiene as It Concerns the Group,' deals with the human being's equipment for group living and as part of the race (reproduction) and the group's means of controlling its physical environment in the interests of health." (J Home Econ)

"A balanced and useful text which can be recommended." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1362 D '39 400w

"A clear, well-organized outline of the information needed by young women students for an intelligent appreciation of the functions of the body and ways of maintaining them in health."

+ J Home Econ 31:645 N '39 100w

SCOTT, MRS MARIAN (GALLAGHER). Chautauqua caravan. 310p il $3 Appleton-Century

374.973 Chautauquas 39-9774

Describes the author's experiences traveling the Chautauqua circuit from 1916 to 1927. She and her husband toured from Canada to Mexico, from Carolina to California, giving Shakespearian plays mainly, but at times varying their programs with short plays and music.

Reviewed by Gay MacLaren

Atlantic Je '39 310w

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Engaging and heartening book, heartening because one feels that as long as Americans preserve the hardihood and zest with which these strolling players encountered life, no enemy will ever enslave them. . . As Ilya Tolstoy said—Chautauqua was distinctly American. Read about it and rejoice." A. B. Parsons

+ Books p4 Ap 16 '39 1250w

"Mrs. Scott has an unfortunate weakness for purple passages, and she is frequently banal."

— Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 110w

Christian Century 56:742 Je 7 '39 140w

"It is a well-told personal story, and it has a pointed interest."

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 16 '39 480w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

"Much of the book concerns her Lyceum tours, which, except for conditions of travel, is another story. The result, therefore, is not exclusively a book on Chautauqua, but the autobiography of a Chautauqua trouper. A reader may finish the book without a clear understanding of what made the wheels go around on the circuits or what these annual programs meant to the people in the towns. Yet all the details of tents and personnel are correct and vivid, and there is none of the pose of superiority that frequently mars the writing of some who have tried to put the story into print." J. R. Schultz

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 My 20 '39 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Jl 8 '39 130w

Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

SCOTT, PETER MARKHAM. Wild chorus. pop ed 129p il $10 Scribner [21s Country life]

598.41 Geese

"[This work] deals chiefly with the behavior of old world species of geese which the author watched from an abandoned lighthouse on a broad coastal marsh in the eastern part of England, in Hungary, and farther on into Persia. Many of the species described are allied to our American geese; some are new to us." Boston Transcript

---

"In writing his book Mr. Scott brings to bear on it the mind of an ornithologist, the proclivities of a hunter, and the eye of an artist, and he tells a fascinating story. He writes in a simple style, but so exact is his choice of words and phrases that he almost takes us with him on his excursions. . . We catch his enthusiasm and his love for the ducks and geese, the wildest of birds." W. M. Tyler

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 250w

"Although the pictures are the main part of the book, it must not be thought that Mr. Scott is not a writer as well. His adventures in Westmorland, North Lancashire, and the Solway, his journeys in Hungary, Rumania, and the Caspian in search of his beloved geese, his lighthouse on the east coast where many species live in comfortable captivity—all these are described in a graphic way which alone would make the book an acquisition." A. W. Boyd

+ Manchester Guardian sup xiii D 1 '39 290w

SCOTT BLAIR, GEORGE WILLIAM. Introduction to industrial rheology; with foreword by Eugene C. Bingham. 143p il $2.25 Blakiston [7s 6d Churchill]

660 Rheology. Chemistry, Technical. Viscosity 40-1080

"As the term 'rheology' has not previously appeared in the title of a book, it may be described briefly as the study of the laws of flow. . . The book is based on a series of lectures which leads to as non-mathematical and simple a treatment as possible with so complicated a subject." Ind & Eng Chem

"The book is very valuable in coordinating the great variety of theories advanced by different experimenters, and compresses a vast amount of information into the pages of the small book. If, as frequently happens, the reader longs for more, means for satisfying his wants are indicated by the bibliography at the end of each chapter." W. H. Herschel

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:651 D 10 '38 350w

"The book certainly fills a gap in the literature of physics." E. Hatschek

+ J Phys Chem 43:395 Mr '39 320w

"The book should be of value to industrial chemists faced with problems of anomalous viscosity, the number of which increases every day." A. S. C. L.

+ Nature 144:197 Jl 29 '39 200w

" 'The lay reader will discover many interesting aspects of flow and deformation phenomena that are typical of industrial processes, particularly as regards the rheological properties of food materials, Scott-Blair's field of research. The industrial rheologist will find little of practical importance; there are no tables of data and conversion factors, and little criticism of experimental techniques and methods.' "

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 24:12 Ja '39

SCOTT MONCRIEFF, GEORGE. The Lowlands of Scotland. (English countryside ser) 120p il maps $3.50 Scribner [8s 6d Batsford]

914.1 Scotland—Description and travel 40-1337

Description of lowland Scotland, which takes in Galloway, the Border counties, Strathclyde, the Lothians, and east Scotland up to the Moray Firth. The author avoids the big cities, and devotes attention to the small towns, villages and countryside, and comments on the social and agricultural ills of this section of Scotland. Index.

Books p15 Ja 14 '40 100w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 110w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 9 '39 700w

"To the detail of the countryside [the author] brings a lively eye and a happy power of description. It is a big field to cover, yet he finds room to express his own personality, whether in his associations with a particular scene or in such matters as his highly disputable views of the doctrine of Adam Smith. One feels that as a fellow-traveller he would keep good converse going about a land he knows and loves, and that is not an easy impression to convey in a book which to be useful must be factual as well as readable. The illustrations are remarkable for their number and beauty."

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 1 '39 260w

"This book is quite superbly illustrated. It is said that Mr. Scott-Moncrieff knows the Lowlands as well as any man alive. I should like to amplify that testimonial by adding that he has the power to communicate his knowledge to others." Christopher St John

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:996 Je 24 '39 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup iii Jl 15 '39 80w

SCUDDER, LAWRENCE WILLIAMS. Accountancy as a career. 161p $1.50 Funk

657 Accounting (W) 40-1242

Popular handbook on the history, theory and practise of accounting. Bibliography.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ja 14 '40 40w

Boston Transcript p5 D 30 '39 10w

SCUDDER, TOWNSEND. Jane Welsh Carlyle. 406p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Carlyle, Jane Baillie (Welsh) (Mrs Thomas Carlyle) (W) 39-10975

In this biographical study of the Carlyles the emphasis is on Jane, and the domestic side of their lives. Beginning at the time of their marriage the book covers in detail all the familiar stories of the establishments in Scotland and England, and ends with Jane's tragic death. Bibliographical note. Index.

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Mr. Scudder's narrative ignores the richly revealing controversial background of which, one feels, there should be at least some awareness apparent even in a book dealing with the Carlyles from the standpoint of their contemporaneity. He tells a simplified and essentially anecdotal story. His object is to show Jane Carlyle as a brilliant and charming hostess and also as the devoted, managing and helpful wife to Carlyle in his upward climb. But Mrs. Carlyle was a complex creature, the fascination of whose character lies in its contradictions. . . No doubt these darker aspects are illustrated to some extent in the course of this brimming narrative, but the emphasis is on the sunny side." C. G. Stillman

Books p4 My 14 '39 1050w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Je 10 '39 550w

"Mr. Scudder's task was worth doing and he has performed it with skill and tact. His book is a joy in itself no less than a revelation at first hand of the social aspects of a great literary era." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 149:508 Jl '39 500w

"An outstanding piece of creative biography." M. E. Scott

+ Christian Century 56:951 Ag 2 '39 390w

"To an authentic record Mr. Scudder has attempted to impart something of the liveliness and verisimilitude and 'atmosphere' which we associate with fiction. To this extent his technique resembles that of the novelist. He does not probe very profoundly and there are psychological aspects of the problem of the Carlyles upon which he does not touch at all. But if his portrait lacks depth of perspective, it has a generous breadth." S. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '39 900w

"Present-day readers will find Jane Welsh Carlyle, as her friends found her, a woman well worth knowing." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 149:200 Ag 19 '39 500w

New Repub 99:112 My 31 '39 30w

"A wholly delightful book which will make new friends for one of the heroines of life's deeper tragedies." Frances Winwar

+ N Y Times p3 My 14 '39 1200w

New Yorker 15:102 My 13 '39 50w

"The story is focussed steadily on Mrs. Carlyle; even the tone of the narrative has at times an uncanny feminine ring. Real skill is shown in the firm subordination of literary incident to the needs of the narrative—Emerson's visit in 1833, the loss of the first volume of the 'French Revolution'; and admirable control is evident in the handling of Carlyle's relations with Lady Ashburton. It is possible to wonder at certain omissions. The compression of the Carlyles' curious five-year courtship into one short chapter is understandable in view of the general proportions of the book, but it will be regretted by many readers. . . While the picture as a whole does no violence to facts, it remains, with all its admirable unity, a portrait with many highlights but with inadequate shadows." C. F. Harrold

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:6 My 13 '39 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 480w

Time 33:94 My 22 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

SCUDDER, VIDA DUTTON. The privilege of age; essays secular and spiritual. 319p $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Dent]

814 39-15831

A collection of previously published essays, "reactions to a changing world from 1913 to 1939." Contents: The privilege of age; Seed-vessel time; Plato as a novelist; Interchange: Tagore and his Western kin; A little tour in the mind of Lenin; A pedagogic sunset; The college girl's mind; Academic freedom; Tensions and divisions; Liberty: satisfaction, or nuisance? The doubting pacifist; Concerning possessions; Two Franciscan studies; Mysticism and social passion; Work: a lost ideal; Thanksgiving in hard times; The challenge to the church; The art of corporate adoration; Social teachings of the Christian year; The cross in utopia.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic O '39 500w

"One's first, and perhaps last, impression of these pages is that of the amazing variety of Miss Scudder's interests and the encompassing range of her sympathies. Her field, to use the academic phrase, is literature, as witness her brilliant essay on 'Plato as a Novelist'; but her passion for current events in the world at large is as quick as that of any journalist." J. H. Holmes

\+ Books p10 Jl 2 '39 700w

"Miss Scudder need not have pleaded the privilege of age to excuse the publication of these collected essays and articles which have appeared in magazines during the past twenty-five years. They are timeless and well deserve such perpetuity as reprinting and solid binding can give them."

\+ Christian Century 56:975 Ag 9 '39 140w

"Always [the book] has individual savor with its sincerity, and a mellow human touch in its zeal. Miss Scudder always breaks away from formulae. Her writing has a spicy fragrance that has flowered from a soil of culture and humanistic thought; and one can go through her book gleaning wisdom in sentences that are like maxims, as well as in the study of each subject as a whole."

\+ N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '39 470w

"Since the publication of her first work in the mythically gay nineties, Miss Scudder has always been a force in progressive education and liberal thinking, at the same time that a Quaker-like serenity has preserved her from the bitterness of latter-day radicalism. These selected contemplative essays will be welcomed by her many admirers." G. G.

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 1 '39 240w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 28 '39 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p581 O 7 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

SCUDI, MRS ABBIE (TURNER). The Sacheverell affair. 170p $2.25 Columbia univ. press [9s King]

B or 92 Sacheverell, Henry 39-20004

A study of a politico-religious controversy of the early eighteenth century. "The vagaries of politics made Henry Sacheverell the symbol of the final attack which the High Church Tories attempted upon the concept of comprehension and toleration of Dissent which the Revolution of 1688 had transformed from theory into law. The Low Churchmen and the Whigs made his sermons the focus of their counter attack. They impeached him, not so much because his preaching or his ideas were in themselves dangerous, but rather because they provided an opportunity to bring in the open the subversive Tory assault on the principles of the Revolution and the basic freedom they entailed." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

"The book skillfully abstracts and condenses the long published record of the impeachment and the innumerable pamphlets written on both sides. It is rich in facts and citations of significant current opinion. . . . It cannot be said, however, that the volume is equally rich in background or interpretation. Dr. Scudi does not bring to life the actors of this historical drama, nor does she successfully integrate this last flashy episode with the long series of stirring events stretching back to the days of Elizabeth." D. A. Roberts

\+ — Books p26 N 19 '39 430w

"Students of constitutional, political and ecclesiastical history will welcome the rounded picture of all aspects of this famous (or infamous) affair." S. J. Light

\+ Christian Century 56:1205 O 4 '39 700w

SEABURY, DAVID. See yourself as others see you. (Whittlesey house publication) 354p $2.50 (10s 6d) McGraw

137.8 Personality. Psychoanalysis
(W) 39-12125

Collection of questions and tests, carefully graded by the author, which can be worked out by the individual, in an attempt to discover his own personality problems. Glossary.

Books p10 Ag 27 '39 80w

"Doctors of the mind should be as common as doctors of the body. Pending the coming of that day we view with charity tinged with skepticism attempts to place the techniques of psychoanalysis in the hands of the layman."

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 110w

"The ingenious part of it is that the questions seem as nearly foolproof as a smart psychologist can make them. Knowing that every one exaggerates his virtues and faults, Mr. Seabury has put cleverly concealed equalizers into the tests to make the total score come out about right. What to do, once the facts of your self-analysis lie before you, is not the business of this volume. Probably you'll have enough fun out of it not to care; for it has all the perennial appeal of quizzes, plus the satisfaction of telling about your operations with no one to interrupt." M. L. Elting

\+ Forum 101:v Je '39 200w

SEABURY, DAVID, and UHLER, ALFRED M. How to get things done. 278p $2 Messner

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Success
(W) 38-18520

Discussions on some of the problems of modern life. The theme of the book is that you can accomplish your purpose if you plan well. Partial contents: Use your wits; The will to skill; Why co-operation pays; Getting along with others; Money and environment; That matter of health; Your attitude in work; The life program.

"This book should be useful to those who wish to learn to adjust themselves better to their environment and to accomplish things with less effort. Although written for the general reader, it should be of particular value to the busy executive who must learn to use his time most effectively, or to the salesman who must be his own self-starter. It might also be recommended to persons who have not learned to cooperate with the business group or who seem unable to direct their talents effectively." H. E. Niles

\+ Management R 28:104 Mr '39 650w

Reviewed by Lovell Thompson
Sat R of Lit 18:17 Ag 6 '38 600w

SEAGER, ALLAN. They worked for a better world; il. by Theodore Haupt. (Peoples lib) 123p 60c Macmillan

920 Williams, Roger. Paine, Thomas. Emerson, Ralph Waldo. Stanton, Mrs Elizabeth (Cady). Bellamy, Edward (W) 39-27270

Short inspirational biographies of five famous Americans, each of whom "worked for a better world." Contents: Roger Williams; Thomas Paine; Ralph Waldo Emerson; Elizabeth Cady Stanton; Edward Bellamy.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

"Undistinguished but interesting biographical sketches." E. S. Bates
Books p8 Je 11 '39 100w

"The style is rather painfully simple, but since it is written for the masses, this is what one must expect. The chances are that it will never be read by the masses. . . Somehow there is no depth to Seager's characterizations."
— Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 110w
Christian Century 56:516 Ap 19 '39 40w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson
New Repub 100:276 O 11 '39 120w
Pratt p28 summer '39

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 27 '39 650w (Review of series)
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 450w
Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

SEARS, MINNIE EARL, ed. List of subject headings for small libraries; including Practical suggestions for the beginner in subject heading work; 4th ed. rev. with the addition of decimal classification numbers by Isabel Stevenson Monro. 516p $2.75 Wilson, H.W.

025.3 Cataloging. Subject headings (W)

"This edition differs from the other three in the inclusion of the Dewey Decimal classification numbers which have been worked out in general in accordance with the adaptation used in the Standard Catalog for Public Libraries. The Cumulative Book Index and the [revision] Editor's own experience have been the basis in the selection of new subject headings and the discarding of obsolete ones. One side of each page has been left blank for individual notes." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1923.

Booklist 36:14 S '39

"Very practical and helpful for bringing about uniformity in the smaller library catalog." Lena Ruppert
+ Library J 64:702 S 15 '39 70w

SEARS, PAUL BIGELOW. Who are these Americans? (Peoples lib) 116p il 60c Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American (W) 39-27404

In this small volume, the author of Deserts on the March (Book Review Digest, 1935, 1936) attempts to explain "what an American is, how the American people came into being, and how we as a people may be improved in the years to come. And he tells what America means as a source of food and clothing, not forgetting what it may mean in the future." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 35:310 My 15 '39

" 'Who Are These Americans?' . . . will scarcely increase the reputation of the author of 'Deserts on the March.' Nevertheless, it is written in a chatty informal manner which does enable him to administer painlessly a great deal of sound scientific information. Without discussing 'racialism' directly, he makes it appear quite as ridiculous as it really is in such a melting pot of all nations as this America." E. S. Bates
+ — Books p8 Je 11 '39 100w
Christian Century 56:644 My 17 '39 50w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:4 Jl '39 400w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson
New Repub 100:276 O 11 '39 120w
N Y Times p3 Ap 30 '39 410w

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 27 '39 650w (Review of series)
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 27 '39 350w
Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

SEASHORE, CARL EMIL. Psychology of music. 408p $4 (24s) McGraw

780.1 Music—Psychology 38-19422

"The purpose of this book is to stimulate and guide the student of music in scientific observation and reasoning about his art. It is, therefore, not a summary of all the known facts on any subject, but rather a series of flashes illustrating the scientific approach from as many angles as space and material permit in an elementary textbook. Since the book is written for beginners, no technical description of apparatus or method is given except in most elementary general principles. Material for the student to work upon is, however, furnished abundantly." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Under the hands of a competent and informed instructor, the book may be used to great profit with students having some slight acquaintance with the first principles of psychology. Its extended dissection of performance scores, alone, should yield the student some exciting knowledge and understanding of the possibilities of scientific investigations into the realm of music." J. I. Lacey
Am J Psychol 52:644 O '39 550w
Booklist 35:21 S 15 '38
Nature 143:427 Mr 11 '39 200w

SEATON, GEORGE W. What to see and do in Mexico; how to get the most out of your trip. 351p il map $3.50 Prentice-Hall

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel (W) 39-4991

Tourist guidebook informing travelers how to enjoy a trip to Mexico. After an introduction the book is divided into nine tourist zones: Mexico City and points nearby; The Pan-American highway; The Veracruz gateway; Michoacan; The Guadalajara district; The road to Acapulco; Oaxaca; Yucatan; The Isthmus of Tehuantepec. About each of these the author gives suggestions for sight-seeing, hotels, shops, and local specialties. Index.

Booklist 35:250 Ap 1 '39

"There is a good deal of advice on clothing, customs regulations, luggage and money, all of it sound, and the photographic illustrations are exceptionally good. In general the author has done everything possible in a book of the sort to make it useful to the reader for whom he has designed it, which is to say the average tourist as Mr. Seaton sees him. Nevertheless, a good many people are likely to be annoyed by his bland assumption that all his readers are average—whatever that may mean—and by his constant repetition of such phrases as 'You should.' 'You must.' 'You will find.' " J. H. Jackson
+ — Books p15 Ap 23 '39 400w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '39 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"This useful book is engagingly described by its author as 'opinionated and selective'; and therein lies its value. . . It is clear, comprehensive, well arranged, enthusiastic yet frank; in short, it is a guide book of noteworthy excellence, and its author's 'opinions' are worthy of the traveler's great respect and gratitude."
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 12 '39 290w

SEATON, GEORGE W. What to see and do in Scandinavia. 435p il maps $3.50 Prentice-Hall

914.8 Scandinavia—Description and travel (W) 39-27606

"How to get the most out of your trip to Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Iceland, Finland, and the North Cape." (Subtitle) In his Foreword the author says: "I am an enthusiast on Scandinavian travel, and I hope that enough of my enthusiasm will shine through the dry details of this handbook to infect you, too. For

SEATON, G. W.—Continued
if it does, you will go to Scandinavia, and you will have a good time there."

Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39
Books p13 Jl 23 '39 180w

"Mr. Seaton makes no attempt to interpret the countries covered or to publicize them. He assumes that the reader has already decided to go and limits his book to the more practical aspects of the trip."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 22 '39 220w

"Mr. Seaton's volume is a streamlined bus to carry as many passengers as want to go all over Scandinavia accompanied by a clearly enunciating guide-conductor." Agnes Rothery
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ag 12 '39 270w

SECRIST, HORACE. National bank failures and non-failures; an autopsy and diagnosis. 309p $4.50 Principia

332.1 Banks and banking—U.S. 38-31420

"This volume is a study of the life-histories of 741 national banks which failed in the years 1925 to 1932, compared with a similar group of banks which did not fail during the same period. The data on the operating conditions of the latter group were used as standards of reference, or 'controls,' for comparison with the record of the unsuccessful banks before failure. The treatment is essentially statistical with little or no mention of the non-quantitative aspects of bank operation." Am Econ R

Reviewed by C. C. Carpenter
Am Econ R 29:181 Mr '39 360w

"Dr. Secrist's painstaking work and careful analysis of bank failures has blazed the trail for further scientific investigations in this field, and should definitely point the way to better banking practices in this country." Lucile Bagwell
+ Ann Am Acad 202:225 Mr '39 500w

Reviewed by Homer Jones
J Pol Econ 47:879 D '39 500w

SEDGWICK, HENRY DWIGHT. Vienna; the biography of a bygone city. 336p il $3.75 Bobbs

943.61 Vienna—History. Vienna—Intellectual life 39-11070

A history of the city of Vienna from its beginnings in medieval times, down to March, 1938. Brief bibliography. Index.

"If Mr. Sedgwick disappoints us in the early part of his book by telling us less of Vienna, and perhaps too much of the celebrities who inhabited this city, it must be remembered that Vienna herself had to be formed before she could put her stamp on her citizens. It is the latter part of the book that will be most appreciated by every lover of Austria. . . Mr. Sedgwick has not escaped Vienna's magic spell: He is more than a chronicler, more than an admirer; he is deeply in love with this city of which he writes. He loves her with all her qualities and all her shortcomings, and it is his love of the city and his deep and despairing sorrow at the cruel fate that has befallen her that will recommend the book." Ursula Wasserman
+ — Books p9 My 14 '39 550w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 120w
Christian Century 56:880 Jl 12 '39 170w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra
N Y Times p23 Ap 30 '39 900w

"The tone is gossipy rather than solidly historical and makes for entertaining, if also saddening, reading."
New Yorker 15:123 Ap 29 '39 30w

"This is no formal and footnoted history of municipal administration or imperial politics, but a gracious, digressive, and admiring tribute to a magnificent city and to the countless statesmen and artists whom it has sheltered. . . One constantly wishes that Mr. Sedgwick could have touched upon some of the more prosaic problems of Vienna and upon the life of the humbler folk outside the Hapsburg court, but realizes that it is difficult enough to mention only the high points in seven or eight centuries in the life of an imperial capital." J. F. G.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 20 '39 370w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 850w

SEDGWICK, SARAH CABOT, and MARQUAND, MRS CHRISTINA (SEDGWICK). Stockbridge, 1739-1939; foreword by Rachel Field. ltd ed 306p il map $2.75 Bicentennial bk. committee, Stockbridge, Mass. [2d ed $2.75 Baker & Taylor]

974.41 Stockbridge, Massachusetts 39-25736

A history of the town of Stockbridge in the Berkshires. "Although for the past 50 years Stockbridge has been known to the outside world only as a summer resort, it provided in its early life, the scene for many familiar events in American history. The authors have given these events the detailed attention which they deserve." (Boston Transcript)

"A volume which does the town admirable justice. There may be an occasional confusion or omission or lack of emphasis, but on the whole [the authors] have made a more than readable book, interesting to both local inhabitants and strangers. Their account of the early years of the town is particularly good." Theodore Spencer
+ Atlantic Ja '40 280w

"It is only when they come to their epilogue, the story of the last generation and the present, that the authors slip. Writing about the Symphonic Festival, their style degenerates into Chamber of Commerce pamphleteering, and the current problems of motor transportation, Irish Catholicism in town and school government, river pollution, and so on, are so lightly touched upon, if at all, that the transition from a rich past to a troubled present is but feebly made. However, in spite of that failure, this town history, like the town, remains unique and a contribution to an understanding of America." W. P. Eaton
+ — Books p13 S 17 '39 650w

"It is a pleasure to take up this history of Stockbridge and to find in it both a mature style and a breadth of historical background." E. S. Morgan
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 7 '39 220w

N Y Times p33 O 29 '39 550w

"Fortunate in many ways, the town must count itself fortunate in its present chroniclers, who offer a spirited and engaging narrative, told with sympathy, and art and, luckily, with detachment."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 1000w

SEELEY, MABEL. The Crying Sisters. 292p $2 Doubleday

39-27931

Mystery story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 O 22 '39 160w

"Mabel Seeley is a master at creating shivery atmosphere. In her latest . . . she quite outdoes not only herself but most of her contemporaries in the spook business." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 50w

" 'The Crying Sisters' is the Crime Club selection for this month, and it is an excellent mystery novel of the 'atmospheric' type. The story is involved, and sometimes it moves slowly. But it holds its interest from the beginning as it rises in crescendo toward climax." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p22 O 8 '39 200w

"Beautifully told by a writer who is expert at finding horror in commonplace settings. Recommended for highest honors."
+ New Yorker 15:80 O 7 '39 50w

"Mystery-melodrama adroitly handled, with killer's surprising identity revealed in as spectacular a climax as you'll meet in moons. Grand."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 O 7 '39 40w
Time 34:84 N 6 '39 30w

SEELY, CHARLES SHERLOCK. Russia and the approach of Armageddon; an estimate of the world political situation. 206p $2 Dorrance

947.084 Russia. Communism—Russia. World politics 39-7873

"Lieut-Comdr Charles S. Seely, United States navy, retired, has engaged in extensive travels, both officially and unofficially. He is a keen observer, but has a professional slant on many things, which must be taken into consideration when reading his book. . . Traveling through Russia, after his retirement, he sought out those things which are not seen, as a rule, by ordinary observers and travelers. His official status helped him in finding the unusual. From many novel angles he discusses the government, people, farming, religion and other phases of life in the largest communistic country in the world. Many of his opinions are at direct variance with the usually accepted idea of Russia. This is especially true as regards religion, which Comdr Seely describes as far from being persecuted by the Communists." Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by C. L. Willard, Jr.
Churchman 153:18 Jl '39 270w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 10 '39 300w

SEIDMAN, JACOB STEWART. Legislative history of federal income tax laws, 1938-1861. 1166p $10 Prentice-Hall

336.24 Income tax 39-4633

"Though lawyers have been faced with problems of the construction of the Revenue Acts for many years, the most important sources for handling such questions, the Committee Reports, have been very difficult to find, and sometimes almost unobtainable. The present volume is a compendious attempt to fill this gap. The author has undertaken to make available the text of the Committee Reports and of discussions on the floor of Congress relating to all of the income tax provisions of the Revenue Acts from 1861 to the present time." Harvard Law R

"The present volume is really an indispensable tool to any lawyer much concerned with problems of federal income taxation, and of course to any well-equipped law library." Roswell Magill
+ Columbia Law R 39:741 Ap '39 700w

"There can be no doubt that the book is a step forward. . . It should be pointed out, however, that the present volume is not complete. Not only does it omit entirely the material on estate, gift, and miscellaneous taxes but there is much material bearing on the construction of the income tax sections to which it makes no reference. Thus, the important statement of Dr. Adams on the Revenue Act of 1921 does not appear here. No reference is made to the Gregg statement on the 1924 Act. . . The final story on the legislative history of the Revenue Acts will not be told until Mr. Fox's compilations can be made more readily available." E. N. Griswold
Harvard Law R 52:718 F '39 380w

SEIFERT, ADELE. Deeds ill done. 253p $2 Mill

39-12579

Detective story.

"A better-than-average puzzle of love, jealousy, greed and other human weaknesses." Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 Je 4 '39 80w

" 'Deeds Ill Done' is hardly worth reading unless you have a lot of time on your hands and want a little light mental exercise." Marian Wiggin
— Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 90w

"The story is, in general, well told, although one or two loose ends are left dangling." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p12 My 28 '39 130w

"Sensible, well-constructed job, with a solution that is entirely plausible."
+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 3 '39 50w

"Better as character-study of group of nice people overtaken by tragedy than as mystery. Detecting is unobtrusive but adequate."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 27 '39 40w

SEIFERT, ADELE. Shadows tonight. 273p $2 Mill

39-29960

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p24 N 19 '39 70w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 40w

"The story is well worked out and presents a baffling problem." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p28 N 5 '39 160w
New Yorker 15:88 N 4 '39 30w
Sat R of Lit 21:18 O 28 '39 40w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). A great day. 255p $2.50 Dodd

(W) 39-23292

Steve Blair had started as a drug store clerk and had built up, on the basis of a little knowledge of drugs and a great knowledge of people, a huge business as a manufacturer of patent medicines. With flashbacks over twenty years or more the story tells of one day in his life, the day he opens a new building, learns his daughter is going to marry one of a despised profession—a doctor, that his youngest son will die as the result of infantile paralysis, and finally that his eldest son has committed suicide rather than enter his father's business.

" 'A Great Day' is a bitter indictment of the inner workings of a drug factory that cunningly sidesteps the intent of the law and reaps gigantic profits by shrewd promotion and evasive claims. It exposes the racket none the less effectively for being packaged as fiction." Lisle Bell
+ Books p12 O 15 '39 420w

"To the critic Miss Seifert has slighted her job. She's made it too simple and too brief. The story is patterned and lacks subtlety and undercurrent. And she telegraphs her punches. But they are good roundhouse punches and the story is both honest and readable all the way through. And because of its plain direct honesty (in novel form) it deserves a hearing. The tale is not up to its tremendous theme. But it is a worth-while attempt toward something of great importance." F. T. Marsh
+ — N Y Times p7 S 24 '39 700w

"One suspects that Elizabeth Seifert was more interested in her exposé of the evils of 'patent remedies' than in her story. She writes freshly and with vigor of the human guinea pig industry, but she is content when it comes to plot and characterization to deal with the ready-made and theatrical." Gladys Graham
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 D 30 '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 360w

SEIGNOBOSC, FRANCOISE (FRANCOISE, pseud). Gay A B C. [55p] il $1.50 (5s) Scribner 39-30537

"The A B C Book is a gay, colorful first book, uniform with this artist's 'Gay Mother Goose' of last year. There is a story with each letter from A is for Apple to Z is for Zoo with twenty-six jolly pictures of all sorts of things little people like." Christian Science Monitor

"Alphabets for babies are back in fashion: this one will please them now and not hurt them later. It may even help them later with telephone books." M. L. Becker
Books p14 N 12 '39 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '39 50w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 10w

"The text of this attractive alphabet book with pictures in French pink and blue is easy for a beginner to read." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:379 N '39 30w

"This is a gay book, gay in color and gay and sprightly in text. It has a double appeal. The very young child will like the pictures. . . For children just beginning to read, the text will be inviting, for it is well printed and the words are familiar and have a pleasing repetition. Recommended for nursery schools and for children in kindergarten and first grade." M. F. Potter
+ Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 90w

"Though the pictures are somewhat too conscientiously naive and prettily pastel, this alphabet has the great merit of having letters which stand for things a child likes and is familiar with. 'I' is for Indian, not Ibis; 'J' is for Jam, instead of Jaguar; 'S' is for Snowman, and 'V' is for Valentine." K. S. W.
+ — New Yorker 15:86 N 25 '39 40w

SELBY, JOHN. Sam. 346p $2.50 Farrar
(W) 39-27879

Story of the career of a mid-western American "rugged individualist." In the late 1890s Sam Larson won a dying newspaper at a poker game, and on the basis of that paper in the years that followed he managed to build a fortune and an empire.

"Mr. Selby, like all newspaper men, has a good eye, but it sees only the surface. Just the same, his book should sell well, and that is something." E. B. Garside
— + Atlantic D '39 300w
Booklist 36:88 N 1 '39

"If all of John Selby's book were as excellent as his characterization of Sam this would be a novel of towering stature. But Sam stands alone in the brazen light of his success and the rest of the characters of the book dwindle in the grotesque shadows he throws." Rose Feld
+ — Books p5 O 22 '39 750w

" 'Sam' by John Selby was sufficiently fresh and original to win the American prize in the 1939 all-nations competition; it has enough vigor and essential Americanism to recommend it to the reader who looks for such qualities rather than subtlety and finished workmanship." E. B. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 310w

"Mr. Selby is so familiar with his material, so detached and honest, that his book never becomes an exposure, and Sam holds our interest. As an impression of a newspaper office, and of the relations between this paper, politics and the public; as a revelation of almost impersonal ruthlessness and a genius for divining future developments and profiting by them; as a general picture of the physical effect of a growing city, 'Sam' is a very good first novel." N. J. E.
+ Canadian Forum 19:330 Ja '40 500w
Nation 149:474 O 28 '39 100w

"A vigorous, alertly fashioned novel, fresh in some parts, usually interesting, very well put together. . . Sam and his associates in business are alive and credible. . . The wife and the lover are banal to the point of deadliness and they weight the book with unassimilated characters." Robert Van Gelder
+ — N Y Times p22 O 22 '39 450w
New Yorker 15:93 O 21 '39 60w

"John Selby has created a wonderfully and horribly detailed portrait of Sam. One believes in the relentless honesty of the study, senses the strange, deflected energy of the character, is repelled by his gross appetites and his intellectual perversities. And still one thing keeps Sam from being as impressive as he might be: he never grows or changes. On the final page he is no better and no worse than he had been on the first." James Gray
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 4 '39 450w
Time 34:72 O 30 '39 50w

SELDES, GEORGE. The Catholic crisis. 357p $3 Messner
282 Roman Catholic church in the U.S. Church and state. Roman Catholic church —Foreign relations. Fascism (W) 39-32149

"The war between the reactionaries and the progressives in the world of nations has now become a critical issue within the ranks of the Roman Catholic Church in America today. In this book, The Catholic Crisis, Mr. Seldes states the issue as between Fascism and Democracy and not, as currently supposed, between Communism and Democracy. . . . 'The way out of the Catholic crisis', says Mr. Seldes, 'lies largely with the liberal minded Catholics of America because America is the only country left in which the opponents of Fascism have the "liberty and courage to force the issue." ' " (Churchman) Index.

"Mr. Seldes is colorful and piquant enough when dealing with other European states which have presented the Vatican with moral issues, but it is improbable that he wishes his comments to be mistaken for history. His remarks deserve attention as interesting points of view well presented. The fact remains, however, that one must prefer to see complex situations dealt with in a spirit of deference for every fact." G. N. Shuster
+ — Books p12 Ja 21 '40 1100w

"The study is a serious, courageous and even daring presentation of the attitude and practice of the Roman Catholic hierarchy with reference to modern life. . . This discussion may become the novissimum testamentum of the rapidly growing American anti-Catholic reaction. The American hierarchy will probably punish the author by ignoring his indictment. Americans desirous of preserving in practice the ideal of separation of church and state will discover 'instances' in the index." C. H. Moehlman
Christian Century 57:17 Ja 3 '40 750w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson
Churchman 154:19 Ja 1 '40 250w

"I should like to suggest to Mr Seldes that he go over his book very carefully, removing from it first of all what is merely biased, what is rumor and what is misstatement. That would mean a good deal of cutting. But if after that had been done, he were to diagnose the real faults that remain not as crimes against 'democracy' (for literally everybody these days is guilty of assaults upon democracy) but as deviations from the law which from the beginning has been the ordinance of the Catholic life, there would be a different story to tell. If that were well done, we should have a regard for his book which is now impossible." G. N. Shuster
Commonweal 31:228 D 29 '39 850w

"For those able to read between the lines and evaluate critically the most obvious and harmless-sounding statements, I most heartily commend The Catholic Crisis. Though it lacks some of the objectivity of his other book on the Mother Church, The Vatican, this new effort, nevertheless, is marked by commendable restraint of the author's prejudices." L. B. Bloch

+ — Living Age 357:493 Ja '40 700w

"Seldes is not a Catholic-baiter. He has written no one-sided attack. He is generous in his presentation of what Catholics, cleric and lay, are doing on the left as well as the right. His earlier 'The Vatican—Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow' showed that he could handle a Catholic subject temperately and fairly; it became a Catholic Book-of-the-Month selection. This one deserves to be, if only to give progressive Catholics a picture of what liberals of their faith are doing." I. F. Stone

+ Nation 150:49 Ja 13 '40 550w

"It is a pity that this book should have been written before the Berlin-Moscow agreement. Mr. Seldes writes from the point of view of one who sees a worldwide struggle between fascism and democracy. In that struggle his sympathies are with the latter, and with all who profess allegiance to democracy, no matter how suspect their professions may be. From the Catholic point of view, the struggle is between totalitarian Statism and Christianity. To the Church both fascism and communism are different forms of the same thing, and both are opposed to Catholic doctrine. . . If Mr. Seldes could have acquired this point of view in regard to the crisis—as he could have hardly failed to do if he had begun to write some months later—he would have spoken with more understanding and sympathy, and with more relevance. It is difficult to discuss a crisis intelligently when you misapprehend its nature." Mason Wade

New Repub 102:91 Ja 15 '40 900w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p9 D 17 '39 750w

"This new book by George Seldes is well documented and should be read by every student of present-day affairs; even if he disagree with its conclusions as much as I do, he would have to pay careful attention to its factual material. American readers will be especially interested in the chapter about Father Coughlin; it is, if I am not mistaken, the first complete picture of the 'Radio Priest of Royal Oak.' . . The book is not limited to American problems. In a sense it may be called 'Inside Catholic Europe' as well. . . The book is valuable as a collection of evidence for the strength of the Church which can embrace so many opposing temporal ideas without endangering its spiritual unity." Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ja 13 '40 900w

SELIGMANN, HERBERT JACOB. Race against man; introd. by Franz Boas. 248p $2.75 Putnam

572 Race. Race problems (W) 39-10644

A summary of the scientific findings on the subject of race. Contents: Man studies man today; Nordidiocy or rampant racism; What is a race? Origins of contemporary man; Heredity as fate; Miscegenation and hybrids; Who made the world's culture? Negroes and "the race problem;" The Jew and anti-semitism; The stranger among us; Man's hope and faith. Index.

Reviewed by John Gillin

Am Soc R 4:747 O '39 120w

Booklist 36:39 O 1 '39

Reviewed by Pauline Ehrlich

Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 210w

Reviewed by V. L. Gott

Living Age 357:98 S '39 80w

"Mr. Seligmann writes in a clear, forceful style which makes the intricate subject of his book easily intelligible to the layman. The reader will feel himself better equipped either to listen to discussions by experts on the subject or to take part in after-dinner conversations on the topics of fascism and communism and even perhaps democracy. No doubt Mr. Seligmann will hear protests from aggrieved anthropologists upon whose toes he has been compelled to tread, and we shall again hear echoes of the old heredity-versus-environment argument. But he has done a real service for anthropology." A. B. Kuttner

+ Nation 149:175 Ag 12 '39 600w

Reviewed by Harold Ward

New Repub 100:81 Ag 23 '39 500w

"If Mr. Seligmann's book had appeared in 1933, soon after the Nazi anti-Semitic policy was framed, it would undoubtedly have produced a profounder effect than it is likely to produce now. Coming rather late in the day it must be regarded as just another excellent contribution to the mountain of popular literature on anthropology and ethnology that has accumulated since Hitler's rise. . . What Mr. Seligmann fails to realize is the change that has come over official 'Nordidiocy' in Germany." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p3 My 21 '39 440w

"Mr. Seligmann acknowledges help and advice received from Franz Boas in making his book, but one can judge from the wide range of the materials used, their adroit fitting together, and the steady march of the argument, that the author, independently of this august patronage, is complete master of his subject. Moreover, he writes with unaffected simplicity and force, so that the lay reader can follow without effort. 'Race against Man' is a work of popularization in the best sense of the word; it is indeed a model of that difficult combination; breadth of knowledge and direct presentation." Jacques Barzun

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Ap 8 '39 700w

"Mr. Seligmann has written a significant book upon this oft-quoted subject of race, and has had the support and criticism not only of Professor Boas but of such reputable scientists, as Professor Carleton Coon of Harvard University, Dr. Shapiro of the American Museum of Natural History, Otto Klineberg of Columbia, and Professor Harry Wolfson of Harvard. He has read extensively and refers in painstaking manner to his bibliographical lists of scientific works."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 My '39 370w

"The book is sound, well-written and useful to those to whom the argument is unfamiliar." H. A. Miller

+ Survey G 28:456 Jl '39 260w

SELINKO, ANNE MARIE. Tomorrow is another day; tr. by Mary H. Lindsay [Eng title: Everything will be better tomorrow]. 304p $2 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Secker & Warburg]

39-31680

A timid little typist in a Vienna broadcasting station steps to the microphone and finishes a broadcast for a stricken announcer. For her boldness Toni is fired. The next day the station is flooded with telephone calls, telegrams, and fan mail for the girl with the sweet, sad voice. That is the beginning of Toni's career as a radio star.

"It's a blithe and incredible story set down with rippling charm." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 O 8 '39 260w

Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 220w

"It is all very sentimental, yet rather charmingly so. . . The setting of the tale is Vienna, and it is the author's familiarity with the intimacies of Viennese life which gives the story any distinction it possesses." Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 25 '39 280w

Reviewed by John Mair

— New Statesman & Nation 18:432 S 23 '39 100w

"Toni is made genuinely appealing despite her lack of brains and the author's or translator's manner. The story is told in the present tense and in sentences strung together with commas." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p477 Ag 12 '39 90w

SELLERS, CHARLES COLEMAN. The artist of the revolution; the early life of Charles Willson Peale. 293p il $7.50 Feather & Good, box 63, Hebron, Conn.

B or 92 Peale, Charles Willson 39-12711

First volume of a biography of the American artist who in 1780 "laid politicks aside and persued the Brush." Among his various activities Peale had been a saddler, a coach-maker, a silversmith, had repaired watches and clocks, made plaster casts and false teeth, and designed transparencies to celebrate the American triumph after the Revolution. The present volume covers the period to his forty-ninth year. Index.

Booklist 35:364 Jl 1 '39

"Mr. Sellers portrays Peale as indeed beguiling . . . and his book is welcome not only for his orderly marshalling of the facts but for his conveyance through them of a very friendly impression of the painter." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p8 N 12 '39 700w

Reviewed by Constance Rourke
Nation 149:528 N 11 '39 420w

"When American art, and its relation to the political, social, and artistic development of America secure the scholarly attention they have so long deserved but so seldom received, 'The Artist of the Revolution' will be required reading." Oliver Larkin

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 1 '39 500w

SELLS, DOROTHY MCDANIEL. British wages boards; a study in industrial democracy. 389p $3 Brookings [13s 6d Faber]

331.2 Wages—Minimum wage. Labor laws and legislation—Great Britain 39-12936

"Miss Sells has chosen the British wages board system for intensive examination as offering the clearest example of democratic wage determination in practice. Emerging from the British experience with minimum-wage legislation are constructive approaches to most of the problems with which those drafting or administering legislation of this kind are likely to be faced. Instead of analyzing these problems and their possible solutions, however, the author has made an attempt, insofar as is possible with facts and figures, to create for the reader a dynamic picture of the living organism into which the wages boards of Great Britain have developed since their inception." Management R

Reviewed by E. W. Bakke
Ann Am Acad 206:201 N '39 750w

Economist 136:566 S 23 '39 800w

"Though much of Miss Sells' description of how the British system works is too detailed to be followed through in all its intricacies, the volume as a whole is lucid and significant."

+ Management R 28:179 My '39 290w

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 20 '39 100w

SELSAM, HOWARD. What is philosophy? a Marxist introduction. 192p $1.75 Int. pubs. [5s Lawrence]

101 Philosophy. Materialism, Dialectic 39-8498

"The subtitle 'A Marxist Introduction' indicates the scope and substance of this book, which is essentially an explanation of the significance of dialectical materialism as an instrument both for theoretical understanding and for practical manipulation. The author first shows what it means in actual practice to take a materialist as against an idealist approach to the problems of life. He then discusses the limitations and divergences of these views and their solution in the Marxist synthesis. With this key he opens a door to the problems of permanence and change, the nature and role of science, the process of history, the relation of means to ends, and the meaning of the good life." Am J Soc

"In spite of a certain finality of judgment and dogmatism of statement, inseparable in part from its brevity, this little book is an excellent introduction to dialectical materialism." J. Rumney

+ — Am J Soc 45:289 S '39 210w

"Within its brief scope and in its own terms, introductory and non-technical, Professor Selsam's book presents needed information and, what is sometimes of more significance, orientation in regard to its subject. It is clearly written, closely geared to the contemporary scene, and full of provocative instances." J. M. Somerville

+ J Philos 36:638 N 9 '39 400w

"The volume has both the good and bad features of a primer. It is written in a lively manner, and many homely but good examples are used to illustrate the major point that philosophy has its feet on the ground. The best thing in the book is the author's fresh presentation of the interrelationship of means and ends, concerning which there is so much discussion in liberal circles today. But there are many oversimplifications, most of which are erroneous, such as the attempt to portray the development of science solely in terms of immediate practical needs." David Ramsey

+ — New Repub 99:27 My 10 '39 280w

SEMAT, HENRY. Introduction to atomic physics. 360p il $3.50 Farrar

539 Physics. Atoms 39-15061

"A connected presentation of the experimental basis of our present ideas concerning the structure of the atom and the nature of its constituent particles. The student is supposed to have had one year of general college physics as well as a course in the calculus. Dr. Semat is Assistant Professor of Physics in City College, New York City." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 23:44 Jl '39

"The accurate and clear, direct presentation of the material covered is only one of the features which recommend it as an introductory text. The drawings and photographs are excellently reproduced and have been carefully selected to supplement the text and achieve conciseness. The diagrams illustrative of actual experiments are happily conceived, simple and clear, yet retain important features of the original apparatus. The problems are excellent in their power of illustrating the chapter material and, on occasion, supplementing it with a further derivation, or an illustration of a physical law. . . This book should be widely used because of its many excellent features. Although expressly designed for a one-semester course, the reviewer feels that it seems to contain more material than could be easily assimilated in so limited a time." K. T. Bainbridge

+ R of Scientific Instruments 10:275 O '39 550w

SEMMES, RAPHAEL. Crime and punishment in early Maryland. 334p $3 Johns Hopkins [14s Oxford]

364.9752 Crime and criminals—Maryland. Punishment—Maryland. Maryland—Social life and customs 39-1624

"This volume of ten chapters consists for the greater part of accounts of case histories selected from the Court Series of the Maryland Archives, volumes IV, X, XLI, XLIX, LI, LIII, LIV, to which the author, a member of the committee on publications for volumes LIII and LIV, has added comment and additional information." Social Educ

"Of crime and punishment in early Maryland there is still much to be said, but this volume is a convenient and useful springboard for broader and deeper investigations." R. B. Morris

+ — Am Hist R 45:407 Ja '40 600w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
Am Soc R 4:605 Ag '39 270w

"A feast for the criminologist, Dr. Semmes's latest opus will also interest the antiquarian and the student of Americana. Full of quaint happenings and drolleries in seventeenth-century Maryland, the book is valuable for the light it throws on early manners and customs and is doubly rich on crimes and punishments current when the colony was under the thumb of the Calverts." S. G. King

+ Books p26 Ap 30 '39 650w

"As is stands, this book, long on anecdote but short on analysis, constitutes a sort of anthology of crime compiled from the printed sources, convenient and useful, but largely undigested. Dr. Semmes did a good job as far as he went, but he did not go far enough." H. C. Reed

+ — Columbia Law R 40:186 Ja '40 750w

"The student will not fall into the error of assuming that the court testimony, some of it of a character which in the twentieth century world would be sealed, represents fairly the mores of a considerable portion of the population of the colony, but to the general reader for whom the book apparently is written a word of warning in this connection may not prove entirely superfluous." O. M. Gambrill

Social Educ 3:363 My '39 270w

SENDER, TONI. The autobiography of a German rebel. 319p il $3 Vanguard

B or 92 Germany—Politics and government

39-27340

As a young woman in Paris before the war, Frau Sender became a worker in the cause of Socialism and a disciple of Jaurès. On the outbreak of the war she was forced to return to her native land, Germany. After the war she became one of the leaders in the Weimar republic, saw the gradual rise of Hitler, and finally fled from Nazi Germany. She now lives in the United States.

Booklist 35:289 My 1 '39

"Toni Sender's book is full of interesting material on the German revolution and the fight of parties in the German Reichstag. It does not explain adequately, however, the collapse of Socialism and the rise to power of National-Socialism. But other authors have done this already. Miss Sender's volume is after all the autobiography of an amazingly full life." Sonia Tomara

+ Books p8 Ap 16 '39 600w

"Frau Sender was unquestionably one of the most interesting women in the Reichstag. Her heart, at least, was usually in the right place. She tells many an interesting anecdote, explains some situations of historical significance, and adds to our supply of nostalgia for the world that preceded Adolf Hitler. But her book lacks real verve and point. There are dozens of snapshots, but no photographs. There are bags of meal, but no bread. It is at best another contribution to the long array of memoirs which can alone make possible a history of that extraordinary experiment, the Weimar Republic." G. N. Shuster

+ — Commonweal 29:727 Ap 21 '39 360w

"There is little in this book that is new. However, the author's story throws interesting sidelights on some important events in a fascinating, although depressing, period in history." Adolf Sturmthal

Nation 148:568 My 13 '39 700w

New Repub 98:387 My 3 '39 40w

"Her story is inevitably weighted with a large amount of political and economic detail and discussion, but it is always a living and consummately interesting story, as her book as a whole is pertinent and valuable." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p15 S 10 '39 1500w

New Yorker 15:87 Ap 8 '39 50w

"Mrs. Sender's autobiography is the unadorned story of a woman whose abilities would have assured her a successful and lucrative business career if she had not felt impelled to devote her life to political and trade union activities, not merely in the rank and file, but as a front-line fighter. While some readers may find her frequent references to her feminine youthfulness and slight build rather cloying, few will remain indifferent to her courageous struggle, which called for both moral and physical endurance." V. M. Dean

+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 Ap 8 '39 750w

SEPPANEN, UNTO. Sun and storm; tr. by Kenneth C. Kaufman. 438p map $2.50 Bobbs

39-25958

A long chronicle novel tracing the fortunes of a Finnish peasant's family from about 1870 to about 1920.

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Books p10 O 15 '39 700w

"Unto Seppänen combines in his story and his style the dual Finnish nature, the vigorous, violent and practical with the dreamy, the idealistic, the visionary. There are passages of horror and stark realism which are almost unbearable along with exquisite descriptions of lake . . . forest and sea, with rural idylls, and lyric interludes charming in their utter simplicity. With all its diverse elements, and in spite of the fact that the book was published in Finland as a trilogy, love of the soil and love of country give it inner unity. The pace is not swift, but the events give the feeling of inevitability, and it is good story-telling throughout." Q. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 8 '39 400w

Nation 149:532 N 11 '39 100w

"Seppänen's keen awareness of fullness in living sometimes overcrowds 'Sun and Storm,' yet it is a novel of lasting value, written in language of unusual beauty." Maria De Blasio

+ — New Repub 101:212 D 6 '39 210w

"Seppanen has caught in words some of the primitive grandeur as well as the oppressive weight of Finnish life, familiar to us before only through the massive music of Sibelius. Now beyond the evocative but illusive world of sound comes the firmer thing, the word. The outlines of national temper and character sharpen. If Finland vanishes tomorrow, Sibelius and Seppanen will have made her monument." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p6 O 15 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:94 O 21 '39 50w

Pratt p24 winter '40

"This is a book of exceptional merit. It possesses every ingredient required to make a first-class novel: a romantic setting of a remote and little known country, a powerful theme of an ambitious peasant dominating successive generations of the family he founded, and a plot which is concerned with the century-long struggle of Finland against her tyrant, Russia." Agnes Rothery

+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 O 21 '39 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 120w

SERGEANT, PHILIP WALSINGHAM. Championship chess [an historical, critical and illustrative account of championship play from 1843 to 1937]. 217p $2.50 McKay [7s 6d Eyre]

794.1 Chess [38-8022]

A history of the chess championship of the world is followed by the scores of 52 illustrative games, mostly taken from matches in which the championship title was definitely at stake.

"The literature of chess has grown enormously during the present century, but no other book on the game covers the ground Mr. Sergeant has surveyed so thoroughly and so well."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 25 '38 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 5 '38 270w

SETH, RONALD. Estonian journey; travels in a Baltic corner [Eng title: Baltic corner]. 234p il map $2.50 McBride [7s 6d Methuen]

914.74 Estonia (W) 39-18485

Account of a young English couple's long visit in Estonia, their personal adventures intermixed with descriptions of town and country, comments on history, politics and social conditions, and—particularly—on education, the author's chief interest.

"This is a personal, sympathetic and enjoyable book."
+ Books p8 My 28 '39 120w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 120w
Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 27 '39 350w

"A likable and attractively illustrated book."
+ N Y Times p17 Ap 16 '39 480w

"The book, accurate and informative, is a pocket encyclopaedia of Estonia. Hardly anything of importance relating to the history, geography, architecture or general culture of the country has been omitted."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p63 Ja 28 '39 180w

SEWELL, ARTHUR. A study in Milton's Christian doctrine. 214p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

821 Milton, John 39-16356

"The title of Professor Sewell's book suggests less than the book fulfils. This is more than a discussion of Milton's treatise 'De Doctrina Christiana': and its value lies in its insistence on the relation of that enigmatical work to the doctrinal content of the poems and pamphlets. Enigmatical—because, despite its apparent lucidity of form and expression, the 'De Doctrina' raises more problems, for the reader familiar with the poems, than it purports to solve; and Professor Sewell rightly urges that the treatise be regarded as one element in the shifting complex of Milton's thought, not as a fixed point to which the doctrinal assertions of the poems should be referred for elucidation." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Maurice Kelley
Mod Philol 37:102 Ag '39 1250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 18 '39 240w

SEYBOLD, GENEVA, comp. American foundations and their fields, IV. 218p $3.75 Raymond Rich associates, 330 W. 42d st, N.Y.

361 Foundations, Charitable and educational

"An outgrowth of studies compiled and published by the Twentieth Century Fund, 1930-1935, this volume brings these studies up to date and enlarges their scope. Concise data is given about 243 independent American foundations, including their purpose, activities, capital assets, expenditures and grants during 1937, the latter classified according to the fields in which they were made. Investments are given both in dollars and percentages of the total investments. Two indexes, one of foundations and one of fields, add greatly to the usefulness of the book for reference purposes." Survey

Social Studies 30:332 N '39 70w

Reviewed by Mabel Skinner
Survey 75:262 Ag '39 200w

SEYFERT, ELLA MAIE. Little Amish schoolhouse; il. by Ninon MacKnight. 136p $2 Crowell

(W) 39-25323

Simple little story of life and customs among the Amish folk in eastern Pennsylvania. For children from eight to twelve.

Booklist 36:180 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 7 '40 300w

"A quaint and pleasing setting."
+ Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 20w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 20w

"This is a sincere portrayal of the Amish people and customs. The gay illustrations by Ninon MacKnight are very attractive. For fourth and fifth grades." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 90w

"The many pictures, in soft, rich colors and black and white, have the details children crave and at the same time a restful simplicity. A book worth adding to school and public and personal libraries because of its truthful and sympathetic presentation of an interesting and little known group of people." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p22 N 12 '39 200w

SEYMOUR, CHARLES, 1912-. Notre-Dame of Noyon in the twelfth century; a study in the early development of Gothic architecture. 202p il $7 Yale univ. press [31s 6d Oxford]

726.6 Noyon. Notre-Dame. Architecture, Gothic 39-24917

"This study is concerned with the cathedral as it was designed in the twelfth century and brought virtually to completion in the years neighboring 1235 or 1240. Material outside this limited chronological scope has been introduced only to make clear either the genesis or modification of the Gothic church. Notre-Dame of Noyon needs no introduction. Since the earliest days of medieval archeology the cathedral has been recognized as one of the key monuments in the early development of Gothic art. This present book is intended to give the bases for renewed study and appreciation which both the cathedral and its period deserve." (Pref) Bibliographical note. Index.

"Mr. Seymour has done a very valuable work and done it beyond criticism. His book is not alone one for the architect and the archaeologist but for all those who are interested in the Christian civilization of the Middle Ages, since it gives a very illuminating view of a much misunderstood epoch." R. A. Cram
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 700w

"Mr. Seymour's monograph (originally a Ph.D. thesis) embodies the results of both documentary research and thorough study of this church and of other buildings of the time, all directed to the end of determining the influences which entered into its design, the process by which Gothic was refined and enriched within the century covered by its construction, and in general the place occupied by Noyon in the total stream of Gothic development. The detailed and technical description of the structure is fortified by more than one hundred illustrations. Readers who are more interested in the church history than in the fine points of architecture will find an informing discussion of the development of the see, the relation of the bishop and chapter to the civil authorities and the methods by which the building of a cathedral in the twelfth century was financed."
+ Christian Century 56:856 Jl 5 '39 230w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 250w (Reprinted from Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Though he says, modestly, that the complete monograph of Noyon Cathedral is still to be written Mr. Seymour has produced a valuable piece of work, not only as regards Noyon itself but with reference to the social and economic conditions of the twelfth century and the sources and stylistic development of Gothic in general."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p555 S 23 '39 250w

SEYMOUR, MRS FLORA WARREN (SMITH). La Salle; explorer of our midland empire; il. by Edward Caswell. 236p map $2 Appleton-Century

B or 92 La Salle, Robert Cavelier, sieur de —Juvenile literature (W) 39-4990

Biography of the French explorer and frontiersman, who gave up his study for the priesthood to come to North America to help open up the wilderness and claim new territory for France. For young readers.

"All of Mrs. Seymour's biographies are useful for schools; they cover the very subjects that fifth graders are likely to be studying. . . But popular as they may be, her books somehow fall short: figures fail to come to life; there is little real character development." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 64:564 Jl '39 140w

"One wishes that [the author] had given us a deeper insight into his character, but if her biography is concerned almost entirely with what he did, rather than what he was essentially, it is a very readable one which will bring to young people a very clear idea of the magnitude of his achievements, and it does emphasize the vision and indomitable courage of the great explorer." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p12 Mr 12 '39 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p758 D 30 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:67 Ap '39

SHACKLETON, ROBERT, and SHACKLETON, MRS ELIZABETH (FLEMING). The book of antiques. 284p il $3 Penn

749 Furniture (W) 38-34576

Primarily the book is about collecting antiques, with stories of the experiences which befell the authors in their search for old furniture in Pennsylvania, New York state, Virginia and Delaware, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Includes advice on wisdom in the purchasing of antiques, hints on restoration, some material on early American furniture, and two chapters on clocks and glass and silver. Index.

Books p13 My 14 '39 160w

"In spite of its far too pretentious title (since this is only one of many books about antiques), this is a helpful, genial and pleasant volume, founded upon good advice and lightened by personal experiences. . . To be instructive, helpful and thoroughly interesting, a book of this kind must be well illustrated. The illustrations here are numerous and very good. The book is to be recommended as a comprehensive and readable treatment of its subject."

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 1 '39 330w

"The authors have the gift of entertaining narration and a flair for apt phraseology. Their book is generously illustrated with photographs."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 3 '39 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p434 Jl 22 '39 150w

SHADID, MICHAEL ABRAHAM. A doctor for the people. 277p $2.50 Vanguard

E or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Elk City, Oklahoma. Community hospital (W) 39-27470

Autobiography of the founder of the first co-operative hospital in America, the Community hospital at Elk City, Oklahoma.

Reviewed by J. L. Gillin
Am Soc R 4:902 D '39 450w

Booklist 35:331 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p4 Je 4 '39 600w

Reviewed by C. A. Smith, M.D.
Boston Transcript p1 My 27 '39 200w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:vi Ag '39 200w

Reviewed by C. N. Schmalz
Harvard Business R 18:122 autumn '39 240w

"In this book Dr. Shadid tells who he is and how he did it. The story is as fabulous as 'Pluck and Luck' or even 'Jack the Giant-Killer'; and it is all strictly true. Moreover, it is not Dr. Shadid's fault that his autobiography reads like a collaboration between Horatio Alger and Israel Zangwill. It's just that it happened that way. Shadid is no prig." James Rorty

+ Nation 148:535 My 6 '39 470w

"Here is refutation for those who argue that immigrants from other lands are a liability rather than an asset. Yet doctors interested in preserving the medical status quo would probably swear that Dr. Michael A. Shadid has been a subversive element. His book, 'A Doctor for the People,' is in part a personal record of battles fought and won, in part a tract for the coöperative idea. Unfortunately the personal record, while interesting, is pedestrian and too sketchy to have the rich humanity of a doctor's case-book." D. D. Bromley

+ — New Repub 99:165 Je 14 '39 650w

"After he has told his own story, the founder of the Elk City Community Hospital turns to a general consideration of the question of group medical practice, and to some specific information as to how a cooperative hospital can be organized and how it works. His book is a real contribution to our knowledge of an important present-day problem."

+ N Y Times p19 Je 4 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:92 My 6 '39 90w

"If Dr. Shadid had not been so enraged by the American Medical Association, he would have written a better book. Unfortunately 'A Doctor for the People' is less the dispassionate account of a social experiment than it is the story of a bitter personal quarrel." M. S. U., M.D.

Sat R of Lit 20:21 My 27 '39 380w

SHAFFER, EDWARD TERRY HENDRIE. Carolina gardens; foreword by DuBose Heyward. 2d Garden club ed 326p il map $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

716 Gardens—North Carolina. Gardens—South Carolina

"The history, romance and tradition of many gardens of two states through more than two centuries." (Subtitle) The book was originally published in 1937 in a limited edition, at $10. Index.

Booklist 36:200 Ja 15 '40

"This very good book should not be confused with the mere publicity accounts of Southern gardens that have been too often published. It differs also from the books on the Charleston region in that it covers inland gardens as well as the gardens in the low country. Furthermore, while it is minutely descriptive, readable, and excellently illustrated, there is a background of history, both social and economic, which makes it a real contribution to the history of plantation life." H. S. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 20 '40 90w

SHANAHAN, EDWARD WILLIAM. Modern economic organisation and problems. 401p $1.75 (4s) Longmans

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions 39-8016

"A study of economic method and of contemporary economic structure and problems." (Subtitle) "The present book has grown out of the second part of the Industrial Revolution and the Economic World of To-day [by L. W. White and E. W. Shanahan, Book Review Digest, 1932]. Six chapters have been retained unaltered and the rest is for the most part new." (Pref) Index.

"The book is designed as a text to meet the need for institutional material to supplement the formal, theoretical textbook commonly used for beginning economics in Great Britain. Its British orientation as well as its rather special pedagogical aim make it unlikely that it will be found especially useful for elementary economic courses in American colleges." G. R. Taylor

Am Econ R 29:128 Mr '39 120w

Management R 28:180 My '39 60w

SHAPIRO, HARRY LIONEL. Migration and environment. 594p $7.50 (32s 6d) Oxford

573.6 Anthropometry. Japanese in the Hawaiian Islands. Man—Influence of environment 39-5098

"A study of the physical characteristics of the Japanese immigrants to Hawaii and the effects of environment on their descendants." Subtitle

"This is an important piece of work and it has been carefully and conscientiously carried out. . . The tables of figures which compose the last two-thirds of the book are well set up and readable. Very sensibly Dr. Shapiro has made his final chapter a complete and simplified recapitulation of the whole, containing nothing to cow the tenderfoot in biometrics." W. W. Howells

+ Am Anthropol 41:635 O '39 1300w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman
Am J Soc 45:622 Ja '40 250w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman
Am Soc R 4:478 O '39 600w

"This is not an easy work to read, but the author is an honest scholar and, within limits, an exceptional sociological and geographical craftsman." J. S. Roucek

+ Geog R 29:516 Jl '39 400w

Reviewed by F. W. Jones
Nature 144:177 Jl 29 '39 600w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Ja '39 200w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey 75:232 Jl '39 310w

SHARP, HENRY ALEXANDER. Branch libraries; modern problems and administration. (Practical lib. handbooks) 134p il $1.45 Wilson, H.W. [5s Allen, G]

021.62 Libraries—Branches, delivery stations, etc. Library administration. Libraries—England [39-5723]

Discussion of the problems of branch libraries and their administration from the English point of view. Contents: General problems; Planning; Staffing; Relations with the central library; Book selection; County branch libraries. Select bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Edith Guerrier
Library J 64:985 D 15 '39 550w

"Though the volume leaves untouched certain problems pressing for attention in this country, and though it is addressed to an English audience, it is a useful, inclusive handbook and one that will prove thought-provoking as well." R. A. Ulveling

+ Library Q 9:349 Jl '39 650w

SHARP, MARGERY (MRS GEOFFREY CASTLE). Harlequin house. 312p $2.50 Little (W) 39-27278

Three babes in the English woods of London were Ronny, recently convicted of selling dope; Lisbeth, his devastatingly beautiful sister, intent on making a man of him in the space of six months; and Mr Partridge who always wore red socks because they were warming to the blood. When Lisbeth's handsome, managing fiancé returned to England before the six months were up, the surprising inhabitants of Harlequin house needed a rescuer—and found him to be an American, named Lester Hamilton.

Booklist 35:271 Ap 15 '39

"There is a great deal of pleasant descriptive writing in the book, a warm and merry appreciation of British pubs and British foibles. The author is lavish and expert in her minor characterizations." G. C. Smith

+ Books p7 Ap 23 '39 500w

"Margery Sharp has done it again. People who had not seen the point of a joke since 1929 broke down and smiled over 'The Nutmeg Tree.' With things even more ungodly now, they will surprise their faces with even wider grins. The only possible drawback to 'Harlequin House' is that Julia Packett isn't in it. However, Mr. Partridge is. . . Margery Sharp is a shrewd minx. Her study of contrasting psychologies is sound and amusing; her very nice prigs are such excellent foils for her lovably loose pets. She is neither frivolous nor malicious." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 15 '39 750w

"Miss Sharp's story has sound construction, crisp expression, and—Mr. Partridge. The virtues of casualness can be overstressed, but Partridge is a tonic." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 25 '39 420w

" 'Harlequin House,' by the author of 'The Nutmeg Tree,' is a novel of lightsome humor which wears its motley with grace and gayety. It is ideal reading for gloomy afternoons or convalescents, or other times or persons that require pleasant diversion but not ribald hilarity. Modeled on the best British tradition for lightly humorous novels on the slightly whimsical side, it should prove highly entertaining to readers seeking just that sort of book." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '39 600w

"Miss Sharp has a pretty talent for amusing situations and for pleasantly goofy characterization, and she can tell a joke without a sign of strain. . . Everything turns out for the best and Miss Sharp has a lot of fun, which she communicates to the reader."

+ New Yorker 15:105 Ap 15 '39 100w

Pratt p31 summer '39

"The first question a reader will ask about Margery Sharp's new book is, 'Is it as funny as "The Nutmeg Tree?" ' The answer, unfortunately, is no. Nor is it built on as amusing a basic idea as 'The Flowering Thorn.' It is a good light novel, if one did not have to compare it with those two exceptionally good light novels which have preceded it. The situation is mildly funny. The characters are mildly funny. . . The view that comedy is easier to do and is somehow inferior to tragedy, has always irritated me. The light hand is as much of a gift as the sombre eye of the great grim realists, and quite as rare. But here the material that the light hand is working with seems a little slight and contrived. It will probably be no satisfaction to Miss Sharp to be told that she is so very, very good that this should be better. Now if I had never read 'The Flowering Thorn' and 'The Nutmeg Tree'. . ." R. C. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:13 Ap 15 '39 390w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 162:730 Ap 28 '39 170w
Time 33:94 Ap 24 '39 130w

"Miss Sharp is adept at assembling a company of improbable people and making them dance to music played with unsentimentality, nimble wit and astringent humour. When we have allowed her this excellent technique for her last as well as her other books, we must add that the tune at Harlequin House (so named because of its multi-coloured curtains) is a little too jerky and its characters (with the exception of Mr. Partridge and the Walkers) a little too near to stock types to transport us to those ecstatic regions of comedy where we forget who is who and what is what and lose our common sense in laughter."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Ap 29 '39 300w

SHARP, WALTER RICE. The government of the French republic. (Governments of modern Europe) 373p map $1.75 Van Nostrand

342.44 France—Politics and government 39-452

"The purpose of this little volume is to present a unified picture of the present-day French State as a going concern. Discarding the traditional 'structural' approach, [the author has] attempted to develop realistically what may be called the 'functional' cycle of political action—from policy-formation through administration to control." (Pref) The main body of the book is preceded by two chapters, one on France as a national community; the other on the historical background. The book was written in 1938 and completed before the end of the crisis of September. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Although Professor Sharp's study is intended mainly for American students of comparative government, its wealth of informative material makes it of interest to a much wider public. Admirable summaries of the French system of education, of the administration of justice, of the organization and methods of the police, etc., should help to dispel the errors and strange preconceptions about France which are so current in the American press and periodical literature. From this point of view, the volume should be an indispensable reference handbook on the desk of any foreign editor or magazine writer. A few unimportant flaws . . . do not affect the solidity of this study." Robert Valeur

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:507 Je '39 850w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '39 140w

"A concise, thoroughly reliable survey."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 10w

SHARPE, MRS STELLA GENTRY. Tobe; phot. by Charles Farrell. 121p $1 Univ. of N.C. press [4s 6d Oxford]

Photography of children. Negroes

(W) 39-27562

Photograph-story book about the life of a six-year-old Negro boy on a farm in North Carolina, where Tobe lives with his parents, a large collection of brothers and sisters, and pets galore.

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

"[Contains] some of the best pictures of farm life in the South." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 9 '39 350w

"This is an interesting book, written in easy words, printed in large type, and Mr. Farrell's specially fine photographs picture this pleasant family in their year-round activities. This is an unusual and pleasing reader for seven, eight and nine-year-olds." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 28 '39 170w

"Mr. Farrell explains that he spent far more time on the little games he played with the children than on the photography. Unaware of the camera for the most part, the children look entirely natural and unposed. The final result is not only engaging but is, in photographic form, a genuine contribution to knowledge of Negro life in a small North Carolina town. The text, with its simple vocabulary, large type and short line, is admirably suited to beginners in reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 16 '39 240w

SHAW, CHARLES MACMAHON. Bernard's brethren; with comments by Bernard Shaw. 161p $3 Holt [10s Constable]

920 Shaw family. Shaw, George Bernard

[39-20845]

A cousin of George Bernard Shaw decided to set his cousin right on some remote points of family history. G. B. S. has commented on the book, and his comments are printed in red. The author is a retired Australian bank manager.

"Students and worshipers of Shaw will derive infinite satisfaction from this volume, and even heretics will read kindly what this amiable author has to tell us about his commonwealth, its history, himself and his family." Iris Barry

+ Books p11 D 24 '39 440w

"These people are not unlike your own relatives, nor will you learn anything new about the real or legendary Bernard. The book, nevertheless, has charm—the charm of a rather self-conscious naivete. Some will be entertained; more will wonder why it was ever published." C. B.

Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 170w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 15 '39 350w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods

N Y Times p2 D 17 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:123 D 16 '39 30w

"The indefatigable Archibald Henderson and the erratic Frank Harris, not to mention Shaw himself, have piled up so many data relating to the only important member of the widely scattered, amazingly long-lived tribe, that this seems a work of supererogation. Bernard Shaw's side of the case is familiar to those who are interested and his Australian cousin's version suggests that banking and golf are more in his line than writing." E. B.

— Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 16 '39 290w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 D 16 '39 1000w

"This is a decidedly unusual book and one which many readers will enjoy because of its embarrassing intimacy. The biblical title of course, need not be pursued. It is possible that Mr. Charles MacMahon Shaw has established a dangerous precedent, and given a hint to the much enduring relatives of great men."

Times [London] Lit Sup p335 Je 10 '39 700w

SHAW, IRWIN. The gentle people; a Brooklyn fable. 212p il $2 Random house

812 (W) 39-27209

Play of life in Brooklyn, in which two middle-aged men, a Jew and a Greek, interested mainly in fishing, get mixed up with a racketeer, and take the law in their own hands in order to get rid of him.

Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p20 Ap 16 '39 270w

"With an attempt at irony that doesn't quite come off, author Shaw, in a brief foreword says, 'This play is a fairy tale with a moral.' . . Let us not be fooled. The play is merely melodrama, and there aren't many laughs in the reading." Carl Glick

— Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 200w

Cath World 148:598 F '39 320w (Dramatic criticism)

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

Dramatic criticism by Grenville Vernon

Commonweal 29:358 Ja 20 '39 240w

" 'The Gentle People' falls between the two stools of allegory and simple realism." M. M.

Nation 148:213 F 18 '39 110w (Dramatic criticism)

"A fable, uneven but sometimes delightful and occasionally muddled." John Anderson

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ap 29 '39 140w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts Mo 23:309 Ap '39 60w

SHAW, IRWIN. Sailor off the Bremen, and other stories. 293p $2 Random house

39-23638

Twenty short stories, nine of which were first published in the New Yorker.

"There was a time when it was more or less of a novelty to get out and see how the other half lived, but in the last ten years that particular other half have been getting almost more than their share. It is quite possible that if Mr. Shaw ever gets around to writing about the neglected rich, he will make your heart bleed for them, too. He is a grand story teller and should be able to do anything he chooses." Sally Benson

+ Books p6 Ag 27 '39 750w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 900w

SHAW, IRWIN—Continued

"Altogether a good solid collection of stories from a very promising young writer."

+ Nation 149:354 S 30 '39 280w

"Irwin Shaw writes a very tight story, well joined, highly finished. On the surface, he is in the sketch-from-life genre; underneath, he is acutely conscious of cause and effect, rise and fall, the progress to a natural conclusion. Sometimes his sheer vivid skill gets away from him. . . In general, his level is pretty near flood tide, the only completely false note being the Irish drinking yarn." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 100:166 S 13 '39 650w

"Mr. Shaw is most at ease when he is writing of City College smarties, taxi drivers, hooligans and fighting wives. He furnishes such characters with rich, vivid speech, that is right in thought and accent, the essence of barroom and bathhouse wit. A primary weakness is that his Middle West college professors, Western sheriffs, farmers and boys from Ohio, talk somewhat the same way, so that they seem like Brownsville people at a masquerade." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 27 '39 460w

"Acrid and beautifully written short stories."

+ New Yorker 15:62 S 2 '39 30w

"Mr. Shaw proves that he is a playwright first and a story teller second by concentrating too exclusively on dialogue. He has an eye for the exact and realistic detail to sharpen the reader's consciousness of the physical scene, but too often superfluous lines, perfectly adapted for stage use, deter the natural flow of the stories and give a sprawling effect. In common with most young writers, he apparently has had his time with Hemingway. But, like most young writers, he has yet to achieve the expert's sense of le mot juste which immediately crystallizes theme and character." Gould Cassal

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:14 S 2 '39 500w

"The stories are all dramatic; each one could be extended into a real drama or a full-size short story. Mr Shaw's touch is broad, compelling and vigorous. In spite of slightness of plot in most of the sketches, the reader will long remember them." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 550w

SHAW, LLOYD. Cowboy dances; a collection of western square dances; with a foreword by Sherwood Anderson. 375p il $3.50 Caxton printers

793.34 Dancing—Folk and national dances

(W) 39-18793

Explanations of the probable origin of the American cowboy dances, combined with descriptions, diagrams, and pictures of the figures of these dances. The author has collected and taught the dances and with the Cheyenne Mountain dancers has demonstrated them from coast to coast. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:4 S '39

"The best part of Mr. Shaw's book is its clarity, for Lord knows it's easy to get muddled if the directions aren't just about fool-proof. Or maybe the best of the book is the photographs; they not only convey the flavor of frontier folksyness, but they really give an idea of how to perform the turns." Sarah Chokla

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 12 '39 500w

New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 30w

"The book is salted throughout with the flavor of the mountain West. The art of the 'caller' is shrewdly and wittily described; outstanding callers and fiddlers are listed, with their favorite tunes; the fascinating vocabulary of the square dance affords the opportunity for endless etymological comment." George Beiswanger

+ Theatre Arts Mo 24:72 Ja '40 250w

Wis Lib Bul 35:163 O '39

SHEAHAN, HENRY BESTON (HENRY BESTON, pseud). Five bears and Miranda; il. by Frank Dobias. [60p] $2 Macmillan

39-29719

"Gay nonsense story of the family of bears cast away on an island in Massachusetts Bay." Horn Bk M

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

"Here is a book for children early in the fairy-tale age, a time of life when a story, like a tune, is all the better for being faintly reminiscent. The melody of Mr. Beston's story brings back strains from three of the best loved tunes in children's literature; mermaids, little fat bears and the Swiss Family Robinson." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 N 12 '39 250w

Cath World 150:375 D '39 10w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 18 '39 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:378 N '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 110w

SHEARING, JOSEPH. Blanche Fury; or, Fury's ape. 339p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton [7s 6d Heinemann]

[39-10863]

Psychological story of murder and its causes, based on a real case in nineteenth century Norwich.

"The novels of crime and characters known as the works of Joseph Shearing have for some years been the shouting point of a rabid cult including cash customers and critics running the gamut from able-bodied mystery reviewers to such persons as Rebecca West and William Roughead. You, too, can join by reading 'Blanche Fury,' a characteristic Shearing piece, complete with sinister female lead and packed plentifully with foreboding, doom, grim psychology, stunning action and downright impressiveness." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 N 26 '39 350w

"Joseph Shearing has not received the attention he deserves as a writer of true crime studies. His characterization is excellent, his psychology sound, and his atmosphere well built up. He is particularly good at examining 'the dark places in a woman's soul' and the strange borderland of the mind and spirit." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 280w

"Even a reader who, like this reviewer, finds no great joy in exploring the swamps and jungles of mentality cannot deny the skillfulness of the author's treatment. The evolution of the theme carries with it a morbid fascination. Lovers of the macabre should revel in it. . . It is a book without beauty of style or pretension to it, holding its own, in its special genre, solely through character and story." J. S. Southron

N Y Times p25 N 19 '39 500w

"Very fine, and evil as anything."

+ New Yorker 15:92 N 11 '39 40w

"One is inclined to feel that the author has been led astray by too great fidelity to his original trial; that the character of Blanche Fury built herself up in his mind as one demanding more action than the facts allowed her, and that he made the mistake of following the facts rather than his own conception. Nevertheless, 'Blanche Fury' is a fine, sinister, brooding book for those who like their crime in crinoline." Basil Davenport

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 D 9 '39 550w

"Mr. Shearing's presentation of Clere Hall and its inhabitants and surroundings, and of the ambitious, bitter, tormented character of Blanche, gives the book an extraordinarily eerie and sinister atmosphere which lingers in the mind long after one has put it down."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 28 '39 350w

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Not peace but a sword [Eng title: The eleventh hour]. 367p $2.75 Doubleday [10s 6d Hamilton, H]

940.5 Europe—Politics—Crisis, 1938
(W) 39-27510

The author of Personal History (Book Review Digest, 1935) tells the story of what happened in Europe from March 1938 to March, 1939, as he, a newspaper correspondent, saw it during visits to Spain, Vienna and Prague.

Reviewed by H. B. Elliston
Atlantic Ag '39 300w
Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39

"This is a book of honesty and passionate awareness. In its pages the deeper promise of the author's 'Personal History' is fulfilled." Leland Stowe
+ Books p1 Jl 30 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p13 S 22 '39 140w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 19:193 S '39 260w
Christian Science Monitor p20 O 27 '39 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '39

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 30:361 Ag 4 '39 700w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:1 S '39 1200w
Foreign Affairs 18:158 O '39 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:iv S '39 350w

"Much of Mr. Sheean's book is devoted to his observations of the fighting and of the life in war-torn Spain. Here are some of his best pages. Here, and in the rest of the volume, are powerful portraits. Here, in other words, is a book which provides a tragic background for the war which is now upon us." Shepard Stone
+ Living Age 357:195 O '39 450w

"The author of 'Personal History' returns in his newest work to the genre of his great success—reporting in a literary style that goes beyond newspaper writing, presenting the temperament, the feelings, and thoughts of the observer as he looks at worlds great and small. Within the limits of this genre Vincent Sheean is a master." Franz Hoellering
+ Nation 149:128 Jl 29 '39 750w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
New Repub 99:367 Ag 2 '39 1200w

"The imprévu, the fascinating strangeness of Sheean's earlier adventures—for instance in the Riff War and in China—are lacking; and one looks in vain in his new book for such unforgettable characters as the Poincaré, the Abd 'el Krim, Madame Sun Yat Sen or the Borodin of In Search of History. And yet, Eleventh Hour still makes fascinating reading, and still contains many of the fine qualities of its predecessor. Sheean has a magnificent eye for detail, and if he has produced here no great characters, some of his incidental characters are superbly alive." A. W.
+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:872 Je 3 '39 600w

"There is little that is personal, except as Mr. Sheean, naturally enough, finds it difficult to tell what he saw without also telling how he felt. His emotions, however, are always under control. He has achieved a mastery that makes literature of the horror and indignation which swept over him with much of what he saw, the admiration for human courage that some other spectacles inspired in him." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 30 '39 1700w

" 'Not Peace But a Sword' is Sheean's best book since 'Personal History.' His novels seem to me to lack go; his merit lies in creating a vigorous and graphic picture with himself in the foreground but not dominating it. His subjective approach to big events does not, to be sure, much illumine them. But it is this very sense of his living through great moments as quiveringly, as wonderingly, and sometimes as myopically as would you or I that gives to this book its human perspective and blunt reality." Louis Kronenberger
+ New Yorker 15:58 Jl 29 '39 1000w
No Am 248:201 autumn '39 170w
Pratt p24 autumn '39

Reviewed by John Gunther
Sat R of Lit 20:5 Jl 29 '39 950w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 30 '39 1350w
Time 34:51 Jl 31 '39 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p306 My 27 '39 950w
Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. Liberty, equality and fraternity. 187p $2 Macmillan

261 Sociology, Christian. Communism. Capitalism 38-35235

"Monsignor Sheen interprets the historic phrase which is his title from an economic instead of a political point of view. By liberty he means the irresponsible way of life which issues in the unjust economy of monopolistic capitalism. By equality he means communism, or, as he prefers, 'Soviet fascism.' And by fraternity is meant the Catholic solution to economic problems. Each step in the sequence of liberalism, capitalism, communism and fascism is seen to be also a consequence. What is required for reconstruction is the Catholic program as indicated by Leo XIII and Pius XI." (Christian Century) Selected bibliography on Communism.

"Father Sheen is one of the ablest Catholic apologists in this country. As a thinker who is greatly interested in the relation of Christianity to social problems, he is in great demand for his exposition of Catholic social doctrines. His book is therefore a welcome resume of his teachings." Reinhold Niebuhr
Books p10 Ja 29 '39 1350w

"Those who by recent readings may have been led to view the Catholic church as an ally of fascism or a foe of labor have in this book a popular introduction to the truth." Rev J. L. Burke
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 28 '39 450w
Cath World 149:635 Ag '39 110w

"A definite statement of the Catholic solution to the economic ills of the world is welcome. And Monsignor Sheen is competent to give it. However, in the present book the constructive plan is secondary to two other interests: first, a vitriolic criticism directed at communism, and, second, honoring 'the church'—for its encyclicals, its Americanism, its schools (which save the tax-payers $139,600,000 a year), its contributions to democracy. . . Though its contribution is hindered by the use of abusive language, the book does indicate the Catholic proposals for bettering conditions." E. L. Snodgrass
+ — Christian Century 55:1508 D 7 '38 550w
Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 20w

SHENSTONE, WILLIAM. Letters; ed. with an introd. by Duncan Mallam [pref. by Cecil A. Moore]. 475p il $7.50 Univ. of Minn. [34s Oxford]

B or 92 39-3466

Letters of an eighteenth-century English country gentleman, whose hobbies were poetry and landscape gardening. They provide a portrait of a gentleman of leisure, strolling thru his gardens with his friends, or assisting Bishop Percy in his editing of the Reliques. Index.

Reviewed by Robert Walcott, Jr.
Atlantic Ap '39 210w

"Mr. Mallam has edited the correspondence with great care, printing from originals where possible and in the cases where they are not extant from the best accessible text. Many are dated more accurately than hitherto. The annotations are sufficiently full in so far as English society and literature are concerned; but we should have welcomed notes identifying and perhaps (since this is an unclassical age) translating the very numerous quotations from Latin authors."

SHENSTONE, WILLIAM—Continued

+ Books p12 Ag 13 '39 600w

Reviewed by J. Fisher
Mod Philol 37:106 Ag '39 600w

"The letters to Thomas Percy are for students of literature the most important in the book. . . William Shenstone lived in an age which cribbed all esthetics within two words, taste and elegance. And he would not have offended these two norms, or deviated from them, if his right hand were to be cut off. And it is in the light of these standards, now only mentioned with apology, that William Shenstone's prose, as exhibited in his letters, may be properly appraised. Not so brilliant as that of Chesterfield and Walpole, it is, nevertheless, the prose of level lawns and rolling downs. These letters are valuable as human and literary documents." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p20 F 26 '39 1250w

"Aside from stylistic merit, the letters are valuable rather for their portrayal of a habit of mind, a personality, than as the product of a moral code or the record of a system of behavior. They give us an intelligent and amiable man, perhaps in no way genuinely distinguished or successful, yet just and spirited in his comment. . . This excellent collection should assure Shenstone a solid place as a prose stylist in a century famous for its prose." J. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 18 '39 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 11 '39 120w

SHEPARD, ODELL. Connecticut, past and present. 327p il maps $3.50 Knopf

917.46 Connecticut—History. Connecticut—Description and travel (W) 39-27511

In half-humorous, half serious vein the author writes of a beloved state—its early history, its geography, geology, flora and fauna, and, at greater length, of the people who dwell in this "land of steady habits."

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

"Done in admittedly a holiday manner, but serious for all that, Mr. Shepard's present book is easier reading than his prize-winning volume on Connecticut Peddler Bronson Alcott and it is just as sound a piece of biography for it amounts to being a biography of the most slandered of forty-eight states. It contains many photographs to illustrate the face and character of the subject." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p5 Je 11 '39 1500w

Reviewed by Esther Forbes
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 1 '39 850w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 17 '39 650w

"Professor Shepard . . . writes with such love and understanding, such tolerant humor, that even the bitter things he must inevitably say in a true analysis of [Connecticut's] qualities bear the tenderness of a fond relative rather than the harshness of an analytical stranger." Mildred Gilman

+ New Repub 99:314 Jl 19 '39 600w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p4 Je 4 '39 1400w

"Mr. Shepard, though not native to Connecticut, is a stout local patriot. His book is a most engrossing mixture of history, geography, topography, and sentimentality."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 3 '39 30w

"If there is no chronological history of the state in this book, there is more essential history than in many much more pretentious volumes. Indeed, unlike the many publications that have been appearing, it is definitely a book for people to read who want to understand Connecticut, as well as a book for dwellers in that interesting state. Perhaps it rambles too much; but so do the back roads of Connecticut, and so seems to ramble the shrewd and reflective Connecticut mind." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Je 3 '39 330w

"The discriminating reader will usually find his own sympathies expanded by Mr Shepard's meditations, even if these fail to harmonize all contradictions and betray some sentimentalism of judgment. Not every detail or every thought has significance. But the book as a whole makes a pleasing and meaningful impact, and the author's style has verve, humor and expressiveness."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 1250w

"The book is rich in sensitive and melodious description of Connecticut flora, fauna (including the human), landscape in general. . . There are occasions which seem to the author to require the eloquence of poetic statement; to them he is always equal in verses which emerge autonomous from the prose. In all ways the book is a model, setting a high mark for the new crop of local poets and historians in each of the Connecticut towns, for which Professor Shepard appeals." C. P. Ives

+ Yale R n s 29:202 autumn '39 1000w

SHEPHERD, WALTER. Science marches on. 420p il maps $3 Harcourt [8s 6d Harrap]

500 Science (W) 40-3083

In popular, non-technical terms the author tells the story of the progress of science from ancient times to the present. Partial contents: Keeping records; Fire and furnace; Discovery of the world; Earth lore; The origin of life; The mystery of light; Stars and space; Electricity and magnetism; Where is science going? Index.

"With due regard for the reader's limitations in the matter of technical training and vocabulary, the author has without too condescending simplification, presented his materials in a form intelligible to anyone who has scientific curiosity even though he may have little scientific knowledge. To such a reader the book will be equally informing and fascinating."

+ Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 180w

"This book has been written by Mr. Walter Shepherd, a lecturer at the Working Men's College, London. It exhibits the skill in exposition acquired by a lecturer to general audiences, and is unusually readable. In those parts where well-known facts are being expounded the exposition is good, but the philosophical reflections are weaker." J. G. C.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 15 '39 370w

"The author's exposition is simple, vivid, and original. A certain freshness derives from Mr. Shepherd's insistence on the non-detached, emotional, and aesthetic impulses that have influenced discovery and invention. Plenty of photographs and line drawings."

+ New Yorker 15:62 Ja 6 '40 50w

"The author appears to have carried out his appointed task very successfully, and has brought to the various subjects discussed a freshness and interest which are often missing in more formal presentations." G. R. Harrison

+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 Ja 6 '40 350w

"The author writes clearly, and unquestionably the layman and scientific amateur can find in the book much to interest them. Unfortunately, however, it is marred by inaccuracies, which make us doubt if the author is qualified for his task." F. S. Taylor

— + Spec 163:382 S 15 '39 800w

" 'Science Marches On' is well documented and contains an excellent index. Many of the photographic illustrations are from commercial news syndicates, both American and British, and are of high quality and real news value."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 4 '40 220w

"Alike for its graphic description of a large number of important facts and for its helpful correlation of topics too often thought of as unconnected, the book deserves to be widely read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p583 O 7 '39 110w

SHERRIFF, ROBERT CEDRIC. The Hopkins manuscript. 352p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 39-15798

The story, presumably found in the ruins of Notting Hill by archeologists from Addis Ababa, describes the lunar cataclysm which occurred some hundreds of years before on May 3, 1946. The narrator is Edgar Hopkins, retired schoolmaster. With minute detail Hopkins describes the first views of impending doom, how it was greeted by high and low, the government's preparations to avoid the complete obliteration of mankind. The cataclysm itself wipes out much of the known life and civilizations, but courageous souls attempt to build up a new life. This is finally defeated by the greed of the existing Western nations, their civilization being eventually wiped out by the Eastern.

Booklist 36:45 O 1 '39

"It's a good vacation tale, not heavily weighted or didactic or laid on too thick, but thoughtful and amusing." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 Jl 9 '39 500w

"Mr. Sherriff would seem to be much more at ease in the trenches (yes, he was the young man who wrote 'Journey's End') or in the quiet suburbs ('Green Gates') than amongst a disintegrating world. At any rate, he picked the wrong survivor to tell his story."

— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 340w

Cath World 150:123 O '39 350w

Christian Century 56:903 Jl 19 '39 110w

"Distinguished by the character-drawing of the narrator, 'The Hopkins Manuscript' is a prophetic novel with two crises, and in its treatment, for two-thirds of the book . . . it is the ablest story of its kind since the masterpiece 'Last and First Men.' The second crisis, logical and bitter, is comparatively scamped in treatment, and there is more of squalid pathos than of excitement in the handling." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 430w

Reviewed by James Orrick

New Repub 100:222 S 27 '39 400w

Reviewed by John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 17:616 Ap 22 '39 250w

"The novel is long, but its hold on the reader's interest is never lost. It has humor and charm, variety and suspense. Its people are real, and while its plot is utterly fantastic, much of truth and of wisdom has often been conveyed under the guise of a fairy tale." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '39 800w

"'The Hopkins Manuscript' takes an old Wells formula and gives it an original twist. The result is something that, if not rich and strange, is at any rate moderately touching and novel. Mr. Sherriff has written a modest story on a grandiose theme." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:87 Jl 8 '39 600w

"This sort of thing could be done very badly; Sherriff does it very well. It is a testimonial to his skill that you go on reading the book in spite of its defects." Elmer Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:12 Jl 8 '39 360w

"The Hopkins Manuscript is among the best novels the present season has produced." Forrest Reid

+ Spec 162:606 Ap 7 '39 900w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 550w

Time 34:51 Jl 31 '39 350w

"To be candid in criticism, fiction of this sort is not Mr. Sherriff's pigeon. The idea is developed in rather schoolboyish fashion and in the development raises a hundred objections that he makes no attempt to meet. In place of the sort of scientific fancy or ingenuity of mind that such a theme requires Mr. Sherriff provides some very simple and innocent humours of poultry-keeping. The rest is altogether too vague and unterrifying to sustain interest."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Ap 1 '39 330w

Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

SHERRILL, LEWIS JOSEPH. The opening doors of childhood. 193p $1.75 Macmillan

268.6 Religious education of children 39-23875

"This book is written for parents, and deals chiefly with the inner world of children's experience of God." (Foreword) It discusses the ways and means of instilling religion and Christian ideals in the minds of growing children.

Booklist 36:143 D 15 '39

"It is a fine book." Elizabeth McCracken

+ Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 60w

SHERRILL, LEWIS JOSEPH. Understanding children. 218p $1.25 Abingdon

268.6 Child study. Religious education 39-9780

A textbook for teachers in the field of religious and moral education. Contents: Understanding children; Home and surroundings; How children differ; Values and aversions; Children's learning; Knowledge and insight; Understanding and expression; Health of personality; Growth of character; Growth through Christian fellowship.

"Parents, teachers and religious leaders will find it useful."

+ Christian Century 56:159 F 1 '39 40w

Reviewed by C. H. Brewer

Churchman 153:14 My 15 '39 190w

SHERWOOD, ROBERT EMMET. Abe Lincoln in Illinois; a play in twelve scenes; with a foreword by Carl Sandburg. 250p $2 Scribner

812 Lincoln, Abraham—Drama (W) 39-27098

Dramatization of the life of Abraham Lincoln from sometime in the 1830s, in New Salem, Illinois, to 1861, when he set out for Washington.

Booklist 35:220 Mr 1 '39

"It would be a slight compliment to Mr. Sherwood to attribute his personal success (which is very great) to his cleverness in tying in Lincoln's speeches with our current democratic despairs. . . . If his 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois' is the best play to date about our national hero, the true reasons are elsewhere. They lie, rather, in the fact that Lincoln was a complex and baffling person, not at all a simple one. His growth of conviction and purpose was slow, and his spiritual battles with himself—of which we know so little, really—must in so profound a man have been as great as Hamlet's. . . . To show Lincoln becoming a great man because of (and in spite of) internal stresses and to show it in scenes and with characters of pioneer simplicity, is a difficult and fine achievement; and the depth of subtlety Sherwood has given to his hero is a fair measure of his own rising stature as a dramatist." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p2 F 12 '39 900w

"'Abe Lincoln in Illinois' is remarkable not for the superior craftsmanship which we have come to expect from Mr. Sherwood, but for the interesting and distinctly unorthodox portrait of Lincoln in his pre-presidential days. . .

SHERWOOD, R. E.—Continued
For students and casual readers of the drama or for those interested in Lincolniana, it is well worth the reading." H. T.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 140w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p8 F 23 '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

"Had the play ended with the second act it would have been but another play of the young Lincoln, a play made chiefly memorable by the verisimilitude of its chief protagonist. It would have been lifelike but non-electric. And then comes the last act and Mr. Sherwood's drama suddenly moves into epic proportions, taking on body and imaginative power. In the opening scene of the Lincoln-Douglas debate, in the scenes of his candidacy for the presidency, and above all his final adieu to his fellow citizens of Springfield as he leaves for Washington, this final act is informed with a rare dignity, even a majesty. In these scenes Mr. Sherwood reaches heights as a dramatist he has never reached before." Grenville Vernon + Commonweal 29:20 O 28 '38 420w (Dramatic criticism)

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Commonweal 29:526 Mr 3 '39 600w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 98:134 Mr 8 '39 700w

"It has been called the best play about Lincoln ever written, which it probably is; the best play by Mr. Sherwood, which is a matter open to argument; and the greatest play by any living American, which it probably is not. But it is a very moving story of one of the world's great figures." Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p18 F 26 '39 240w

"Mr. Sherwood is one of the few who has grasped and held firm the elusive personality which is Lincoln's. He has achieved something which very few others have achieved. Lincoln's soul speaks in these lines—and nothing else really matters. He shows the long struggle which holds Lincoln with a stranglehold before the real Lincoln emerges."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 F 18 '39 390w

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 8 '39 420w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:309 Ap '39 110w

Wis Lib Bul 35:48 Mr '39

SHERWOOD, THOMAS KILGORE, and REED, CHARLES ELI. Applied mathematics in chemical engineering. 403p il $4 (25s) McGraw

660 Chemical engineering. Calculus. Differential equations 39-6340

"This work by two professors at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, intended to supplement undergraduate courses in integral and differential calculus, tells the chemical engineer how to set up differential equations to express chemical and physical conditions. Chapter VIII deals with the graphical treatment of problems; and chapter IX has to do with the theory of errors and precision of measurements. In the appendix some practical examples are offered for solution." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"While written by chemical engineers for engineers, teachers of mathematics themselves will find much of value in the practical presentation. Only in a few minor instances could there be any criticism of insufficient presentation of proofs, for mathematical processes. There is little doubt that chemists and chemical engineers will welcome this thoroughly modern treatment of mathematical techniques." H. F. Johnstone
+ Chem & Met Eng 46:373 Je '39 550w

"An adequate review of this excellent book is difficult to give because such a wealth of material is presented in very concise form and in terms easily assimilated. The manner of writing is direct, interesting, forceful, and replete with a wide variety of examples." J. H. Rushton
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:690 N 10 '39 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:42 Jl '39

SHIPPEE, LESTER BURRELL. Canadian-American relations, 1849-1874. 514p maps $3 Yale univ. press [14s Oxford]

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada. Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. 39-8603

"This book is the first volume in a group of works contributed by American historians to the historical section of the series of Canadian and American studies issued under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. . . The specific aim of the book is to elucidate one of the greatest decisions in the history of the nineteenth century on the North American continent—the decision that Canada and the United States would pursue separate yet friendly ways, each with its individual characteristics, its special position, and its national destiny. Dr. Shippee's book deals with the twenty-five crucial years in which Canada attained her majority." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by A. G. Dewey
Am Pol Sci R 33:1131 D '39 290w

"The broad outlines of this story are known to the few who have concerned themselves seriously with Canadian history; to the vast majority on both sides of the international boundary, the account will be a revelation. Professor Shippee's work cannot be praised too highly. . . Professor Shippee has worked with the skill of a master craftsman in the archival materials, in the collections of private papers in Ottawa and Washington, in the newspaper files, and in the Congressional Record which he has combed with a fine-tooth comb. His account adds many hitherto unknown details, and provides a complete picture of the politics, the pressures, and the fluctuation of public opinion behind the scenes." Carl Wittke
+ Ann Am Acad 205:182 S '39 500w

"This is the first volume to be contributed by an American writer to the historical section of the comprehensive survey of Canadian-American relations now in progress under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. It will bring added credit to a series which has already earned the respect of students, for it is a decidedly original and valuable contribution to the literature of the subject. Professor Shippee's book is learned, vital, and readable; it will have to be consulted by every student henceforth who approaches the very significant period in the relations of the United States and British America with which it deals." C. P. Stacey
+ Canadian Hist R 20:322 S '39 750w

New Repub 100:377 N 1 '39 40w

"Professor Shippee has a tangled story to tell: he does it with great learning and narrative skill."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Jl 1 '39 220w

SHIPPEY, LEE. If we only had money. 277p $2 Houghton

39-20774

A pulp magazine author, just barely able to support his family, is suddenly taken on by Hollywood at an enormous salary. The sudden wealth has a detrimental effect upon the whole family, and they are glad to return to simpler ways of living.

"Lee Shippey's novel is an improbable history of the blight of riches, the swiftest descent into the film Avernus we can recall. Mr. Shippey wants you to take it seriously, but it's a considerable strain." George Conrad
— Books p8 Ag 27 '39 450w

"Mr. Shippey writes easily and with a good understanding of the luxurious dream-world which is his subject. The book affirms all that we have read from that peculiar breed known as the Hollywood correspondent, but it adds little that is new. Once the author made the mistake of referring to our favorite actor, Basil Rathbone, as Cecil Rathbone. That made us mad." H. E. Rossell, Jr.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 230w

"This tale of family life, told with sympathy and kindly humor, is old-fashioned in that it lays stress on the traditional virtues of honesty and serious endeavor as a means to happiness. It will no doubt find a large and appreciative public among readers whose ideal of personal achievement is character rather than wealth." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 27 '39 440w
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 26 '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

SHOEMAKER, SAMUEL MOOR. God's control. 155p $1.50 Revell [5s Oliphants]

248 Christian life. Oxford group movement
39-9339

The rector of Calvary Church in New York city, who is also an Oxford group leader, writes of the necessity for a rousing of the religious life as an aid in dealing with present day problems. It is his contention that if man really wants God's control, the world can be changed.

Reviewed by A. C. Dieffenbach
Books p32 D 10 '39 150w

"A rousing, awakening challenge is contained in this earnest book which is one of the best by Dr. Shoemaker."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 18 '39 140w

SHORES, LOUIS. Basic reference books; an introduction to the evaluation, study, and use of reference materials with special emphasis on some 300 titles. 2d ed 472p $4.25 A.L.A.

028.7 Reference books—Bibliography
(W) 39-27607

"The selection of books has been increased from 200 to 300, and rearrangement of material, suggested by users of the original planographed edition [Book Review Digest, 1937] makes the book a more convenient teachers' manual. Representative reference questions are appended." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:383 Jl 15 '39

"For the first time we have a book which brings together reference literature: subscription books, nonsubscription books, and definitive writings on the theory and practice of reference work and bibliography. The critical selection of this mass of scattered literature is in itself a difficult assignment. But its reduction to the level of usefulness in the one-year library-school curriculum, while retaining its implications for the reference field worker, is a tribute to the resourcefulness and ingenuity of the author." J. T. Rubey

+ Library Q 10:130 Ja '40 950w
Wis Lib Bul 35:200 D '39

SHRIDHARANI, KRISHNALAL JETHALAL. War without violence; a study of Gandhi's method and its accomplishments [with a pref. by Oswald Garrison Villard]. 351p maps $2.50 Harcourt [9s Gollancz]

172.4 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand. India —Politics and government. Nonresistance 39-22129

Description of Gandhi's program for peace, written by a young Hindu student recently graduated from Columbia University. "Mr. Shridharani writes from personal experience of the spiritual leadership given to the independence campaigns of Mahatma Gandhi. . . He discusses the Satyagraha program, ranging from negotiation and arbitration to establishment of a substitute government, and describes in detail the many triumphs of the Gandhi movement." (Sat R of Lit) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Read Bain
Am Soc R 4:885 D '39 1050w
Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

"Krishnalal Shridharani's book is a comprehensive and warmly sympathetic presentation." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p6 S 3 '39 1350w

Reviewed by Nancy Millette
Boston Transcript p1 S 2 '39 360w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey
Christian Century 57:19 Ja 3 '40 550w
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 4 '39 120w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss
Churchman 153:18 N 15 '39 180w
Foreign Affairs 18:381 Ja '40 20w

"One of our own great memories, Henry Thoreau, is among those who inspired Gandhi in his lifetime of dedication to service of the Indian People. If only for that reason, War Without Violence is a book for the intelligent reader who wishes to penetrate the wall of British-inspired censorship." H. S. Santesson

+ Living Age 357:99 S '39 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 149:712 D 23 '39 750w
N Y Times p16 Ja 28 '40 500w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 26 '39 320w

"In spite of some evasiveness as to just how nonviolent direct action would work outside India, the author presents the case for its wider use reasonably enough. But his book is more notable for the history and explanation of the Gandhi movement, which has never been so clearly or (granting Mr Shridharani's sympathies are all on the side of Gandhi) so impressively described before." D. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 S 1 '39 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p727 D 16 '39 500w
Wis Lib Bul 35:161 O '39

SHROPSHIRE, DENYS WILLIAM TINNISWOOD. The church and primitive peoples. 466p $5.75 Macmillan [12s 6d S.P.C.K.]

299.63 Bantus. Religion, Primitive. Society, Primitive. Missions—South Africa. Church of England—Missions 39-6952

"Dr. Shropshire explains that [his book] 'is a reasoned plea for the careful discrimination, preservation, transmutation, and transformation of the religious and cultural institutions and beliefs of the Southern Bantu, by and within a full orbed presentation of the Christian religion.' To do this, not for technical anthropologists but for all, especially Anglican Church folk, who are concerned for the progress of primitive people, Dr. Shropshire divides his book into two parts. The first, and by far the major, portion is devoted to an account of Bantu religion as he found it through years of missionary experience and study. The second part, Evaluation of the Beliefs and Institutions, is an attempt to show how the Bantu religion 'may be modified and enhanced so as to bring it into harmony with a full orbed Christianity.'" Living Church

"An important book, well indexed and documented and equipped with a valuable bibliography." W. E. Leidt

+ Living Church 100:456 Ap 26 '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p564 S 3 '38 450w

SHUGG, ROGER WALLACE. Origins of class struggle in Louisiana; a social history of white farmers and laborers during slavery and after, 1840-1875. 382p map $3.50 La. state univ. press

309.1763 Louisiana—Social conditions. Slavery in the U.S. Plantation life 39-33962

"In this inquiry into the Louisiana castes—planters' aristocracy, yeoman farmers and laborers, and Negroes—through the antebellum years, the Civil War, and up to the agrarian uprisings of the 1890's the author seeks to show that the war made freedom of the Negroes but did not change the lowly status of the masses, the poor white people. . . . Professor Shugg's social history of Louisiana is a documented work based upon his own examination of hitherto unexplored records of the State." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Science Monitor p20 N 28 '39 500w

"Authoritative, well documented study."
+ New Repub 102:62 Ja 8 '40 50w

SHULER, MARJORIE (MRS FELIX CHARLES). A passenger to adventure. 261p il map $3 (12s 6d) Appleton-Century

629.13 Aeronautics—Flights. Voyages around the world
39-32849

An account of the author's trip around the world by commercial airplane. The trip included visits to England and Greece, Egypt, India, Australia and China and across the Pacific. Some of the material in the book originally appeared in the Christian Science Monitor.

"A lively narrative consisting of a series of quick impressions of places and people, all strung like beads along her line of flight. The chatty style of the report puts it among those books to which stay-at-homes turn for vicarious adventure."
+ Books p21 N 19 '39 200w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p3 O 21 '39 130w
Christian Science Monitor p20 O 4 '39 550w
N Y Times p16 S 24 '39 350w

"A chatty travel book which seeks more to discover and describe the character of the places she visited than to deal with the organization of world-wide air transport or the sensations involved in putting Puck's girdle about the world. But Miss Shuler has the knack of writing much as she might talk, and one becomes quite intimately acquainted by the end of the book with one of those persistent persons who are determined to see all the sights in the course of their globe-trotting."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p23 Ja 13 '40 200w

SHULTZ, HAZEL. Housing and the home. 420p il $2 Appleton-Century

643 Home economics. House decoration
(W) 39-27512

Textbook in home economics for secondary schools. The sections are on housing and health, social significance of housing, home furnishing, management within the house, selection of materials for household use, paid household labor, locating and planning a place for a home, cost of housing. The author is instructor, home-study department, University of Chicago. Index.

Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 5 '39 40w

"The volume is fully illustrated and contains much that will be of value to any home-maker."
+ Christian Century 56:677 My 24 '39 50w
J Home Econ 31:585 O '39 90w

"The book is the more valuable because its content was drawn from material included in state courses of study and because it includes a review of pertinent literature in the field of housing. Although it was written with the interests of girls in home economics in mind, it may also be used in such classes in which boys are enrolled or in social-studies classes having units in housing." Tessie Agan
+ School R 48:72 Ja '40 260w

"Many books have been written recently about the home. Few contain as much sound common sense as this American text book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p518 S 2 '39 150w

SHURTLEFF, HAROLD ROBERT. The log cabin myth; a study of the early dwellings of the English colonists in North America; ed. with an introd. by Samuel Eliot Morison. 243p il $2.50 Harvard univ. press 728 Architecture, Colonial. Architecture, Domestic—U.S.

39-33512

"In this volume the late Mr Shurtleff, who was director of research for the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg, proves that the earliest dwellings of the Pilgrim Fathers and other New England colonists (as well as Virginia colonists) were not log cabins." Springf'd Republican

"The work is excellent. Illumined by flashes of humor, it is not merely good history but good reading." H. M. J.
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 180w

"The thesis is not new, for Fiske Kimball, Henry C. Mercer, George Francis Dow, Carl Bridenbaugh, T. J. Wertenbaker, and other authorities have written to the same effect, but much of Mr. Shurtleff's evidence is new, and the treatment is concrete and thorough."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 27 '40 550w

"As Dr. Morison points out in his introduction, 'Shurtleff's work is not a mere "debunking" job. It is a positive contribution to our knowledge of earlier colonial housing.' And that knowledge has a social as well as an architectural interest. Mr. Shurtleff is not concerned, in short, merely with what the English colonists did not do: he wants to show what they did and why they did it; to see what was the real story of the log cabin on this continent, too."
+ N Y Times p38 D 10 '39 480w

Reviewed by H. S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 21:17 F 3 '40 350w

"The error has been attacked before, but Mr Shurtleff brings together all the evidence in an attractive and convincing manner, showing what the earliest dwellings of the English colonists were probably like."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 120w

SHUSTER, GEORGE NAUMAN. Look away! 403p $2.50 Macmillan
39-24723

Edith Treloar was a Northerner; her husband, Robert, a Southerner practising law in Wisconsin. On the outbreak of the Civil war Robert is torn between his love of his wife and his loyalty to the South, and finally joins with the South. The story is of Edith's struggle to keep her home, her pride, and her love for Robert until the war is over.

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p11 O 22 '39 550w
Boston Transcript p9 Ja 6 '40 100w
Cath World 150:370 D '39 70w

"It is a good thing for all of us, when we have hardly recovered from the disillusionment of one war experience and are beginning to feel the moral tensions of another, to be so reminded that there are some things in human nature that are deeper than illusion, and some possibilities in human life that are beyond the caprice of external circumstance. That the reminder should be given with such richness of detail of natural environment and of social setting, and with such unfailing sympathy and gusto, puts us very pleasantly as well as profitably in the debt of a writer to whom we are already indebted on so many counts." H. C. White

+ Commonweal 31:81 N 10 '39 480w
New Repub 101:178 N 29 '39 40w

"All the scaffolding and externals of an exciting historical novel are present in George Shuster's new novel, but the writing lacks luster and the eventfulness of the story seems only to be motion without much meaning. The situation is promising, even if somewhat familiar." Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p7 N 5 '39 360w

"Much the best of the book is to be found in its least ambitious pages. Several of the minor characters are done with great charm. The range in interest is wide. Mr. Shuster writes with that air of tender and indulgent irony toward the past which likes to pin verbal antimacassars on all the furniture of the mind." J. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 16 '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SIEGEL, MAX. Boys' club; il. by Paul Quinn. 249p map $2 Houghton

39-9396

"The subject of this story [is] the development of a boys' club in a present-day American city from a small group under its own steam to a large-scale power for good in the community." Books

---

"I wish they did not talk as if they had escaped from the golden age of the 'Youth's Companion,' and that some one had edited out the author's clichés, but I am bound to say that as a combined case-history and tract this story will undoubtedly give existing boys' clubs constructive ideas on which to grow, and quite likely inspire a number of new ones to start." M. L. Becker

Books p8 Je 4 '39 500w

"Not enough zip."

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 20w

SIGMOND, ALEXIUS A. J. de. See Sigmond, E.

SIGMOND, ELEK. The principles of soil science; tr. from the Hungarian by Arthur B. Yolland; tr. ed. by G. V. Jacks; foreword by Sir John Russell. 362p il $6.75 Nordemann [22s 6d Murby]

631.4 Soils [Agr39-292]

"De Sigmond is known in America chiefly for his studies on the reclamation of alkali soils. . . As professor of agricultural technology at the University of Technical Sciences in Budapest, however, he is regarded in European circles as an expert on all phases of soil science. [The present work] was first published some time ago in Hungarian. In its original form it was an attempt at a comprehensive outline of all aspects of modern pedology. The material was divided into four parts: (1) 'Genetics,' the origin of soils; (2) 'Agronomy,' the physical, chemical, and biological properties of soils; (3) 'Systematics,' the classification of soils; and (4) 'Cartography,' the geographical distribution and mapping of soil types. In making the English translation, it seemed advisable to leave out not only many details of local interest but also the sections under 'Agronomy' dealing with soil physics and soil microbiology." J Geol

---

Reviewed by W. F. Read
J Geol 47:211 F '39 210w
Nature 143:98 Ja 21 '39 280w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:29 Ap '39

SILONE, IGNAZIO. The school for dictators: tr. from the Italian by Gwenda David and Eric Mosbacher. (Story press bk) 336p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Cape, J]

321 Dictators (W) 38-29072

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938

"This is a brilliant, searching, and immensely readable book by the foremost Italian novelist of today . . . who is now living in exile in Switzerland; and it ought to be in the hands of everyone who wishes to understand why the promises of democracy and civilization have led since the war to tyranny and the present drift to barbarism." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '39 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

"A witty yet profound satire on dictatorship."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:629 Ap '39 10w

"Like Machiavelli's The Prince, The School for Dictators is a double-edged weapon. Sane, timely and brilliant, it should be meditated upon by every person who does not want it to happen here." Michele Cantarella

+ Living Age 356:95 Mr '39 280w

"This book supplies in a very readable form the answer to most of the questions that people ask one about Fascism. The account of the methods and reasons for Hitler's success in Germany and for Mussolini's in Italy could scarcely be better done. Here too is an admirably selected body of quotations from Nazi and Fascist literature—a complete armoury for those who still hope to save the British from the mistakes of Continental Social Democrats. . . And there is not a dull page in the book." Kingsley Martin

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:178 F 4 '39 1100w
Pratt p8 spring '39

"This new book is a collection of dialogues on the theme of dictatorship. It is nothing else. . . Professor Pickup, Mr. W. ('the Man of Tomorrow'), and Thomas the Cynic talk their fill, and amusingly within their own characters, on the theory and practice of being a dictator. That is all that the book is—and therefore it is not every novel reader's eight-and-six-penceworth. But it most decidedly is mine. I have enjoyed it enormously, and meantime realise that I have learnt a great deal—it is the work of a man both learned and precise—and the sustained contempt of it is, parodoxically, a sweet dew on our arid, ugly time." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 162:276 F 17 '39 490w

"Signor Silone is an Italian in exile, and his talent, which is very considerable, suffers from its divorce from the soil. This is a brilliant and powerful book, but it does not drive its roots deep. The theme is treated comprehensively, but there is a touch of undergraduate flippancy about its presentation."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 11 '39 330w

SIMON, BELLE, and MICHELLE, MARION. Peg and Pete see New York. [63p] il map $1.50 Bobbs

917.471 New York (city)—Juvenile literature 39-7069

Guidebook to New York city in the form of photographs and rhymed couplets, showing the adventures of two children visiting such places as Grand Central station, Fifth avenue, the Empire State building, Radio City, Riverside Drive, Chinatown, the zoo, etc.

SIMON, B., and MICHELLE, M.—Continued

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ap 23 '39 220w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 26 '39 100w

"The photographs are accompanied by a text of simple but decidedly mediocre verse. The pictures in the book are good and clear, but the children are so obviously posed on the steps of the Library, riding in the subway, or wherever else they may be, that the whole book seems unreal. No child would think that this is the way children live in New York." L. R. Davis

— + Horn Bk M 15:174 My '39 170w

"On the whole, the photographs are excellent, although a few are unnecessary and could as well have been omitted. The text that accompanies the pictures is merely doggerel verse detracting from the photographs rather than contributing to them. There is definite need for material on modern New York City. In view of the particular interest in that locale this year, libraries might use a book of this type as ephemeral material until something better comes along." E. G. Mullan

+ — Library J 64:380 My 1 '39 150w

"The inclusion in the photographs of these children in easy, unforced attitudes reduces the vastness of the city to something much less formidable to 6 and 10 year olds, and the pictures themselves have the beautiful distinctness of a fine day in New York. Endpapers boast an easily read and decorative map of the city. It is a pity that the accompanying verses do not equal the pictorial standard. Jingling and trite, they add nothing but information, and not much of that." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 My 7 '39 240w

SIMON, CHARLIE MAY (HOGUE) (MRS JOHN GOULD FLETCHER). Bright morning; il. by Howard Simon. 241p $2 Dutton (W) 39-6274

"This story [is] of a Memphis family making its united stand against poverty with quiet courage. The period is that of hair-ribbons and high buttoned boots, starched petticoats and beaver hats. . . Yet the spirit of the Gill family is one which could have been found in an American home at almost any period and it has a special appeal today." N Y Times

---

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

"This is a nice old-fashioned story with many nice old-fashioned drawings of the family and how they lived happily even in the year that many of their fellow citizens believed a prophecy that the city would sink into the river on Sept. 13. . . These young Tennesseans were lovable and busy and content with so little it seems only right that at last the bright morning should break that brings father his first check, and that they should all set off directly for a trip to Washington, to spend it in style." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 16 '39 350w

"As gay and delightful as its title." E. M. Mack

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"This story of a few years in the lives of the Gills . . . has the kind of family life and loyalty in it, the kind of real people, and the quality of writing, to make it a permanently favorite story for girls from ten to twelve. Grown-ups will enjoy it, too."

+ Horn Bk M 15:167 My '39 140w

"This book may not be as popular as the author's Arkansas mountain stories, but should appeal to ten- to twelve-year-old girls who like stories of family life." Marian Herr

+ Library J 64:425 My 15 '39 200w

"It is a gentle, rather wistful story, a genuine page of Americana, printed in rather subdued colors, but as such an experience for girls from 8 to 12 or so who like to savor the everyday life of simple people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 23 '39 380w

New Yorker 15:106 My 13 '39 20w

"This very satisfactory juvenile has distinction and appeal."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 310w

Wis Lib Bul 35:220 D '39

SIMONDS, HERBERT RUMSEY. Industrial plastics [foreword by Carleton Ellis]. 371p il $4.50 Pitman

668 Plastic materials. Plastic industries 39-19318

This book is primarily interested in plastics as engineering materials, their composition and properties and the many uses to which they are put. Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Lee
Chem & Met Eng 46:724 N '39 140w

Reviewed by G. M. Kline
Ind & Eng Chem 17:669 O 20 '39 440w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:45 Jl '39

SIMONS, ERIC N., and GREGORY, EDWIN. The structure of steel simply explained; with an introd. by F. C. Lea. 115p il $1.50 Prentice-Hall [3s 6d Blackie & son]

669.1 Steel—Metallography [38-32797]

"Intended for those who buy, sell, study, or manipulate steel to meet specific requirements, this little work explains in fairly untechnical language the physics and chemistry of the subject, impurities, alloy steels, effects of heat treatment, microscopic structure, testing, corrosion, stainless steel, and X-ray examination." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"A highly readable and understandable book on metal structure."

+ Chem & Met Eng 45:500 S '38 60w

"The subject of the structures of steels is one of very considerable importance from many points of view, and the present volume will be welcomed by many readers. It gives a very clear and intelligible account of the subject and is well illustrated."

+ Nature 144:198 Jl 29 '39 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:44 Jl '38

SIMPSON, CHARLES WALTER. Animal and bird painting; the outlook and technique of the artist; il. by author, and with reproductions of famous paintings. (Practical drawing ser) 143p $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

758 Animal painting and illustration 39-32484

"Different classes of animals are treated in some detail, with short accounts of their origin and varieties. The student of animal painting will find help in the author's references to the particular snags and difficulties in the matter, and in his very practical advice on the method of catching and memorizing a special aspect of a moving subject. Considerable attention is given to the correct sequence of movements in walking and running animals. The influence of light in eliminating detail must not prevent close representation of essential form and solidity. . . The book is well and copiously illustrated by black-and-white reproductions of the works of old and modern masters of animal painting." Nature

---

Reviewed by G. M. Sutton
Books p12 Jl 23 '39 750w

"An eminently readable book."

+ Nature 144:373 Ag 26 '39 150w

"What specially distinguishes this book by a well-known painter of animals and birds, as well as landscapes, is breadth of view. This is shown not only in the survey of the subject but also in the choice of illustrations. . . Mr.

Simpson's choice of such things makes all the odder some of the opinions expressed in his introduction."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 15 '39 280w

SIMPSON, SIR JOHN HOPE. The refugee problem; report of a survey. 637p maps $10 (25s) Oxford [25s Royal inst. of int. affairs]

341.5 Refugees, Political 39-21549

"In this volume Sir John Hope Simpson presents a survey of refugees which was undertaken in September, 1937. It studies exhaustively the origins and course of refugee movements and also records the methods adopted in dealing with the problem, both internationally and by individual Governments, and describes how the great philanthropic organisations have struggled to cope with situations which have taxed their resources to the utmost. This volume takes the place of the Preliminary Report which was issued in July, 1938 [Book Review Digest, June, 1939] for the use of those who at Evian in that month and at the League Assembly in September had to make decisions on the questions involved. The material on which the survey was based was collected up to October, 1938." Spec

Reviewed by V. A. O'Rourke
Am Pol Sci R 33:540 Je '39 260w

"Its tone is utterly objective; but in the very accumulation of its facts it is a terrible indictment of all who are responsible for sending countless unoffending people into homeless exile."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:809 Jl '39 60w
Nature 143:1041 Je 24 '39 900w

Reviewed by Frank Singleton
Spec 162:139 Ja 27 '39 700w

"The report is written objectively, without the use of bitter words, but in its accumulation of facts it constitutes the most impressive indictment of tyrannous racial doctrine in practice ever penned. It is startling in its revelation of the extent of the evil and of the unhappy consequences."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p66 F 4 '39 460w

SIMPSON, SIR JOHN HOPE. Refugees; preliminary report of a survey; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs, London. 233p maps pa $1.25 Oxford [pa 3s 6d Royal inst. of int. affairs]

341.5 Refugees, Political 39-2049

" 'A preliminary report of a survey' being prepared for the Royal Institute of International Affairs, containing detailed information on the origins of the present refugee problem and on the situation in certain countries of refuge, together with some concrete proposals for solving the problem." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by F. J. Brown
Ann Am Acad 203:209 My '39 450w
Economist 132:268 Ag 6 '38 1500w
Foreign Affairs 17:435 Ja '39 40w
Geog R 29:161 Ja '39 800w

"Sir John Simpson represents a unique combination of statistical and historical knowledge and insight into the situation of the refugee with passion for the right cause." G. S. Anders

+ New Repub 98:257 Ap 5 '39 500w

Reviewed by H. E. Wagner
Social Studies 30:88 F '39 280w
Spec 161:189 Jl 29 '38 1350w

SIMPSON, KEMPER. The margin trader; a study in trade in securities and insecurity in trade. 170p $2 Harper

332.64 Securities. Speculation 38-13669

"This book is a brief and outspoken attack on margin traders and stockbrokers by a former official of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The author states that security speculation plays an important part in causing booms and recessions in general business, mainly through its effect on bank funds and banking policy." Am Econ R

"The book is carefully reasoned and fortified by statistics that bear the earmarks of accuracy. There is, however, one apparent exception to this last remark—the amount of net gains and losses reported for the income tax. Mr. Simpson gives figures for 1934 that cannot be reconciled with the published Statistics of Income." R. S. Tucker

+ — Am Econ R 28:566 S '38 100w
Special Libraries 30:138 Ap '39

SIMS, NEWELL LEROY. The problem of social change. 477p $3.50 Crowell

301 Sociology. Civilization—History 39-23215

"The author, professor of sociology at Oberlin, has written this book primarily as a textbook for his students. Drawing upon the literature of the subject, including much that is not familiar to other than special students, he describes and analyzes the processes of social change and evaluates such factors as race and geographical influences." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 50w

"The volume is . . . a splendidly objective interpretation of those viewpoints presented according to a pattern of organization which provides for the book an essential and surprising unity. The style is scholarly throughout but never dull. . . But since Professor Sims has almost nowhere directly quoted the authors whose theories he analyzes, one wonders if an equally brief and competently constructed source book would not contribute much to the reader's interest and comprehension. 'Why don't you speak for yourself, John?' seems as appropriate a challenge in sociology as it is in romance." E. G. Olsen

+ — Social Educ 3:665 D '39 600w
Social Studies 30:336 N '39 10w

SINCLAIR, MRS BERTHA (MUZZY). See Bower, B. M., pseud.

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. Marie Antoinette; a play. 200p $2 Vanguard [7s 6d Laurie]

812 Marie Antoinette, consort of Louis XVI, king of France—Drama. Fersen, Hans Axel von, grefve—Drama 39-7617

Drama based upon the life of Marie Antoinette. "What Mr. Sinclair has done is to present, in a series of brief and significant glimpses, Marie Antoinette's entire life in France, against the bewildering changes of its background. From first to last she was bewildered, as she was well intentioned and blundering. And we see her in the mixture of wistfulness and defiance that must have held a large place in her character, in a tragic drama from first to last." (N Y Times.)

"Excellent reading, and probably much better history than the recent motion picture. . . It is vividly and skillfully done for the reader, but its stage worthiness is another matter. Too many of the scenes do not come up to a climax: the climaxes are reserved for the transition passages of choral narration or suggestion, at times assuming almost a radio technique." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books p11 Jl 23 '39 150w

Reviewed by Byron Dexter
New Repub 100:223 S 27 '39 450w

"A stirring, tender and thoughtful drama about Marie Antoinette. . . This is, indeed, a very fine book. It is interesting and dramatic on first reading. With a second reading its interest deepens and grows." K. W.

SINCLAIR, U. B.—Continued
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 30 '39 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p531 S 9 '39 300w

SINGER, ISRAEL JOSHUA. East of Eden; tr. from the Yiddish by Maurice Samuel. 403p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 39-27156

Mattes Ritter, a poverty-stricken Jewish peddler living in Poland, is the central character of the first section of this story. His only son, intended for the rabbinate, with leanings toward communism and Russia, is the protagonist of the second part.

Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39

"Were it not for this novelist's rich knowledge of Jewish tradition and culture, his ability to picture vividly the life of the poorest of the Jewish families in the little village of Pyask, the reader might feel that this story revelled in pathos. Singer is, however, a skillful writer, a novelist who throws his characters into believable action and his hero, Nachman Ritter, son of Reb Mattes, the peddlar is tenderly drawn." E. L. Walton
— + Books p2 Mr 5 '39 850w

Discussion by the author
Books p24 Mr 26 '39 250w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 21 '39 380w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss
Nation 148:326 Mr 18 '39 1050w
New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 60w

Reviewed by John Mair
New Statesman & Nation 17:707 My 6 '39 480w

"One naturally approaches 'East of Eden' with high hopes, but it must be said at the outset that one's hopes are not fulfilled. It is not simply that 'East of Eden' lacks, from the nature of its intentions, the epic scope of Mr. Singer's great picture of industrial Poland; it lacks also the unflagging narrative drive and the vigorous presentation of character. It fails for one reason, because it starts out one way and ends another. . . The first half of Mr. Singer's story—reminiscent of Sholem Asch's minor Jewish novels—is human and interesting. It is no more, however, than a fairly typical family chronicle, nowhere suggesting, in stature or effect, the man who wrote 'The Brothers Ashkenazi.' " Louis Kronenberger
— + N Y Times p7 Mr 12 '39 700w

"No modern writer describes the life of poor Jewish peasants more affectingly than Mr. Singer. . . An adult and disturbing novel."
+ New Yorker 15:94 Mr 11 '39 60w
Pratt p31 summer '39

"For at least half its length Mr. Singer's new novel is equal in style and naturalistic fidelity to anything of his we have seen. . . [But a] note of despair closes the book. Not too convincingly, for one feels that Mr. Singer has stacked the cards, and dragged Nachman Ritter out of the logical orbit of his life to point this counsel of despair. Not that political commentary is outside the novelist's province. But Nachman was hardly the crucible in which to test the issues of this critical day; and in a hardier character, Mr. Singer might have found the stuff to present a different answer to the question." N. L. Rothman
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 11 '39 550w

"Mr Singer makes it very clear that he has no use for the Russian experiment. The almost reckless piling of one calamity after another on Comrade Nachman in the Soviet Republic tends to weaken the effect of the latter and documentary phase of 'East of Eden.' But in spite of this, 'East of Eden' has graphic quality and solid interest."
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 480w
Time 33:76 Mr 13 '39 350w

"The book . . . is almost too well written in that the reader cannot fail to enter in imagination the lowest depths of mental and physical agony. What useful end is served by books of this kind, and in what sense they can be counted as literature, is a question by no means easy to answer with justice."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p215 Ap 15 '39 330w

SINGH, ANUP. Nehru: the rising star of India. 168p $1.75 Day

B or 92 Nehru, Jawahar Lal. India—Politics and government 39-30778

Brief biography of the Brahmin nationalist leader in India who ranks next to Gandhi in importance. The book gives the facts of his English schooling, his political career, his conversion to Socialism, and his rise to power in India.

Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

"Dr. Anup Singh has drawn freely upon Nehru's autobiography in preparing a well knit, sympathetic and fair-minded sketch. He dissects with particular skill the divergent traits in Nehru's personality, the half-compassionate cynicism of the cultured skeptic who has become an Indian myth, the embarrassment of an English university man transformed into a popular saint." Geoffrey Bruun
+ Books p24 O 29 '39 280w
Living Age 357:393 D '39 70w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 149:712 D 23 '39 130w
New Yorker 15:103 O 14 '39 40w

SINNOTT, EDMUND WARE, and DUNN, LESLIE CLARENCE. Principles of genetics. 3d ed 408p il $3.50 (21s) McGraw

575.1 Heredity. Variation (biology). Eugenics 39-3781

"Without an appreciable increase in size, this edition includes adequate treatment of recent work, such as position effect, somatic crossing-over, salivary-gland chromosomes, cytoplasmic inheritance and heterosis. This has been achieved by considerable rewriting, which appears to have improved the text. This third edition contains a remarkably complete and well-illustrated simple statement of the elements of genetics for biological students. The subjects of crossing-over and the chromosome theory of heredity, highly important in modern genetics, are dealt with particularly well." (Nature) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1926. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 35:236 Mr 15 '39
Nature 143:876 My 27 '39 80w

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL, and BAMFORD, FRANCIS. Edinburgh. 320p il $4 Houghton [12s 6d Faber]

941.445 Edinburgh—History. Scotland—History [38-20979]

The book is a narrative of events in Scottish history that took place in Edinburgh up to 1800. The last chapter is mainly concerned with the architecture of the city, the painting of Raeburn, the place of Scotland in the romantic movement, and George IV's visit to the city in 1822. Illustrated with 12 plates. Bibliography. Index.

Books p5 Mr 26 '39 400w
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 90w

"Its plates are unusual and excellent, it is written with the distinction that the Athens of the North demands, and it ends where good architecture in the British Isles ends—with the reign of George IV." V. S. Pritchett
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 22 '38 310w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
Nation 149:50 Jl 8 '39 500w
New Repub 98:231 Mr 29 '39 50w

"Its troubled history is eruditely epitomised. The atmosphere of the medieval town is as successfully evoked as that of the 'modern Athens.' Every figure on the crowded canvas has life and individuality. Maybe the space allotted to macabre incidents and queer personalities is disproportionate, but they are described with such virtuosity, that this is a felix culpa." Christopher St John
+ New Statesman & Nation 15:1074 Je 25 '38 110w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack
N Y Times p2 Ap 23 '39 1000w

"This book might be said to give some idea of the town's history up to the middle of the eighteenth century. But the authors' treatment of the next eighty years is very puzzling. David Hume, Adam Smith, Robertson the historian, Henry Mackenzie, the men who gave Edinburgh such a reputation on the Continent as it had not enjoyed for over two centuries, are not even named. There is no mention of the periodicals—the original Edinburgh Review, the Mirror and Lounger; nothing about Robert Fergusson, Edinburgh's poet; nothing about the doctors and scientists—the Monros, Gregory, Black—who were drawing students from England and abroad; nothing about the writers who made Blackwood's and the Edinburgh Review such powerful literary influences."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p349 My 21 '38 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

SKIDMORE, HUBERT. River rising! il. by Benton Spruance. 298p $2 Doubleday
(W) 39-27692

Because his parents died from lack of medical aid, York Allen decided to become a doctor. His final year of teaching before entering medical school was to be in a lumber camp, near his home in the Blue Ridge mountains. Misfortune followed misfortune, but York persevered and succeeded in his efforts to teach a school from which other teachers had been thrown out, and to clear himself of suspicion. For older boys.

Booklist 36:19 S '39

"Mr. Skidmore was born and raised in this region, his hero's experiences are in part those of doctors, teachers and loggers he knows, and the speech of his people—save in occasional moments of grandeur—is thoroughly convincing. His own is more stilted, and the need for flash-backs makes the story slow in getting under way, but the slightly Algerine course of the plot will not be noticed in the smashing rush of the action." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ag 27 '39 400w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:302 S '39 100w

"An old plot but a well-written, worth while book." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 140w

"This is a vigorous tale of action and suspense for older boys, but it is also a flavorsome portrayal of the hill country and its people, and it is firmly grounded in the spirit of service and courage which motivates the young doctor." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 20 '39 320w
Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

SKINNER, CLARENCE RUSSELL, and others. Tufts papers on religion. See Tufts papers on religion

SKINNER, OTIS. Last tragedian. See Booth, E. T.

SLATE, GEORGE LEWIS. Lilies for American gardens. 258p il $3.50 Scribner
635.93432 Lilies 39-27279

Comprehensive book on lilies with chapters on history, structure and classification of lilies, breeding and garden culture, choice of bulbs, kind of soil needed and its preparation, diseases and pests and their control. The author is associate in research at the New York State Agricultural Experiment station. Index.

Booklist 35:266 Ap 15 '39

"Mr. Slate knows lilies intimately and from every angle. The pages of his freely illustrated volume reflect the thoroughness of his experience and the soundness of his judgments on this, his favorite, flower. You will find no mawkish sentimentality here, so if that sort of thing appeals to you, better get some other book. But if you want authoritative facts and advice, here they are." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p13 My 14 '39 140w

Reviewed by W. H. Clark
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 18 '39 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39
Springf'd Republican p8 My 2 '39 480w
Wis Lib Bul 35:62 Ap '39

SLATER, ROBERT HENRY LAWSON. God of the living; or, Human destiny. 325p $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Nicholson]
201 Religion—Philosophy. Christianity 40-2877

"The Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Rangoon has written an apology for the Christian faith in its warfare with alien philosophies and decadent cultures. The author makes a valiant attempt to distinguish mere tradition from orthodoxy, thus freeing Christianity from its soul-destroying barnacle. The volume is developed upon three convictions which are basic to the writer. 1. 'The belief that for each human life there is a divine plan.' 2. 'The conclusion that particular problems of conduct could only be solved in the light of belief concerning the nature of this destiny.' 3. 'The conviction that we can and do know something about the future life.' " Boston Transcript

---

"The author is to be commended for his purpose in explaining the historic faith of Christianity to this age, his thought is clear and his use of psychological principles sound. The book will be appreciated most by those of liberal evangelical mind."
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 14 '39 240w

"His discussions of faith and reason, time and eternity, progress, relation, personality, harmony, the meaning of history and such terms is excellent, and what he has to say about religion and philosophy is particularly good. A careful piece of work."
+ Christian Century 57:22 Ja 3 '40 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Jl 22 '39 420w

SLAVSON, SAMUEL RICHARD. Character education in a democracy. 226p $2.50 Assn. press
370 Education. Character education

"Mr. Slavson has given us in this latest book a probing study of the function of schools and social agencies in preserving democracy, which, he sees, as the only hope of civilization in an industrialized world, rapidly losing its sense of the value of the individual in mass-minded doctrines. Reinforcing the theoretical with the practical, Mr. Slavson, in a series of penetrating discussions, considers the methods by which the family, the school, the community and the recreational center can develop a citizenry capable of adjusting and changing the present competitive system to the idealistic concept inherent in real American democracy." (N Y Times) Index.

SLAVSON, S. R.—Continued

Booklist 36:37 O 1 '39

"'Character Education in a Democracy' should inspire social leaders and teachers to make of their educational, social, religious and recreational agencies real bulwarks against undemocratic ideologies. In Mr. Slavson's unified picture of the social scene he has given us a solid, constructive plan for meeting the present crisis." G. Lefkowith

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 6 '39 360w

Reviewed by D. L. Adler
Survey 75:326 O '39 240w

SLOAN, JOHN. Gist of art; principles and practise expounded in the classroom and studio, recorded with the assistance of Helen Farr. 346p il $3.75 Am. artists group, inc, 106 7th av, N.Y.

751 Painting—Technique. Art criticism. Art—Study and teaching (W) 39-27758

Personal observations on art and painting, by an American artist and teacher, with some suggestions for the young artist. Includes over two hundred reproductions of the author's works. Index.

Booklist 36:40 O 1 '39

"The book is excellently designed and printed, and the illustrations, chosen by the artist and discussed with engaging frankness, represent the moods and attainments of John Sloan at every stage of his development." Thomas Craven

+ Books p6 O 1 '39 700w

Reviewed by A. M. Maginnis

+ Boston Transcript p13 S 29 '39 400w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 25 '39 600w

Reviewed by David Burnham
Commonweal 31:16 O 27 '39 600w

Reviewed by Constance Rourke
Nation 149:527 N 11 '39 220w

"The very fervor of this kaleidoscopic torrent is infectious. Swept forward—and holding on, sometimes, for dear life—the reader begins almost at once to feel a curious warm tingle of exhilaration. This talk is as honest as it is candent. There is real pith, even though frequently, because of their unmarshaled opulence, ideas tend somewhat to miss scoring the impact that, isolated, reinforced, expanded and clarified, they might command." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p2 O 8 '39 950w

"Salty, cryptic, and sometimes rambling commentary. . . The text is aimed especially at the art student, but some 200 reproductions of Sloan's own work give the book a general interest."

+ New Yorker 15:71 S 30 '39 60w

No Am 248:416 winter '40 100w

Pratt p16 winter '40

"Taken out of their studio context, and without benefit of the inflections, the gestures, the classroom demonstrations which, during Mr. Sloan's years at the Art Students' League, must have given point to words which 'never mean exactly what they say,' his aphorisms in cold print inevitably seem trite and repetitious. Although they contain, for the student of Sloan's art, illuminating hints which he alone could have provided, the non-professional reader will regret the disproportionate space given to these chapters, and wish more had been said about the days when Sloan cartooned for Collier's and The Masses." Oliver Larkin

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:38 O 14 '39 450w

School Arts 39:6a N 4 '39 160w

Reviewed by Ruth Laughlin
Survey G 28:768 D '39 470w

SLOAN, PATRICK ALAN. Russia without illusions [introd. by Harry F. Ward]. 243p pa 75c Modern age [7s 6d Muller]

914.7 Russia—Description and travel. Communism—Russia (W) 39-27675

"Mr. Sloan, a young British economics instructor, spent seven years in the U.S.S.R., lived with Russians, taught them English, travelled widely. He acknowledges imperfections in the Soviet Union but is completely sold on it as a way of life." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 36:12 S '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"Pat Sloan is well known in the Communist movement as a simple, lucid and sincere speaker on Russia, the editor of Russia To-day, and the author of a short book 'Soviet Democracy.' The present book . . . will be regarded by many as his best achievement so far."

+ Economist 133:712 D 31 '38 250w

Foreign Affairs 17:817 Jl '39 40w

"A patchwork of half-truths and extravagant claims of a wearisome familiarity. Although he assumes a more conciliatory style of discussion there is little to distinguish Mr. Sloan's views on one-party democracy and a classless Socialist society in Russia . . . from the views of any official apologist. The effect is to weaken and not strengthen the surviving hopes of the disillusioned." R. D. C.

— + Manchester Guardian p7 N 25 '38 240w

New Repub 100:223 S 27 '39 40w

"Mr. Sloan looks on the bright side of everything. He does not hide the weaknesses of modern Russia, but he explains them away. Fundamentally, his picture of the Soviet Union is accurate, but he has touched it up and given it a glossy finish. . . I wish I could be persuaded to feel as happy about political events inside Russia as Mr. Sloan does. I wish I could believe that freedom of thought does not matter when the 'scientifically correct point of view' is being taught. I wish I could believe that, once capitalism is out of the way, there is nothing fundamental to disagree about. But there it is. Obviously, I lack faith." Paul Winterton

New Statesman & Nation 16:834 N 19 '38 480w

"If Mr. Sloan took no illusions to Russia one cannot help feeling that he took determination —determination to like and admire everything he could, and excuse everything else. And his book is definitely to be set among the contributions to controversy on the subject of the Soviet experiment because it is so fervently partisan."

N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '39 420w

"Though his political talk is fairly routine, his impressions are interesting."

New Yorker 15:56 Ag 12 '39 50w

"The literary style is uneven, and there are abrupt transitions from one subject to another; but the reader is gripped by the evident sincerity of the author and the vividness of the pictures portrayed." R. J. Timbres

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:17 Ag 19 '39 300w

"Mr. Sloan is happier in argument than in description; and Russia Without Illusions is a long piece of quite clever special pleading for the Soviet régime and all its works. Sometimes, though not often, a false note is struck. It is a pity to excuse the mass arrests on the plea (even if it were true) that the victims are not 'workers' but only 'officials.' Nor is it a fact, as Mr. Sloan seems to suppose, that persecution in the fascist countries is habitually directed against 'workers.'" E. H. Carr

+ — Spec 161:sup12 N 18 '38 330w

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun
Survey G 28:698 N '39 30w

"Mr. Pat Sloan's book is discursive, unmistakably sincere and not a little ingenuous."

Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 22 '38 200w

SLOANE, WILLIAM (WILLIAM MILLIGAN, pseud). The edge of running water. 295p $2.50 Farrar

39-13357

Mystery-horror story with a scientific background, dealing with the researches of a half-mad electrophysicist looking for a way to communicate with the dead.

"Readers are likely to shiver as much or more than the psychologist who tells the story, for William Sloane has the gift of producing those cold chills and miscellaneous reactions known as thrills—they seldom occur in thrillers, but they do in this skeery tale of science or its equivalent. What is more, 'The Edge of Running Water' is a most unusual item on other grounds, such as manner and construction, a necessity for those who crave a touch of the unknown, a bit of wrestling with the metaphysical and footprints pointing to foul play. Even better than 'To Walk the Night.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 My 21 '39 330w

New Repub 99:140 Je 7 '39 40w

"The borderland between the natural and the supernatural is dangerous ground for the average writer. Those who venture upon it usually go astray, wandering into the ridiculous or the banal, and to try to write of what lies outside the boundaries of normal human experience is a temptation it is usually wise to resist. Mr. Sloane, however, is one of the exceptions. . . 'The Edge of Running Water' has suspense, ingenuity, some excellent bits of description. More important still, it has an air of plausibility oddly at variance with that chill wind from the regions beyond man's knowledge Dick and Anne felt blowing about them in the hall of the old house on Setauket Point the night after the inquest, when they woke to such fear as neither of them had ever known." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 My 21 '39 600w

"Not a murder mystery, but far more terrifying."

New Yorker 15:96 My 20 '39 50w

"Mr. Sloane gave us a story about two years ago, called 'To Walk the Night' [Book Review Digest, 1937]. It was a remarkable compound of horror and simplicity, suspense and fourth-dimensional speculation, one of those literary naturals that we savor almost regretfully, feeling that it can scarcely be duplicated. But here is 'The Edge of Running Water,' a story just as good, which is meant to be high praise." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 My 20 '39 340w

SLOCOMBE, GEORGE EDWARD. Rebels of art: Manet to Matisse; with a commentary by Murdock Pemberton. 304p il $3.50 McBride

927.5 Painters, French. Painting, French. Impressionism (art) (W) 39-27280

Biographical and anecdotal, rather than critical, sketches of French artists of the Impressionist school and their successors. Contents: The background; Paris under the Second empire; Paris in the nineties; Manet; The impressionists; Monet; Pissarro; Cézanne; Cézanne—the last phase; Renoir; Sisley; Degas; Van Gogh; Vincent at Arles; Gauguin; Toulouse-Lautrec; Modigliani; Utrillo; Matisse. Index.

Booklist 35:269 Ap 15 '39

"A readable, telling and sympathetic book." Jerome Mellquist

+ Books p17 Ap 30 '39 700w

Reviewed by W. G. Constable

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 500w

"Though Mr. Slocombe claims that his text is biographical rather than critical, the discussions of painting are, in fact, more illuminating than the biographies of the painters. The usefulness of the book, as biography, is seriously diminished by numerous errors of fact, of date, and of place. . . The best sections of the book are the three introductory chapters which deal with the colorful Parisian background, and the thirty-two excellent reproductions of works by the rebel painters." Gerstle Mack

— + Nation 148:472 Ap 22 '39 550w

"This book should be heartily welcomed by the general public. Its thirty-two plates printed in gravure add valuable illustrations of the work of each painter." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 19 '39 1150w

"A pleasantly informative popular account."

+ New Yorker 15:88 Ap 8 '39 40w

Pratt p27 autumn '39

"Both for enlightenment and for entertainment, the general reader will find this book one of the most satisfactory of recent publications in its field. . . Mr Slocombe knows his Paris and its people. He is the author of 'Paris in Profile' and 'The Heart of France.' His style is vivacious, but not too much so."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 17 '39 850w

SLOCUM, ROSALIE, and BERNSTEIN, MRS ANNA RUTH (EPSTEIN) (ANN TODD, pseud). A key to New York. 312p il maps $2 Harper; pa 95c Modern age

917.471 New York (city)—Description

39-21134

Compilation of data on New York city useful for New Yorkers or for out-of-town visitors. Partial contents: The wonders of New York; Behind the scenes of the real New York of today; Museums—the great collections; Permanent exhibits for special interests; Architecture; Bird's-eye views of the city, new and old; A summer vacation in and around New York; Special helps to parents; The world's fair; Neighborhood recreation lists. Index.

Booklist 35:278 Ap 15 '39

"I wouldn't say I've read every guide to New York City, but I have not missed many. I have a background for comparison when a new one comes out. . . For actual use in the field, nothing comes up to this 'Key to New York' as a book that sets out to do something that badly needed doing, and does it as it should be done." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 5 '39 500w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '39 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

Reviewed by L. R. Davis

Horn Bk M 15:190 My '39 750w

Reviewed by Marion Herr

Library J 64:614 Ag '39 120w

New Repub 99:84 My 24 '39 40w

"This book is an amazingly comprehensive guide to New York for both New Yorkers and visitors. Its authors have taken particular pains to point out matters which are of value to children and the family circle; but the entertainment of solitary adults, or adult groups, is not neglected."

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 5 '39 320w

"A really thorough job."

+ New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 30w

Pratt p23 autumn '39

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 20:16 Ap 29 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

SMALL, ABNER RALPH. The road to Richmond; ed. by Harold Adams Small. 314p il map $3.50 Univ. of Calif. [17s 6d Cambridge]

973.781 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives 39-13708

The Civil war memoirs of an officer of the Sixteenth Maine volunteers, who earlier wrote a history of that regiment. This account was written nearly a generation after the war, but was based on notes and more impersonal writings nearer the date. It has been edited by his son. The book also contains the author's diary and account book kept during six months spent in Confederate prisons.

SMALL, A. R.—Continued

"The text of this valuable, though minor, contribution to history is admirably edited except for the fact that the narrative part contains no marks of reference to the notes, which are carried at the back of the book, with the result that the interested reader finds himself continually instituting a search to discover whether some obscure comment or cryptical statement has been explained. Use of the volume is facilitated by an accurate and well-arranged index." W. A. Cate

+ — Am Hist R 45:479 Ja '40 250w

Reviewed by R. W. Holmes

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 130w

"The style is vigorous and often braced with humor, and the author's memory of details apparently was unimpaired by the passage of years. . . The book adds something to our understanding of war in general, and much to our comprehension of the way the Civil War looked to a man who was wading through it." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 22 '39 550w

"The whole moving story is delightfully told, for the Major possessed a remarkable literary style. His comments on his superiors are most valuable because of his frankness and the clearness of his judgment, especially where efforts have been made to hide the truth." O. G. Villard

+ Nation 149:274 S 9 '39 600w

"I like this book immensely. I like it for its unaffected simplicity and directness, for its evident sincerity, for its candor, for its careful and accurate compilation. We cannot have too many books of this nature." A. H. Burne

+ N Y Times p4 Je 11 '39 650w

"Mr. Harold A. Small seems to have a remarkable gift for uncovering source-material. Two years ago he edited the journal of Professor Joseph Le Conte, with its fine, first-hand picture of a collapsing Confederacy. Now, in bringing out his father's memoirs he has made an even more valuable contribution both to our knowledge of the Civil War and our knowledge of human beings." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 20:10 My 27 '39 850w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 My 6 '39 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Ag 5 '39 300w

SMART, CHRISTOPHER. Rejoice in the lamb; a song from Bedlam; edited with an introduction and notes by William Force Stead. 303p $4 Holt [15s Cape, J]

821 [39-25074]

Newly discovered poem or psalm by the eighteenth-century author of The Song to David. Smart was a scholar, and he was a drunkard; he was subject to fits of madness, and he died in prison. Much of this present work was written while his mind was deranged, but passages of it display an extraordinary beauty, and a deep religiosity. The editor is himself a religious poet.

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p14 Ja 21 '40 600w

"As a document of madness Rejoice in the Lamb will no doubt be claimed by the surrealists; they will find a passage on rhyming in terms of musical instruments to put beside Rimbaud's sonnet on the vowels. For the light it throws on Smart, it is invaluable; mad though many of the verses are, one sees that Smart for the first time was stretching his mind and using a language of his own. Here and there, indeed, he does better than anywhere in the Song to David, where he returns to the technical habits of earlier days. Mr. Force Stead's editing of this manuscript, which he also discovered, his introduction and profuse annotation are all admirable." G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 17:254 F 18 '39 1300w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Spec 162:312 F 24 '39 900w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 350w

"The entire work is not only a tablebook but a new psalm; as a poem it is not at all equal to that great lyric the 'Song to David,' but as a picture of the man who was even now writing that song, and all his mind and memories and eccentricities, it has another value, and may make the other poem still more striking. . . Having no artist, Smart includes picture and significance in his verses. And sometimes, the compound is poetry of a deep loveliness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 25 '39 850w

SMART, WILLIAM MARSHALL. Stellar dynamics. 434p $8.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

523.8 Stars. Mechanics, Celestial [38-39105]

"The volume is concerned almost entirely with the movements of the stars. . . The treatment is mainly mathematical. . . After an introductory chapter, mainly concerned with an account of the data of observation, four chapters are devoted to the solar motion and the phenomena of star-streaming. . . The sixth chapter is devoted to the discussion of methods for deriving statistical parallaxes of the stars from their proper motions. . . The space distribution of the stars is discussed in the next chapter. . . In Chapter viii, general statistical methods of deducing certain frequency functions associated with various characteristics of the stars from other assumed frequency functions is discussed. . . A short chapter on moving and globular clusters is followed by three chapters dealing with the dynamics of stellar systems in general, galactic rotation and the dynamics of the galaxy." Nature

"The statistical mathematical discussions are not without value and have played their part in the development of the subject. But their limitations are now clearly recognized. Analytical functions do not possess the degree of flexibility that is needed in dealing with the stellar universe, and consequently the analytical methods of the earlier investigations, elegant though many of them were, have largely been displaced by numerical methods. For these reasons, it seems to the present reviewer that many portions of Prof. Smart's book would have been of greater value if the treatment had been less mathematical and more closely related to observational data. In some respects the book has appeared too late for the method of treatment that has been followed. Ten years ago, the objections to a purely mathematical treatment would not have been so strong." H. S. J.

Nature 143:135 Ja 28 '39 900w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:4 Ja '39

SMITH, BERNARD. Forces in American criticism; a study in the history of American literary thought. 401p $3 Harcourt

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Literary criticism 39-27825

A study of the work of literary critics and the relations between American literature and American life, from the days of the Puritans to the present. Index.

Booklist 36:65 O 15 '39

"It has been the curse of criticism throughout the ages to confuse outspokenness and surliness: from this unlovely professional deformation Bernard Smith is miraculously free. His most destructive passages are not malicious: they are deft and humane like a surgical operation. He is not afraid of being generous: he makes an excellent case for Margaret Fuller and for William Dean Howells, who have very few warm supporters. But his praise is never fulsome or unctuous. When he pays tribute to a living master, as in the case of Van Wyck Brooks, his respect does not in the least paralyze his independence. He is among the very few critics whose good word is worth having." Albert Guerard

+ Books p4 O 1 '39 1550w

" 'Forces in American Criticism' is radically imperfect, and in its earlier chapters almost worthless as an interpretation of 'literary thought.' But the later chapters are valuable and may be read to anybody's profit." H. M. Jones

— + Boston Transcript p1 O 14 '39 750w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley
Churchman 153:17 O 15 '39 250w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Commonweal 31:269 Ja 12 '40 420w

"The effect of Mr. Smith's book as a whole, in spite of an excellent chapter or two, is puzzling, not to say bewildering. The amount of industry the book represents is considerable, but it does not seem that the author had enough artistry or literary experience to accomplish the task he set for himself—to write 'a study in the history of American literary thought.' " M. M. Colum

— + Forum 102:229 N '39 900w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 149:381 O 7 '39 1750w

"Judicious and flexible without being indecisive, practical without being unimaginative, clear without being naive, Mr. Smith makes a place for himself in the next history of his subject that may be written." Granville Hicks

+ New Repub 100:376 N 1 '39 800w

"The book is the most interesting history of literary criticism in America and it is also the most disputable. In any case it is the most readable." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p2 O 15 '39 1850w

"Mr. Smith is perhaps too ebullient in his indignation over those critics who do not share his particular social and political beliefs. His book, however, is not a record of mere opinion but a solid job, not unworthy of the comparison (made by the publisher) with the great work of Parrington."

+ New Yorker 15:77 S 23 '39 80w

No Am 248:416 winter '40 90w

Pratt p17 winter '40

"[This is] a valuable and informative outline of American criticism from the beginning, because, with adequate scholarship, [the author] has proceeded upon the thesis that, in criticism, the prevailing thought and prejudice of an era can be most easily distinguished, and has, therefore, related his studies of American critics to the intellectual, and particularly to the social, climate which influenced their work. . But this method does not make Mr. Smith's book a history of American criticism. It is necessary to read only his last chapters . . . to see that it is impossible to simplify all the problems of criticism by a Marxian dialectic." H. S. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:8 S 30 '39 1050w

"One agreeable quality in Mr. Smith's book is that he frequently shows a disposition to appreciate talent and personal merits in men with whose opinions he disagrees. He speaks amiably and discerningly of James Russell Lowell and of Stedman as well as of Prof Woodberry and Prof Trent. But his insight and thinking capacity are too often confused by creeds and dogmatic aversions." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 S 23 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:213 D '39

SMITH, BUNNIE OTHANEL. Logical aspects of educational measurement. 182p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

371.26 Educational measurements 39-605

This book has been written in an attempt to clarify the author's own ideas on the meaning of measurement in education. The first section is devoted to the logical foundations of measurement; the last to questions particularly concerned with educational measurement. Bibliography. Index.

"In spite of shortcomings in the analysis and solution of the problems raised, however, this book should be read, because it is the first, so far as the reviewer knows, which states these problems adequately, or even fully recognizes their existence." E. E. Cureton

+ — Am J Psychol 52:652 O '39 600w

Nature 143:960 Je 10 '39 130w

"In spite of its faults of omission and commission, [the book] provides a much needed and elementary handbook for students who may wish to study not only the manipulation and construction of tests and measurements but also the origins and development of the postulates and axioms upon which educational measurement is based." J. W. Wrightstone

+ — Social Educ 3:211 Mr '39 650w

SMITH, CHARD POWERS. Artillery of time. 853p $2.75 Scribner

(W) 39-28950

Long novel covering the years between 1850 and the end of the Civil war. The locality is upper New York state. It is based upon the lives of the Lathrop family, especially of the two sons, Isaac and John, and the woman they loved.

Reviewed by Clifford Dowdey
Atlantic Ja '40 420w

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

"This is a great long homely up-state New York Yankee novel, the David Harum of today in manner, going back to the '50s in time and winding up around the end of the Civil War. It opens at no particular point and ends for no particular reason. It just goes on; and non-professional readers who enjoy sound story photography of the American past in the way of a tale may spend as many idle hours in an easy chair, before a fireplace or in the glow of a bed lamp as they find time for. I think they'd like it." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 O 15 '39 600w

Reviewed by D. C. Thompson
Boston Transcript p4 N 11 '39 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

Reviewed by Charles Donahue
Commonweal 31:310 Ja 26 '40 500w

"Rich, sympathetic characterization, breadth of scope, and easy mastery of style raise 'Artillery of Time' far above the rank and file of Civil War novels."

+ Nation 149:532 N 11 '39 100w

"An impressive, penetrating book by an author who doesn't believe in stinting on his words."

+ New Repub 101:27 N 8 '39 50w

"The defects are trivial, the controlled power of the book immense. It deserves a multitude of readers; and something tells me that it will have just that." Wilson Follett

+ N Y Times p2 O 29 '39 1200w

"With a huge amount of absorbing detail and a sound feeling for character, [the author] succeeds in evoking a period and demonstrating his thesis beyond doubt. Here and there the book might have been cut—there is at least one superfluous battle—but it is a highly distinguished piece of work."

+ New Yorker 15:93 O 21 '39 90w

"Chard Powers Smith is a poet and a scholar. He has made generous use of his talents as both in fashioning 'Artillery of Time.' Painstaking and comprehensive research has made this long novel one of the most distinguished re-creations of a historical period I have read." Carl Carmer

+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 O 14 '39 450w

" 'Artillery of Time' is big in form. . . and it is big in the sense of craftsmanship, with a significant and compelling story beautifully told."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 12 '39 850w

Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

SMITH, C. P.—Continued
"One of the most ambitious American novels of recent years, it is also one of the most successful." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 29:viii winter '40 160w

SMITH, CHARLES EDWARD, and MOORHEAD, PAUL GRADY. A short history of the ancient world. 653p il col maps $3.75 (16s) Appleton-Century

930 History, Ancient. Civilization, Ancient 39-3671

"A college textbook covering the centuries from the beginnings of Egyptian civilization to the collapse of the Roman Empire. As one of the authors is a professor of history and the other of classical languages (both in Louisiana State University), they preserve a fair balance between the political and social and the literary and other cultural aspects of the theme. Collateral readings are suggested for each chapter. Ancient Asia east of the Tigris is not mentioned." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 56:291 Mr 1 '39 70w

"The presentation of material is uneven in quality. . . . Errors in historical fact are not infrequent. . . . The bibliography contains most of the important works likely to be accessible to college students. The illustrations deal almost exclusively with architecture. The maps are distinctly poor. Despite these strictures the book could be used to advantage either as a text or as a work of reference for it contains a number of significant features." Herbert Wing, Jr.
— + Social Studies 30:330 N '39 390w

SMITH, CHARLES WILLIAM. Public opinion in a democracy; a study in American politics. 598p $4 Prentice-Hall

301.15 Public opinion—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 39-5341

A survey of public opinion in the United States, how it is formed, its influence on politics and government, its importance in the working of democracy. The author is assistant professor of political science at the University of Alabama. Partial contents: Propaganda and censorship; Newspapers; The radio; Presidential campaigns; Straw votes and the measurement of opinion; Sectionalism; Public opinion and the Supreme court; Public opinion and international relations; Education for citizenship. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. S. Barclay
Am Pol Sci R 33:697 Ag '39 490w

"This is a highly readable, provocative book in a field rapidly, if belatedly, achieving academic recognition in its own right. . . . The author's propensity to use illustrative material and quotations, however, may leave the more serious student unconvinced of points that could have been readily supported by more factual evidence." Hadley Cantril
+ — Am Soc R 4:730 O '39 600w

"Professor Smith's work is very readable and is characterized by careful scholarship and much practical insight. The book provides an excellent introduction to the subject of public opinion, and will doubtless be welcomed both by general readers and by teachers as a text and a reference work." C. E. Robinson
+ Ann Am Acad 205:177 S '39 300w

Foreign Affairs 18:370 Ja '40 30w

Reviewed by W. B. Graves
Social Forces 18:127 O '39 550w

SMITH, EARL BALDWIN. Egyptian architecture as cultural expression; il. by the author. 264p map $6 (25s) Appleton-Century

722.2 Architecture, Egyptian. Egypt—Antiquities 38-32148

After an introductory section on the Nile as the basis of all life in Egypt, and a table dating the periods of Egyptian history, the book traces the development of Egyptian architecture from primitive times to the magnificent buildings of the Roman era. The author is Howard Crosby Butler professor of the history of architecture, Princeton university. Index.

"If we could have had two hundred pages in the spirit of the last fifteen, we should have had a great book of international importance. As it is, we have a good, because a pre-eminently useful, one—which, after all, meets the author's own verdict on the architecture to which he has devoted so much time and care." Rhys Carpenter
+ — Am Hist R 45:102 O '39 450w

"Several general statements pertaining to all primitive cultures might well be qualified and a number of typographical and plate reference errors are unfortunate. Unquestionably, the work is a momentous contribution to Egyptology, yet it is so composed, so unified in theme, that the interested general reader may derive much from it." H. A. Carey
+ — Books p18 Mr 5 '39 1100w

"The value of Dr. Baldwin Smith's book is that it is the first in English to give a complete account of Egyptian architecture as a whole, and the first in any language to take into consideration the results of very important recent excavations of monumental remains. He knows his material at first hand, and he is thoroughly acquainted with the literature of his subject. To illustrate his theme without adding prodigiously to the cost of the book, he has had to make pen-and-ink drawings. These necessarily lack the reality of photographs but they are singularly truthful and are generously supplied. All students of Egyptology and of architecture should be grateful to him."
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:836 My 27 '39 140w

"His approach as an architect interested professionally in all aspects of architecture, but attracted especially to this particular expression of it, challenges and, by virtue of excellent presentation, holds attention. It is by no means a handicap that the author is not 'a trained Egyptologist.' On the contrary, although his scholarship is indubitably sound, as his acquaintance with the actual remains and with most of the authoritative literature indicates, his unprejudiced, unhampered interest in the subject has permitted him to present it from a new, almost philosophical point of view and in an exceptionally attractive form unencumbered by too obtrusive archeology." A. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:22 Ja 28 '39 320w

"Most illuminating and comprehensive volume, and it is no exaggeration to say that its appearance achieves a new landmark in the elucidation of the subject."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Ap 22 '39 150w

SMITH, EDMUND WARE. Tall tales and short; il. by Milton C. Weiler. ltd ed 187p $7.50 Derrydale

38-37551

Collection of short stories supposedly told around a Maine campfire. "If you love the woods and streams of Maine and the rough but wholesome people of the frontier, you will delight in this book." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Smith knows the places and he knows the people [of Maine] and he cares more for them than for anything else in the whole world. He has caught the vernacular, which is easy to listen to and hard to remember exactly. He has captured in all their originality and vividness the figures of speech that abound in unspoiled Yankee discourse. Best of all, he is in complete sympathy with the 'way of life' of his characters, 'a people who require no other way.' "
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 110w

"Phrasings inappropriate for vernacular speech, touches of condescension, or an inability to order narrative details tellingly give an author away as an artificial imitator. Such slips mar most of Mr. Smith's stories. One, however, 'Last Trip Together,' is a splendid exception—a boy's account, simple, dextrous, and moving, of the journey with the body of his father from a hunting lodge to the distant town downstream. If other stories had reached an equally high level, the volume would have been an important accomplishment." Walter Blair

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:18 D 31 '38 170w

SMITH, ELLIOTT DUNLAP, and NYMAN, RICHMOND CARTER. Technology and labor. 222p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

658.3 Employment management. Efficiency, Industrial. Cotton growing and manufacture 39-25711

"A study of the human problems of labor saving." (Subtitle) The study is based on intensive research in one branch of a single industry, those cotton weaving plants in which management introduced what it termed the "multiple loom" or "extended labor" system and labor called "the stretch out." Eighteen mills were studied, ten intensively. The method pursued was first-hand observation and interviews with executives, workers, and union representatives. Index.

"Here is a much needed, firsthand study of facts about the introduction of technological improvements. . . It is earnestly to be hoped that this book will have a wide and conscientious reading among industrial leaders." Ordway Tead

+ Ann Am Acad 207:248 Ja '40 360w

Reviewed by S. P. Fisher

Management R 29:38 Ja '40 280w

"This report is full of wise and helpful conclusions concerning the interconnection between good management and good labor relations, in respect of management not only in its broad aspects but also in details of its development." H. S. Person

+ Survey G 29:37 Ja '40 350w

SMITH, EUGENE CADWALLADER. Kongo the elephant [il. in color and black and white by Anne Vaughan]. 78p $2 Knopf

Elephants—Legends and stories (W) 39-30367

The story of an elephant from the time when he was less than a week old, covering the years of his growth, until in his adult years he became leader of his herd. The facts in the story have been checked for accuracy by Dr James Clark of the American Museum of Natural History.

Booklist 36:156 D 15 '39

"An interesting story. Here too is authentic information concerning the African jungle, elephants, and other animals of this region. Remarkable pictures in brilliant colors, and black-and-white drawings by Anne Vaughan, beautiful type and a distinguished format add to the value of this unusual animal story." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 25 '39 120w

"It is a simply written account which gives the reader a sense of the vastness and the quietness of the African jungle and is yet vibrant with animal life. The book is outstanding in format. Three double-page spreads in the brilliant colors of the jungle and black and white sketches by Anne Vaughan illustrate the text." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 150w

"The author has managed to make an interesting and even touching tale using only elephant facts, and the pictures in black-and-white and color are striking."

+ New Yorker 15:87 N 25 '39 50w

Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w

SMITH, GEORGE. An introduction to industrial mycology; foreword by Harold Raistrick. 304p il $5.20 Longmans [16s Arnold, E. & co]

589.2 Fungi. Molds (botany) [Agr 39-553]

"Intended to assist those who are commencing the study of 'moulds' rather than of fungi in general, this book is addressed primarily to non-botanists who deal with problems of moulds in industry and who are unfamiliar with mycological terminology. Enough general mycology is included to enable the student to follow up the subject in standard textbooks. The author is on the staff of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine." J Home Econ

"The book is well executed from every standpoint and is an outstanding example of successful condensation. It should find widespread use among those for whom it is intended and, by virtue of the many fine photomicrographs, should grace the mycological section of the libraries of the leading educational institutions." H. C. Greene

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:68 Ja 20 '39 390w

J Home Econ 31:186 Mr '39 70w

SMITH, GERARD, ed. Jesuit thinkers of the renaissance. 254p $3 Marquette univ. press

271.5 Jesuits 39-14093

"This volume of essays was issued to commemorate the sixty-fifth anniversary of the birth of the Reverend John F. McCormick, S.J., presently head of the Department of Philosophy in Loyola University, Chicago, and a leader for many years in the Thomistic movement in the United States. The essays are the work of some of his former students. . . The essays deal with six Jesuit personalities: Suarez, Bouhours, Molina, Lessius, Mariana, and Bellarmine." Commonweal

Reviewed by David Gordon

America 61:358 Jl 22 '39 330w

Cath World 150:116 O '39 210w

"This book is definitely of the scholarly type. Because of their technical nature, some of the essays can hardly be recommended to the non-professional. But if one desires to witness the mature results of great, because inspiring, teaching, he is urged to look within." F. E. McMahon

+ Commonweal 30:343 Jl 28 '39 310w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Robert Gair; a study; introd. by Lewis Mumford. 118p $2 Dial press

B or 92 Gair, Robert 39-6910

"Robert Gair, a Brooklyn manufacturer of paper bags, was a pioneer in developing the pasteboard carton which has revolutionized the distribution of groceries and various manufactured products. . . Mr. Smith's book is to no small extent a collection of anecdotes illustrating Mr Gair's Scotch thrift, masterful will and vigorous, though often hearty, self-assertion." Springf'd Republican

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 20w

"An interesting life: interesting as type, even more interesting as individual. At the beginning of his 'study,' H. Allen Smith is inclined to be flowery in his writing, but his style becomes simpler as he goes on, and thus more forceful and more truly pictorial; and he draws his subject's portrait, and tells his story, without sentimentality of praise or censure."

+ N Y Times p12 F 5 '39 420w

"Mr Smith writes a spirited and informal narrative, suitable for its purpose, which is to tell the story of a business as well as of an individual. But his sketching of background and condensation of detail are not always fortunate."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 15 '39 1250w

SMITH, LOGAN PEARSALL. Unforgotten years. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 296p $2.50 Little [10s Constable]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 38-29073

Reminiscences of the author of Trivia, etc. Born in Millville, New Jersey, of a wealthy Quaker family, he was taken to England as a child, and fell under the spell of the land and its people. After he left college, the author went to Oxford for further study, later establishing a home in southern England where he has resided for over thirty years. His autobiography is filled with anecdotes of his friends, among whom were William and Henry James, Edith Wharton, Santayana, Matthew Arnold.

"The book is enchantingly written. Though Henry James bade the young aspirant inscribe the word 'loneliness' upon his banner, a procession of distinguished names moves across these lucid pages. This would-be recluse reveals himself as a being of delightful social gifts. Honesty, urbanity, humor, and an outlook upon life at once fastidious and mellow, give to his autobiographical reminiscences both substance and charm." Florence Converse

+ Atlantic Mr '39 400w

Booklist 35:173 Ja 15 '39

"In itself one of the most charming of the year's books of reminiscence, it is greatly to be hoped that it may also lead to a wider reading of the author's other volumes. No true lover of belles-lettres can afford to neglect them. Typographically 'Unforgotten Years' should most certainly be included among the fifty best books of 1938." W. N. C. Carlton

+ Books p5 Ja 1 '39 1050w

"Mr. Smith went to Europe in pursuit of a style. How successful that campaign was all readers of 'Trivia' can testify. 'Unforgotten Years' has the same fine bouquet (arising from a mixture of precision and beauty) which makes Mr Smith's earlier volumes fragrant with an almost palpable aroma. It is a style full of nuance and grace, a water-color style if you like, but a style in which strength is never sacrificed to gracility, a style in which an indulgent smile for human frailty tempers the fine, cutting edge of dissatisfaction with human weakness." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 7 '39 850w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 1 '39 1050w

Commonweal 29:362 Ja 20 '39 360w

"The first and last impression is that [the memoirs] are written so admirably, never with ostentation, but with an ease and rhythm which give each anecdote its perfection. Those who have read Mr. Pearsall Smith's 'Trivia' will know what to expect. . . As one reads his pages one can have the illusion of a civilised world." B. I. Evans

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 1 '38 350w

"Mr. Smith's publishers think that they 'do not exaggerate when they maintain that "Unforgotten Years" is his most important book, not excepting "Trivia." '. . His work is about as important as a stiff little suite by Rameau, a Watteau painting, or Thomas Gray's poem about a cat playing with a bowl of goldfish. It has the same brittle charm that we find in these eighteenth-century things, but if Mr. Smith were convinced that any of it had a definite bearing upon the things that men live and die for he would undoubtedly hide his head in shame." Odell Shepard

Nation 148:238 F 25 '39 600w

" 'Unforgotten Years,' is certainly one of the best things he has done. My experience with it was the same as with 'Trivia'; when I first read the chapters in The Atlantic, they seemed to me rather slight; but then I found afterwards again that the sketches remained in my mind and that I was glad to reread them in the book. About the celebrated people he has known, Whitman, Matthew Arnold, Edith Wharton, Whistler, he does not tell you at any great length; but the anecdotes and traits are selected with exceedingly telling effect and often reveal something important of which one had never learned from any other source. . . Though his writing seems to suffer from the pale style and the intellectual sterility which blights the American in Europe; yet it is impossible to dismiss him as an old fogey. After all, he has said it first; and he has made us enjoy his company in spite of it." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Repub 97:347 Ja 25 '39 2600w

"Mr. Pearsall Smith writes best—that is to say, most feelingly—in the early chapters, in which his lovely, dignified and unaccountable mother appears, and in the last chapter but one, about manuscript-hunting—a chapter the sportsman dominates. The rest of Unforgotten Years reads like an ordered dream, a dream explored to its limits, with no cold shadow of to-morrow morning ahead." Elizabeth Bowen

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:778 N 12 '38 1100w

"There have been other suggestive autobiographies of expatriates who found that they could work better abroad than at home; and there have been other contemplative records from perfectionists who love the beauty and precision of their language and are bored by 'the earnest and hastily written books' of modern youth; there have been other brilliant many-faceted gems of prose style; this book is all these, and one of the best; in being all these and also a rare, mellow, and beguiling story, it casts its own peculiar and permeating spell." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 1 '39 1400w

"There is an occasional neat, ironical, quietly Victorian sentence. Pleasant reading for retired literary gentlemen over sixty."

New Yorker 14:55 Ja 7 '39 80w

"Alas, it must be reported that he has nothing to say. He saw Walt Whitman and even talked to him, but in a whole chapter on the incident he manages to contribute absolutely nothing to the knowledge of the poet or the times. . . Mr. Smith complains about the very bad prose now being written in this country. Unfortunately, his own prose is such that a good city editor could teach him a few things."

— No Am 247:190 spring '39 130w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

" 'Unforgotten Years' is one of the most delightful books of its kind published in many years. Its kind is that of reflective reminiscence. It is a story told, in selective chapters, with the amused tenderness and skeptical detachment of the cultivated cosmopolitan and, deeper than the cosmopolitan, of the dedicated writer. For it is perfectly clear that Mr. Smith is in the Flaubertian tradition of an almost fanatic loyalty to the discipline of the writing art. But the story he tells is more than his own; it constitutes a picture of a vanished world." Irwin Edman

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 D 31 '38 1100w

Special Libraries 30:138 Ap '39

"It would be easy to read this book from beginning to end without noticing how beautifully it is written. So interesting is the story that it tells, so amusing are the incidents that are related by the way, so engaging and pervasive is the irony, that a reader might well lose sight of the author's skill in the choice of words and the management of pause and rhythm. Ars est celare artem: it is part of Mr. Pearsall Smith's skill to make his skillfulness seem second nature; there is nothing obtrusive, no over-emphasis, about his style; it is his natural speaking voice. Few modern writers, however, can manage their voice so beautifully, or choose their words with such precision." John Sparrow

+ Spec 161:728 O 28 '38 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 1 '39 850w

Time 35:56 Ja 9 '39 350w

"This is a very easy book to read; and, having been lured on and on to the end, the reader who loves reading will be half shocked and half delighted to find that he has not read the book at all in any manner worthy of it. The book is easy to read because it is narrative, and because every sentence is shapely and lucid; but the chuckles in passing and the recurrent little flushes of pleasure are but so many invitations to go back to the beginning and this time (and as many other times as can be contrived) to take it all slowly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 O 8 '38 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

SMITH, RHEA MARSH. The day of the liberals in Spain. 341p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press

342.46 Spain—Politics and government. Spain. Constitution 38-29074

A doctoral discussion which traces the evolution of the Spanish constitution of 1931. The first five chapters are devoted to a summary of the historical background of the problems of Spain; the remainder of the book deals with the actual framing of the constitution from the establishment of the republic to its promulgation. Bibliography. Index.

"Perhaps it may be reasonably objected that too much of The Day of the Liberals is based on so-called 'secondary' works, and to some extent this may be a weakness. If it is, it is nevertheless in a large measure offset by the thoroughness of the annotated and descriptive bibliography. With painstaking care the author has evaluated the various works that she cites, indicating their general content and scope, their strong points and weaknesses, and the points of view and prejudices of their authors. The Day of the Liberals in Spain does credit to Professor Smith, to the University of Pennsylvania (in whose graduate school it was written as a doctoral dissertation), and to its publishers."

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:535 Je '39 280w

Booklist 35:172 Ja 15 '39

"This book is a refreshing contrast to most of those which have recently been put forth about Spain since the abolition of the monarchy, because of its freedom from bias and partisanship. . . [The author's] treatment of the indispensable historical background leaves much to be desired. . . Had she given three-quarters of her pages to the preceding centuries and one-quarter to the events of 1931—instead of the reverse—she would have produced an even more valuable work." R. B. Merriman

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 490w

Foreign Affairs 17:637 Ap '39 20w

New Repub 97:380 F 1 '39 40w

"While it is too early to suppose that all relevant materials for a definitive study like this are known, Prof Smith has utilized with care the sources which have been published, and his results will no doubt prove to be of permanent value to students of Spanish history. To English readers his book has the additional advantage of making accessible numerous facts which are difficult to get at elsewhere. There is a selective bibliography and footnotes are provided throughout."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 19 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 18 '39 80w

SMITH, RIXEY, and BEASLEY, NORMAN. Carter Glass. 519p il $3 Longmans

B or 92 Glass, Carter. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-10859

Political biography of the eighty-year old Senator from Virginia by two admirers. Mr Smith has been Senator Glass' secretary since 1922 and has had advantage of intimate personal knowledge and access to many unpublished documents. Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Bogart

Am Hist R 45:481 Ja '40 300w

Booklist 35:364 Jl 1 '39

"Writing a biography of a man who is still among the living is tricky business, but Messrs. Smith and Beasley have made an excellent job of it. It is an uncritical biography, of course, but it is never fulsome; and it presents to the world the story of a man who is significant for what he did, but doubly and trebly significant for what he is." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p1 My 14 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 1350w

Cath World 149:376 Je '39 210w

Christian Century 56:903 Jl 19 '39 90w

Manchester Guardian p5 O 13 '39 280w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p5 My 28 '39 1350w

"Lengthy, admiring, but not thin biography of . . . one of the most picturesque and able characters ever to engage in debate on the Senate floor. Especially for those interested in the course of American politics in the past forty years."

+ New Yorker 15:101 My 13 '39 70w

"I greatly like and admire Senator Glass, although I happen to disagree with him on many current issues, but I presume to doubt if he or anyone else is so complete a paragon as this volume would have us believe. In these 426 pages there is not so much as a hint that the senior Senator from Virginia has a single fault." Virginius Dabney

Sat R of Lit 20:11 My 20 '39 700w

Reviewed by Anthony Powell

Spec 163:554 O 20 '39 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 21 '39 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p656 N 11 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR. The democratic way of life. 2d ed rev 290p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge]

321.8 Democracy 39-27410

"A new preface and a chapter on 'the matter of discipline, both pedagogical and political, to which the hearts of modern men do strangely overincline' are added to a book first published in 1926 [Book Review Digest, 1926]." (Booklist) Index.

"Congressman Smith . . . if we may overlook his tendency to indulge in personalities, is vivacious, witty, and clever. Unfortunately, the effectiveness of his argument is somewhat neutralized by a too obvious inclination to defend the Democratic party, as such, and to identify the New Deal not only with Franklin D. Roosevelt, but also with Jackson, Jefferson, and all other good Democrats. Senator Taft . . . does not display the nimble wit of his opponent, but he is intelligent, substantial, and thought-provoking. Never personal, always dignified, rising above the claptrap of party, he has done excellent work in presenting the case against the New Deal." Robert Phillips

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:886 O '39 430w

"Although the new chapter on democratic discipline contains many insights and makes a splendid plea for tolerance, it is too long and too esoteric. It is too much the Congressman in an extended soliloquy—a poetic one, however—and not enough the philosopher in a close-knit and rigorous analysis. The style here more than elsewhere makes use of adjectives and tonal nouns that frequently interfere with the flow and precision of thought. But this indulgence in the preacher's temptation is a very small defect in a book that everyone must welcome for its wealth of ideas." Benjamin Lippincott

+ — Ann Am Acad 206:172 N '39 600w

Booklist 35:311 My 15 '39

Christian Century 56:547 Ap 26 '39 60w

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR, and TAFT, ROBERT ALPHONSO. Foundations of democracy; a series of debates. 353p $2.50 Knopf

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy (W) 39-27608

Text of the debates between Representative Smith of Illinois and Senator Taft of Ohio, on major political and social issues of the day, as broadcast by NBC this spring (1939). "Senator Taft stands for a traditional view of the constitution and the American heritage, while Representative Smith declares that a progressive conception of social values requires the reforms promoted by the new deal." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

Reviewed by Julian Bach, Jr.
Books p17 Ag 27 '39 400w

Reviewed by Michael Mayer
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 750w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery
Commonweal 30:400 Ag 18 '39 450w

New Repub 99:316 Jl 19 '39 40w

Reviewed by John Corbin
N Y Times p2 Jl 30 '39 1200w

Springf'd Reublican p6 Jl 10 '39 210w

SMITH, WALDO EDWARD LOVEL. Episcopal appointments and patronage in the reign of Edward II; a study in the relations of church and state. (Studies in church hist, v3) 144p $2.25 Am. soc. of church hist.

262.1 Patronage, Ecclesiastical. Benefices, Ecclesiastical. Church and state in England. Roman Catholic church in England 38-25903

"This highly specialized study in the relations of church and state in England in the first quarter of the fourteenth century has to do chiefly with the rivalry of king and pope for control of the temporalities of the church. The author has not been content to draw his conclusions from the statutes and edicts, but has gone to the documentary sources for a detailed study of specific cases in which conflict over appointments reached the courts." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by W. E. Lunt
Am Hist R 44:688 Ap '39 250w

"Serious students of this subject or of the history of this period will find here important materials admirably digested and presented."
+ Christian Century 55:1099 S 14 '38 100w

Reviewed by J. L. Cate
J Religion 19:412 O '39 280w

"The subject is an important one, and this detailed study of it will be appreciated by scholars. The assemblage of evidence from contemporary chroniclers is a useful addition to the formal documents, showing the way that some 14th century public opinion, at least, looked at episcopal appointments. Unhappily, however, Dr. Smith's book is too obviously the child of the seminar room, and can only be understood by those who are familiar with the general subject and the history of the period. There is an appendix of documents and useful samples of the forms employed." E. R. Hardy, Jr.
+ — Living Church 100:168 F 8 '39 310w

SMITH, WALTON HALL, and HELWIG, FERDINAND CHRISTIAN. Liquor, the servant of man. 273p $2 Little

613.81 Alcohol—Physiological effect 40-866

"This book, which results from the collaboration of a professional writer and a pathologist, is an attempt to furnish the layman with a clearer understanding of what physical consequences are to be expected from the customary use of alcoholic beverages." (Sat R of Lit) Contents: Background of the practice of drinking; Physiology, the effect of liquor on the human body; Pharmacology, the benefits of liquor in disease; Liquor and sex; the effect of liquor on the race; Psychology, an explanation of the reasons for drinking; Summary, case histories, and suggestions. Annotated bibliography.

"Here put forth simply and clearly and with the backing of sound medical authority, is an enormously valuable little volume which should be the companion, the comfort and the warning to the drinking man." Stanley Walker
+ Books p10 Ja 28 '40 800w

"The lesson preached by Messrs. Smith and Helwig is the desirability of moderation. Self-discipline is a decisive factor in the preservation of health. Alcohol in moderation does no harm at all, for those who take it in moderation are at least inclined to the normal. This thesis, in all probability, will not be accepted with much enthusiasm by the type of reader who makes such matters his privy concern."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 180w

"This is not at all a flippant book, though written with charm and humor." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub 102:23 Ja 1 '40 1200w

"An intelligent though rather flip book."
New Yorker 15:90 N 11 '39 40w

"In their enthusiasm to destroy the fearful picture of the evils of drink as painted by the reformers, the authors have weakened their arguments somewhat by using at times a clever dialectic that is in substance no different from that used by the opponents of alcohol. . . By adopting such tactics the authors have reduced the value of this book, which is otherwise interesting and amusing and contains a particularly well-chosen and well-annotated bibliography." Antonio Ciocco, M.D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 25 '39 650w

Time 34:91 N 13 '39 200w

SMITH, WILLIAM CARLSON. Americans in the making; the natural history of the assimilation of immigrants. 454p $3.75 (16s) Appleton-Century

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. U.S.—Foreign population 39-22860

A study of the process of assimilation of immigrants in America based largely on published and unpublished autobiographies, diaries and letters. Bibliography. Index.

"This book is avowedly and successfully a sociological treatment in which the categories are made alive. While it could not have been written many years ago, because neither the concepts nor the data were so clear as at present, this is unquestionably the best book that has yet been written on the immigrant." H. A. Miller
+ Ann Am Acad 207:257 Ja '40 360w

"The author attempts to 'treat the immigrants as human beings, instead of regarding them as mere statistical units,' and in this humane and intelligent endeavor he has been thoroughly successful."
+ Christian Century 56:1276 O 18 '39 70w

New Repub 102:61 Ja 8 '40 50w

"This is a book worth reading by socially minded citizens generally as well as by social workers and college students." S. A. Queen
+ Survey 76:29 Ja '40 320w

SMITH, WILLIAM ROY. Nationalism and reform in India. 485p $5 Yale univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

954 India—Politics and government. India—Nationality. Great Britain—Colonies—India 39-2967

A scholarly study of British rule in India, the result of many years research and visits to India and the British Dominions. The author begins with a résumé of the history of the relations between India and Great Britain from 1600 to 1917, but the bulk of his book is devoted to the period since 1921 and to a consideration of various angles of the subject topically and not chronologically arranged. Index.

"Long study and patient research have gone into the making of this scholarly and valuable book on the history of nationalism in India. Comprehensive in range and accurate in detail, it is packed with information chosen with care and admirably arranged and documented. On the whole, the author lets the facts speak for themselves." P. K. Rao

+ Am Hist R 45:401 Ja '40 370w

"The book appears first to have been completed about 1930. Events since that time are ignored or alluded to briefly. . . The competence of the book, therefore, though definite, is limited." W. N. Brown

Ann Am Acad 204:202 Jl '39 420w

"Here is an altogether commendable volume within the range of its title. If it is not the latest word on some phases, it provides materials for an understanding of developments in Indian nationalism and reform, even the latest. It discovers for us the major elements in the scene, both those which make for self-determination and those which tend to hinder it. The author views India not only objectively, but also realistically." J. C. Archer

+ Christian Century 56:481 Ap 12 '39 1100w

"Professor Smith's impartial approach to his work earns the confidence of the reader and the value of his book is much enhanced by its timeliness in carrying the history as far as the new constitution when standard authorities on this recent event are still scarce." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 8 '39 450w

Foreign Affairs 17:820 Jl '39 40w

SMYTH, JOSEPH HILTON, ed. The world over: 1938. See World over

SNEDIGAR, ROBERT. Our small native animals; their habits and care. 308p il $2.50 Random house

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 39-27563

Handbook for those who wish to make a collection of small animals. Diagrams of traps and cages, cures for various diseases, and instructions for raising food supplies of crickets, flies, etc., are included. The subjects studied are arranged under headings: squirrels and chipmunks; small rodents and shrews; larger mammals; small mammal problems; birds; the terrarium; the amphibians; lizards; snakes; venomous snakes; turtles; the alligator; special foods. Index.

Booklist 35:360 Jl 1 '39

"Required reading for camps for young or old, the book has special usefulness to boys whose interest in small animals now takes shape chiefly in trapping or killing them. Trapping is explained here, but as a possible prelude to making friends afterward. There are many photographs likely to make boys wish they owned an animal like that." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Je 25 '39 450w

"The book is especially suggested for the use of teachers and camp directors but it is so entertaining in content and style that it should be of interest to anyone who ever wanted a small animal for a pet. Even if one cannot keep any of the animals mentioned, there are always hungry squirrels on the Common and Mr. Snedigar tells just when they are hungriest and what to feed them." Virginia Fletcher

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 17 '39 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

"The trial-and-error method employed all too often by animal-loving boys and girls in camps, schools and backyard zoos may now give way to intelligent methods and more successful results because of the information available in this book. It is written in an interesting manner with clearness and simplicity. It contains many photographs and drawings for the construction of animal traps and houses."

+ Horn Bk M 15:224 Jl '39 130w

New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 40w

"Mr. Snedigar does not cover all the native species suitable to captivity, but he does cover the main groups, fish excepted. The value of such a book, compact and well organized as this one is, needs no further comment." L. J. H., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 10 '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

SNELL, FOSTER DEE, and SNELL, CORNELIA TYLER. Chemicals of commerce. 542p $5 Van Nostrand

660 Chemicals—Manufacture and industry. Chemistry, Technical 39-24603

"This treatise contains in systematic sequence the most essential facts regarding the composition, properties, and uses of actual commercial products. It is compactly compendious in character and scope, not like a dictionary, having been designed to present concisely but methodically salient information respecting all the main classes of technologic materials, basic, pure, and in mixture." (Ind & Eng Chem) Index.

"Practical and scientific information is combined in such a way as to make the book appeal to the technical man as well as to the salesman or manufacturer."

+ Chem & Met Eng 46:642 O '39 170w

"By duetting in the preparation of this compendium the authors, admired for other professional accomplishments, especially in colorimetry, have done a particularly useful piece of work, deserving of our thanks." W. A. Hamor

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:689 N 10 '39 360w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:53 O '39

SNELL, HENRY SNELL, 1st baron, and others. New tyrannies for old. 177p $1.50 Macmillan [5s Allen, G]

940.5 Europe—Politics [39-31624]

Six essays on the European situation from the Munich agreement to the seizure of Czechoslovakia. Contents: Rival ideologies in theory and practice, by Lord Snell; A new technique of conquest, by Wickham Steed; Danger spots in Europe, by A. C. Temperley; The confusion of western democracy under capitalist domination, by Geneviève Tabouis; The new dark ages? by R. H. S. Crossman; When and how a renaissance? by Herbert Morrison.

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 24 '39 80w

Manchester Guardian p8 My 12 '39 230w

"These unblinking, penetrating and courageous essays are written in that black shadow of the Munich surrender in which all the free world must now live."

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 20 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 22 '39 70w

SNELL, REGINALD (L. B. PEKIN, pseud.) Darwin. (World makers and world shakers ser) 110p $1.25 Stackpole sons [1s 6d Hogarth]

B or 92 Darwin, Charles Robert [38-24123]

A very brief, popular résumé of the life and works of the great Victorian scientist.

Cath World 149:126 Ap '39 120w

Horn Bk M 15:40 Ja '39 70w

SNIDER, JOSEPH LYONS. Credit unions in Massachusetts. 142p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

332.31 Credit unions 39-13720

"Professor Snider describes the beginnings and growth of credit unions in Massachusetts; examines the record of various types of credit unions in order to determine the advantages and disadvantages of each; compares the quantitative importance of credit unions, personal finance companies, and banks as sources of consumers' loans in Massachusetts; and analyzes the prospects for the future growth of credit unions in various communities. In an appendix he presents elaborate statistical histories of certain individual credit unions, taken from annual reports of the Commissioner of Banks in Massachusetts." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by C. O. Fisher
Am Econ R 29:881 D '39 360w

"An interesting, readable, and useful little book for those who wish to know more about the co-operative savings and loan associations known as credit unions." Rolf Nugent
+ Ann Am Acad 206:188 N '39 300w
Booklist 36:169 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by L. N. Robinson
Survey 75:324 O '39 850w

SNOW, CHARLES HORACE. Riders of the range. 286p $2 Macrae Smith co.

Western story.

Booklist 36:151 D 15 '39

"Western students will find here one of Charles H. Snow's endearing yarns of the open spaces." Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 D 17 '39 90w

"A lively and entertaining yarn—perhaps the best of the round dozen that Charles H. Snow has written." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p26 N 26 '39 200w

SNOW, WILBERT. Before the wind. ltd ed [27p] il $3.50 Gotham house

811 39-5728

This poem brings to life the excitement of the old-time Fourth of July skipper's races on the Penobscot. Illustrations by Gordon Grant.

"Wilbert Snow's substance is compounded of seeing many small bits of gear and weather and human nature day by day which add up to the amazing total of a science, and even a song, of living, still to be found along the Maine seacoast. And Snow's substance is all the more impressive because it is partly a substance seen in perspective, at a good distance. This poet has traveled far and has lived far away from his native lobsters and spruces. So he gets the right light on things. . . The illustrations by Gordon Grant are superb." R. P. T. Coffin
+ Books p4 F 12 '39 550w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 360w

"Wilbert Snow is no mean sailorman himself! Only one who knew all the intricacies of sailing and racing could have done anything so accurate as 'Before the Wind' both in its boat-handling and its racing strategy. All who like small-boat sailing will delight in Mr. Snow's spirited narrative. Yet the race is not all. The author's thumb-nail sketches of local characters are even more interesting than the tale itself." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 15 '39 350w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 120w

SNYDER, LOUIS LEO. Race; a history of modern ethnic theories. 342p $3 Alliance bk. corp.

572 Race problems. Nationalism and nationality 39-15971

"This book deals with the historical development of race movements since the French Revolution, with especial emphasis upon the leading apostles of race theory. It does not attempt to make any independent contribution to the anthropological and biological aspects of race, although these matters have been considered in the opening chapters. The treatment is primarily historical." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

"On the whole, this is a very light book on a profound set of problems. One may welcome it as perhaps useful because generally sound. Strictly speaking, however, one derives from it little beyond general antiracialist impressions." F. H. Hankins
— + Ann Am Acad 206:216 N '39 700w

"Dr. Snyder's book is a melancholy tale of the upsurge of human credulity and superstition in the midst of our so-called 'age of science.' But the author, quite rightly, does not stop to moralize. He remains always cool and objective, and his book may be safely accepted as authoritative." E. S. Bates
+ Books p10 O 1 '39 400w

"The present work by a well-trained historical scholar . . . is a timely book, interestingly written."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 70w
Cath World 149:634 Ag '39 40w

"Everyone interested, whether from an historical, a scientific, a humanitarian or a religious point of view, in the recovery of our racially sick world will be profoundly grateful for Doctor Snyder's splendid historical study." J. M. Cooper
+ Commonweal 30:260 Je 30 '39 480w
Foreign Affairs 18:372 Ja '40 40w

Reviewed by V. L. Gott
Living Age 357:98 S '39 110w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 100:82 Ag 23 '39 150w
New Yorker 15:88 Je 3 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 70w

SOBEL, LOUIS H., and SAMLER, JOSEPH. Group methods in vocational guidance; with specific reference to the economic adjustment problems of Jewish youth. 111p pa 75c Furrow

371.425 Profession, Choice of. Jews—Political and social conditions 39-3268

"This handbook has been worked out with the economic adjustment problems of Jewish youth especially in mind. Intended for workers in Jewish centers or Hebrew schools or for general guidance workers who have contacts with Jewish young people." Wis Lib Bul

"The manual is of general value in making accessible to workers in all group-work agencies, even to those operating outside the field of Jewish youth, information concerning contemporary methods and techniques in vocational guidance. It serves the additional purpose of placing group work in a more significant frame of reference than is frequently the case by relating it to the occupational world. The content is admittedly not creative." C. H. Young
Am J Soc 45:628 Ja '40 150w
Survey 75:30 Ja '39 30w
Wis Lib Bul 35:10 Ja '39

SOBOTKA, HARRY. Chemistry of the sterids. 634p $8.50 Wood [38s Bailliere]

612.357 Sterids. Bile. Physiological chemistry 38-10058

"The author has undertaken the laborious task of selecting from almost countless papers all the facts concerning the chemistry of steroids, and presenting them in a logical and readable form. . . Because it is essentially a handbook, this work cannot be recommended to serve a student possessing only a scant knowledge of the complexities of steroid chemistry. However, it will be welcomed as an invaluable source of information by those investigators who have more than a passing interest in this field of research." Am Chem Soc J

"Because it is essentially a handbook, this work cannot be recommended to serve as an introductory text to a student possessing only a scant knowledge of the complexities of steroid chemistry. However, it will be welcomed as an invaluable source of information by those investigators who have more than a passing interest for this field of research. The author deserves their gratitude for this compilation, which will save them many hours of search through an endless literature." Werner Bergmann

+ Am Chem Soc J 60:2278 S '38 400w

"The classification is extremely successful, for by the introduction of an ingenious system of arrangement . . . the matter has been rendered easily accessible. In presenting this catalogue the author has considerably lightened the task of approach to the steroid literature." F. S. Spring

+ Nature 142:1097 D 24 '38 470w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:61 O '38

SOCIETY FOR OLD TESTAMENT STUDY. Record and revelation; essays on the Old Testament by members; ed. by H. Wheeler Robinson. 540p $4 (10s 6d) Oxford

221 Bible. Old Testament 39-10504

"There are ten essays, and they are nearly all by Englishmen; but there is one by our own distinguished scholar, James A. Montgomery, who is an honorary member of the British Society. The subjects cover a wide field, archaeology, literature, history, religion, theology, language and exegesis. The editing has been skillfully done, so that there is very little duplication, and there are many helpful cross references. . . There is appended an excellent bibliography, and it is admirably arranged so that the appropriate authorities are found in connection with each essay." Churchman

Reviewed by L. W. Batten

+ Churchman 153:18 Ja 1 '39 380w

Reviewed by C. A. Simpson

Living Church 100:502 My 10 '39 480w

"All the contributors, both English and foreign, are scholars in the front rank, and their considered judgments upon many questions of vital importance will be read with the keenest interest both by the Biblical student and by the intelligent layman. The Editor, too, is to be warmly congratulated not only upon the manner in which he has succeeded in giving a sense of unity to so composite a piece of work, but also upon the stress which he has very properly laid on the contribution made by the Old Testament, when critically considered, to both Jewish and Christian theology."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 N 12 '38 1200w

SOCKMAN, RALPH WASHINGTON. Live for tomorrow. 139p $1.50 Macmillan

248 Christian life. Social problems 39-31931

Lectures, radio talks, and sermon-essays by the minister of Christ Church, New York, and pastor of the "Radio Pulpit." Contents: A truce with time; Today is ours; Live for tomorrow; Life's growing edge; Highways of hope; The challenge of change; The magic of courage; The limits of love; Locking ourselves out; America's new horizons; The last frontier.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p11 D 24 '39 100w

"This book exhibits the varied resources of clear thinking, crisp statement and spiritual earnestness which are demanded by those diversified ministries."

+ Christian Century 56:1475 N 29 '39 40w

"The point of these eleven short 'pep-talks' dedicated to the congregation of the national radio pulpit is to help people to keep their heads while all about are losing theirs. The radio preacher admirably succeeds in pointing out things in life still worth living for, all in the direct, popular, stream-lined, humorous, cleverly illustrated and deeply religious way for which he is known." S. L. Riddle

+ Churchman 153:39 D 15 '39 80w

SOGLOW, OTTO. Confidential history of modern England. [87p] $1.50 Stokes

741 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 39-9636

Cartoons about England and the English including the King's visit to America, and other recent significant causes of excitement.

"Soglow's Confidential History of Modern England will be interesting to those who find jokes drawn in the security of America about England funny and one called the Cliveden Set is very funny indeed." John Betjeman

New Statesman & Nation 18:840 D 9 '39 30w

New Yorker 15:87 Ap 8 '39 20w

"Soglow's pictures provoke a smile by their agreeable grotesqueness, but, as a whole, they lack significance—even the kind of significance that is needed in a 'comic' history."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 12 '39 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup iii D 16 '39 40w

SOHRAB, MIRZA AHMAD, ed. The Bible of mankind. 743p $5 Universal pub. co, 20 Vesey st, N.Y.

290 Religions. Religious literature—Collections 39-16324

Selections from the sacred books of Hinduism, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and the "Bahai cause." Each section consists of from fifty to one hundred pages of text, with brief introduction by an expositor of the faith involved. Index.

Cath World 150:252 N '39 180w

"By arrangement and proportion, the impression is produced that the Bahai Cause represents the climax of the series in the mind of the compiler, a Persian scholar and former associate of Abdul Baha. Such compilations have great value as indicating the element that is common to the great religions but give no information as to their distinctive characters."

Christian Century 56:677 My 24 '39 80w

"One serious weakness of the volume from the scholar's viewpoint lies in the frequent failure to give specific documentation for many of the sources. In numerous cases the sacred scripture and the volume of 'The Sacred Books of the East' in which it is found are quoted, but no chapter, verse, and page are given. The careful student would find this a serious handicap as the practice makes it practically impossible, without long labor, to check the sources. The volume will be particularly valuable for the layman who is interested in learning the essential spiritual and ethical insights of the nine faiths considered." G. W. Davis

+ — Crozer Q 17:82 Ja '40 500w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Ethics 50:243 Ja '40 50w

"For the quick study of comparative religion this book is ideally suited." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:946 Je 17 '39 650w

"A single volume containing generally well-chosen and well-edited selections . . . from the leading scriptures of nine great religions

SOHRAB, M. A., ed.—Continued
is truly a treasure. . . A work planned and executed in so catholic a spirit fully deserves its ambitious title." E. S. Bates
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Je 17 '39 440w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 11 '39 120w

SOKOLSKY, GEORGE EPHRAIM. The American way of life; with an introd. by Fulton Oursler. 188p $2 Farrar

659.1 Advertising. Commercial products. U.S.—Industries and resources 39-13826

A series of articles, originally published in Liberty, in which Mr Sokolsky answers the authors of the "guinea-pig books" and defends American advertising by showing how it has improved American ways of living. Partial contents: Blue milk and white; The staff of life; Every girl a queen; The medicine chest; Triumphant private enterprise; Is our press to remain free? Consumer protections; Yardsticks of living. Index.

"Mr. Sokolsky's book contains little or nothing in the way of new information, and thank God, has no new economic device for getting us out of our trouble. It is, however, a well-organized and interesting presentation of facts and conditions that have shown up piecemeal here and there in the various sham and real battles between politicians and business men." W. E. Robinson
+ Books p12 Je 4 '39 550w

"This maladept attempt to whitewash the advertising game wholesale will create more critics of advertising than would any number of books about millions and millions of guinea pigs." W. M. Frohock
— Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 370w
— Sat R of Lit 20:31 Ap 29 '39 270w

SOLLITT, KENNETH WALTER. Preaching from pictures; a handbook for worship leaders. 150p pl $2 Wilde

251 Art and religion. Sermons. Preaching. Public worship 38-39349

"This book contains many hints of value in the preparation and presentation of illustrated sermons. There are a dozen complete services and sermons built around an equal number of religious pictures with which the book is illustrated." Churchman

---

"Many ministers and directors of religious education will find [the book] full of helpful suggestions. Those who wish to make serious use of this method will doubtless find themselves reaching out for pictorial material somewhat less familiar, not to say hackneyed, than some of the pictures here used for illustration."
Christian Century 55:1369 N 9 '38 150w

"It will find its usefulness in Episcopal circles mainly in connection with the church school or occasional services. There is excellent suggestion offered here, although the predominating feeling is of the sentimental, evangelistic sort, and the pictures used would not in every case conform to a standard of high artistic taste." S. L. R.
+ — Churchman 153:50 Ap 1 '39 90w

SOLOV'EV, VLADIMIR SERGIEEVICH. God, man, and the church: the spiritual foundations of life; tr. by Donald Attwater. 192p $2.50 Bruce pub. [5s Clarke, J]

248 Spiritual life

"This summary of the spiritual foundations of life is a translation of the French translation. It is the most profound and representative of the works of one who was dubbed the Russian Newman. It appears he was more like a Russian Friedrich von Hügel. Written fifty years ago when Russia was autocratic and Byzantine, it represents the author's tendency towards the West." (Times [London] Lit Sup) The first part of the book teaches the duties of the Christian under the headings: prayer; almsdeeds; and fasting. The second part deals with the author's metaphysical ideas and the doctrine of divine humanity.

"A Russian reader is not disturbed at reading straight theology from start to finish, centering around the problem of asceticism, evil, and the Mystical Body of Christ. Solovyef wrote for a group of intellectuals who habitually discoursed of these things; with whom he likewise discussed poetry, the history of religion and philosophical systems. Far Eastern politics, the Jewish question and a variety of other matters interested his encyclopedic mind. . . Solovyef merely expounds his views; he cites no authorities, patristic or otherwise as Newman—much like him in so many respects—would have done; he makes no applications of his general ascetic principles to daily life. The most he concedes is occasionally to quote a passage of the Gospels. He is a theorist and talks pure theory. Nevertheless, in the main he talks Catholic dogma. Though he was not yet a Catholic at the time of writing, his doctrinal slips are few, and where they occur have been noted by the translator." J. T. Brenton
Commonweal 29:613 Mr 24 '39 700w

Reviewed by Mother Mary Maude
Living Church 99:104 Ag 3 '38 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 12 '38 160w

SONNE, NIELS HENRY. Liberal Kentucky, 1780-1828. 287p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

277.69 Church and state in Kentucky. Liberalism. Kentucky—Intellectual life. Transylvania university 39-20412

Kentucky during the decades after the Revolution was the scene of an intellectual and cultural development far ahead of the other sections beyond the Appalachians. Among the elements of liberalism stressed in this study are free religious worship, separation of church and state, separation of church and college with morality rather than theology stressed, and emphasis upon physiology in the interpretation of human nature. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. F. Humphrey
Am Hist R 45:489 Ja '40 230w

"The author seems unwarrantably critical of the Presbyterians' participation in politics. Their demand for Sunday laws seems to him sinister. . . This matter assumes so large a place in the total argument that it might almost be said that the author's main thesis is that the Presbyterians were trying to secure a union of church and state in Kentucky. In this reviewer's opinion, he does not prove it. But he organizes and exhibits a body of important material bearing upon the religion, politics and social life of Kentucky in an interesting period." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:998 Ag 16 '39 850w

"Dr. Sonne has done a worthy job in presenting this picture of the rise and decline of liberalism in one of the key states." P. R. Anderson
+ J Philos 36:440 Ag 3 '39 480w

"The value of this book would have been enhanced if the author had defined the terms 'Calvinism,' 'liberalism,' 'deism,' and 'infidelity.' This fault runs throughout the book; consequently, it does not have the sharp focus it might have had. . . This criticism is not intended to minimize the painstaking work found in this timely, well-written book but only to show that its effectiveness might have been greater had a clearer definition of terms been given." C. E. Hix, Jr.

+ — J Religion 19:413 O '39 450w

Reviewed by Constance Rourke
Nation 149:327 S 23 '39 550w

SOPHOCLES. Antigone; an English version by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald. 97p $1.50 Harcourt

882.2 (W) 39-4125

New translation of the Antigone in which the translators set as their object "to make it clear and credible in English."

"I found the [translators'] 'Alcestis' a spirited reworking, and I enjoyed it on the stage. I feel that the 'Antigone' is less good, but trust that in the acting it will equal, if not surpass, its predecessor. The Greek feeling seems to be somehow washed out, flattened, starched. In the place of sublimity, nobility, dignity you get modern counterparts of a lesser degree; a compromise is made with contemporary speech, seemingly at a sacrifice; in the case of Antigone herself, the sacrifice of a telling amount of her passion. . . If Antigone seems to lose, Creon gains." Richard Eberhart

+ — Books p20 Ap 30 '39 850w
Nation 149:80 Jl 15 '39 260w

"This up-to-date version of the 'Antigone,' shaved down and stepped up, is quite a distinguished little work. Where it is particularly good is in its handling of the one-line dialogue, which in the ordinary translation of Greek tragedy is usually what is most unsatisfactory. The bandying back and forth of the tennis ball of Sophoclean wit is likely to prove irritating or boring when the form of the verse has been lost; but Messrs. Fitts and Fitzgerald have succeeded in giving these passages naturalness and point, rapidity and animation." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Repub 98:106 Mr 1 '39 1150w

"It is impossible to read this translation without regretting the sacrifice of the impressive poetry in some of the scenes; the compensation is in the tense and nervous drama of some parts which have not been actable drama in more insistently poetic translations. Antigone's defense of her action, for instance, which is fine and sustaining, on the whole, declines here and there on mere polite language. . . Balancing this is the genuinely exciting drama of the sentry's speech informing Creon of the burial. All readers—and spectators—of Greek drama must welcome this achievement of making the messenger device of Greek plays come alive above the burden of lengthy recitative." David Morton

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 5 '39 650w

"Though no play can be judged surely except in production, several readings of this translation leave us with an impression of jerkiness and uncertainty of aim. For one thing, the sharp division into scene and choric ode emphasizes the isolation of the choruses as setpieces of poetry between snatches of dialogue, rather than as parts of a single flow of action. The characters live only spasmodically. The language, too, fluctuates. . . Fitts and Fitzgerald are too careful scholars to produce the slashed but vivid translations of a Jean Cocteau. . . Their work compares better with Yeats's 'Oedipus' cycle: Greek friezes that occasionally move (notably in the last scenes of this 'Antigone'), interspersed with superb lyrics. For their distinction has been so far, and it is here again confirmed, as poets. The 'Ode III' and 'Paean' would justify the whole work. For any experiment with theater poetry is of value now in working out the innumerable problems of the rejuvenated poetic theater." S. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 11 '39 380w
Theatre Arts Mo 23:312 Ap '39 20w

"This is a remarkably fresh and vigorous version. . . As a piece of English it reads, and probably would act, extremely well, for it is modern and wholly intelligible and without trace of that conventional language which still haunts translators."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p690 N 25 '39 150w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH, and BERGER, CLARENCE QUINN. Time-budgets of human behavior. 204p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

301.15 Social surveys 39-3687

"The authors set themselves the important and difficult task of getting continuous 24-hour records of human behavior—what people do (that takes at least five minutes), how long each overt activity takes them, why they do it, with whom they do it, and how well they can predict this behavior a day, a week, or a month in advance. The sample of some four-thousand anonymous records finally used .(4 per cent of the schedules sent out) constitutes the two to four weeks behavior of approximately one hundred white-collar W.P.A. workers who were predominantly single, white, of long residence, female (79 per cent), and young (60 per cent between seventeen and twenty-three)." Am J Soc

"That the analysis gives the impression of being hurried and at times too grandiose for the data is unfortunate, as the problems, research plan, and the raw data themselves are of considerable importance." R. V. Bowers

— + Am J Soc 45:274 S '39 850w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.
Survey 75:262 Ag '39 150w

SOTHERN, MARGARET. Chosen races; tr. by Maisie Ward. 377p $2.50 (8s 6d) Sheed

39-10867

A love story told against the background of the rise of Hitler in Germany and the growth of racial hatred.

"This novel is vastly superior to Miss Sothern's previous book, 'Death Solves Nothing' [Book Review Digest, 1938]. Her condemnation of brutality is all the stronger in that it is not hysterical but has a well balanced objectivity." John Sherry

+ Books p14 Ap 30 '39 350w
Cath World 149:634 Ag '39 30w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 30:25 Ap 28 '39 120w

"Miss Sothern has written a vivid and vital novel of present-day Germany which never collapses into mere melodrama, as does so much anti-Nazi fiction. And she reminds her readers that the Jews are not the only persecuted people in that land today; that Catholics endure a persecution which is none the less merciless for being veiled and indirect." Mason Wade

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '39 440w

"Miss Sothern has written [this story] very quietly, and has let her characters speak out with a real simplicity that is illuminating. Her book is no less denunciatory because it never leaves the level of reason."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:4 Ap 22 '39 210w

"This is a novel written obviously from the heart. The descriptions of the Nazi régime at work in a small country community seem to have been learned at first hand. But the plot and the characters are none of them really lifelike, although perhaps the translator may be to some extent at fault."

Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 6 '39 160w

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. An economic constitution for democracy. 101p $1.50 Yale univ. press

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Government ownership (W) 39-24556

"In these Storrs lectures, delivered at the Yale Law School, Mr. Soule analyzes the economic aims and achievements of the New Deal and concludes: that it has succeeded in insuring an ample supply of money; that it has succeeded partially in maintaining a flow of money (but only so long as the borrowing policy is continued); that it has no effective policy for adjusting values of goods and services to secure distribution of income; and that the most important questions (especially about unemployment) remain unanswered." Christian Century

SOULE, G. H.—Continued

Booklist 36:105 N 15 '39
Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 150w

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. Sidney Hillman, labor statesman. 237p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Hillman, Sidney. Amalgamated clothing workers of America 39-27759

"Devoting 228 pages to a career that would have made fascinating reading for double the length, Mr. Soule traces Mr. Hillman's metamorphosis from an opportunity-starved young revolutionary in Tsarist Russia to an unwavering defender of American democracy, responsible in varying degrees for the development of worker-employer arbitration, the preferential union shop, the refusal of the United States Government in 1917-1918 to accept army uniforms made in unfair shops, the basis of several New Deal measures, notably the NRA, and the formation of the CIO and of Labor's Non-Partisan League." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 36:43 O 1 '39

"George Soule's new book is at least three things at once: a biography, a handbook of progressive trade union practices and a plea for industrial and political democracy. The three themes are expertly blended throughout the book in the simple construction Mr. Soule's readers have long since come to expect from him. The canvas is large, the brushwork is broad and the morals are plain." R. R. R. Brooks

\+ Books p10 S 10 '39 850w

Reviewed by A. B. Lewis
Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 1000w
Christian Science Monitor p22 S 14 '39 550w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:5 N '39 250w

"An exciting and altogether important chronicle, clearly and factually set down by the distinguished editor of the New Republic. Since Mr. Soule is also an authority on labor and economics, his biography is a guide to understanding all the organized social forces shaping the destiny of the country." M. L. Elting

\+ Forum 102:iv N '39 220w
Nation 150:135 F 3 '40 280w

"To the extent that this volume helps to spotlight the ever-growing significance of first-rank labor leaders on the American scene, and to tell something of that new rule of reason in employer-employe attitudes that has been of late evolving from a more autocratic past, it has considerable value to student and layman alike. But it could have been far more valuable had it been more complete, and more 'humanized.'" Herbert Harris

\+ — N Y Times p29 N 5 '39 800w

"Mr. Soule has produced a work that everyone interested in the working of the democratic processes in America may read with both interest and profit." W. O. Scroggs

\+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 13 '40 350w

"The picture painted by Mr Soule may be flattering, but the reader is likely to be convinced that the book is an essentially accurate appraisal of a leading figure in modern labor history."

\+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 10 '39 480w

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh
Survey G 28:765 D '39 600w

SOUVARINE, BORIS. Stalin; a critical survey of bolshevism [tr. by C. L. R. James]. 690p $3.75 Alliance

B or 92 Stalin, Iosif. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917- (W) 39-22569

This biography of Stalin, by one of the founders of the Communist party in France, delves into his early history and relates what little is known of Stalin's youth and background. Altho comparatively unknown during the Revolution, the Civil war, and the first years of the Soviet state, after Lenin's death Stalin rose rapidly to his present position. The story of the most recent years of Stalin's life is also the history of the Soviet. The editor's postscript brings the record up to the last few months. Index.

Booklist 36:67 O 15 '39

"This book is one of the most remarkable biographies of our times. . . It is the best critical history of Bolshevism from Lenin to Stalin that has been written to date. Its theme is of such importance that no one should permit himself the luxury of a judgment upon present European affairs who has not conned this scholarly yet exciting analysis of the ideas and practices of the absolute ruler of one sixth of the world's surface. Lesser men would have been borne down by the weight of M. Souvarine's vast erudition, but the author has a keen mind, a delightful sense of humor, and knows how to etch in acid." Sidney Hook

\+ Books p3 S 17 '39 1900w
Books p2 D 10 '39 550w

"The author's portrayal of Stalin is excessively subjective even in this day of impressionistic biographies, and his intense dislike for the man thoroughly invalidates the picture he presents. Stalin may be a villain, but even an Iago has redeeming traits. Everything, from the flora and fauna of Stalin's native Georgia to his personal idiosyncrasies and physical ailments, is forced to contribute its bit to the portrayal of a personaltiy of unrelieved blackness and treachery. On the other hand, as a critical survey of Bolshevism the work has some value." E. J. Simmons

— + Boston Transcript p1 O 7 '39 450w

"There is nothing very new in this book. In reality it is compiled from an immense number of books, newspapers and magazine articles dealing with the Bolshevik revolution, and on that account lacks unity of thought and of judgment. And what makes it historically worthless is the spite and venom with which it is filled from beginning to end." C. R.

— Cath World 150:247 N '39 700w

"This life of Stalin, which comes short of being 'definitive' only because Stalin is not yet through, is one of the very few which can be rated as practically indispensable to anyone who would know the facts and evaluate the forces of revolutionary and soviet Russia. There has been no more competent piece of recent historical writing, and the developments of the past two months have made it twice as important as it was when the author wrote his last paragraph." W. E. Garrison

\+ Christian Century 56:1275 O 18 '39 850w

"Not only the best biography of Stalin, but the best history of Soviet communism of which this reviewer has any knowledge." W. H. C.

\+ Christian Science Monitor p20 O 14 '39 550w

"Souvarine, a Frenchman, can no more understand the Slav than the rest of us. Towards Stalin, a Slav-Tartar, he is particularly bitter. . . The bias of the book is startling as contrasted to such works on Russia by the Webbs and Sherwood Eddy." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

Churchman 153:19 O 1 '39 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:4 O '39 350w
Economist 136:605 S 30 '39 600w
Foreign Affairs 18:378 Ja '40 70w

Reviewed by F. N. Trager
Living Age 357:196 O '39 650w
Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '39 450w
Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 149:384 O 7 '39 700w
Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
— New Repub 100:249 O 4 '39 900w
Reviewed by K. Smellie
New Statesman & Nation 18:496 O 7 '39 1100w
Reviewed by C. B. Hoover
N Y Times p5 O 8 '39 1350w

"Let me warn you at once that 'Stalin' is not easy reading. Still, it is becoming clear that easy reading will hardly enable us to understand the multiplex history of our time. 'Stalin' is as much the story of Bolshevism as it is of Stalin. That means it is full of detailed analyses of splits in the Party and laden with theoretical disquisitions explaining each twist and turn of the Russian revolutionary movement from about 1900 to 1937. Its style is ponderous, like Rauschning's, though occasionally eloquent with hatred and scorn. No, it is not easy reading, but it is a work of obvious importance and, in its total effect, of considerable power." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 15:78 S 16 '39 1750w
Pratt p22 winter '40
Reviewed by Eugene Lyons
Sat R of Lit 20:3 S 16 '39 1650w
Reviewed by John Hallett
Spec 163:512 O 13 '39 1000w

"It is unfortunate that those responsible for the English version of Souvarine's scholarly history of bolshevism have deemed it necessary to saddle it with the pretentious subtitle 'the definitive biography' of Stalin, when the author himself judiciously states that 'any portrait of Stalin would be premature before his fall or death.' Even more unfortunate is the omission of the extremely useful bibliography that fills twenty-five pages of the French edition. It is to be hoped that this grievous omission, which greatly reduces the usefulness of the book, may be corrected in the subsequent printings to which Souvarine's excellent study is certainly entitled." M. T. Florinsky
Survey G 28:768 D '39 500w
Time 34:76 S 18 '39 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p558 S 30 '39 1400w

"A bitter controversy has already sprung up around [the book]. Stalinists have, of course, not been pleased by this devastatingly complete picture of the successful advance of a ruthless machine politician to absolute control over one-sixth of the world. It was unfortunate that the publishers described Souvarine's work as 'the definitive biography.' The author himself rejects any such claim. . . Souvarine's searching history of the party is certainly the strongest part of the book, for it shows what forces have made Stalin as well as what Stalin has done with the party. Yet in its emphasis on the history of the party his book treats very sketchily the actual problems faced by Stalin's government and the attempts to solve them." P. E. Mosely
Yale R n s 29:385 winter '40 600w

SOWERS, MRS PHYLLIS (AYER). Dhan of the pearl country; il. by Margaret Ayer. 125p map $2 Whitman, A.
Children in Ceylon 39-23038

Story of Ceylon and pearl diving for young readers. Dhan and his sister Mayna are orphans. The story is of their search for a stolen pearl and their recovery of it.

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 140w

"The book . . . is not outstanding, but the story moves rapidly and will hold the interest of the child. Recommended for its background of Ceylon where libraries need material." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 90w

"Will help Geography along."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 20w

SPAETH, SIGMUND GOTTFRIED. Maxims to music; traditional proverbs, mottoes and maxims of the world fitted to music for the well-tempered piano-child; richly and humorously illustrated by Tony Sarg. 64p $2 McBride

784.624 Children's songs. Maxims. Proverbs 39-25126

Proverbs and mottoes versified and set to familiar tunes. The tunes range from Three Blind Mice to the Brahms Lullaby and the Pilgrim's Chorus.

"Siegmund Spaeth, with the graphic collaboration of Tony Sarg, has made a very chatty book in 'Maxims to Music.'" Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 20w

" 'I think the pictures are swell,' says Spaeth. 'The tunes seem O.K. to me,' says Sarg. The pictures are swell."
Cath World 150:374 D '39 60w

"Not always very good verse."
New Yorker 15:91 N 25 '39 30w

"Idea better than result."
Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w

SPAULDING, FRANCIS TROW. High school life. 377p $3 (18s) McGraw

373.747 High schools—New York (state). Education, Secondary 39-28000

This volume is one of a series prepared on the basis of findings of the Regents' Inquiry into the character and cost of public education in the state of New York. Its purpose is to show how and to what extent the state's high schools have prepared students "to take an effective part in the life that lies ahead of them beyond the school." Index.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

"It seems somewhat out of place to state criticisms of such a significant contribution. In its 378 pages there is as much of worth as one should expect of a single book, if not more. Nevertheless, from the reviewer's point of view, there are some limitations. Although the book is the result of a long, careful, and extensive survey, no objective data are presented. It is true that other reports of the inquiry staff present much data on which the present report is based, but the reader of this report may not have the others available. The author states that there are schools in the state which exemplify the better practices recommended; yet these schools remain unknown to the school people of the state. There is lack of emphasis on co-operative working relationships between school and other community agencies." R. T. Gregg
+ — School R 47:392 My '39 1000w
Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 3:433 S '39 110w
Reviewed by E. C. Bye
Social Studies 30:282 O '39 800w

SPAULDING, OLIVER LYMAN. Ahriman: a study in air bombardment. 143p $1; pa 50c World peace

623.746 Aeronautics, Military. Bombardment 39-32202

"Brigadier General Spaulding (U.S. Army, Retired) thinks that mass air-raids upon large towns far from the main theatre of war, and not direct military objectives, would be extremely costly to the raiders, and inflict far less vital damage than is usually supposed. The author writes in a non-technical manner, for the general reader. He first examines the traditional law and practice of bombardment, then explains and criticizes the thesis of the Italian General Douhet, the originator of the theory that air bombardments en masse would destroy the enemy's morale and communications. He concludes that, with proper defensive measures, this is extremely improbable, and that such raids, though of course possible, and destructive of life and property, could not be decisive." Canadian Forum

SPAULDING, O. L.—Continued

"There is plenty of meat in the author's 142 pages, and his contribution toward peace should be welcomed by all who hate violence." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 28 '39 450w

"An interesting and topical little book."
Canadian Forum 19:300 D '39 160w

SPEARMAN, MRS DIANA. Modern dictatorship. 272p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [10s 6d Cape, J]

321.6 Dictators. Social psychology 39-21550

An analysis of the types of dictatorships now prevalent in Europe, of the causes for their coming into being, of their advantages, and limitations. Index.

"Cool, able and valuable analysis." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 20 '39 210w

"Mrs Spearman has performed a very useful service by the publication of her very interesting and illuminating analysis of this central phenomenon of modern politics."

+ Economist 135:433 My 20 '39 800w

"I have already referred to the clear-headedness and sanity of this book. These are admittedly great merits, but it is one thing to be clear-headed and another to be cold-blooded. . . At no point does Mrs. Spearman give evidence of her realisation of the fundamental argument against dictatorship, which is that human beings are simply not angelic enough to be entrusted with absolute power over the lives and happiness of their fellow men, or of the fundamental argument for democracy, that it is only the wearer who knows where the shoe pinches." C. E. M. Joad

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:543 Ap 8 '39 1300w

Reviewed by W. T. Wells
Spec 162:1005 Je 9 '39 1000w

"Mrs. Spearman is to be congratulated on this essay. She has a real gift for political analysis, which she has exercised in a dispassionate and scholarly fashion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Ap 8 '39 700w

SPECIAL LIBRARIES ASSOCIATION. National financial group. Handbook of commercial and financial services; Dorothy Avery, chairman of Revision committee. rev ed 70p pa $2 The association

330.5 Information services. Business services —Directories 39-27693

"An enlargement and revision of a handbook published in 1931. It includes many new services, particularly in the field of government activities, as well as those directly related to advertising, commerce, finance, industry, and insurance. An invaluable tool for libraries serving business men." Booklist

Booklist 36:14 S '39

"The library profession owes the Revision Committee a debt of gratitude for getting the work off the press, and this reviewer hopes readers will realize that this is the type of tool that needs tremendous co-operative effort if anything like a complete list is ever to be attained." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library Q 10:141 Ja '40 350w

SPEIER, HANS, ed. See New school for social research. Graduate faculty. War in our time

SPEMANN, HANS. Embryonic development and induction. 401p il $5 Yale univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

591.3 Embryology 38-23967

This book contains a record of experiments "performed in order to answer the general question whether and in what manner the larger partial processes of development are connected among themselves, whether one causes and conditions the other, or whether they proceed side by side independent of each other. In order to decide this question two specific methods were systematically employed: the methods of isolation and of transplantation. . . All the experiments were made on amphibian eggs in the earliest stages of their development, partly in repetition of earlier experiments on other kinds of animals." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"At last we have the pleasure of welcoming the largest work so far written by one who is perhaps the greatest living master of experimental morphology. . . This is a great book. But it is not a book to be read uncritically." Joseph Needham

+ — Nature 143:44 Ja 14 '39 1550w
Scientific Bk Club R 9:4 Je '38 200w

SPENCER, CORNELIA. Three sisters; il. by Kurt Wiese. 279p $2 Day

Soong family—Fiction (W) 39-27472

Fictionized biography of the famous Chinese family, the Soongs, with emphasis on the three Soong daughters: Ai-ling, who is Madame H. H. Kung; Ching-ling, who married Dr Sun Yat-sen; and Mei-ling, now Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

Booklist 35:350 Je 15 '39

"Possibly this writer idealizes her Oriental heroes and heroines too much, but her humor and her understanding are never sentimental. Her book is an illuminating picture of Chinese ideology and a rarely delightful human study. We cannot imagine a modern true story of finer implications or of greater practical inspiration. It belongs to everyone who is 15 years old or over." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 22 '39 850w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 27 '39 350w

"The story of the Soongs is informal in style, simple and objective in handling, and should be of special appeal to all young people for whom it is intended." S. C. Hart

+ Horn Bk M 15:306 S '39 1350w

"Young people may think that there is too much about the father and mother, but since they are interesting people, it doesn't detract from the worth of the book. Recommended." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 64:564 Jl '39 120w

"With skill and earnestness, the author has woven her threads into one picture in such a way as to keep, and emphasize, individual character and contrast. The truth is that the direct chronicle of the Soong family is made of the dramatic and significant stuff of a novel, and Cornelia Spencer as biographer-novelist achieves an uncommonly interesting result in carrying out her 'intention to remain true to the spirit and feeling of the individuals portrayed.' This is a vividly readable story, to which Kurt Wiese's drawings add their own touch of suggestiveness and charm. . . 'Three Sisters' was primarily planned for young people, but it is by no means to be classed as a 'juvenile' book. It has the clarity and sympathy of a popular novel, and its characters, events and historic significance hold a pressing general interest." K. W.

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 23 '39 550w

SPENCER, DOUGLAS ARTHUR. Colour photography in practice. 275p il $6 (21s) Pitman

770 Color photography 39-767

A textbook on the technique of color photography and its commercial applications, designed for students already well versed in normal monochrome work. The illustrations, with but four exceptions, are diagrams and colored plates showing apparatus, steps in process, color charts, etc. Bibliography. Index.

"The volume will probably be regarded for many years as a standard text-book, combining exceptional clarity of exposition with a readable style in a way which is admirable."
+ Nature 143:426 Mr 11 '39 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:28 Ap '38

SPENCER, THEODORE, and VAN DOREN, MARK. Studies in metaphysical poetry; two essays and a bibliography. 88p pa $1.50 Columbia univ. press [pa 7s 6d Oxford]

016.821 English poetry—Bibliography. English poetry—History and criticism 39-1725

"The two authors have long been students of seventeenth century literature and especially of the 'metaphysical poets'—John Donne, George Herbert, Crashaw and the others of that group. The present volume, prepared at the request of the Modern Language Association of America, contains two brief but informative essays on the recent study of these poets and a complete bibliography running to more than 500 items." Christian Century

Christian Century 56:59 Ja 11 '39 70w
Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 16:224 Jl '39 150w
Reviewed by Mother Mary Maude
Living Church 101:10 Ag 2 '39 250w

"The real value of this book lies in the Bibliography. . . It is this that makes the little volume indispensable." D. F.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 29 240w

SPENGLER, EDWIN HAROLD, and KLEIN, JACOB. Introduction to business. 2d ed 786p il maps $4 (24s) McGraw

658 Business. U.S.—Industries 39-15550

"The subject matter of this book has been rearranged in a form more suitable for classroom use, and parts have been condensed. A few new chapters and topics have been added." (Booklist) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

"Although the impressions of a person who has not had class experience with a text are none too reliable, two or three of the reviewer's impressions will be recorded. (1) There is an unfortunate division of some of the materials. . . (2) A few important topics are slighted. . . (3) The treatment given to some of the more significant developments since 1935 is inadequate. . . On the whole, the new edition remains a well-written text and offers a good many improvements over the old." C. O. Swayzee
+ — Ann Am Acad 206:197 N '39 500w
Booklist 36:14 S '39
Management R 28:252 Jl '39 90w

SPENGLER, JOSEPH JOHN. France faces depopulation. 314p $3 Duke univ. [13s 6d Cambridge]

312.0944 France—Population 38-34494

"The subject matter of this book may be grouped under seven headings: (1) population growth in France as a whole, and in various subdivisions; (2) the extent and nature of differentials in fertility; (3) fears engendered by the relatively slow growth of the French population; (4) French explanations of the causes of the decline in fertility; (5) French theory and policy regarding colonization, emigration, and immigration, and the effects of the policy; (6) measures adopted in France to promote natural increase, their effectiveness and defects; (7) theory as to certain relations between population and per capita production and welfare, as to factors influencing fertility, and as to the extent to which these factors may be subject to social control, with conclusions regarding the French situation. . . There is a name index as well as a subject index." Ann Am Acad

"Opportune in a world where the counting of heads is an obsession, Mr. Spengler's volume is informative and thought-provoking. Students of social questions must be grateful for this review and evaluation of literature from a country which, longer than any other western nation, has faced the fear of decreasing natality while numerical superiority seemed vital to national existence." R. A. Allen
+ Am Econ R 29:629 S '39 1000w
Reviewed by B. D. Karpinos
Am J Soc 45:616 Ja '40 270w

"Without question, this book contains the best review in English of material dealing with the population problem in France; as far as the reviewer knows, there is nothing equal to it in the French language." P. K. Whelpton
+ Ann Am Acad 203:253 My '39 550w

"A thoroughly scientific treatise on a politically important subject.'
+ Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 10w
New Repub 97:268 Ja 4 '39 90w
Reviewed by T. L. Smith
Social Forces 18:132 O '39 600w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Lost lagoon; a Pacific adventure; il. by the author. 277p $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-28951

Story of mystery and adventure among the islands of the South seas. Judd Anders, about to leave for college in California, is captured and forced to navigate the Island Queen. Treasure seekers, a young scientist, and several villains, add to the excitement. High school age.

Booklist 36:137 D 1 '39

"Full of danger and suspense is this brilliantly illustrated book of seafaring among the islands of Polynesia. . . The plot, if not new, is well sustained and the glamour of South Sea voyaging is over all." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:392 N '39 90w

"Though [Judd's] courageous fight against sharks, dreaded water-spout, and thoroughly unscrupulous men is extraordinary, the author makes it all seem plausible. His lively imagination, together with a knowledge of the Pacific and apparently sincere desire to write a good book for boys, will make this his most popular book." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 64:1001 D 15 '39 100w

"The exciting story sometimes stretches one's credulity but it never slackens its pace, and no boy who loves the sea will want to miss the salty wash of its chapters." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '40 320w

"Blood and thunder."
Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 20w

SPERRY, PORTIA HOWE, and DONALDSON, LOIS. Abigail; pictured by Zabeth Selover. 196p $1.50 Whitman, A.

38-25508

Story of covered wagon days, in which the Calvin family move from Kentucky to Brown county, Indiana, in a covered wagon. Abigail, who has an important part in the move, is the homemade doll, belonging to small Susan Calvin.

"The story is told simply and pleasantly." E. M. Mack
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 26 '38 60w
Wis Lib Bul 35:31 F '39

SPERRY, WILLARD LEAROYD. Strangers and pilgrims; studies in classics of Christian devotion. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 165p $2.50 Little

242 Religious literature 39-5998

Six essays, originally delivered as Lowell Institute lectures of 1938, by the dean of the Harvard Divinity school, on the great classics of Christian devotion: The confessions of Saint Augustine; The little flowers of the glorious Messer Saint Francis and of his friars; The imitation of Christ; The theologia Germanica; The practice of the presence of God by Brother Lawrence; The journal of John Woolman.

"As one reads over these familiar titles, there comes the instant feeling that there is nothing that can now be said about these books to justify writing about them anew. What could anybody do, with the best intention and the amplest knowledge, but rattle the dry bones and raise a little dust? But Dean Sperry, like another Elisha has touched the bones with life and, behold, they rise!" J. H. Holmes

+ Books p6 Je 11 '39 600w

"If this really notable book does not send its readers to the wells of Christian spirituality, we shall be much mistaken. We think it the best devotional guide-book of this year, and of several years." W. N. Pittenger

+ Living Church 100:479 My 3 '39 320w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 11 '39 420w

SPEYER, MRS LEONORA (VON STOSCH). Slow wall; poems, new and selected. 140p $2 Knopf

811 (W) 38-29075

This collection of Leonora Speyer's poems contains a selection from two earlier volumes, Fiddler's Farewell and Naked Heel, as well as 25 new poems.

Booklist 35:171 Ja 15 '39

"Her poetic work gains in impact when presented as a whole; her contribution to the verse of our time defines itself in terms of a personality, an attitude toward life, a particular gift for word-music. . . In her writing for the last twenty years Leonora Speyer has constantly given us occasion to remember that she was first of all a musician. . . Mrs. Speyer's poems convey the impression of exactly the same personality that her violin playing once revealed—a very forceful, impassioned spirit; a capacity for deep feeling touched with glints of humor, an immense joy in the present moment." John Erskine

+ Books p11 F 12 '39 650w

"The lyricism so evident in the present volume comes at an opportune time. For whatever advance poetry may have made in the past few years in breadth of humanity, it has, on the other hand, often attained it at the expense of its singing voice. Mrs Speyer brings the music back again." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '39 240w

Forum 101:240 Ap '39 50w

"Some years ago Mrs. Speyer was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry and her new poems show no falling off from her then high level." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 F 5 '39 440w

"What distinguishes the poetry of Leonora Speyer is its boldness. Amongst poems of today that are hesitating and tentative, hers are remarkable for a direct seizure of the subject and a swift presentation of the image. . . With its variety and vitality, 'Slow Wall' is a stirring collection of poems." Padraic Colum

+ Sat R of Lit 19:15 F 4 '39 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 9 '39 480w

SPITZ, CARL. Training your dog; in collaboration with Bernard Molohon; with a foreword by Clark Gable. 234p il $2.50 Jones, Marshall

636.7 Dogs—Training 38-32180

The author is founder and head of the Hollywood Dog Training School where many of the dogs used in moving pictures are trained. Tho there are some pictures of movie stars and their pets and some anecdotes of dog actors, the bulk of the text and the majority of the pictures deal with the practical steps of training a dog in good manners.

"The work reflects sympathetic understanding of dogs, and is written in a wise, kindly and concise style. The instructions are made doubly understandable by the pictures of actual training that accompany the text."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 15 '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

SPIVAK, JOHN L. Secret armies; the new technique of Nazi warfare. 160p il pa 50c Modern age

943.085 Secret service—Germany. Propaganda, German 39-4822

After three chapters on world affairs: Czechoslovakia—before the carving, England's Cliveden set, and France's secret fascist army, the author discusses Japanese and Nazi activities in the United States, Panama, and Mexico.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

Foreign Affairs 18:162 O '39 20w

Reviewed by Ludwig Lore

Nation 149:49 Jl 8 '39 220w

"Mr. Spivak's little book appears to me the most meritorious because he has himself done a great deal of personal investigation. He would, however, have done better to confine himself entirely to our American situation, for his first three chapters dealing with Czechoslovakia, England's Cliveden set, and France's secret fascist army are too short and too superficial to add to our knowledge. . . But the facts Mr. Spivak has brought together as to what is happening here are, as a whole, impressive and alarming, even though much of what he says is obiter dicta and carries with it no evidence to prove his assertions." O. G. Villard

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:10 Ap 1 '39 650w

SPOWERS, WILLIAM HARVEY. Hot-dip galvanizing practice. 194p il $4 Penton

671 Galvanizing 38-18877

"This book deals exclusively with details of shop practice, not with the scientific aspects of the subject. One-third of the volume is devoted to a bibliography. Six folded plates show factory lay-outs and plans of equipment. The author, a veteran in the craft, is the head of the research laboratory bearing his name." N Y New Tech Bks.

"This volume covers the important field of zinc coating in a practical manner. . . Perhaps the strongest section of the volume is the collection of plates showing kettle settings, wipers and generalized plant layouts." C. L. Mantell

+ Chem & Met Eng 45:698 D '38 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:8 Ja '39

SPRING, HOWARD. Book parade. 278p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Constable]

920.02 Books—Reviews. Biography (as a literary form) [38-18356]

Collection of book reviews by a writer on the London Evening Standard. Most of the books dealt with are biographies.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:654 Je '39

"As a critic, nay, as a reviewer, Mr. Spring reminds me of a beaming master of ceremonies ushering in the charming and pleasant books of the season, patting each on the back, introducing it fondly to the audience and asking for a great big hand. There is nothing in these reviews to indicate that Mr. Spring has ever thought seriously about anything more important to literature than writing a suave and gracious review. Mr. Spring's reviews are so suave and gracious that they purr. If this is what the top-notch English reviewers are doing, let us have no more of it!" Alfred Kazin

— Books p18 Ap 30 '39 310w

"It is the definitely less informed general reader to whom Mr. Spring's very readable book reviews appear to be addressed. That impression is strengthened by his selection of reviews for reprinting in volume form. Except for some half-dozen novels and a small miscellany at the end, the books with which he deals here are all biographical studies of famous personages. And in reviewing these books what he provides is a graphic little summary of the biographer's interpretation of the career or character of his subject, or of the more dramatic parts of the story only."

Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Ap 23 '38 550w

SPRING, HOWARD. Heaven lies about us; a fragment of infancy. 134p il $2.25 Viking [5s Constable]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-29421

Quietly told reminiscences of the author's poverty-stricken childhood in the slums of Cardiff. The account breaks off with his first literary success, when a story was accepted by a paper.

Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

"The pleasure in this unpretentious little book is in inverse measure to its brevity. If one can use the term without risk of a slighting connotation, it deserves welcome as a minor masterpiece." Mary Ross

\+ Books p7 N 5 '39 1000w

"In his simple, straightforward, half-amused, but wholly sincere manner, Mr. Spring stamps the little boy and his environment firmly on our thought; and has given us a vivid memoir that is gallant and bracing in its lack of self-pity." Eric Forbes-Boyd

\+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 30 '39 480w

"It is pleasant, easy reading but it lacks the power to grip the reader as My Son, My Son! so successfully did." E. S. Hertell

\+ — Churchman 153:23 D 15 '39 110w

" 'Heaven Lies About Us' is only the prelude to a career, but it contains all those things that are most valuable." M. C.

\+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '39 330w

"No family-album nostalgia here but a straightforward, agreeable portrait."

\+ New Repub 101:241 D 13 '39 40w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Parsons

New Statesman & Nation 18:570 O 21 '39 300w

"This is an excellent little book. Its story is interesting, and its implications are as significant as they are unforced and unemotionalized."

\+ N Y Times p34 N 5 '39 360w

New Yorker 15:87 N 4 '39 30w

"If the author of 'My Son, My Son' draws few bitter conclusions, they are all there to be drawn. The contrast between the glow that childhood cast over his extreme poverty, and the light in which he sees it now, is plain. However, he never insists on it, never falsifies the reconstruction which he builds up in such simple, clear, evocative words." K. S.

Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 30 '39 300w

"A delightful little book, the first chapter, I hope, of a full-length biography." Evelyn Waugh

\+ Spec 163:331 S 1 '39 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Ag 26 '39 750w

SPROUT, HAROLD HANCE, and SPROUT, MARGARET. The rise of American naval power, 1776-1918. 398p il map $3.75 Princeton univ. press

359 U.S.—Navy—History. Sea power 39-27471

"There have been many histories of the United States Navy. . . For the first time, however, Professor and Mrs. Sprout have presented the American public with a history not of our Navy but of our naval policy. There is a distinct, indeed a fundamental difference. The authors concern themselves little with details of operations, with frigate battles and fleet actions. Their chief subject is the relationship of sea power to public opinion and political direction; more than that, the deeper relationship of the growth of our sea power to the changing and advancing currents of our national life. . . The period of the work is from the American Revolution to the close of the World War; it is to be followed by a second volume covering the years from 1919 down to the present day." (Books) Index.

Reviewed by William Beard

Am Pol Sci R 33:699 Ag '39 600w

"This book is one of the most important works ever written on the genesis and the development of American sea power. In fact, without the results of the painstaking, orignal research of the Sprouts, it is nearly impossible to understand the depressions, the doubts, and the decisions that marked the shaping of American naval policy." L. P. Lovette

\+ Ann Am Acad 205:179 S '39 650w

Booklist 35:324 Je 1 '39

"Professor and Mrs. Sprout cover the subject ably, and with an insight into the fundamental principles which govern our national security hardly, it may be said, to be expected of writers so devoid of military background. The value of the detached viewpoint has rarely been more clearly exemplified. . . It is possible, of course, in a work of such length and scope to find matters of detail with which to disagree. . . But these are minor criticisms of a work which deserves the attention of all of us, both for its clarity of vision and the painstaking attention to detail which characterizes every page." G. F. Eliot

\+ Books p5 My 14 '39 1000w

"In this open season for books about naval matters, 'The Rise of American Naval Power,' for completeness, authenticity and sheer readability stands on a level with the best. It will hold the attention of the general reader, and is indispensable for the student." P. J. Searles

\+ Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 650w

Reviewed by A. B. Corey

Canadian Hist R 20:327 S '39 400w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 28 '39 460w

Foreign Affairs 18:162 O '39 30w

"Timely contribution to the discussion of great issues—sea power, imperialism, foreign policy, and war as an instrument of policy. . . The Sprouts write clearly and simply but, with the caution of scholars, they buttress their pages by ample footnotes." C. A. Beard & Alfred Vagts

\+ New Repub 99:221 Je 28 '39 1550w

"It would be difficult to over-praise this book, for it represents not alone tireless research in a new field, but intelligent, objective and careful reporting. It is historical research at its best—without bias, without serious error, without that personalized interpretation of history which has been the bane of much of our twentieth-century historical school." H. W. Baldwin

\+ N Y Times p1 Je 4 '39 2050w

Reviewed by C. O. Paullin

Pol Sci Q 54:621 D '39 700w

Pratt p7 winter '40

SPROUT, H. H. and M.—Continued

"The authors of this timely, admirable, and informative book on American naval policy help to meet a long-felt need. . . We suggest that this book be placed on the 'required reading' list of all connected with or interested in the U.S. Navy." A. C. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 My 27 '39 650w

Reviewed by H. P. Beers

Social Studies 30:373 D '39 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 1650w

Reviewed by W. L. Whittlesey

Survey G 28:405 Je '39 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Jl 22 '39 360w

SPRUILL, MRS JULIA CHERRY. Women's life and work in the southern colonies. 426p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press [22s 6d Oxford]

396 Woman—History and condition of women. Women in the U.S. South—Social life and customs—Colonial period 38-33672

Study of the life and status of women in the English colonies of the South. "My purpose was to find out as much as possible about the everyday life of women, their function in the settlement of colonies, their homes and domestic occupations, their social life and recreations, the aims and methods of their education, their participation in affairs outside the home, and the manner in which they were regarded by the law and by society in general." (Pref) Bibliography of primary sources. Index.

Reviewed by M. S. Benson

Am Hist R 44:923 Jl '39 450w

"The importance of such a work as this to the sociologist, conceding its accuracy and objectivity as history, lies in the large amount of material on women in early America now made available in one place. Although the style of presentation is somewhat dull and unimaginative, the reader must be impressed by the breadth of scope and the completeness of the picture presented." J. E. Hulett, Jr.

+ — Am Soc R 4:293 Ap '39 550w

"The first scholarly and comprehensive study of the daily life of the women of the Southern English colonies. . . The author has skillfully woven together a mass of significant, interesting and amusing details and built up a well constructed picture." C. G. Stillman

+ Books p16 Mr 5 '39 900w

"Scholarly and humanly interesting book. . . It is the product of careful study, but the scholarship illuminates, it does not drown, the pages." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 140w

"A piece of very informative and intensely interesting research."

+ N Y Times p14 D 11 '38 450w

"Within [the limited scope of the book], after working for ten years, Mrs. Spruill has produced a truly scholarly piece of reporting. She researched in the important depositories of records and she had the advice of many leading historians in the North as well as in the South. She writes with sensitiveness to the comic no less than to the grave." M. R. Beard

+ Social Forces 17:449 Mr '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:140 Jl '39

STACKPOLE, EDOUARD A. Mutiny at midnight. 245p $2 Morrow

(W) 39-19006

Sea story for older boys. It involves mutiny and murder on a Nantucket whaler in 1822, and some years spent on a South Sea island before the few survivors of the tragic sequence of events are rescued.

Booklist 35:48 O 1 '39

"A curious feature is that all the leading characters from the Old Man to the murderous boat steerer are members of the Society of Friends, or at least of Quaker stock. This greatly improves the language, which is decorous until mutiny actually breaks out, and the solid character of every one at first heightens by contrast the horror later on. It looks to me as if Mr Stackpole would soon outgrow his audience. Even now, he pushes the definition of 'a boys' book' well over into the adult category." M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ag 13 '39 440w

"A realistic tale. The story becomes fairly lurid toward its conclusion. Yet it remains thrilling and accurate enough to carry conviction." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 1 '39 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:302 S '39 50w

"Here is a story both plausible and exciting." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 64:762 O 1 '39 120w

"Lots of lively adventure almost too liberally sprinkled with blood, with a romance in the background."

New Yorker 15:75 Jl 22 '39 30w

STAFFORD, ANN. Pony for sale; il. by Bobri. 271p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Hamilton, H]

39-30536

Four English children on their summer vacation in the country discover that a pony they have liked to ride is for sale. It is learned that the pony is likely to go to a bad home, and the story describes the action which the children take to prevent it.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ja 7 '40 350w

"Makes exciting reading! We like the smart little New Forest ponies and their riders very, very much."

+ Cath World 150:378 D '39 100w

"The children are resourceful and vivacious and the book has the pleasant outdoor flavor of English country life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:383 N '39 70w

Reviewed by M. R. Lucas

Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 100w

"Anne Stafford is an Englishwoman who can write about horses and children and make them equally interesting, a virtue rather rare among her countrymen. Her children are terse-spoken, self-reliant young scamps, with a refreshing amount of human frailty, not above wrangling among themselves but stanchly loyal in a pinch." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 29 '39 320w

Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 20w

STAGGE, JONATHAN, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

STALEY, EUGENE. World economy in transition. 340p maps $3 Council on foreign relations [12s 6d Royal inst. of int. affairs]

330 Economic policy 39-27564

"An expert and penetrating analysis of the changes being wrought in the economic structure of the world by contemporary power politics and technological progress. The author is associate professor of international economics at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, and this book is a report to be presented to the Twelfth International Studies Conference meeting at Bergen (Norway) next August and September [1939]." (Foreign Affairs) Index.

"The volume is distinguished by clarity of thought rather than novel speculation, by keen analysis rather than timid phrases. Bibliographical references appear only in the footnotes. It is refreshing to be able to recommend a serious book written in such a direct and readable style to all persons who wish to keep abreast of significant politico-economic implications based upon technological advance." E. G. Mears

+ Am Econ R 29:817 D '39 850w

"Students of economics and politics will find his book worthy of careful study." H. W. Briggs

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1101 D '39 450w

Reviewed by E. M. Patterson

Ann Am Acad 205:187 S '39 360w

Booklist 35:359 Jl 1 '39

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 29 '39 30w

Reviewed by L. J. Gordon

Christian Century 56:1209 O 4 '39 1050w

Foreign Affairs 17:807 Jl '39 60w

"In view of the author's skill in presenting pertinent world facts on a broad, suggestive scale, it is to be hoped that this useful work will become the basis of needed research into the numerous related fields of knowledge." E. G. Mears

+ Geog R 30:168 Ja '40 420w

"Professor Staley has produced a book which, within self-imposed limits that are frankly announced, if somewhat curiously framed, is practical and realistic. It deserves to be widely read, for it serves two valuable purposes: it brings home to everyone the immense difficulty of ensuring human welfare in the world today; and it makes clear the degree of success which can be expected if the necessary minimum of political achievement is practicable." H. F. Angus

+ Pacific Affairs 12:460 D '39 750w

Pratt p6 winter '40

"The emphasis on technology as an explanation for the transition of world economy, rather than on current political ideologies, makes this book a significant contribution to monistic materialism." J. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 1 '39 250w

"It is authoritative and readable, discriminating and inclusive, a book well designed to direct the reader's thoughts into constructive channels."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Jl '39 370w

"Professor Staley has put up a good fight for the ideal of international economic cooperation. His analysis is a very effective presentation of the arguments in favor of a cause which—as far as the course of world politics appears to us at the moment—has been lost." J. S. Roucek

+ Social Educ 3:507 O '39 400w

"Professor Staley preserves an admirable balance between description and speculation, between theoretical background and matters of concrete fact, between abstract analysis and realistic judgement. He writes and expounds tellingly, uses statistics where necessary with respect and skill, and never allows either the mass of detailed information which he has to handle, or the illustrative excursions of which he makes use, to blur the main lines of his story and of his thesis. . . World Economy in Transition is a genuine contribution to the growth of world citizenship; a product of sane common sense and wide, but never undisciplined, imagination; free from wishful thinking, dogmatism and partisanship. It is worth emphasising that, in spite of the wide economic scholarship of which it shows evidence, it demands no formal economic training whatever on the part of its readers. One cannot wish it too wide a circulation or too immediate an influence." Honor Croome

+ Spec 163:59 Jl 14 '39 750w

"The book is worth reading and rereading—even at an hour when events make sane suggestions sound 'academic.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 26 '39 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Jl 29 '39 550w

STALEY, SEWARD CHARLE. Sports education. 325p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

371.7 Physical education and training. Sports 39-23494

Study of "the new curriculum in physical education." (Subtitle) The book was prepared for the use of professional students, supervisors and teachers engaged in formulating and teaching curricula in this field, and of principals and superintendents. Partial contents: The increase in leisure time; Leisure time and sports; Character and sports; Health and sports; Principles for evaluating sports; Methods of teaching; Sports appreciation; Future changes in the program. Index.

Christian Century 56:1169 S 27 '39 50w

"On the whole the book gives a comprehensive treatment of some of the new ideas and new trends in the field of health and physical education. The author has been successful in his attempt to co-ordinate theory and practice in that he has eliminated many of the less stable phases of the field of physical education and has shown how the entire program can be constructed on a solid foundation." L. W. Irwin

+ School R 48:73 Ja '40 1050w

STAMM, FREDERICK KELLER. The conversations of Jesus. 285p $2.50 Harper

232.9 Jesus Christ—Teaching 39-10085

"Dr Stamm has gathered together for the first time for expository purposes the main conversations of Jesus, from the time of his baptism by John to the last meeting with the Disciples . . . [presenting] their significance both in the lives of those who knew Jesus and in our contemporary world." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Dr. Stamm, minister of the Clinton Avenue Community Church, Brooklyn, has found an original approach to the teachings of Jesus, and utilized this approach with fine skill and spiritual insight. . . What fascinates the reader of this book is its amazing revelation all anew of the mind of Jesus." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p21 O 1 '39 350w

"The author sets out to state in commonplace terms and relate to daily problems what he considers the pivotal conversations of Jesus. He succeeds beyond shadow of doubt. Laymen will find the book an excellent introductory statement of both the religion of Jesus and of the more general results of New Testament criticism. Ministers will find the book valuable for still another reason; it is a rich accumulation of apposite quotations and materials from a rich variety of non-biblical sources."

+ Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 160w

"Few commentations on the conversations of Jesus are more inspiring than those which this effective preacher of the Word has written in this highly interesting volume." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 19 '39 700w

"Dr. Stamm has an easy conversational style, and uses apt illustration effectively in his expositions. As a hand-book to the reading of the Gospels lay-people will find it both interesting and illuminating; and to ministers and teachers it offers an abundance of good expository material for use in addresses and Bible classes." F. J. M.

+ Churchman 153:34 My 15 '39 80w

STANDARD dictionary of Canadian biography; the Canadian who was who; ed. by Charles G. D. Roberts and Arthur L. Tunnell. lib ed v 2 478p subs $15 1938 Trans-Canada press, 357 Bay st, Toronto

920.071 Canada—Biography (34-39240)

"The first volume of this series was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1938 [Book Review Digest, 1938]. Volume II follows the editorial policy laid down for volume I, to which it is similar in outlook and treatment, as well as in format. Men and women who died as early as 1875 or as late as 1937 have been included. . . Volume II is furnished with an index to biographies in volume I which will facilitate the use of the set. A complete index to persons included in previous volumes will appear in every successive volume." Subscription Bks Bul

STANDARD dictionary of Canadian biography —Continued

---

"The Standard Dictionary of Canadian Biography, volume II is recommended, with volume I, for large libraries in which there is great demand for Canadian biography."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:13 Ja '39 190w

STARK, FREYA MADELINE. Seen in the Hadhramaut. 199p il maps $5 Dutton [21s Murray, J]

915.3 Arabia—Description and travel. Hadhramaut, Arabia 39-27052

A collection of magnificent full-page photographs taken by Miss Stark in southern Arabia, with a foreword and brief comment on each picture.

Booklist 35:203 F 15 '39

"Freya Stark is an artist. She has in several books—most notably 'The Southern Gates of Arabia'—shown herself to be an artist in words; and she is an artist in words in this book, too. But especially, here, she is an artist in photography; that is, in composition, in light and shade, in the catching of the significant note whether in a man's face or in some strange high-piled building or even in the movement of an animal." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p6 F 12 '39 600w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 11 '39 90w

"Both as an architectural and human record, this is an engrossing book." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 28 '38 90w

Foreign Affairs 17:820 Jl '39 30w

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 27 '39 220w

"Men and beasts and landscapes are vividly presented, but it is the architecture that matters most. Miss Stark's concise comments show the nicest critical sense, and these buildings of mud, often whitewashed in bands, with crenellations and ornamented doorways, excite acute interest and admiration."

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1064 D 17 '38 230w

"This collection of 130 photographs is unique: unique in its richness, its beauty, its variety, its descriptive and historic faculty, as well as in the strangeness of its subjects and its scene. And Freya Stark's brief introduction has a lyric loveliness which belongs with the pictures, and which gives the haunting quality of poetry to her straightforward statements of facts, which are themselves both remarkable and romantic. . . In the photographs, and Freya Stark's short paragraphs of description, there is more substance than most travel books can boast in the fullest text." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 29 '39 600w

Sat R of Lit 19:22 Mr 4 '39 110w

"Miss Stark needs the aid of pictures less than many writers of travel books. Her style is so personal and so pictorial that her readers travel with her through the enchanted lands of Southern Arabia and shut the book with the feeling that they, too, have crossed the desolate Jol and visited the fantastic cities of the Hadhramaut. But this new book makes that journey of the imagination yet more vivid. Here are 130 photographs taken by Miss Stark and each one of them is a work of art. She uses her camera as skilfully as her pen to capture beauty and pin it down to the page, not as a cold museum piece but breathing and alive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p811 D 24 '38 390w

STARKIE, ENID. Arthur Rimbaud. 425p il $3.75 Norton [15s Faber]

B or 92 Rimbaud, Jean Nicolas Arthur [38-18220]

Critical biography of this strange French poetic genius, who, tho he ceased to write at nineteen, has been called the greatest French poet of the last half of the nineteenth century. "This study endeavours to show Rimbaud moving against the background of his time, against the literary and social conventions of his age, amongst all those with whom he came into contact, to show their effect on him, and his on them. It endeavours to discover what influences helped to form his personality and his talent." (Introd) Index.

"In spite of some inconsistencies, and an inadequate style, Dr. Starkie's book is almost uniformly interesting. Her subject takes care of that. In or out of hell, Lucifer remains the great protagonist." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books p4 S 17 '39 1250w

"This is a fuller, more nearly definitive biography of Rimbaud than any available up to now. It is written for those who are not perturbed by the ultimate in physical and moral misery. . . Miss Starkie . . . has done us the service of sparing no detail, of hunting down even the last and least with the detached accuracy of the trained historian. After all, it is not her fault if her reader feels that he has just watched an immaculate surgeon open a particularly noisome ulcer!" W. M. Frohock

Commonweal 30:567 O 13 '39 360w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:162 O '39 1150w

"Miss Starkie follows this complex narrative with admirable clarity and vividness. It may be thought that sometimes she tries to explain too much, especially in her theories of Rimbaud's conception of poetry, but this never disturbs the balance of her work." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 5 '38 460w

Reviewed by Christopher Lazare

Nation 149:415 O 14 '39 1800w

"This is the most complete and best informed life of Rimbaud that I have read. Miss Starkie has had access to new material and brought a critical sense unhampered by preconceived ideas to the understanding of it." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:222 Ag 6 '38 2600w

"A biography that transcends any French book that has ever been written on that strange, tortured, disillusioned man from Charleville who brought a new movement into French poetry and died in agony in Marseilles a stranger even to himself." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 S 17 '39 1550w

New Yorker 15:80 S 9 '39 30w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Sat R of Lit 20:11 S 16 '39 650w

"Though the influence of [his] poetry upon poets has been very great, it has not penetrated far into the world of general poetry-readers; this is only partly because of its difficulty and obscurity, mainly it is because it holds a vision of the world completely different from that in traditional poetry. Miss Starkie's extraordinarily interesting biography is bound to turn more readers to the effort of reading this poetry." M. M. Colum

+ Spec 161:27 Jl 1 '38 1100w

Time 34:78 S 18 '39 900w

"Miss Starkie has performed a valuable piece of research work and has helped to clarify several aspects of his personal life. No one could pretend that her study was balanced; but her researches will make a useful starting-point for future adventurers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p352 My 21 '38 2450w

STEARNS, DAVID M. Chuckle; the story of a woodchuck; il. by Sharon Stearns. [64p] $1 Farrar

39-27826

Tells the life-story of a woodchuck quite simply for young readers. Chuckle has an adventurous career, but he himself is not humanized. Grades three to four.

Booklist 36:75 O 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 D 17 '39 160w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 27 '39 30w

"It is an engaging small book to handle with its green cloth cover, its green bordered pages, and numerous drawings by Sharon Stearns done in soft black with touches of green. . . It is a pleasant addition to nature books for young readers." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 64:903 N 15 '39 50w

" 'Chuckle' is one of the most attractive animal books of the year. Its large clear type, simple style, small size and delightful drawings on every page make it an appealing volume for the less experienced reader, while at the same time this life story of a woodchuck is so accurately and engagingly told any age can enjoy it." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 28 '40 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:189 N '39

STEARNS, MRS FLORENCE (DICKINSON). Strange dimension. 94p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

811 38-34350

Poems by a Virginia poet, a granddaughter of Samuel Fowler Dickinson, an uncle of the famous poet, Emily Dickinson.

"These poems deserve recommendation for their technical accomplishment, their clarity of emotional and intellectual expression. Mrs. Stearns searches for the meanings and verities underlying the external manifestations of nature. Among the best poems here are the sharp, ironic little comments that recall those of . . . Emily Dickinson." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p41 D 4 '38 200w

"Mrs. Stearns is a mentally alert poet with a tendency to be too conscious of what is going on in her mind and to dramatize it artificially. . . But she is conscious of fine shades of experience whether in communion with nature or in a personal relationship which a less clear mind would overlook, and she can define them with delicate exactness. The sequence of sonnets which gives its title to her book shows her perhaps at her most intimately expert, but her lyrics, if emotionally rather thin, are fine-drawn and sensitive."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p62 Ja 28 '39 80w

STEBBING, MRS LUCILE (REINER), and HUGHES, MRS CAROLINE (SHURTLEFF) comps. Child training and parent education; references to material in recent books. 2d ed rev 83p pa 90c Wilson, H.W.

016.1367 Children—Management—Bibliography. Parent and child—Bibliography

39-13700

"This bibliography [first published in 1931] is enlarged and brought up to date, and reflects the trend of the time in putting more emphasis on parent education." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:384 Jl 15 '39
J Home Econ 31:644 N '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 35:139 Jl '39

STEBBINS, MRS LUCY (POATE). Peacock place. 313p $2 Penn

39-4165

"Adversity is the acid test of character in this family chronicle. Walter Peacock is a man of outward charm, proud of his New England background, but fundamentally a snob rather than a true aristocrat. A widower with three grown daughters, he shares with the eldest a distaste for living within a diminished income. Julie, the middle daughter, supplies the family backbone." Books

---

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 Mr 19 '39 80w

"The story shows an understanding of people and problems, and some will regret that it develops into a conventional romance of the long-suffering suitor and the steadfast maiden and that the circumstances of the solution are not more probable. However, it is meant to conform to a pattern, and the wisdom in it may be appreciated even if it is incidental."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 250w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS (BYRON STEEL, pseud). Flaubert and Madame Bovary; a double portrait. 433p $3 Viking

B or 92 Flaubert, Gustave 39-27210

Critical and biographical study of Flaubert's young manhood, working up to a climax in the story of the inception and development of his masterpiece, Madame Bovary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:251 Ap 1 '39

"A reader with a strong prejudice against romanced biography might be repelled by the opening sentence. . . Let the purist in these matters be reassured: the book is a very thorough piece of scholarship. But, for all its seriousness of purpose, it remains in spirit a romance." Albert Guerard

+ — Books p6 Mr 5 '39 1450w

Reviewed by Frank Wood
Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 300w

Reviewed by H. B. Charlton
Manchester Guardian p3 O 20 '39 500w

"Many of the letters and diaries quoted by Mr. Steegmuller appear for the first time in English: that alone makes his book of interest. Its weakness is on the critical side. Too much space is given to early biography. . . He does not reach 'Madame Bovary' till two-thirds of the way through the book, and then his remarks are disappointing. Mlle. Leleu has published in full the three drafts of Bovary, and they make a fascinating study; by comparing them we can watch in the minutest detail the creation of a masterpiece. Mr. Steegmuller is content with a few general references. Nevertheless, his book was well worth doing and up to a point he has done it well." G. W. Stonier

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:376 S 9 '39 1500w

"The fascination of this excellent book is in its portrayal of a man of genius and toil. Flaubert was both complex and entirely concentrated. He was amazing in his achievement, interesting in all that he was. The portrait here emphasizes the writer, but it has the intense and many-sided interest of life." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 F 19 '39 1700w

"The story of Flaubert's growth and the manner of the inception of his masterpiece form material for the dramatist (not to say the humorist) rather than the purely literary critic. Mr. Steegmuller has shrewdly taken advantage of this fact. The result is a book which, except for its pedestrian beginning and its central section—consisting entirely of quotations—must be termed absorbing." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:80 F 18 '39 430w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS—Continued

"The book is beautifully written, and it should prove to be informing and absorbing for both the neophyte and the initiate. Mr. Steegmuller himself has accomplished a real tour de force in treating his subject so brilliantly. Let us hope that he will give us a second volume elaborating the post-'Bovary' period which he has briefly sketched in his afterword." J. F. Jackson

+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 18 '39 550w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Spec 163:704 N 17 '39 750w

"Within his self-imposed limits Mr. Steegmuller has chosen his material wisely and arranged it well; and even those who believe they possess some special knowledge of Flaubert will be grateful to have their memory refreshed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 23 '39 650w

"Mr. Steegmuller's book is not so important an event, but its clever and provocative portrait of Flaubert depends in a large degree on his translations from the letters and journals of Flaubert and his friends which have not been available in English before. . . In many ways, but most when Flaubert writes the book for himself, 'Flaubert and Madame Bovary' is a well-designed and very charming memoir." P. M. Jack

+ Yale R n s 29:196 autumn '39 550w

STEEL, BYRON, pseud. See Steegmüller, F.

STEEL, KURT, pseud. Crooked shadow. 311p $2 Little 39-30066

Detective story.

"A vigorous and timely yarn with quantities of dash and picturesque people." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 O 29 '39 200w

"It's a swell yarn full of chases, kidnappings, shootings and rough-and-tumble fights." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 70w

"If you are a member of the bund or a Nazi sympathizer, you are advised not to read this book; it would be bad for your blood pressure. Otherwise you will thoroughly enjoy the thrills that Kurt Steel knows so well how to provide." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 N 5 '39 190w

New Yorker 15:88 N 4 '39 50w

Sat R of Lit 21:18 O 28 '39 40w

Time 34:84 N 6 '39 30w

STEEL, KURT, pseud. Judas, incorporated. 341p $2 Little 39-9207

Detective story.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

"Social significance in the detective thriller reaches a new high in this latest Hank Hyer story. . . We only say, in the interest of sure-fire entertainment, don't overdo it, Hank." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p17 Ap 16 '39 220w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 130w

"An exciting detective story with an authentic labor background."

+ New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 60w

"Hank Hyer is one of our major fiction sleuths." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 16 '39 190w

"Real meat in this story of labor trouble and murder in a Connecticut factory town, with grand sleuthing by Hank Hyer. Recommended for its nice, clear writing and the fresh quality of one of its characters, a bellhop named Orson Quick."

+ New Yorker 15:108 Ap 15 '39 40w

"Nasty ways of agents provocateurs shown up beautifully in yarn that bulges with action from start to finish. Grand."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 15 '39 40w

Time 33:88 Je 5 '39 20w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. Iceland, the first American republic [pref. by Theodore Roosevelt, jr]. 275p il maps $3.50 Doubleday

914.91 Iceland (W) 39-27694

"A history and contemporary study of an island that was a republic in 930 A.D., once had peasants who spoke fluent Latin, now has coöperatives like the Scandinavian countries, airplane service but no railroads, hot springs which heat their houses but no coal." (New Yorker) Material for the tourist occupies the space of one chapter. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 36:6 S '39

"One regrets mentioning any omissions in a book which covers so many departments adequately and accurately. But the lack of an index and sufficient maps are inconveniences. And even in an economic and social survey, might it not have been possible to include in the bibliography—otherwise comprehensive—the titles of a few works of fiction which infuse this remarkable country with poetry and vitality?. . . These are tentative suggestions. Mr. Stefansson has performed a genuine service to the First American Republic, which is his ancestral birthplace, and to the Second American Republic, which now is his home." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p1 Ag 6 '39 1450w

"Stefansson has assembled a great deal of information about Iceland, most of it interesting, some of it undigested, perhaps, all of it helpful to the foreigner who wishes to understand a distant people." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 260w

"There is a good bibliography. We only regret that Stefansson did not see fit to include here references to a few works of fiction of Gudmunder Kamban and Gunnar Gunnarsson and that there is no index. Otherwise, the work is one of those rare treats which come when we least expect them, and which are priceless." J. S. Roucek

+ Commonweal 30:422 Ag 25 '39 300w

Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40 30w

"All Stefansson's writings show the rare combination of a fresh and lively style, scholarship, and the depth, perspective, and direction that result from a distinctive viewpoint and philosophy. Hence the present volume, too, is far more than a greatly needed 'popular' picture of modern Iceland." E. P. Hanson

+ Geog R 29:688 O '39 550w

New Repub 100:320 O 18 '39 50w

Reviewed by Russell Owen

N Y Times p4 Ag 20 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:68 Ag 5 '39 50w

No Am 248:202 autumn '39 80w

Pratt p19 winter '40

"Mr. Stefánsson's book is a work that does honor to the well known author, to his old and interesting home land, and to the American publisher." Stefan Einarsson

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 S 2 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:185 N '39

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. Unsolved mysteries of the Arctic. 381p maps $3.50 Macmillan

919.8 Arctic regions (W) 39-27053

The five Arctic mysteries to which Stefánsson has sought solutions are the disappearance of the Greenland colony; the lost Franklin expedition; the strange fate of Thomas Simpson; the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Andrée; the missing Soviet flyers. Bibliography.

Reviewed by O. J. Falnes
Am Hist R 45:193 O '39 50w
Booklist 35:203 F 15 '39

"To a greater extent than almost anything he has ever written, does Stefansson's present volume serve a dual function. The five stories here told and analyzed, with painstaking scholarship and an infinite amount of detail that do not in the least (thanks to the author's skill as a writer) detract from their liveliness, are on the one hand fascinating mystery and adventure stories and on the other an invaluable body of historical knowledge, fact and criticism, that tends to reshape the entire recorded history of Arctic exploration of the last thousand years." E. P. Hanson
+ Books p3 F 5 '39 1200w
Christian Century 56:187 F 8 '39 180w
Christian Science Monitor p18 F 9 '39 550w

"This book partakes of the qualities of the finest fiction and the finest tragedy; and because of this fact it becomes far more than a splendid piece of scientific writing, far more than an engrossing narrative. It is a book for all readers everywhere. Young boys will devour it; men of every age will delight in it. But, better still, all readers who wisely read for what is not said quite as much as for what is said, will garner from its necessarily uncompleted incidents scores of situations absorbing in their drama and breath-taking in their suspense. For here, indeed, is the bright face of danger, the red badge of courage. Here, indeed, is a book which no one under any circumstances should miss." M. E. Chase
+ Commonweal 29:527 Mr 3 '39 510w
Foreign Affairs 17:806 Jl '39 30w

"For scholarly minded readers and the detective story clan alike . . . Stefansson reviews five famous cases of death or disappearance and presents his meticulous post-mortem report with a dramatic flourish worthy of Philo Vance." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 101:vi F '39 260w
Geog R 29:352 Ap '39 270w
Living Age 356:399 Je '39 100w

"The book is well worth reading, especially in these dark days of turmoil: the ice can still cast its spell of peace." R. N. R. B.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '39 250w
New Repub 98:83 F 22 '39 60w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 18:556 O 21 '39 150w

"Just how interesting Mr. Stefansson's book will be to those who seek mystery and little more is a question, but to those who are interested in the North and who do not object to a great deal of documentation, it will be good reading. The research he has done shows in every page, and it is research for which he is particularly equipped, for he has one of the largest and most complete polar libraries in the world." Russell Owen
+ N Y Times p2 F 12 '39 1450w

"Combines the appeal of detective and adventure narratives."
+ New Yorker 14:67 F 4 '39 90w
Pratt p25 spring '39

"The title of this book, while more or less provocative, is nevertheless a misnomer. For the author has solved each of the mysteries which he presents, in a scholarly and logical manner which would seem to admit of no contradiction. . . The results of years of study are fairly set forth, pro and con, and the reader is allowed to form his own opinion from the entire evidence. It is a tribute to the clear thinking of the author and his convincing way of presenting his case, that the reader will almost invariably agree with him." M. A. Peary
+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 4 '39 600w

"A book which ranks high in interest and literary value. . . There are facts concerning Mr. Stefansson's own Arctic experiences woven into these stories which enhance the value of the book—a condensed and graphic addition to Arctic anthology."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 F '39 450w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 1200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p580 O 7 '39 700w
Wis Lib Bul 35:64 Ap '39

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Picasso. 55p il $3 Scribner [7s 6d Batsford]

B or 92 Picasso, Pablo 39-27157

Study of the development of the work of the Spanish painter, Picasso, by a friend of many years standing. Illustrated with some sixty reproductions of his paintings, representing all stages of his growth in the art of painting. Index.

Booklist 35:229 Mr 15 '39
Reviewed by W. G. Constable
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 450w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 11 '39 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"Miss Stein writes exactly as she thinks and she thinks by instinct and after all that is rather how Picasso paints so why shouldn't that be a good way of explaining Picasso. Anyway this is her book on Picasso, it is a short book and well illustrated it is a revealing book. In other words, if the reader can put his prejudices about what is and what is not English prose in his pocket he will learn from Miss Stein quite a good deal about Picasso."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 22 '38 150w

"An appealing book, just, perceptive, and close to the artist. Handsomely printed, it completes what was begun in 'Portraits and Prayers' and adds an indispensable item for the appreciation of the least predictable of modern painters."
+ Nation 148:508 Ap 29 '39 220w

"Miss Stein's observations are witty and often illuminating; more illuminating perhaps in regard to her own work than to the work of her star performer. One suspects that Picasso himself may well be irritated at the esoteric role she has assigned to him. As a critical explanation of the artist's place in society, her definition is trivial and limited. . . The ivory tower has its uses but they must be differentiated from the functions of a padded cell." Nathalie Swan
New Repub 99:259 Jl 5 '39 550w

"Miss Stein, with various darts to the right and left to explain some of her own conceptions of art, has followed Picasso rather closely through his career and gives her readers an excellent idea of the growth, regressions and progressions of the Spanish painter." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 5 '39 1000w

"Miss Stein writes about Picasso in (roughly speaking) easy and affable English, rather remote from her usual stern mood of grammatical Calvinism, with its unshakable faith in original syntax. Of course—one must not be too exigent—it contains a reasonable amount of balderdash. Even this has its charm; hardened Stein readers know how her touch can transform balderdash into something rich and strange." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:80 F 18 '39 270w
Pratt p20 summer '39

"Miss Stein writes occasional nonsense, but more sense, and some wisdom." Agnes Mongan
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 18 '39 500w

"In many important respects Miss Gertrude Stein is the perfect biographer for Picasso. A personal friendship of many years' standing, a keen enjoyment of painting and an unusual power of communicating that enjoyment in words, an interest in general ideas about the various symbolic expressions of the age we live in, and—above all—a sense of being both inside and outside the European tradition, which Americans and Spaniards have in common: all these attributes qualify Miss Stein to write the one really illuminating book about the most significant and the most perplexing artist now alive. And she has, in fact, written a curiously attractive, yet at the same time most unsatisfactory essay, about her favourite painter." Roger Hinks

STEIN, GERTRUDE—Continued
+ — Spec 162:271 F 17 '39 380w

"'Picasso' is the work of an ardent disciple, blending delphic generalizations, anecdotes, intuitive impressions and scattered information. Her style gives no difficulty to any person who has read letters written with a minimum of punctuation. Her sentences, for all their lack of form and coherence, are not muddled."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p751 N 26 '38 310w
Wis Lib Bul 35:163 O '39

STEIN, GERTRUDE. The world is round; pictures by Clement Hurd. 67p $2.50; ltd autog ed $5 Scott, W.R.
(W) 39-31266

The story of Rose and Willie and some preposterous but delightful animals. The author's style of constant repetition is used, as in her books for adults.

Booklist 36:180 Ja 1 '40

"Pure delight, simple pleasure, is what little children will get as they listen, a chapter or so at a time, to 'The World Is Round.' So will the adult who reads it to them, unless his mind is too stiff to bend with the rhythm. . . It is printed, by Miss Stein's command, on paper of a toothsome pink. It is an awful color, and every small child will think it perfectly lovely. It is the color once given toothpaste to induce children to brush their teeth, and it worked. The book will not (I hope) set a fashion in writing for little children. Miss Stein has the trick, that nobody else is likely to catch, of making them listen to 'The World Is Round' in the same entranced quiet with which their elders enjoyed her famous play." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 S 24 '39 600w
Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 120w

"Miss Stein can write about boys and girls and little dogs and even lions and mountains with delicate sensitiveness and a nice touch of humor. We personally feel she can express herself much more clearly than many people who have less to express."
+ Cath World 150:373 D '39 80w

"For this book indeed a daring publisher was needed, but I am inclined to think he will find his reward, for if you can overcome an unfavorable reaction to the smell of the book, accept its decorations as in harmony with the author's intention, and really read it aloud, as it is meant to be read, you will find it to be a charming release from the close attention Gertrude Stein's writing often demands. It is genuine child stuff rather than something about children, or for children—the kind of thing children say when they are free from superimposed tradition. While I doubt if many children will read it of themselves, as evidently Miss Stein does, I think it holds joy for many readers and a challenge to the type of book described as educational. We have need of gaiety and a return to childhood in these grave days." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 15:294 S '39 140w

"Like 'Alice in Wonderland,' the popularity of this book among children will depend on what adults think about it and how they read it aloud to children. Quite young children will like the fantasy and rhythm; older ones who can play with words may enjoy the unusual idiom for its own sake."
New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 50w
Reviewed by Chauncey Hackett & Edmund Wilson
New Repub 101:266 D 20 '39 600w
Reviewed by Gilbert Baker (aged 8)
New Statesman & Nation 18:901 D 16 '39 250w

"For a skeptic who never quite finished the first paragraph of 'Tender Buttons' it is a pleasant duty to report that Miss Stein seems to have found her audience, possibly a larger one than usual, certainly a more appreciative one. As to just why, it would take an expert in the subconscious and a corps of child psychologists fully to determine." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p10 N 12 '39 400w

"The book has flashes of humor, it has moments of poetry and imagination, it even has perceptiveness about children, and by digging you find there is a story. But the matter of the book is so buried in tedious mannerisms and lumbering whimsy that I just don't think what you get by digging is worth the effort." K. S. W.
— + New Yorker 15:84 N 25 '39 550w
Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 100w

"Miss Stein gives the impression that with a little closer approximation to sense she could write nonsense for children, but this effort is not impressive."
— Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 80w
Time 34:76 O 9 '39 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p758 D 30 '39 300w

STEINBECK, JOHN. The grapes of wrath. 619p $2.75 Viking
(W) 39-27282

Saga of the small farmers and share croppers of the Southwest, driven out of their homes and moving westward with their families and a few household goods piled on a broken-down car. The story of the Joad family, as related here, on their westward trek and after they reach California, symbolizes the whole movement.

"In his earlier books, In Dubious Battle and Of Mice and Men, the author has already shown us his understanding of, his indignation and sympathy with, the migratory and insecure. The common touch is his, and the ability to dramatize it in action and in lingo. To me The Grapes of Wrath is the summation of eighteen years of realism, a novel whose hunger, passion, and poetry are in direct answer to the angry stirring of our conscience these past seven years. . . The book is profane and sometimes shocking in its detail. So is that segment of America which Steinbeck describes with such truth. This is no book for the timid." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic My '39 220w
Reviewed by Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic Je '39 600w
Booklist 35:271 Ap 15 '39

"It is a rough book, yes. It is an ineffably tender book too. It is the book for which everything else that Steinbeck has written was an exercise in preparation. You'll find in it reminders of 'Pastures of Heaven,' of 'In Dubious Battle,' of 'The Red Pony,' even of 'Tortilla Flat.' But here there is no mere exploration of a field, no tentative experimenting with a theme. This is the full symphony, Steinbeck's declaration of faith." J. H. Jackson
+ Books p3 Ap 16 '39 1850w
Reviewed by E. B. Garside
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 1150w

"This is a MUST book. It is not only the novel by which Steinbeck steps from the fashionable second-raters to the front ranks of living American fictionists. It is not only a work of concentrated observation, folk humor, and dramatic imagination playing over the whole American continent. It is, more importantly, what Milton would call a 'deed'—the act of a man out of the pity and wrath of his heart." Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 19:94 Je '39 700w

Reviewed by Art Kuhl

Cath World 150:160 N '39 2850w

"This is an epic account of the migration of sharecroppers from the Dust Bowl to the mirage of a free and happy life in California. The canvas is as big as half a continent. The rhythm is that of American life. The characters are living people, presented without apology as they appear to the author. The language no doubt is that of the people portrayed, but its blasphemousness and indecency may obscure the real value of the novel for some readers." L. A. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 My 6 '39 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"The impact of this book is very powerful. Whoever reads it will find he has gained a better total grasp on the need in this country for rectification of any and all conditions which now or hereafter may correspond in any degree with the terrible plight of the dust bowl tenant farmers." J. N. Vaughan

+ Commonweal 30:341 Jl 28 '39 800w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:iv Jl '39 250w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 S 8 '39 600w

"One comes away moved, indignant, protesting, pitying. But one comes away dissatisfied, too, aware that 'The Grapes of Wrath' is too unevenly weighted, too uneconomically proportioned, the work of a writer who is still self-indulgent, still undisciplined, still not altogether aware of the difference in value of various human emotions. The picturesqueness of the Joads, for example, is fine wherever it makes them live more abundantly, but false when simply laid on for effect. Steinbeck's sentimentalism is good in bringing him close to the lives of his people, but bad when it blurs his insight. . . But one does not take leave of a book like this in a captious spirit. One salutes it as a fiery document of protest and compassion, as a story that had to be told, as a book that must be read. It is, I think, one of those books—there are not very many—which really do some good." Louis Kronenberger

+ — Nation 148:440 Ap 15 '39 750w

"I can't agree with those critics who say that 'The Grapes of Wrath' is the greatest novel of the last ten years; for example, it doesn't rank with the best of Hemingway or Dos Passos. But it belongs very high in the category of the great angry books like 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' that have roused a people to fight against intolerable wrongs." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 98:382 My 3 '39 1100w

"It is a horrible story told with passionate earnestness, distressing and moving, but completely as one is compelled to realise the plight of this human refuse in California the book has great defects as a novel. It is to be compared with Upton Sinclair's novel about the Chicago Stockyards, The Jungle. . . The Jungle is dead mutton as literature but it is alive in the American legislation which has amplified the Meat Inspection Bill and the Pure Food Bill of 1906. . . The Grapes of Wrath will take a place beside it in the social history of the United States, but it is its literary fate to lie in that honourable vault which houses the books that have died when their purpose as propaganda has been served." Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 18:404 S 16 '39 800w

"It is a very long novel, the longest that Steinbeck has written, and yet it reads as if it had been composed in a flash, ripped off the typewriter and delivered to the public as an ultimatum. It is a long and thoughtful novel as one thinks about it. It is a short and vivid scene as one feels it." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 16 '39 1650w

"I don't know and in truth I don't much care whether it's the 'work of genius' the publishers sincerely believe it to be. What sticks with me is that here is a book, non-political, non-dogmatic, which dramatizes so that you can't forget it the terrible facts of a wholesale injustice committed by society. Here is a book about a people of old American stock, not Reds or rebels of any kind. . . The book has faults. It is too detailed, particularly in the latter half. . . Occasionally the folk note is forced a little. And, finally, the ending is the tawdriest kind of fake symbolism. Just occasionally Steinbeck's dramatic imagination overleaps itself and you get a piece of pure, or impure, theatre like these last pages. One should also add that his political thinking is a little mystical." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:101 Ap 15 '39 900w

Reviewed by Charles Angoff

No Am 247:387 summer '39 800w

Pratt p31 summer '39

" 'The Grapes of Wrath' is worth all the talk, all the anticipation, all the enthusiasm. Here is the epitome of everything Steinbeck has so far given us. It has the humor and earthiness of 'Tortilla Flat,' the social consciousness of 'In Dubious Battle,' the passionate concern for the homeless and uprooted which made 'Of Mice and Men' memorable. These elements, together with a narrative that moves with excitement for its own sake, are not mixed but fused, to produce the unique quality of 'The Grapes of Wrath.' That quality is an understanding of courage—courage seen with humor and bitterness and without a trace of sentimentality; courage that exists as the last affirmation of human dignity." George Stevens

+ Sat R of Lit 19:3 Ap 15 '39 2200w

Discussion by J. H. Caskey

Sat R of Lit 20:9 My 20 '39 500w

"Mr. Steinbeck gives us an enormous, vivid setting; he fills it with odd and lively characters; he uses an attractive Western States patois, and he tells a terrible, moving story of universal and immediate significance. Why, then, am I not enthralled by his book? Simply because, right or wrong, I dislike his manner of writing, which I think epitomises the intolerable sentimentality of American 'realism.' I think he wrecks a beautiful dialect with false cadences; I think he is frequently uncertain about where to end a sentence; I think his repetitiveness is not justified by emotional result. . . But the book is good, interesting and generous, and its wide popularity would be a beneficial thing." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 163:386 S 15 '39 750w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 1250w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 28:401 Je '39 1000w

"It is Steinbeck's best novel, i.e., his toughest and tenderest, his roughest written and most mellifluous, his most realistic and, in its ending, his most melodramatic, his angriest and most idyllic. It is 'great' in the way that Uncle Tom's Cabin was great—because it is inspired propaganda, half tract, half human-interest story, emotionalizing a great theme. . . Steinbeck is a writer, still, of great promise. But this novel's big audience of readers will likely find in it one of the most impassioned and exciting books of the year."

+ Time 33:87 Ap 17 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p525 S 9 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:104 My '39

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson

Yale R n s 28:viii summer '39 1300w

STEINER, CHARLOTTE. Lulu [pictures in five colors by the author]. unp $1 Doubleday 39-30368

Story told in pictures about the adventures of a little girl named Lulu all on a summer's day.

STEINER, CHARLOTTE—Continued
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p22 N 12 '39 90w

"This is a book for the pre-school collection for parents and teachers to use with very young children whose need is for 'story-telling' pictures. The drawings in primary colors are simple and clear and Lulu has personality." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:870 N 1 '39 80w

"It is all told in pictures, crisp, simple drawings reduced to a minimum of line and printed in five bright colors for the pure enjoyment of the child who has not learned to read. Nor are words needed when one can see so clearly the dawn of an idea in Lulu's round blue eyes, the stunned surprise of the Scottie at the sight of his first fish, Lulu's despair at catastrophe and the final happy triumph." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 24 '39 120w
Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w

STEPHENSON, GENEVA. Spring journey. 460p $2.50 Macmillan
39-27158

Romantic tale of mid-eighteenth-century England. Lady Helen, in order to escape an unwelcome marriage, takes refuge in the household of a woman-hating painter, where she dresses in boys' clothing and acts as servant. When she is recognized by a friend of her rascally brother, painter and serving boy take to the road, and after a spate of adventures with gipsies, highwaymen, and strolling players, are finally married.

Booklist 35:253 Ap 1 '39

"It is a lavish story, a carnival of carnage, carousing and pastoral passion."
Books p15 F 19 '39 400w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 4 '39 170w

"Spring Journey is just the book to take your mind off the war; in fact, you'll get the best from it if you don't use your mind at all." John Mair

— New Statesman & Nation 18:378 S 9 '39 150w

"Miss Stephenson's narrative style is anything but sentimental, being realistic and swift to the nth degree. It is a gusty, not a wallowing, realism, even when she is ankle deep in highly realistic gore. . . It is a realism that stems directly from Hogarth, and the humor, grim, aware and objective, is not a little like his. . . One may grumble that nightingales have never, in England and in Spring, been as obliging to us as to Miss Stephenson's runaways, and one may deprecate an intricacy indulged in, too often, for intricacy's sake; but what matter? Miss Stephenson has shown she can write." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p21 F 19 '39 750w

"Though the action may occasionally be lost in the stills, Miss Stephenson's picture of Georgian society is always interesting. Those intellectuals who are accustomed to say that the eighteenth century was the only civilized era may profit from studying it here. Like Fielding (who appears in person in her book), Miss Stephenson shows how much degradation and misery there were among the poor, how much brutality and corruption among the rich, in that age of grace and manners." K. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 18 '39 330w
Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Jl 15 '39 240w
Wis Lib Bul 35:66 Ap '39

STEPHENSON, GEORGE MALCOLM. American history since 1865. 682p il maps $3.50 Harper

973.8 U.S.—History—1865- (W) 39-1026

"A readable, timely history definitely liberal in point of view. It ends with the passing of the Wages and hours bill in May, 1938." (Booklist) The author is a professor of history at the University of Minnesota. Bibliography. Index.

"The author . . . should be commended for his good selection of materials and for his ability to make a coherent and penetrating narrative from the welter of confusing issues. Aside from this, the outstanding merit of this volume is the emphasis placed upon rural problems, religious developments, sports, and immigrant groups. These factors, frequently overlooked or underemphasized in comparable books, here come into their own. In general the author's viewpoint seems to be rural rather than urban, liberal rather than conservative. Designed for students rather than the general public, this volume can be prescribed as an adequate, balanced, and nourishing diet for undergraduates." W. B. Hesseltine

+ Am Hist R 45:237 O '39 220w
Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:144 Jl '39

STEPHENSON, JOHN WESLEY. Practical slipcover making. [27p] il $2 The author, 373 4th av, N.Y.

684 Upholstery (W) 38-9093

Detailed instruction for fitting, cutting, and sewing slip covers combined with line drawings illustrating the various steps. Estimates of yardage required for different types of chairs, sofas, etc., are included.

Booklist 35:185 F 1 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:14 Ja '39
Pratt p18 autumn '39

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). The woman in the hall. 441p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cassell]
(W) 39-27411

Lorna Blake, outwardly a middle-aged, somewhat dowdy but appealing little English woman, is actually able to win the luxuries of an upper-class bringing up for her two daughters, by most unconventional means. She is in fact a professional beggar, working on the sympathies of wealthy philanthropists with stories of her children's dire needs. The novel presents the tale of Lorna's activities thruout a decade of fair successes, but it also shows what effect her influence had on the lives of her children.

Booklist 35:308 My 15 '39

"Readers of 'The Woman In The Hall,' may at first consider Lorna Blake an unreal and preposterous person but at the close of the book not only will Lorna Blake assume the outlines of a real and wholly credible character for them but they will be made more than slightly uneasy by implications of resemblance to her and the persons she bilks." R. C. Feld

+ Books p8 Ap 30 '39 1100w

Reviewed by K. P. Kempton
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 230w

"The movement is jerky—incidents are vivid, but the flow is continuously interrupted and much that is important is left unsaid, creating dissatisfaction that one is not permitted to look behind the scenes. . . In spite of that it is a book with infinitely more appeal than the average novel—not much love interest—but surely that isn't necessary in all your summer reading." Patricia Palmer

+ — Canadian Forum 19:96 Je '39 410w

"Throughout Miss Stern's verve and invention are unflagging, and she conducts the whole entertainment with an unfailing tact and a sense of humour that preserve it from lapsing into either a too squalid tragedy or a too frivolous facetiousness." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 24 '39 370w
New Repub 99:168 Je 14 '39 70w

"If all the great picaresque heroines in fiction were lined up for comparison, Lorna Blake would stand an uncommonly good chance of being bracketed with those at the top. She does not burst upon us. She is unfolded—or unfolds herself—with the gradualness of the coming to bloom of a once-in-a-century blossom—an insidiously attractive, evil blossom." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '39 900w

"Miss Stern knows how complicated human behavior is and how mixed are all motives. Her characters are drawn full length, with detail that is minute and careful but never oppressive."

+ New Yorker 15:121 Ap 29 '39 50w

Pratt p29 autumn '39

"The story itself has many implausibilities—in fact many of its situations are cut from the stuff of standard romantic fiction—but there is a dexterity in the involvements of the plot, an ingenuity and cleverness in the psychological pattern of the tale, that delight and surprise. It is seldom one finds a novel of its kind which accelerates so fast as it progresses or which extricates itself from the train of its circumstances with so much cleverness." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ap 29 '39 380w

"There can be no doubt that The Woman in the Hall is a clever and amusing novel. Equally certain is it that Miss Stern has been content to present it as an entertainment rather than a serious study, rounding the whole off with a slick and professional ending that I, for one, found unconvincing." Forrest Reid

+ — Spec 162:686 Ap 21 '39 300w

"There is perhaps less breadth of interest in this than in some of Miss Stern's earlier books, attention being focused on one aspect of an admittedly freakish character."

Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 25 '39 230w

STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN. The man who killed Lincoln; the story of John Wilkes Booth and his part in the assassination. 376p il map $3 Random house

B or 92 Booth, John Wilkes. Lincoln, Abraham (W) 39-27054

A biography in semi-fictionalized form which combines an account of the assassination of Lincoln, the plans which preceded it and the escape of Booth thereafter, and a psychological study of Booth himself. An afterword gives the sources used in writing the book, and a bibliography.

Booklist 35:205 F 15 '39

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

Books p3 F 5 '39 850w

"The author deserves commendation for accomplishing the task which he set out to do, namely, the dramatic delineation of Booth's regrettable act." C. S. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 31 '39 470w

"The book is really a penetrating psychological study, based upon ascertained facts and making clear much that would otherwise be confused or unintelligible." H. W. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 21 '39 280w

"[The author] has devoted years of work to collecting every conceivable scrap of evidence on his subject, but he has not written with the idea that his work was to be the definitive treatise on the subject. He writes a simple, unvarnished prose. The story of the preparation for the crime is well told, and with more fairness and truth than it has ever been told before." Emanuel Hertz

+ Nation 148:181 F 11 '39 400w

"While the author pays full tribute to Booth's high talents and interesting personality, his romantic charm and gift for leadership, he never sentimentalizes the man. There is a fine frontispiece photograph portrait of Booth and an end-paper map showing the route he took in his flight." Drake DeKay

+ N Y Times p4 F 12 '39 600w

"The tangled story of Lincoln's assassination has been told, usually badly, many times. It has never, as far as I know, been told by anyone combining a respect for the facts of history with an intense interest in the psychology of Booth. Now comes 'The Man Who Killed Lincoln,' and the gap is filled. . . [The book] stacks up as a sound, workmanlike job." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 14:66 F 4 '39 200w

"Mr. Stern has obviously made a careful study of the available records, but he makes no contribution in the way of fact, or, alas, in the way of literary enjoyment. He writes, in the main, like a contributor to the slick, large-circulation periodicals—clearly, brightly, but without ponderable imagination."

— + No Am 247:400 summer '39 80w

"It is not history; it is not fiction. It is something between the two. To this reviewer such a mixture of genres is decidedly dubious. Yet it must be said that Mr. Stern has poured an immense deal of careful research into his book. . . The book may be censured on the ground that it makes Booth too likable a character, that it tends to blur the awfulness of his crime. But for those who do not mind a mixture of history and fiction, for those who do not object to the casting of Booth in the role of protagonist, the volume will be an enthralling story of crime and attempted escape." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 11 '39 550w

Spec 162:922 My 26 '39 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Jl 1 '39 350w

STERNBERG, FRITZ. From Nazi sources: why Hitler can't win. 208p il $1.75 Alliance bk.

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Defenses. European war, 1939- 40-27053

"Dr. Sternberg takes as his text the judgment of the Chief of the German Economic General Staff that 'the economic strength of the nation is of decisive importance for the outcome of the war,' and proceeds to demonstrate that by this test Germany must lose. He uses Nazi sources—statements of Nazi officials, soldiers, and economists. A book largely plagiarized from Dr. Sternberg's work was published in Budapest last summer and sold thousands of copies. The Germans became so alarmed that 'they ordered the Hungarian government to confiscate it,' although they could not point out any errors." Nation

---

Booklist 36:212 F 1 '40

Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 40w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Nation 149:653 D 9 '39 600w

"The theory that the Allies' best ally is time, that their best weapon is the blockade and that a protracted state of war is bound to exhaust their enemy's resources is now well established in the average man's mind. . . Dr. Sternberg's book presents the factual basis of this theory with clarity and competence. The author is not a newspaperman, but a well known expert on war economics. Moreover, he writes in an attractive style and his beautiful isotype diagrams make any statistics easily digestible." Norbert Guterman

+ New Repub 102:156 Ja 29 '40 850w

No Am 248:412 winter '40 240w

"The pictorial statistics give the book a lively appearance, but to uninitiated readers of this new language they may sometimes slow up the mental process instead of aiding it." Toni Stolper

Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 25 '39 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 36:15 Ja '40

STERNE, MRS EMMA (GELDERS). The pirate of Chatham square; a story of old New York; il. by Marc Simont. 213p $2 Dodd
(W) 39-24440

Pictures New York city in 1839, when Canal Street was still a canal and the New York and Harlem railroad was just beginning to use the steam locomotive. The engineer of the new engine was Captain Zachary Jones, a retired pirate. The climax of the book is a race between the steam engine Americus and a fine team of horses.

Booklist 36:157 D 15 '39

"All in all, reading the story is like taking a trip through the Museum of New York—that enchanting establishment—with a jolly party under an enthusiastic guide." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 D 10 '39 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 21 '39 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:391 N '39 70w

"New York City of one hundred years ago is so vividly drawn in this story that one cannot help being newly impressed by the recency of most of the developments in the city today. . . Marc Simont's illustrations fit the style of the story admirably. For boys and girls from ten to fourteen." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:953 D 1 '39 190w
New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 40w

"A well-rounded, well-authenticated picture of New York in 1839. . . Inevitably the very completeness of the background slows up the tale; while the adult enjoys the adroitness with which the author makes use of a Greeley editorial and Whitman's famous recommendation to 'loaf and invite your soul,' the young reader will at times find the story wordy and overdeliberate. It is perhaps a tribute to Mrs. Sterne's study of the period that the real people in her story are more alive than the characters she creates out of her imagination."
+ — N Y Times p20 N 12 '39 240w

STEVENS, ALDEN GIFFORD. The way of a lion; drawings by George F. Mason. 144p $1.75 Stokes

599.74 Lions 39-27880

Scientific account of the life of an African lion from cubhood thru the various stages of his life—his growing awareness of the other animals, his growing up and mating, his hunting, and prime of life. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 36:91 N 1 '39

"A graphic description of wild animal conduct and habits is given without sentimentality or personification. . . No story of a great flesh-eating beast can be free from bloodshed and there is much killing in the book, but there is also vivid re-creation of strange and beautiful scenes where these great animals of the wilderness live." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:383 N '39 60w

"I have never read so gripping and intimate an account of lion-like behavior. There are no humans in the story until the end, when the shadowy figures of hunters cross the lion's consciousness, followed by the finale in which he is shot by the English commissioner. All the might of African wild life is conveyed in this excellently written biography of its overlord, and most young readers of ten or more will get from it an unusual thrill." Irene Smith
+ Library J 64:761 O 1 '39 90w

"Boys and girls from 12 on and older readers as well are thrilled by the truth and drama of the tale. Mr. Stevens writes well. He neither humanizes nor sentimentalizes his lion hero, and thus succeeds in putting into his book something of the splendor of untamed animal life." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 D 31 '39 180w

STEVENS, BERTHA, ed. See Thoreau, H. D. Thoreau, reporter of the universe

STEVENS, MRS FRANCES MOYER (ROSS) (CHRISTOPHER HALE, pseud). Murder on display. 280p map $2 Doubleday 39-13541

Detective story.

"Detection in charge of Lieut. Bill French of the State Homicide Squad, an amiable youth and smart as a whip. This adds up to superior bafflement, with especially good village background." Will Cuppy
+ Books p19 Ap 30 '39 170w

"Too melodramatic, but it doesn't detract from a good story." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 130w

